Ufologist Involved in the Great Pyramids of Giza Research

by Dennis G. Balthazer

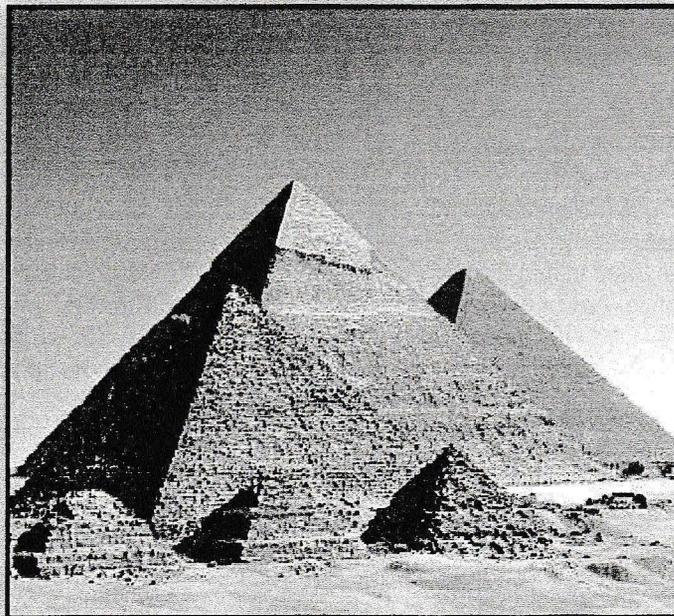

Many of you might wonder how a Ufologist would fit in with the research being done by The Great Pyramid of Giza Research Association. Dr. John DeSalvo is the Director of this association, and he has organized some of the best researchers in the world within the past few years to research the history of the pyramids and to study the effects the pyramids supposedly possess.

In this editorial I will share a limited amount of the research that has been done by a few members of the advisory board over the years and give a few of my own theories. Stephen Mehler has researched a civilization known as Khemitians, well over 10,000 years old, which has led to his book, "The Land of Osiris"

He and others believe the Khemitians were an advanced prehistoric civilization in ancient Egypt.

Could the Khemitians have built the pyramids? Mehler thinks the answer could be yes, and his research supports that of others that say the Great Pyramids were never intended to be a tomb for an Egyptian King, but possibly a machine to transform, generate and transmit energy. The theories on the Khemitian civilization by some researchers goes as far as stating they may have been in contact with star people, because it appears they had technology and tools that were superior to anything the Egyptians or any other known civilization possessed. The use of water and sound may someday prove to have been a key factor in the building of the great pyramids as a means of overcoming gravity to handle the gigantic stones used to build the pyramids and the precise accuracy used to cut them.

No mummy or remains of any kind have been found in the great pyramid. When first entered by the Arabs in 820 AD, the only thing found was an empty granite box in the Kings chamber called the "coffer". The empty, lidless box was uninscribed and undecorated, and most certainly would have been covered with hieroglyphics and paintings had a Pharaoh been placed in it, as was the custom of the Egyptians. It is the only pyramid with ascending and descending passages. Others pyramids only have descending passages. Dead Pharaoh's don't need air, so why were airshafts built into the great pyramid.

Originally the great pyramid was covered with highly polished limestone casing stones, which acted like gigantic mirrors to reflect light and so powerful that it would have been visible from the moon. The Arabs removed most of the casing stones from the pyramid in the 14th century to build mosques.

It has been assumed the great pyramid was built for Khufu a pharaoh of the 4th dynasty about 2600 BC, but historical records indicate Khufu was not buried in the great pyramid, and it is our belief that the Sphinx and the pyramids of Giza are much older than we've been told by modern day Egyptologists. Many have researched the Pyramids during the past 4 or 500 years including Napoleon Bonaparte in 1798, whose expedition was accompanied not only by his military, but also by engineers, surveyors, astronomers, artist and archeologists. Their work was published in many volumes from 1809 to 1822 by order of Napoleon. Napoleon was supposedly visibly shaken after spending time alone in the King's Chamber and refused to ever talk about it again. Some say he was given some vision of his destiny while alone in the King's chamber.

Another of our advisory board members, Joe Parr has spent an entire night on top of the great pyramid on two separate occasions in 1997 and 1998, conducting electrical, magnetic and radioactive measurements. He has been able to measure an Energy field or bubble that forms around the pyramid. The energy field appears to vary with the 11-year sunspot cycle. As a point of interest it appears that the great pyramid was never finished, since the top is flat and contains no top stone. The top of the pyramid has a 30 by 30 foot flat area.

Our Ukrainian board member Volodymyr Krasnoholovets, was part of a Russian and Ukrainian group utilizing large pyramids recently built by the Russian National Academy of Sciences in the Ukraine, that discovered; the immune system of organisms increased upon exposure in the pyramid, agriculture seeds placed in the pyramid for 1 to 5 days showed a 30% increase in yield, violent weather seems to decrease in the area of the pyramid, the potency of pharmaceuticals increased with decreasing side effects, and the pyramids decrease the strength of various viruses and bacteria. Ordinary water does not freeze even at 40 degrees below zero and retains its properties for years, while synthesized diamonds turn out harder and purer when placed in the pyramids.

Since I have had an interest in the pyramids and a few other subjects for years I felt very honored when I was recommended by Jeff Rense and asked to join the advisory board, and this research may well be some of the most difficult I've attempted thus far. After all it's not going to be easy for any of us to prove, much less convince the world that the great pyramids of Egypt may not be Egyptian. Keep in mind that tourism in Egypt is big business and they will not relinquish that easily. In my research I'm referring only to the 3 pyramids of Giza and the Sphinx, as I do believe many if not all of the other pyramids in Egypt may have been built by the Egyptians, but when they are studied, it seems obvious to me that they are simply poor replicas of the original 3, based on the workmanship, the smaller size and the lack of technology involved. None of the pyramids anywhere in the world compare with the pyramids of Giza. In recent years there have been attempts to duplicate the construction of the pyramids only to have failed miserably in their attempts, and they wound up using cranes, front-end loaders and other modern day equipment, still not able to duplicate what was accomplished thousands of years ago. Whoever and whenever the pyramids of Giza were built knew something that apparently we still don't know today. They were one of the original seven wonders of the world and are in fact the only thing still remaining of those seven wonders.

The factual information about the pyramids of Giza to someone like myself that devoted 36 years to civil engineering is almost incomprehensible. Let me share a few of those facts with you before I talk about some of the research I've done with other advisory board members as it pertains to Ufology and particularly the Roswell Incident.

The great pyramid of Giza is composed of 2 ½ million blocks of limestone, which weigh 2 to 70 tons each, (you could build 30 Empire State buildings with its masonry). The base of the pyramid covers 13 acres and it has a volume of 90 million cubic feet. It is 454 feet high, equivalent to a 48-story building. There are 203 courses or steps to the summit. Each side slopes upward at an angle of 51 degrees 51 minutes and each side has an area of 5 ½ acres, while less than a fiftieth of an inch separates the blocks with optical precision. Construction of the great pyramids of Giza was no accident—whoever build them knew what they were doing.

Some of our assumptions about the pyramids of Giza being much older than we've been told are derived from the Sphinx. For many years the body of the Sphinx was protected by sand that completely covered it except for the head portion. When the sand was removed in the mid 1800s, the body of a lion appeared including outstretched paws. Further study of the Sphinx now indicates to many researchers that the deterioration of the Sphinx body was not caused by sand and wind, but rather by water, and there has not been that volume of water in that area of the world for over 7,000 years, which would predate the Egyptian civilization, that today takes credit for the Sphinx and the pyramids of Giza. The head of the Sphinx is also a concern to us. Some of us believe the face of the Sphinx has been altered. It is totally out of proportion with the body and may at one time have been the head of a lion or even a female face, which would correspond with the Khemetian civilization that appears to have had the female gender in the power positions rather than males. This again would be contrary to Egyptian teaching, since the female was the dominant gender for the Khemetian civilization I mentioned earlier as predating Egyptians, and a female face would probably have been that of a North African woman, which the face does resemble today. My personal belief in viewing the head of the Sphinx is that the back half of the head seems proportioned to the body, while the front half may in fact have been altered.

My own research on the Pyramids and more specifically the Egyptians since I became a part of the association, was created from being familiar with the symbols described by Major Jesse Marcel and his son Jesse Jr. pertaining to the I-beams from the 1947 Roswell Incident craft. The writing on the I-beams has been referred to as resembling hieroglyphics on several occasions.

Ufologist Involved in the Great Pyramids of Giza Research:

I contacted Linda Corley who was the last person to interview Major Marcel in 1981, prior to his death. During that interview Marcel drew 5 symbols on a piece of paper as he remembered them looking, and signed the paper. Ms Corley's research indicated that the symbols did in fact resemble demotic hieroglyphics. After obtaining Ms. Corley's permission, since her work is copyrighted, I purchased her manuscripts and asked one of the Pyramid Association members to analyze Marcel's drawing. The response I got back was negative pertaining to any similarities with Egyptian hieroglyphics. I will continue to exhaust all research avenues available to me in order to confirm or deny that there is any correlation between the symbols on the Roswell craft I-beams and hieroglyphics.

Another part of my research will of course involve the possibility of extraterrestrials having been involved in some manner, perhaps not in the actual construction of the pyramids, but by providing technology to a civilization that predates Egypt. It will certainly be interesting research.

Has NASA Made Contact With Extraterrestrial Intelligence?

By David Sereda

In 1994, I was approached by a professional photographer named Michael Boyle and Martyn Stubbs, a program manager of a cable TV station in Vancouver, Canada, to conduct a scientific investigation into NASA UFO phenomena. Stubbs had recorded and archived thousands of hours of space shuttle mission video during live broadcasts throughout the 1990s at his cable TV station. He started to catalog scenes of what appeared to be UFOs flying in close proximity to Earth during the missions. I saw the tapes and started a dialog at NASA with many of their top scientists.

I have always believed in the UFO debate because as a small boy, at 7 years old, while I was on my way home from School in Berkeley, California in 1968, I stood with a friend and a crowded street in awe of a large UFO clearly visible at about 3,000 feet. There was not a cloud in the sky. Everyone was amazed. We watched this thing for 20 minutes or so and then it just blinked out, disappeared, as if into another dimension. Where it went would perplex me my whole life. How could a spacecraft just disappear? I was a big StarTrek fan in those days, and so were my brothers. I used to watch it every day after school. But even the Star Ship Enterprise could not just disappear in the blink of an eye.

In 1989, I had along conversation about nuclear fusion powered spacecraft with NASA Head of Propulsion, Power & Energy, Dr. Earl VanLandingham. He then went on to become NASA's head of Space Access and Technology under Dan Goldin. At the end of the conversation, I asked Dr. VanLandingham if NASA has ever made contact with an extraterrestrial civilization. He said "No, when you consider the amount of energy it would take for a spacecraft to attain near to the speed of light and to travel to Earth from one of our nearest star systems (Alpha Centauri 4.3 light years) in a reasonable amount of time, the energy signal emanating from the craft would be so massive, we would detect the signal well in advance of the arrival of the spacecraft. And we haven't seen anything (a signal) like that yet."

Einstein's postulate that the speed of light cannot be attained or broken by mass or spacecraft is that as a spacecraft tries to accelerate, it encounters resistance in the form of inertia. That inertia increases the mass of the spacecraft the faster it tries to go, so we have to increase the amount of energy in the form of propulsion to try and overcome the inertia. Mass can never attain the speed of light. This is because it takes an infinite amount of energy in the form of propulsion to increase any mass object or spacecraft to the speed of light because as it accelerates, its mass keeps on increasing. As its mass increases, the amount of energy needed to go faster increases as well; thus mass or spacecraft can never attain light speed.

Particle physicists accelerate subatomic particles like muons and protons in particle accelerators (FERMI LAB in Illinois) with energies over 1 trillion electron volts (1TeV - 1 Terra electron Volts) to allow these particles to attain 99.99% the speed of light. How much energy is 1 Terra Electron Volt? A nuclear explosion using plutonium releases a total energy intensity of 200 Million electron Volts (200 MeV). 1 Trillion electron Volts is 5,000 times the energy intensity released in a nuclear explosion.

If a spacecraft were to be doing 99% the speed of light, it would have a massive energy signal at least 5,000 times stronger than the energy released in a nuclear explosion (1TeV). A massive 1 TeV signal would get picked up on every radio telescope and possibly radar on the planet. We would all now it was coming. And we all know we have not seen an energy signal like that yet. There are also other serious problems with a mass spacecraft doing near light speed such as severe g-force on subtle turns, heat and resistance, dodging planets, asteroids and even meteorites. So how are the alleged ET's propelling their craft at light speed and beyond visiting Earth from other star systems?

In my newly released film and book, "Evidence, The Case for NASA UFOs," I introduce a new theory in quantum physics that reveals a way to allow spacecraft to attain light speed and beyond without breaking Einstein's law. Essentially, the initial idea is quite simple, then it gets more complex. The only thing we know that can do light speed is "light" (photons). There had to be a quality, I thought, that photons possessed that could tell us how to get spacecraft to emulate photons and attain the same quality. Photons are supposed to be called mass-less particles. Because they have no mass, and mass cannot attain light speed, an object or spacecraft with no mass could attain light speed also. But how could a spacecraft attain a state of zero mass? Mass is equal to an atom's mass-charge or mass-energy. Each element on the atomic scale has its own charge or mass equivalent.

Has NASA Made Contact By David Sereda Continued

Plutonium has a much greater mass or charge than hydrogen. Therefore, in Einstein's equation, plutonium has more energy because it has more mass.

It was in the middle of my 6-year investigation into NASA Space Shuttle UFO phenomena when I realized that all of the NASA UFOs appeared to be made of light. They had attained the kind of state that I knew was the only way to do light speed and beyond. Spacecraft made of light. How did they do it?

Suddenly I realized the quality that light possessed that was distinctly unique over ordinary mass or matter. Physicists have discovered long ago that mass is both a particle and a wave all in the same breadth of observation. Particles are just moments of a wave's existence. Everything we know is both in a particle/wave relationship. Planets are like giant particles that follow along in waves (gravity orbits) that reveal the motion of the waves they travel in. Electrons spin around protons inside of atoms the same way that planets spin around stars and suns on a particle gravity wave relationship. On a small scale, light (photons/particles) travel in waves also and yet as Einstein revealed photons are both waves and particles at the same time. When subatomic particle physicists peer into component particles of atoms, the particles appear as squiggly waves with no apparent particle appearance at all. This would mean that everything on a subatomic scale is just waves. Waves have frequency.

All waves have frequency, meaning how frequently a wave vibrates per second. We measure light waves in Hertz, named after the physicist Heinrich Hertz. Light waves start as radio waves vibrating in the thousands of times per second, going into the billions of times per second in very high frequency radio. Going even higher we have light vibrating as TV waves, then higher in Microwaves, then Infrared radiation waves, then the visible light spectrum (the colors the human eye and brain can see) the color red (vibrating beyond a quadrillion waves per second), to orange, to yellow, to green, to blue, to purple, to violet, and then into ultraviolet, the spectrum the human brain cannot see. Further, we go to x-ray to gamma rays far beyond the frequency that the human brain and eye can see. In Gammas, waves go far beyond an Octillion waves per second all the way towards a googolplex and to infinity.

Suddenly I realized the difference between mass and photons in the particle-wave relationship was that ordinary mass was in a very low frequency wave state. Planets and stars travel in very long and low frequency waves, so slow per second that they cannot even be measured, perhaps the secret to identifying the mystery of gravity.

Most physicists believe that mass has a zero frequency charge. I believe it has an ultra-low charge, which I may be able to identify with a new wave-particle model I invented called a "Galaxy Clock" (Copyright 2001). The Galaxy Clock measures waves differently than an oscilloscope in that it only looks at waves in the way they actually appear, in spirals or 3-d spinning waves. Oscilloscopes look at the number of peaks in a wave per second, a 2-dimensional model that is not a reality. A Galaxy Clock measures light waves in oscillations, or revolutions around the clock. Smaller oscillating waves orbit the Galaxy Clock faster per second than larger orbiting waves do; thus we determine frequency as it really appears in the wave-particle relationship.

Mass is in an ultra-low frequency wave state. Light is in a very high frequency wave state. Then it dawned on me that what if mass or spacecraft could be converted into light by raising the frequency of a spacecraft or mass to a state equal to light. What would happen then? On a quantum level, photons (light waves) are born when electrons (lowest mass particle) start to oscillate at higher frequencies. This is easily demonstrated in Tesla Coils where we send electric current into a coil at 60 waves per second (Hertz) out of the wall socket, and when it goes through the coil, it oscillates in a much higher frequency, and light in the form of radio waves, TV waves and Microwaves are born.

I was able to determine on a NASA mission number STS-75 (1996 mission) video that many of the UFOs captured on video were pulsing with energy waves. I studied the waves frame by frame. I could see clear wave formations that I could measure on my Galaxy Clock. I found that they were progressively pulsing their craft with a series of Low, medium and ultra-high frequency waves of electromagnetic energy. Thus, I could clearly see a progression of waves from low to high, the very signature I needed to identify to support my theory: that mass could be converted to light by raising its frequency. There were no thruster rocket engines or fire and fuel propelling these UFOs, just these waves.

In theory, I could see what was happening: The ET's were transforming the low frequency of mass or spacecraft into a higher frequency state of light. In essence, the spacecraft were converting the mass of their spacecraft into light, the very answer I was looking for, and the only way for a spacecraft to attain light speed without proving Einstein wrong. Mass cannot attain light speed but zero-mass can.

In 2001, I came across the work of Canadian Scientist and Engineer, John Hutchison, who was doing work with pulsing steel and other mass objects with a series of low, medium and high frequency radio waves generated by the use of Tesla coils.

Astoundingly, a 75 lb steel canon ball started to levitate very easily as it was pulsed by these waves. This was the answer to how so many UFOs could silently hover with no signs of propulsion systems using thrust propulsion and high energy levels. John Hutchison had the answer. I made the connection. The UFOs were doing the same thing. The answer to their propulsion system was staring me in right square the face. We could do the same thing and propel ourselves to the stars at light speed with so little energy.

If giant UFOs were able to convert their heavy mass into light (if the Space shuttle could be made into an energy as light as a photon - zero mass), it would take so little energy in the form of propulsion to get it to go light speed. NASA's mystery could be answered: why did we have a legitimate UFO phenomenon with no high energy signal, just as Dr. VanLandingham expected in the Einstein mass energy equivalent in regards to attaining 99% the speed of light? Because the UFOs had reduced their mass to zero. With Zero mass, you don't get an Einsteinian energy signal. You get a different kind of signal.

The answer was that the UFOs were converting their mass into light by using high frequency wave induction. Once their giant spacecraft were converted into light, they weighed in at nothing. The energy required to go light speed would now yield a very low Einsteinian energy signal (because it has no mass charge), yet a very high Max Planck energy signal ($E = hf$), in that it would be a high frequency wave signal with no mass energy equivalent. The signal would be detected as a high frequency light energy signal with no mass because the whole spacecraft would be made of light. These craft have figured out how to attain light speed and beyond (note that Dr. Raymond Chiao, UC Berkeley physicist got photons to break light speed in 1989

Once a spacecraft is made of light, it could also appear or disappear into the invisible light spectrum (to the human eye and many cameras). The answer to how the UFO I saw in Berkely, in 1968, disappeared was now crystal clear. It transformed its mass into light and disappeared into an invisible spectra of light. So easy?

But NASA knows all this and they have video cameras aboard the Space Shuttles and aboard satellites that can see into invisible spectra of light, such as the infrared and the near ultraviolet. I confirmed the wavelengths of the shuttles video cameras with NASA scientists back in 1998, Dr. Joseph Nuth, III, Head of Astrochemistry at the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, MD. He said that the shuttle's video cameras could see near UV photons in a letter to me dated April 3, 2000: "Although the camera itself may respond to x-rays and gamma rays (usually as noise), the optics do not serve to focus on anything but visible and near-UV photons. I would be amazed if the optics were not quartz so that the UV cut-off wavelength would be ~ 180 nm. If sapphire the cut-off drops to 160 nm and for CaF2 the cut-off is ~ 135 nm." UV is divided into near, far and extreme. The near UV is higher in wavelengths frequency than the color violet. It is also invisible to the human eye and spans almost as wide as the visible light spectrum in wavelengths. Many of NASAs video cameras see well into the invisible Infra-red also. Infrared is lower in wavelength frequency than the color red. Infrared is even easier than UV detection.

NASA astronauts were looking where human eyes could not see and that is where the UFOs were showing up. Astronauts didn't know why they were seeing things that they could not see with their eyes. They may have thought nothing was there. The astronauts don't know that I have discovered yet.

Now, in regards to UFOs showing up in invisible spectra of light such as the Near UV or infrared (the wavelength capacity of some of the shuttle's video cameras), the answer as to why no one saw them with their naked eyes was crystal clear. Their craft are transformed into high frequency energy mass (light). They can then attain higher frequencies of light than the human eye can see. These craft or objects must be highly quantized light craft.

NASA now has many cameras and satellites that can peer into the invisible infrared, and ultraviolet near, far and extreme, x-rays and gamma ray wavelengths of light. It is here that our ET encounters can be found hidden from our eyes. It is here that higher dimensions of our universe lie.

Why is NASA looking into higher frequencies of light? Why are so many UFOs visible in these higher frequencies? Because the only way to attain light speed is to transform mass (spacecraft) into light. Now we know where to look and we are finding answers.

As mass objects start to appear in invisible spectra of light, and we find evidence of quantized mass, the answer to where the missing mass of our universe is starts to arise as a distinct possibility. After the Big Bang, the universe started expanding with a mass-energy relationship (Einstein). But at the current rate of expansion, there should be 95% more mass than we can see.

Our universe is a very strange cosmic cocktail," said lead author Max Tegmark, an astrophysicist at the University of Pennsylvania, in a prepared statement.

Has NASA Made Contact By David Sereda Continued

"The 95 percent of the universe that's not matter like we see around us is matter that can't be seen at all - matter of a type that still mystifies astronomers and cosmologists."

Could this new theory and analysis of UFOs help to explain the missing mass problem? By photographing invisible mass and invisible UFOs, we start to unveil one of the greatest mysteries of all time: is there a parallel universe? If there is, how can we access it?

In his book "Flying Saucer Conspiracy," published by Henry Holt and Company of New York, Major Donald Keyhoe (US Navy) recounted what is probably the most significant of all wartime radar detections of UFOs. There were between 200 to 300 objects involved. All of them were invisible to the naked eye. It was called the Nansei-shoto case because of its occurrence near the islands south of Okinawa, Japan.

The story was given to Major Keyhoe by a U.S. Navy officer, pseudonymously identified as James Dawson, who had served as a Combat Information Center Officer aboard an aircraft carrier during the incident. Patrolling the area south of Okinawa in company with another aircraft carrier, Dawson's ship detected with radar (Microwaves) a huge force of enemy aircraft approaching from the northeast.

Initial radar contact was 120 miles. The blip or echo returning from an incoming force was very large, supporting an estimate of 200-300 aircraft in formation. But it could also be one huge craft, an idea that was impossible to think about in those days for an enemy aircraft. At 100 mile range, their speed was determined to be 650 knots - nearly 700 mph. No known aircraft in the world at that time could attain such speed. At eighty miles and at an altitude of 12,000 feet, the incoming force of aircraft began to spread out in two formations from the main body, as though preparing to assault the whole American task force. Only twelve available US aircraft were scrambled to intercept. In bright weather, with only scattered clouds at 5,000 feet, the American pilots were in clear skies. At 15,000 feet on interception with the radar signal, they never did see a single incoming craft, let alone 200-300 of them. The fighter director on another aircraft carrier also picked up the radar of the alleged enemy craft. But the pilots could not see anything there. According to Major Keyhoe, the U.S. Navy acknowledged after the war that there had been this inexplicable "Ghost of Nansei-shoto." There are countless examples of "Ghost Aircraft" that show up on radar and remain invisible to pilots.

It was Trevor James Constable who wrote the book "The Cosmic Pulse of Life" published in 1976. He was aware of the invisible "Ghost Aircraft" and wanted an answer. He was the first great pioneer of the invisible detection of UFOs

In the 1950s, he and his research team took photographs into alternate spectra of light in the late 1950s and 60s and lo and behold, UFOs were showing up on film that were invisible to the naked eye. These UFOs or living entities as he believes many of them are, travel through higher dimensions of the ether.

The most amazing thing about many of the UFOs in Trevor James Constable's photographs, was that they appear identical to many of the UFOs that show up on the NASA shuttle video cameras. They are disc-shaped, made of light, and have dark or black holes appearing in the center of them. The black hole in the center is the point where wavelengths are too high in frequency for the camera to see; thus a black or void signal appears.

After seeing my film, "Evidence, The Case for NASA UFOs" he wrote me in October, 2002, that "Gentlemen: Greetings. I have reviewed your NASA UFOs video EVIDENCES, which is probably the most important public domain presentation on UFOs to date."

You can find out more about the book and 3-hour video, "Evidence, The Case for NASA UFOs" at: www.UFONASA.com <http://www.UFONASA.com> You can also read the full commentary by Trevor James Constable there. You may also order direct by calling toll free at 1-877-UFO-NASA.

Time: approx: 11:10 p.m.

I received a phone call from a fellow who claims to have watched an object/light in the night sky. He reported seeing the object just sitting in one location low in the horizon before he lost sight of it. The sighting lasted approx: 45 minutes from when he first observed it to where it dropped down behind a mountain in the area. The witness said the object would change colors, from blue to red to green. Also it seems to be flashing, I made a suggestion to him, "would it maybe be twinkling?". The witness said yes. I do believe what the fellow was watching was a star.

Close Encounters

The Meaning We Bring With Us

The close encounter can be either a terrifying experience or a wonderful event. For many, it is a time when one is confronted, overpowered, and taken against one's will by unexplainable, unearthly beings for reasons that they can not hope to comprehend. It is a dark and sinister force in the world of the experiencer. But the close encounter can also be a moment of contact with a power greater than one's self. It can be a time of communion and enlightenment – a chance to meet face to face with a wonderful source of light in our universe.

Some see the encounter phenomenon as dark, and some as light. Yet, in most cases, the events described in encounters are quite similar. So what makes the difference? Could the emotional nature of the experience be affected by our own consciousness? Does this show that our perceptual filters profoundly affect the good/evil-ness of the phenomenon? Can we, using a healing modality such as hypnotherapy, resolve the good-evil polarity that often comes with close encounter experiences?

In this article, we will look at some cases which show that the phenomenon has both positive and negative elements – a mixed bag that seems to defy the good-evil duality. These cases are taken from my own case files with names and key details altered to protect the anonymity of the experiencers. They are representative of those which I have studied, and which fill researchers' files. In these, we can see that the experiencer's consciousness can do a lot to frame the reality of an encounter, for good or ill.

“Evelyn” – Managing the Fear

One case, which most graphically illustrates fear resulting from the phenomenon, is that of an experiencer I will call “Evelyn”. Evelyn has had many close encounters – both physical and metaphysical in nature. When I first interviewed her, an extensive chronology of events emerged - along with a deep sense of fear. As she described her many experiences, the fear seemed to grow until it became an almost-physical presence in the room. Its effects on her life were causing her difficulty. She found herself becoming anxious at times when she was alone in the house, and at other times which reminded her of the UFO topic.

Our initial field investigation had occurred before I had begun my study of hypnosis. Some time later when I had become certified as a hypnotherapist, we arranged a session. As we began the first hypnotic work, the fear again showed itself with its full brutal force. I could only admire her courage as she, despite a look of terror on her face, told me she still wanted to continue with her regression. Evelyn wanted to get to the bottom of her experiences, to put them to rest once and for all. We decided that in the next session, we would try to manage the fear she felt, and then continue on with regression work.

Parts and the Fabric of the Mind

The human mind can be thought of as being made up of a large number of parts (also referred to as ego states). [1] [2] Each is built around thought complexes, feelings, memories, ideas, etc. - and together, they interweave to form the fabric of consciousness. At times, however, individual parts can behave independently, and sometimes can even come into conflict with one another.

During deep hypnosis, parts can be addressed individually, and issues between them can be resolved. In this case, once Evelyn was in a deep hypnotic trance, an inner child aspect of her mind-scape came forward which had learned from childhood religious schooling that the unknown was evil – a thing to be feared. This part had done its job well. Whenever Evelyn would have significant thoughts or memories related to the UFO phenomenon, this part would inject fear into her awareness.

Conversely, with Evelyn still in deep trance, another part of her mind emerged which was inquisitive and deeply spiritual, and which very much wanted to explore her experiences.

Close Encounters - The Meaning We Bring

Having built a rapport with both parts, it was now possible to address the concerns of the "Fear" part, fostering an agreement between it and the "Spiritual Explorer". Once a deal was struck, as long as both parts kept their end of it, the fear should no longer be an issue. Both parts agreed, and Evelyn felt them merge back into the overall tapestry of her mind - and I eagerly waited to see the results.

It worked - even better than I had hoped. The fear that had plagued Evelyn for so long quickly abated. In subsequent sessions, she was able to explore her experiences extensively. What had seemed like a dark scenario could now be looked at much more objectively. As with any aspect of life, there were both positive and negative elements to her encounters. But from now on the phenomenon would be objective and manageable to her, yet would still be a deeply meaningful part of her life.

"Mark" and "Terry" - a Frightening Night Drive

Another case with profound implications for the emotional understanding of UFO encounters, involved two teenagers whom I will call "Mark" and "Terry". Part of a middle class rural family, they were ordinary kids who were about to have an extraordinary evening. They were driving through the countryside some time after sunset, heading home after a day in a nearby city. Mark suddenly pointed out a distant light in the sky. It seemed to just hover there, far ahead of their car. As they watched, it slowly descended toward the highway. Then a turn in the road hid it from their view.

When they next saw the object it was huge, and it was close. It seemed to hover just above the treeline to the right of the highway. Both of them were frightened. Terry, who was driving, floored the gas pedal, and they sped off down the highway toward home. As they did, Mark observed that the object seemed to be following them, always just over the treeline to their right and slowly descending. They were now in a state of near panic as they passed a clearing, which they observed to be brightly lit. Eventually they reached a small town close to their home, and the object was lost to view. A few moments later the two visibly shaken teens pulled into the driveway of their home.

I learned of this case from a friend who lived in the region, who had talked with Mark and Terry a few days after their sighting. She had notified our state MUFON team. I then contacted the witnesses and interviewed them. As I investigated, it became apparent that the object resembled a type of small aircraft, but as seen under unusual conditions. The route which the car had traveled passed near a small airport, which was out of sight of the highway. The object's path and the description, and the geometry at each stage of the sighting, corresponded closely to this aircraft on approach to the landing strip. (Note: As with most UFO sighting cases, one can never say with absolute certainty what had occurred, but this was our best hypothesis).

In most sighting cases this might have been the end of it. However, one interesting aspect of this case was the fear that the witnesses described as they observed the object. As I interviewed the family, it turned out that their history contained many suggestions of possible close encounter events. The witnesses and several other family members described events and perceptions similar to those which fill books by Budd Hopkins, David Jacobs, Whitley Strieber, etc. It appeared that this case might be more than just a single "misidentified airplane" sighting - perhaps a lot more.

One thing that investigators routinely ask sighting witnesses is how much they had read or heard about the phenomenon. In this case, the family members had had very little exposure to information about UFO's or close encounters. However, what they had learned was largely from a televangelist, who taught that the UFO phenomenon was demonic. Could this continuous exposure both to the phenomenon itself, and to the admonitions that it was evil, have combined to generate a fear scenario in their minds?

"Jim" - Positive on the Surface, Dark Beneath

One group of nearly identical experienter cases can be characterized by the story of someone I will call "Jim", who has had unexplained experiences since childhood. As far back as his memory goes he had been accompanied by a friendly little "cartoon character" companion. This friend would appear to him at irregular intervals, playing and telling him stories, and taking him away on wonderful adventures. Jim often found his little friend to be a welcome refuge from a challenging world.

As Jim grew up, his cartoon companion seemed to disappear, to be replaced by other events which left him with a deepening sense of mystery. However, his overall view of his encounters was generally positive. He enjoyed life, and said that he also enjoyed his interaction with the phenomenon.

I have noted that sometimes, just as when excess fear is involved, an overly optimistic view of the phenomenon may suggest that all is not as it seems. Jim's experiences were no exception. At several points as he described his "fun" experiences to me, he broke into tears - not tears of joy. Could his "cartoon friend" have been just one side of a polarity? Was there a darker side to his experiences as well?

Close Encounters The Meaning We Bring With Us

Close Encounters - The Meaning We Bring

At Jim's request we began hypnotic sessions. In deep trance he began to examine his "cartoon friend". The first "crack in the wall" for him was that his friend had large black eyes. This, along with other factors, seemed to suggest some type of screen memory.[3] [4] He continued on to describe his companion as a small two-legged creature, about four feet tall, with no hair, a big head, and big black eyes, a classic "small gray". His fun and companionship now seemed to have become a classic alien encounter.

As we continued, he recounted a lifetime of abductions, very similar to what Evelyn and many other experiencers have described, and which permeate the UFO literature. His description of them initially had a very dark, frightening tone to it. However, as he continued to describe his encounters - and to examine the world view through which he saw them - Jim increasingly spoke in more objective terms. His polarity of feelings - the joy of his "companion" versus the darker tone of his encounters - was steadily changing into an increased understanding and resolution, losing the innocence of his "cartoon character" friend but healing the pain beneath. The phenomenon was increasingly beginning to fit into his life in a more manageable way.

Conclusion

In these cases - and in many more which fill my files and the files of other researchers, we see that the experience (both positive and negative) of the phenomenon tends to be greatly affected by one's world view. If these factors are extreme in one way or another, they can increase the polarity with which the experiencer views an encounter. However, as one better understands one's own perceptual filters this polarity can heal and one can deal with the phenomenon more objectively - on a more level playing field.

Is the phenomenon physical, metaphysical, or (para)psychological? I believe that we do not yet know - nor do we understand its motivations. It is not clear whether the intelligence behind it means us good or ill, or if it even has a specific intent. What we do learn from working with experiencers is that close encounters can be either positive or negative, or sometimes both - a mixed bag of trauma and growth[5]. Perhaps, rather than simply being good or evil, close encounters might be subject to a scale that, like the rest of the phenomenon, we do not yet understand.

HBCC UFO Research Reports On This Case

Victoria to Vancouver, B.C.

Date: December 21, 2002

Time: 9:20 a.m.

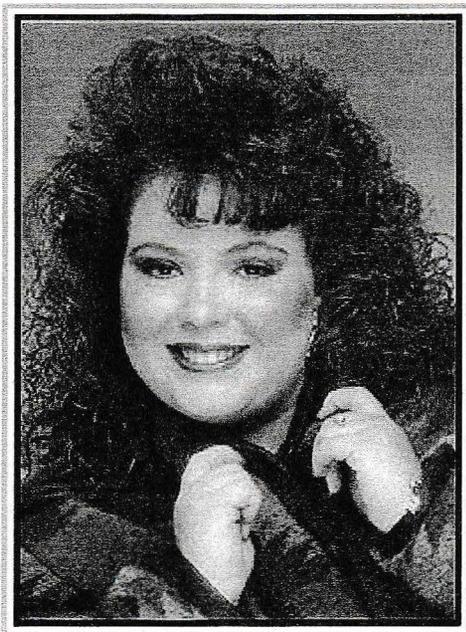

On Saturday Dec 21, 2002 I was on the ferry going to Victoria from Vancouver. At 9:20 a.m. I went out on the deck to have a cigarette. I was the only one out at that time because it was quite cool and windy. There was blue sky but with lots of clouds that were moving quite fast because of the wind. I saw a white ball or sphere shaped object approaching a cloud. It didn't move very fast, it seemed to float but I know it wasn't a balloon. It was very white. It didn't look very big but how can I tell at that height. I watched it for about ten seconds not taking my eye off it. As it was approaching the cloud and then was covered by the cloud I waited for it to reappear after the wind moved the cloud (the cloud wasn't big) but I never saw it again. It either moved with the cloud or disappeared. It was moving in the northwest direction until it was covered in the cloud, then I don't know what happened to it. Other people came out and I was going to ask them to look at it but it never came out of the cloud so I don't know if anyone else saw it. The length of the event took approx: 10 to 15 seconds. I have contacted some sources in hopes of trying to solve this case.

Thank you to the witness for their report

32nd FORTFEST 2002

32nd FORTFEST 2002

Presented by

The International Fortean Organization

Written By Terrilee Raybourn

The 32nd FortFest took place during November 15th-17th at the Four Points by Sheraton Bethesda in Bethesda, Maryland. This was my first Fortean gathering and I had to admit I went to the conference feeling that I was well-versed in paranormal phenomena. What I discovered is that I didn't know Jack (although I was introduced to Jack later on in the conference). I sat listening to the speakers trying to absorb every word spoken while looking around the Ambassador ballroom at the various faces of authors/scientists/producers and inventors. I was in the midst of a wealth of knowledge that had taken lifetimes to achieve. If only I could have devised a way to absorb all of that information in the two and one half days that I was there!

The FortFest is named after none other than Charles Fort (1874-1932) who coined the phrase that "One measures a circle beginning anywhere." Fort was a pioneer in the field of the paranormal. It is no argument that that this man invented and encouraged the open mind.

Those speaking at the FortFest were Larry Arnold who is the director of Parascience International and is considered by many to be the only expert in the world on Spontaneous Human Combustion. His book Ablaze has been a breakthrough in the field of science that represents his exhaustive and meticulous investigations. He has a background in electrical engineering and has been published in Life, Science Digest, Frontiers of Science, Pursuit, Fortean Times and and the INFO Journal. He has appeared on and acted as an advisor to many television shows including Unsolved Mysteries, That's Incredible, The Unexplained, The Extraordinary and Sightings.

Rob Swiatek, a physicist by education is secretary/treasurer of the Fund for UFO Research and is a director of the UFO Research Coalition. He has been involved with the wide and diverse aspects of UFO and Extraterrestrials for over thirty-four years. Rob spoke of his work and advancements in the field of the study of Extraterrestrials and voiced a real concern that there was not enough study and written documentation of sightings from the actual witnesses.

Kenn Thomas is the publisher of Steamshovel Press, a Conspiracy Theory magazine that has been in publication for over ten years. He has twelve books in print including The Octopus: Secret Government and The Death of Danny Casolaro, whose research covered the controversial PROMIS software used to track criminals in addition to giving geographic profiles. Mentioned in his speech were the deaths of authors Jim Keith and Ron Bonds who after autopsies was found that they both had large amounts of Clostridium in their systems. Clostridium, a bacterium, is found in the blood of Cattle Mutilations as well as stockpiled canisters hoarded by the CIA. Jim Keith died during knee surgery while Ron Bonds died after eating dinner at a Mexican Restaurant with his wife. Kenn spoke of other unusual deaths of researchers, scientists and writers. Kenn contributes frequently to the UK's Fortean Times and also has written for such diverse publications as the Washington Post and Nexus Magazine.

His editorials also appear regularly at: www.steamshovelpress.com

Doug Skinner entertained us all on both Saturday and Sunday with his wit and humor. On Saturday the 17th Doug spoke on the subject of his friend John A. Keel. Mr. Keel was scheduled to speak at the FortFest but was unable to attend because of contracting the flu. Doug (at the request of John Keel) entertained us with his Fortean Frog Puppet, which I might add was quite a performance! Skinner has contributed to Fate, Fortean Times, the INFO Journal, The Anomalist, Weirdo, Nickelodeon, Crimewave USA, LCD and other publications. He has written music for numerous dance and theater productions; and presented songs, monologues and puppet shows as well as a multitude of other creative projects and shows. Doug also shared with us on Sunday his Cabinet of Musical Curiosities which was both entertaining and educational

Sue Swiatek spoke on The Talking Mongoose and other Cryptozoological Mysteries. Sue is currently employed by the Department of Defense. She was introduced to the field of Cryptozoology by an encounter with a ten-foot lizard in the Virginia suburbs. Susan has used her artistic talents to help illustrate projects such as Richard Hall's The UFO Evidence - Part II (Jan 2001) and the Extraterrestrial Encyclopedia (2001) compiled by Ron Story.

Budd Hopkins, a pioneer in the research of alien abduction is a graduate of Oberlin College. His books include Missing Time, Intruders and Witnessed. In 1989 Hopkins founded the Intruders Foundation, a non-for-profit organization devoted to research and public education concerning the UFO abduction phenomena. Hopkins shared with us his knowledge of alien abduction and hypnotic regression. His sensitivity with abductees is quite evident as his success in documentation has been shown throughout his history of research which includes medical evidence of alien abductions and experimentation.

Paul LaFolley is a graduate of Brown University and has maintained throughout his life the independent spirit of the self-taught artist. LaFolley apprenticed with the visionary architect Frederick Kiesler in New York and became a registered architect in 1990. He has participated in over 200 exhibitions, both national and international and has been the subject of numerous articles and essays.

All in all, my first FortFest was overwhelming, exhausting and much enjoyed. There is talk of a Spring FortFest in West Virginia. I will keep you all apprised of the upcoming information.

Information on speakers was compiled from research online, information given at the conference and from the dossiers hand outs

The Varginha Incident by Prof. Vitorio Pacaccini

Outer Space Creatures in South of Minas

by Prof. Vitorio Pacaccini

On January 20, military forces captured two extraterrestrial creatures still alive in Brazil. The captures occurred in neighboring areas of city of Varginha, Minas Gerais State, central Brazil. The fact is to be considered one of the most significant ever registered in this country and perhaps, in the entire world. Military authorities are keeping secret of all details of this operation, but lots of info have already leaked to the UFO community due to the investigative job of Prof. Vitorio Pacaccini [and other UFO researchers] who is recognized as serious and dedicated researcher.

On the afternoon of January 20, around 15:30h local time, 3 young girls named Liliane [16], Valquiria [14] and Katia [22] observed a strange creature in a field of small bushes a few blocks from where they live. It was a Saturday and they were coming back home from their jobs when, crossing an empty area, their attention was attracted by a very weird creature, a few meters away. This weird creature was crouched/squatting and looked like it was hurt, suffering some sort of pain. No UFO was seen around, at that time. The 3 girls observed it for some few minutes and ran away, afraid that they had just encountered the devil.

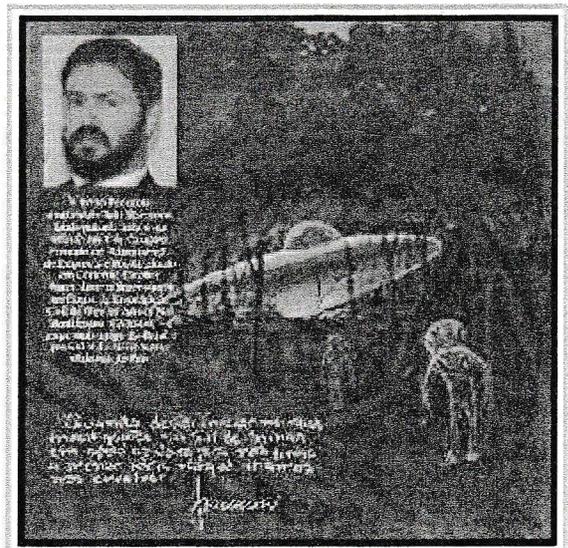

The 3 girls were extensively interrogated by above mentioned researcher, leaving no doubt whatsoever about what happened. Very simple kids, they described the ET being as a dark creature, with small body of 4 to 5 feet, no hair at all, big brown head, small neck.

It also seemed to have some greasy, dark oil all over its skin. A strange odor similar to ammonia was noticed by the mother (of Liliane and Valquiria; her name is Luisa), when she went to the site later on – although this strange creature was not there anymore. The head of the creature had 2 big red eyes, no pupils, a slit in the place of the mouth, very small nose, no ears at all and what is interesting - 3 protuberances right on the top of its forehead. The girls described such protuberances as horns.

Following the leads, Prof. Pacaccini started making inquiries everywhere in the town of Varginha, in order to find out if anybody else had seen the same creature. He found several other people who also observed the military operations as well as the ET in the same location and, maybe other ETs in different locations. While conducting an investigative job, Pacaccini discovered that different witnesses had seen army trucks and other military vehicle and personnel in the very morning of that day, a few blocks from the place where the girls saw the ET.

In trying to find out what the militaries were doing, Prof. Pacaccini came to meet several soldiers, sergeants and some high ranking militaries.

One of them decided to talk secretly [that was only the first one] about their mission, in a confidential taped interview. This military confirmed that, about 09:00h am, January 20, the Fire Department of Varginha was required to capture a strange animal in that area (Jardim Andere district). When 4 firemen arrived (among others); Sergeant Palhares, Soldier Nivaldo, Corporal Rubens and Soldier Santos; (under Major Maciel's command - he was there too) in a firemen truck in that place.

The Varginha Incident

They noticed that it wasn't pertinent to any strange animal at all; they realized that they should report this to the Army Sergeant School command, in the neighboring city of Três Corações (about 10 miles from Varginha) but, all of a sudden, an army truck was right next to them; the firemen understood that the high staff of ESA (Escola de Sargentos das Armas - from Três Corações), new about that situation somehow. They captured the creature using nets and equipment regularly used to capture wild animals. The ET was placed still alive in a wood box, that was then covered by resistant fabric. This wood box was placed on the top of this army truck (the ET was emitting a hum like a bee, and it was put curved and wrapped in that net, inside this 1m x 1m wood box), the vehicle headed to the Army Sergeant School and all personnel involved was ordered not to talk about it with anyone else. "It was a secret operation", told them the lieutenant Colonel Wanderley (he is very well trained in atomic - biological - chemical war), and he was in charge of the whole operation, since the beginning.

After such unusual, confidential report, a few other military people, decided to come forward and speak about it, as long as their identities were totally kept in secrecy. They all confirmed on taped interviews, that a second creature (possibly the same one saw by the girls at that afternoon), was captured on the night of January 20, by personnel from the Army, Fire Department and by the police's secret service. Details of such operation is fully known.

This creature, identical to the first one, was taken to the Regional Hospital of Varginha at that same night, stayed there for a few hours and then, it was transferred to a better equipped facility, the Humanitas Hospital.

Prof. Vitorio Pacaccini & The Girls

A few nurses and personnel from the Regional Hospital had confirmed some facts and they were all suppressed. Individuals who had contact with the second creature were advised to avoid the press and UFO researchers and, not to talk about it with anyone in their relations, not even with their families. At Humanitas Hospital, the second creature was kept at least for 2 days and, in the afternoon (5am) of January 22, a huge and very well disguised operation took place, to remove this creature from there to the Army Sergeant School, in Três Corações, already dead.

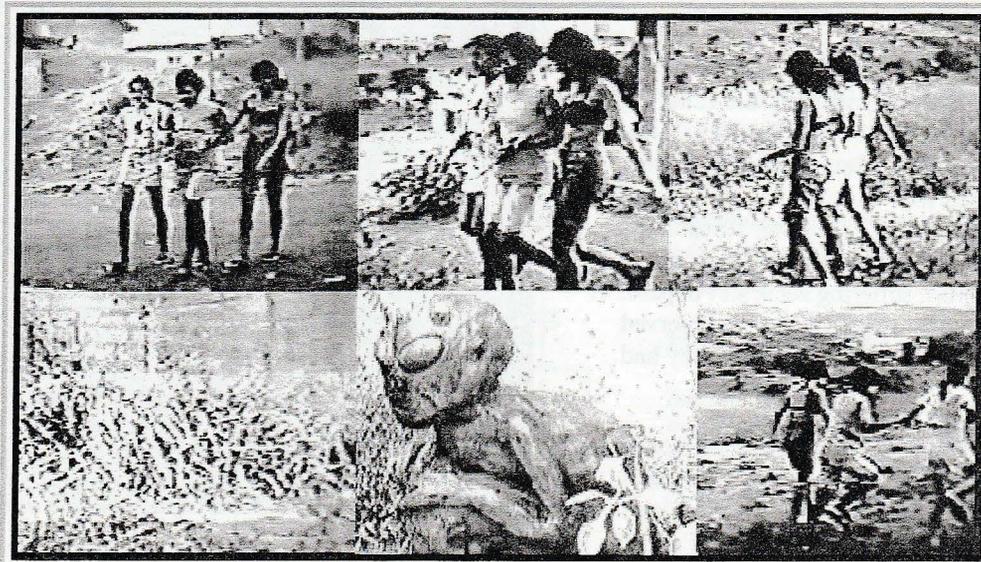

Interviews with some of the militaries who participated in this new operation, removing this creature from the Humanitas Hospital, where they declared that 3 army trucks were used, each one driven by 2 different soldiers. It is believed that 3 trucks were used to remove only one body, in order to avoid the soldiers to know in which truck that creature would be transported (of course, we know in which truck it was put, and who was the truck's crew).

The drivers and their fellows saw enough details of this operation although, they were kept outside the hospital area most of the time.

Military personnel from the Army Internal Intelligence (called "S-2" in Brazil; sometimes they are really violent and repressive) were responsible for getting the corpse from the interior of the Hospital, placing it (lying) in this 0,60m x 1,70m wood box and then, in one of the trucks.

Photo of Prof. Vitorio Pacaccini and two of the witnesses who drove the truck which carried the creatures body. Both of the men remain unknown.

All the 3 trucks went back to the Army Sergeant School and, next day, about 4am they headed to another military facility in the town of Campinas, state of São Paulo, 200 miles far from Tres Coracoes. There, the corpse was removed to the University of Campinas, one of the best institutions in the country. We already have detailed info that the ET body was autopsied by Dr. Fotunato Badan Palhares, worldwide acclaimed as one of the best professionals in that area alive (he was the one who autopsied the famous German Nazi - Mengele ,about 10 years ago, when the Brazilian authorities found his body in Brazil). Dr. Palhares, as well as any other authority involved in this case, denied to part of such operations.

UFO researchers from all over the country have been helping closely Pacaccini, in order to know each and every detail of the whole Varginha Incident. The media in Brazil has never been so active and the great majority of the population understands that the case is real and that the military and civil authorities involved, are keeping the facts absolutely quiet. Many strange things are happening simultaneously, such as prison of soldiers, sergeants being transferred at last time and etc...The phones of main UFO researchers involved in the case are confirmed to be tapped and some threats have been made anonymously.

Up to now, almost all the details of the whole operation are known to the UFO researchers and are being released to the public, day by day. In a matter of a little more time, more info will come to the press of the entire world; we believe that we are close to the final truth.

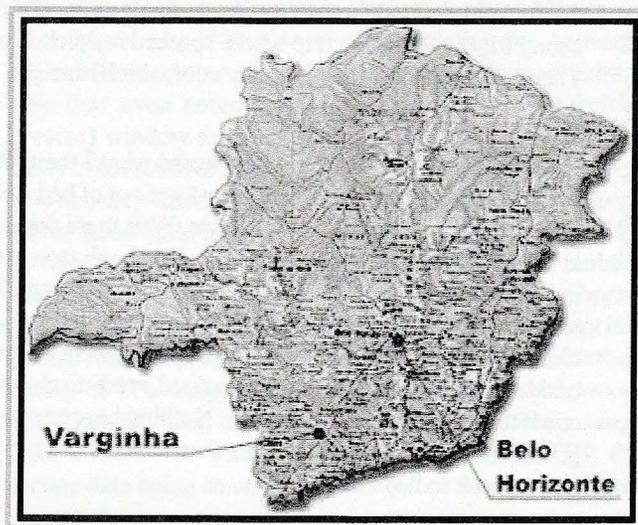

Every day, new pieces of this fantastic puzzle are being received by researchers in many cities and more and more military personnel have agreed to talk.

Meanwhile, the region where Varginha is located, in the south of the State of Minas Gerais, is subject to one of the biggest UFO waves ever registered, with huge UFOs in close range observations, landings and contacts.

Prof. Vitorio Pacaccini [who has already a Master Degree in "International Businesses" and has actually finished his first year in University for his doctorate degree (Ph.D.), in "Business Administration"].

"The Scariest Night Of My Life" by Chris Neely

GHOSTS IN MISSISSIPPI

Shortly after my first wife and I divorced for the second time, I moved out of our apartment in Knoxville, Tennessee and took the only other one that I could afford. That was forty-five miles southeast of Knoxville, in what was then the little town of Sevierville. In those days, Sevierville was just a sleepy little hamlet in the foothills of the Smokey Mountains. Through a woman who knew my mother, I found this cozy little bachelor's apartment above a women's beauty salon right on Main Street.

Next to it on one side was the landlady's big three bedroom house, in which she lived by herself since her husband passed away the year before. On the other side of my apartment was the Bank of Sevierville, which was an old building, probably at least one hundred years old. When I was given the key to my upstairs apartment, my landlady emphasized to me that she wanted me to always use the rear entrance, because if I used the front entrance, I would have to come in through the beauty shop and I might disturb her customers. I agreed to do that and not bother anybody. In the back of the place was a long flight of stairs next to where I parked my pickup truck. The staircase led to the kitchen door, which was the door that I always used.

Once in the middle of the night, I heard what I thought was a rat scratching at the kitchen door. I got out of bed and tiptoed out to the kitchen to investigate. Well, there was no rat at my back door, instead, I found the door knob slowly moving back and forth. I was scared out of my wits, and I tiptoed back into the bedroom and got a baseball bat out of the closet for protection. Back to the kitchen I went and stood beside the refrigerator with my bat raised, ready to club someone if they came through that door. Nothing happened, thank goodness. After a few minutes, the door knob quit turning, and I went back to bed.

If I had a phone, I could have easily called the cops, but, I didn't have a phone. All was quiet for I guess a couple of weeks, then, out of nowhere one night around 2am, the front door downstairs opened and shut extremely loud. Next, I heard loud footsteps coming up the stairs toward my bedroom door, which I always kept locked. The sound of the footsteps came right up to my door, stopped for a brief second, and someone on the other side jiggled with the door knob. The next thing that I knew, that door flew open and in stomped a white man about fifty-five years old carrying a tool box in his left hand. (That is right, he didn't walk in, he stomped in. I immediately raised up from my bed and went to holler at him and ask him what was he doing there, but, before I could get it all out of my mouth,.....he vanished into thin air! I spent the rest of the night with my light on, and I moved a day or two, later. I later found out that the landlady's husband was a handyman. I figure that he came back to fix something in that apartment that night

Deep Impact déjà vu

DATELINE: 47,000 YEARS BP, ARIZONA — As the fiery bolide streaked toward its terrestrial destination, the end of the world must have seemed imminent. Although not nearly the size that caused the extinction of the dinosaurs at the end of the Cretaceous period, this mass of cosmic nickel-iron measured 150 feet across and weighed 300,000 tons. It slammed into the ground at 40,000 miles per hour with a force equivalent to 20 million tons of TNT. The impact and resulting explosion instantly created a bowl-shaped crater 570 feet deep and 4,100 feet in diameter. Extending nearly two-and-a-half miles, its circumference is not a circle or oval as one would expect but instead a square with the corners rounded off. If the meteorite struck during the day, the eruption of ejecta, dust, and smoke would have risen high into the deep blue sky, obscuring the sun. If it hit at night, the blinding flash would have illuminated the landscape, turning darkness into broad daylight. The blast shook the ground and produced shock waves in the air for miles in every direction. Without warning, this bizarre astro-geological formation suddenly loomed more than 150 feet above the plane of high desert, much as it does today.

Barringer Meteorite Crater was named after Daniel Moreau Barringer, a Philadelphia lawyer and mining engineer who staked his claim in hopes of making a profit from this desolate stretch of sagebrush and red sandstone in northern Arizona. White settlers had found some thirty tons of meteoric iron in the form of spherules scattered over an area more than eight miles in diameter. Even larger meteorites were occasionally discovered at the impact site and in nearby Diablo Canyon. One rock weighing 1,406 pounds is now housed in the Meteor Crater museum. 1. Unfortunately for Barringer, no extractable meteoric metal was ever obtained. He and his Standard Iron Company had spent over $600,000 drilling test holes from 1903 until work was halted in 1929 with very little to show for his effort.

Based on these disappointing results, a majority of scientists have concluded that most of the nickel-iron of this meteorite had been vaporized in the devastating explosion caused by the impact. Barringer's final hole, however, did show some promise but had to be abandoned due to poor drilling conditions. Moreover, some sources report substantial finds prior to his venture. During the last decade of the 19th century both meteorite dealers and scientists were showing interest in Meteor Crater and Canyon Diablo. "Meanwhile, miners hauled away tons of iron meteorites, loaded them on railroad cars, and shipped them to smelters in El Paso, Texas, where they were melted down and made into various iron products. Probably more than 20 tons were collected. There must be tools and machines still in use today that are made of celestial iron." 2. Nevertheless, this exploitation did not exhaust the supply of meteoritic iron and nickel. "Until the area was closed to meteorite hunting recently, hunters with metal detectors were still finding significant numbers of specimens." 3. Was the estimated 20 to 30 tons of meteoric iron that had been collected the amount actually deposited by the deep impact? Or was this amount merely the remnants of an earlier recovery of sacred sky metal by the Anasazi (the ancestral Hopi)?

Radiocarbon Dated Flyer

Perched on the lip of this natural wonder, we find it easy to grasp the immensity of the fortuitous cataclysms our planet sometimes must endure. On the other hand, it's not so easy to imagine how we might have reacted to such an enormous event. Although many archaeologists believe that no humans could have witnessed the devastating creation of Meteor Crater, some recent findings point to the contrary. About 330 miles to the southeast near Orogrande, New Mexico 4., R. S. MacNeish of The Andover Foundation for Archaeological Research has uncovered evidence of human habitation that even antedates the 47,000 YBP (years before present) window for Meteor Crater. In Pendejo Cave about thirty miles south of the town of Almagordo, MacNeish found hearths, clay-lined pits, cordage, awls, serrated knives, pendants, and animal bones (including a bison humerus) worked by hammerstones. He also unearthed a spear point embedded in the toe bone of an extinct species of miniature horse. 5. Traces of human hair as well as finger and palm imprints in fire-hardened clay were even discovered. Radiocarbon dating of 171 samples consisting of wood charcoal, wood, bone, leaves, fiber, seeds, nuts, and feces indicate a range from a mere 350 YBP to an astounding 55,000 YBP, the second date being some 8000 years before the Meteor Crater impact. 6.

Could any of the Paleolithic peoples who ranged across what is now the Southwestern United States have seen the meteoric juggernaut crashing down from the heavens? The explosion caused by this massive chunk of space rock striking the Earth was a thousand times more powerful than the bomb dropped on Hiroshima. If humans were anywhere near the impact forty-seven millennia ago, the colossal force would have surely provoked an overpowering awe. It may even have caused the sort of numinous dread that Rudolf Otto has termed mysterium tremendum, or "...wholly other", that which is quite beyond the sphere of the usual, the intelligible, and the familiar, which therefore falls quite outside the limits of the 'canny', and is contrasted with it, filling the mind with blank wonder and astonishment." 7. In addition to temporarily changing the weather patterns, a detonation of this magnitude would have had an even more lasting effect. In essence, it would have radically altered the religious belief system of both those who actually experienced the cataclysm and those of succeeding generations who merely heard tales of it. A similar theological and mythological case occurred with the milder Sunset Crater volcanic eruption less than one thousand years ago; thus, it stands to reason that the pervasive influence of meteoric lore and ritual connected with this much more potent event would have been profound.

Either consciously or subconsciously, the crater's enduring presence has had a major impact (pun intended) on the religious system of those who eventually settled in this region. As Andrew Hermequastewa, Blue Bird Chief from Second Mesa stated, "The Hopi land is the Hopi religion. The Hopi religion is bound up in the Hopi land." 8. Meteor Crater is certainly one of the most recognizable geomorphologies in American Southwest. The Hopi call it Yuvukpu, which literally means "cave-in," "sink"— i.e., a depression in the landscape. 9. The Hopi also have a Meteor Crater kachina, which is akin to the Kaa-na, or the Sunset Crater kachina, although the former land-form located thirty-six miles to the northwest is, as stated above, volcanic in nature. 10. These two kachinas in turn are similar to Yehoho (or Tsekok yenu), the Roast Corn Throwing Boy. This figure who frequently distributes roasted corn to the spectators at a kachina dance ceremony wears horizontally crossed feathers atop his mask, which is half red and half yellow, and is divided down the middle with a vertical white and black stripe. Carrying an aaya, or "moisture rattle" in his right hand, he wears a bobcat costume with a spruce ruff, the latter worn to attract rain. 11. As we shall see below, storms and meteoric phenomena are mystically connected.

Meteor Cult Classics

Meteorites (a term designating meteors, or shooting stars, that have fallen to the ground) have been the source of religious veneration for many different cultures worldwide throughout the ages. Located in Mecca adjacent to the eastern corner of the Ka'aba, for instance, is the so-called Black Stone. An object of much obeisance, it is mounted within the foot-long, oval-shaped orifice of a large silver frame. "This relic, most likely a meteorite, is said by sages to symbolize the human soul shining under the throne of God, although it was long ago worn dull under the hands and lips of countless pilgrims." 12. Even earlier the Benben Stone was worshipped at Heliopolis in Egypt. According to co-authors Robert Bauval and Adrian Gilbert of the provocative bestseller The Orion Mystery, meteoric iron was represented in the Pyramid Texts (some of the world's oldest writings) as "the 'bones' of the star kings" and "the seed that is Osiris." 13. The conical shaped meteorite of the Benben Stone served as a prototype of the pyramidion placed at the apex of both the obelisk and the pyramid. 14. (In this context it is interesting to note that the Hopi sky god Sotuknang is usually depicted as wearing a conical hat or peaked headdress.) At another famous provenience, the Valley of the Kings, a gold-hilted sword with a blade of meteoric iron was found among the treasures of Tutankhamun. The mummified body of the young pharaoh also had a headrest made of the same celestial metal. 15. The Egyptian word for meteorite was baa en pet, or "iron of the sky," whereas baa nu ta meant "earth-iron." 16. (The Hopi near homophone paa- means both "water" and "wonder.") The Egyptians conceptualized the sky or the "floor of heaven" as a rectangular plate of iron, presumably of the celestial variety, held up by four pillars marking the cardinal points. 17. Even the sun god Ra was thought to sit upon a throne of iron rather than upon a throne of gold as one might suppose. 18. From this we can deduce that the ancient Egyptians considered meteoric iron more valuable in both a spiritual and a material sense than the auriferous metal, at least in the pre-Dynastic Era. In fact, at El Girza north of Maidum nine tubular beads of meteoric iron were found dating from as early as 3500-3300 B.C. 19

From a slightly later period the Sumerians apparently esteemed both celestial and tellurian iron. "An object from the Royal Cemetery of Ur [2800 B.C.] turned out to be of meteoric iron. But a dagger blade of Khafaje had been smelted from terrestrial ores. It seems, however, to have been imported ready made, probably from Armenia. There, it can be deduced from later events, some barbarian tribe had discovered an economical method for smelting iron, but kept it secret successfully till the end of the IIInd [Second] millennium." 20. These so-called "barbarians" must have been at least somewhat metallurgically proficient in order to have worked with ferrous metals over fifteen hundred years before the beginning of the Iron Age

One of the oldest words for meteorite is the Sumerian term KÛ.AN, which may literally mean "iron from heaven." An Assyrian text from 1900 B.C. describes a group of Assyrian traders in Anatolia who apparently dealt in the precious metal. 21. If we break down the word, KÛ means "field" (or "earth") while AN relates to "sky," 22. thus describing the dual realms of meteorites. In this context it is interesting to note that the Hopi near homophone Kwan refers to the One Horn Society, which is directly associated with Sotuknang, the sky god. A synonym of KÛ.AN is the Sumerian amutu. The Hopi word amu means "they" or "them," while the suffix -tu is a dual indicator. Thus, "many of them" could refer to those strange metallic sky creatures, the quintessential Other.

Meteoric iron was traditionally considered a celestial metal whereas copper was known as a terrestrial one. It is interesting to find both of these metals mentioned in the antediluvian era as well. In Genesis 4:22, Tubal-cain, who was the son of Lamech and grandson of Methusael (Methuselah), is described as "an instructor of every artificer in brass [i.e., a copper-zinc alloy] and iron..." The first century Jewish historian Flavius Josephus says this about the original blacksmith: "But Tubal, one of his [viz., Lamech's] children by the other wife [viz., Silla], exceeded all men in strength, and was very expert and famous in martial performances. He procured what tended to the pleasures of the body by that method; and first of all invented the art of making brass." 23. Whether or not Tubal-cain wears a conical hat like his Greek counterpart Hephaestus 24. (or, as stated previously, the Hopi sky god Sotuknang), Flavius does not reveal. Incidentally, the name Tubal is said by some to be the secret password of the Master Mason, the Third Degree of Freemasonry. In addition, the crude pun "Two Balls and Cane" is seen as a genital representation on a Masonic lapel pin, thus reinforcing the connotation of fertility. 25.

The Old Testament also anachronistically refers to the metal "steel." For instance, II Samuel 22:35 relates David's praise of the Lord: "He teacheth my hands to war; so that a bow of steel is broken by mine arms." Surely this does not refer to the same alloy we know today. Could this instead denote meteoric iron? If God gave him supernatural strength to defeat his enemies the Philistines, this is possible. In addition, the Hebrew word paldâh used in Nahum 2:3-4 refers to the steel or iron of chariots but is translated as "torches." 26. Many cultures use the latter term to refer to falling stars.

America's Great Balls of Fire

The preeminent Atlantis scholar Ignatius Donnelly claims that even the Mound Builders of North America, who were also disparaged by the term "barbarian," forged implements out of meteoric iron. 27. Among the now-extinct Skidi Pawnee of Nebraska, meteorites comprised the principal items of sacred medicine bundles, chiefly because these celestial orphans were considered the children of Tirawa, the Supreme Being 28. (similar to the Hopi sun god Tawa, or the Great Spirit). This tribe is thought to have once lived in the American Southwest and shared many cultural and linguistic traits with the Hopi. The Pawnee word for meteorite is tahu.ru', but it also refers to flint, projectile point, and tough skin or scalp. 29. From this we may infer that the Pawnee conceptualized these obdurate sky children as having a hardened skin of iron. The near homophone tahu'at is the Hopi word for sinew, tendon, cartilage, ligament, or gristle, whereas the Hopi term hoohu refers to arrow—a metonym for a shooting star.

The Hopi phrase to'kpela owa, literally "sky stone," specifically refers to a meteorite. For ceremonial purposes the Hopi grind up this fallen celestial metal as a pigment to paint their winter solstice prayer sticks, to which eagle feathers are frequently attached. 30. It makes sense, then, that Canyon Diablo (in Hopi, Ötöpsikvi or Ötöpsikya, Canyon of the Strong Plant 31.), where many round nodules of meteoric iron ore (in Hopi, pûlañpû) were found, is also one of the places where sacrificial golden eaglets are annually gathered. An eagle, of course, is conceptualized as an intercessor to the sky world, whereas a prayer stick is an embodiment of its maker's direct petitioning of the gods.

The Anasazi also treated meteorites with reverence. One such sacred stone was discovered at Clear Creek ruin atop a mesa in the Verde Valley of Arizona. It was wrapped in a feather cloth and deposited inside a stone cyst on the northeast corner of a building, i.e., the direction of the summer solstice sunrise. Similar to the type used for infant burial, the grave of this fallen "sky child" also contained considerable pottery. The meteorite itself, which weighed over 135 pounds, was determined to originate at Meteor Crater nearly 53 miles to the northeast. 32. The fact that these ancient people hauled such a ponderous idol all that distance over rough terrain proves the spiritual importance of such objects. Some meteorite fragments also apparently served a more pragmatic or profane purpose, such as the well-formed iron ax unearthed from a ruin in New Mexico. However, this is probably the exception rather than the rule. Another example of the divine type of meteorite was found at Casas Grandes pueblo ruin in the northern Mexican State of Chihuahua. Ritualistically "wrapped like a mummy," 33. it obviously functioned as a repository of great sanctity.

A number of pit houses are reputedly located on the southwestern side of Meteor Crater, the direction from which the meteor apparently came. 34. (I cannot report further on these structures because during my onsite investigation I was quickly chased away from the privately owned area by two young men in a big pickup truck.) This pre-puebloan type of isolated domicile was built primarily prior to the 12th century A.D. in Arizona. The circular or oblong structures were typically dug three to five feet deep and were about eight to twenty-five feet in diameter. Cut down with stone axes (or perhaps those of meteoric iron?), four upright main timbers were embedded in the floor to support cross-beams upon which rested a cribbed roof made of smaller sticks covered with brush, bark, grass and mud. Banquettes, or earthen benches, stretched around the circumference of the pit house, and upright stone slabs sometimes lined the walls. Aligned on a south to north axis along the packed dirt floor were the following: a ventilator shaft with a deflector stone, a fire pit, and a sipapu, or small hole symbolically leading to the underworld. Entry was by way of a ladder through the smoke hole in the roof. It is interesting to note that the rounded corners of the pit houses reflect the specific morphology of rounded corners of this particular crater. Thus, it is possible that Meteor Crater provided the initial model for these early dwellings.

If the blinding flash and sun-obscuring smoke clouds from the gigantic cosmic rock plowing into terra firma were an arresting visual display, then its deafening roar must have been an equally arresting auditory one. "Sonic booms and the explosive flames of fragmentation accompany the object's descent. It lands with thunder. Even from a distance, fireballs are sometimes accompanied by sonic booms, and that, too, may have helped associate meteors and meteorites with thunderbolts." 35. The Hopi were certainly not immune from these types of parallels. In discussing the ritual usage of the rhombus, or bull roarer, one authority states: "The Hopi associate sound with meteoric phenomena, and its use may be in effect an incantation to bring rainstorms." 36. Thus, both thunderbolts and fireballs evoke rain, which in the desert is synonymous with fertility. It comes as no surprise, then, that the Hopi phrase for shooting star is soohu l'öögö—soohu meaning star and l'öögö referring to a bride who goes to the groom's house for a wedding ceremony, thus connoting fertility as well.

Hubert Howe Bancroft's multi-volume work entitled Native Races of the Pacific States relates that the Tarascans of Michoacan, Mexico (who possibly had ties to both the Zuni of New Mexico and the Quechua of South America 37.) were found by the Spanish chronicler Tozozomoc to wear "steel" helmets. LDS researcher Jeff Lindsay comments:

"Actually, a material that could be called steel was available in Mesoamerica, namely meteoric nickel-iron alloys... Nickel-iron alloys appear very common in meteorites. Further, I found several examples of meteoric metals that the author compared to man-made steel listed in Volume 2 [of Buchwald's Handbook, cited above], including haxonite from Canyon Diablo in Arizona, a face-centered cubic carbide related to tool steels and stainless steels... The point is that at least some meteoric metals can be called steel with technical accuracy, and could certainly be called steel by ancient peoples or modern translators, who might easily call a broad range of iron alloys 'steel'." 38

As we previously noted, steel is referenced more than once in the Bible. Was "steel," or meteoric iron, once a highly coveted precious metal prospected and traded in the same manner as gold and silver? If so, did Meteor Crater in Arizona serve as a major source of such ore?

Adventures in the Stone Trade

Recent findings in the Arctic indicate an extensive trade network dealing in celestial iron, the source of which was presumably the Cape York meteorite impact in northwestern Greenland. "Current research suggests that prehistoric Arctic dwellers began hammering metal into tools about 1200 years ago." 39. On Little Cornwallis Island nearly 375 miles west of the Cape York event, forty-five iron artifacts—blades, harpoon points, needles, fasteners, etc.—were found in two Dorset villages dating back as early as A.D. 450. However, the trade network may be considerably older. "McCartney [viz., Arctic researcher Allen McCartney, professor of anthropology at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville] initially wondered whether this expansive trade began soon after the Cape York meteorite shower—estimated at a total of some 200 tons—crashed to Earth." 40. Meteorite expert Vagn Buchwald suggests that the Cape York meteorites plummeted to Earth at least 2000 years ago but may have impacted even as much as 10,000 years ago. The Meteor Crater event, of course, is much older than even the earlier date.

In this context the claim that the Hopi migrations included the Arctic Circle prior to their final settlement on the three Mesas in circa A.D. 1100 does not seem so far fetched. The Arctic region blocked by snow and ice is known by the desert dwelling Hopi as the "Back Door of the Fourth World." 41. In addition, Hopi pictographs dating back as much as 1300 years ago were recently found in Grotto Canyon near Calgary, Alberta. Some depict the Humpback Flute Player (a.k.a. Kokopelli). The Canadian Indian people known as the Stoney First Nation have a legend of a foreign "rattlesnake people" who once lived among them. 42. The Hopi Snake Clan is one of this tribe's primary clans, while the Snake Dance and the Flute Dance held in alternating years during August are major rituals in the Hopi ceremonial cycle. Did the ancestral Hopi travel north in part to exchange the older sacred metal of Canyon Diablo for that of Cape York

It is clear that a substantial portion of the Arizona meteorite was either vaporized or atomized into countless droplets of molten metal. The question remains: What percentage of its 300,000 tons was so reduced? The survival of merely one tenth of one percent would have provided enough metal for a viable trading operation. If the Cape York meteorite weighing only 200 tons could furnish a rich source of extraterrestrial ore, then perhaps the Barringer meteorite was a veritable bonanza, even if most of it was destroyed in its descent through the atmosphere and impact with the Earth. This would have been more than a mere exchange of commodities as seen in modern terms, however. These meteorite fragments would have been perceived as nothing less than the sky spirits' metallic flesh, imbued with the numinous power of the celestial realm. Graced by a visitation from these blazing star beings, the ancient inhabitants of Arizona would have experienced the same mixture of awe and reverence that normally accompanied any biblical theophany.

The Billy Meier UFO Contacts:

Proof Beyond A Reasonable Doubt by Michael Horn

Michael Horn

What do you think it would mean to you and to all of humanity to not only confirm the extraterrestrial origin of some UFOs but to also have face-to-face contact with their extraterrestrial, or ET, occupants? Wouldn't you agree that it would be one of the most important events in all of human history, one that would forever change our understanding of who we are and our place in the universe? And, do you think it's possible that such contact could have already occurred, even though most people haven't heard anything about it?

While the world is swept up in the frenzy of post-millennium and post-9/11 events, a story has been quietly unfolding in a small Swiss village and slowly gaining worldwide attention. Since he first came forward with his claims of contact with extraterrestrials in 1975, Billy Meier has been at the center of an ever-increasing controversy, one so dramatic that it has made him the target of 19 documented assassination attempts, hardly the type of negative attention a simple hoaxer would warrant.

Now a man sixty-five years of age, Meier claims that his voluntary, face-to-face contacts with the ETs began when he was five years old...and continue to this day. During these contacts, Meier claims, he's had lengthy conversations with the ETs on a very wide variety of matters, many well outside of his own educational background or personal experience. While claims of a UFO contact case spanning sixty years are unique in themselves, Meier sets himself apart from all other persons alleging contact by providing irreproducible physical evidence:

Over 1200 clear daytime photos of up to four of the UFOs at one time.

Eight 8mm film segments of up to three of the UFOs at one time.

Sound recordings of the UFO made outdoors on a cassette machine, in front of 15 witnesses.

Metal samples presented to him by the ETs which were examined by a patent-holding scientist at IBM.

All of the above physical evidence underwent independent scientific testing and analysis, was found to be genuine, and remains irreproducible to this day. And all of the evidence was produced and presented between 1975 and 1980 when the technology to hoax it was unavailable, including computer, special effects, Photo Shop, digital effects, etc.

While this alone is simply staggering to anyone understanding the implications, there have always been those who simply claim that, somehow, the one-armed Mr. Meier hoaxed every bit of the evidence...despite absolutely no proof that he did or even could have. And Meier is not the only one to have seen or photographed the UFOs. There have been more than 70 witnesses and four other people who photographed the spacecraft. As recently as May 2000, 17 people observed two of the silvery discs hovering above the property in Switzerland where Meier, his family and some friends live. One of the witnesses, Freddy Kropf, took numerous clear photos of the event.

With all this in mind, it was decided that an even higher standard of proof would need to be set, one that would be impossible for anyone to hoax, no matter how many arms, how much money or how many accomplices he would have. Simply put, the higher standard of proof would be advanced knowledge of things and events that had not yet occurred, been discovered or proven to be true. In other words, prophetically accurate, highly specific scientific and world event-related information.

And, rather than suggest that Mr. Meier come up with some new prophecies, and thereby give him the opportunity to either attempt to second guess such matters, or cleverly use the Internet to search out little known information that he could creatively string together under the guise of prescience, we searched his already published material, the thousands of pages of alleged conversations with the ETs dating back to 1975, to see what we could cull from it that might either provide evidence of foreknowledge or cast sufficient doubt on his claims.

Before presenting the current results of that search, it should be mentioned that in February of 2001, I contacted the professional skeptics group, CFI West in Los Angeles (affiliated with the magician and debunker the "Amazing" Randi) and challenged them to duplicate one of Meier's photos and one of his film segments. Since I had been assured by a CFI West investigator that these were easily duplicated hoaxes I was interested in seeing just how quickly they could duplicate them. It is now more than a year and one-half later and they have been unable to duplicate even one of them, despite my invitation to use any technology currently available to them (and which clearly wasn't available to Meier.) I did suggest, that to be sporting about it, that the man use only one arm.

Here is a brief sampling of what we found in a very abbreviated form. Meier's contact number, date and subject are shown followed by the earliest date of corroboration:

7th Contact, February 25, 1975, 34th and 35th Contacts, September 14th and 16th, 1975: Connection of A-bomb testing, explosions to ozone damage, contribution of bromine gases to ozone damage, penetration of UV through holes would lead to disruptions in food chain, genetic mutations, other long term negative effects for human kind and the planet.

Corroborated: November 29, 1988, published report from Lawrence Livermore National Laboratories announced this new discovery: ATOM BOMB TESTING TIED TO OZONE DEPLETION

Corroborated: Los Angeles Times on February 24, 1992 revealed: OZONE HOLE DAMAGES FOOD CHAIN

Corroborated: National Public Radio in 1991 confirmed connection between bromine gases and damage to the ozone layer.

45th Contact, February 25, 1976 Semjase (the extraterrestrial woman contactor) warned him that our extraction of petroleum and natural gas from the Earth, damming of waters, construction of huge cities were major contributing factors to the increase of earthquakes and volcanic activity.

Corroborated: The Good Life-Independent Journal newspapers, June 27, 1990: EARTHQUAKES, OIL INTER-ACT

31st Contact, July 17, 1975: Specific information about Venus, unknown at the time, included: composition of atmospheric gases, surface temperatures, depth of clouds, wind speeds, atmospheric pressure, coloration, variation in terrain, etc.

Corroborated: By both US (in August 1976) and USSR (in October 1975) probes.

Corroborated: February 1981, USGS was producing a topographical map of Venus which, it was discovered, further confirmed the details Meier had published...five years earlier.

31st Contact, July 17, 1975: Meier was informed that, contrary to his belief, Mt. Chimborazo (and not Mt. Everest) was highest mountain on Earth.

Corroborated: Confirmed in a report in the June 1996 issue of Earth magazine, 21 years later.

115th Contact, October 19, 1978: Contained information on Jupiter's 17 moons, existence of rings around the planet which were comprised of mostly particles and sulphur ions flung off by volcanoes on Io, the most volcanically active body in solar system and which, unlike Jupiter's other moons has an extremely level surface and is completely devoid of water (exactly unlike the ice-encrusted Europa), also he learned that Jupiter's red spot is a rotating, huge funnel-shaped hole in the surface of Jupiter which is the center of a gigantic storm, thousands of years old which rotates at great speed in a counter-clockwise direction.

Corroborated: March 5, 1979, NASA discovers rings of Jupiter, Meier was 5 months in advance with his information. (Also, only 15 moons were known at the time, 16th discovered shortly after. Moons are different from other numerous asteroids and smaller bodies in orbit around Jupiter.)

Corroborated: September 15, 1998, Cornell University scientists confirm particulate composition of rings from Jupiter's moons. Meier was 20 years in advance on this.

Additional prophetic information from this contact was put in to the possession of the lead investigator in the case, Col. Wendelle Stevens, USAF (Ret.), Maj. Rudolph Pestalozzi, USAF (Ret.), and Mr. O. Richard Norton, former director of the Flandreau Planetarium in Tucson, Arizona. They witnessed and secured the information until after the following was

Corroborated:

Jonestown massacre

Overthrow of the Shah of Iran

Soviet invasion of Afghanistan

Chinese invasion of North Viet Nam

1978: In his book, Existing Life in the Universe, Meier predicted that a telescope would be launched at end of 1980s which would make unfathomable discoveries in space.

Corroborated: Hubble telescope was subsequently launched in April 1990, 12 years later.

1978: ETs told Meier that a comet would be discovered in late 1980s to early 1990s that would ultimately be named Toutatis, and may threaten Earth in September of 2004.

Corroborated: 1989, French astronomers indeed discovered a comet, named it...Toutatis. Predicted to come closest to Earth around September 29, 2004.

Still speculative: Meier stated that there are two small planetary bodies outside the orbit of Pluto which he calls Trans-Pluto and Uni which our scientists will discover in the not too distant future.

235th Contact February 3, 1990: Warned of earthquake in California for February 28, 1992.

Corroborated: Date of the Upland earthquake.

241st Contact, February 3, 1992: Contained specific Corroborated warnings about:

Landslide in Brazil which occurred in March of 1992.

Nuclear accident in Russia during the 3rd week of March, 1992 which occurred on March 27, 1992.

Earthquake in the L.A. area foreseen as occurring on April 23rd or 24th, 1992, hit on April 22, 1992 (Landers.)

Eruption of Mt. Etna predicted for April 1992 was reported April 15, 1992.

Eruption of Cerro Negro in Nicaragua in April 1992 occurred April 9 - 12.

Earthquakes foretold for Germany-Holland-Belgium area for April 1992 occurred April 13, 1992 known as Roermond earthquakes.

Earthquakes for China and Burma predicted for April 1992 occurred at Myanmar-China border region April 23, 1992.

249th Contact, June 13th, 1994: (In response to a question Meier asked regarding Mad Cow Disease), was told that, "BSE pathogens cannot be destroyed by simply cooking the meat and other items, or by producing meatmeal", he said that the temperatures necessary for destroying the disease-causing prions would need to be, "as high as 700°C (1228°F), and possibly even up to 1000°C (1768°F), for previously mutated pathogens that have existed for some time now." Our scientists have been raising their own estimates as to the temperatures necessary to destroy the disease-causing prions and are now more closely approaching the figure ET contactor stated.

251st Contact, February 3, 1995: Contains some of the most startling information regarding technological developments such as: hybrid warriors created by mixing humans and pigs (Corroborated: Human-pig DNA experiments recently begun), people who have bio-chips attached directly to their nerve endings (Corroborated: People already beginning to be "chipped"), the creation of half-human half-machine beings, clones and androids, the jumping of Mad Cow Disease to other species (Corroborated: Mad Deer, Mad Elk, etc.), discoveries that will conclusively confirm evidence of previous human life on Mars and many other things which are still, at this time, speculative. At the same time, Meier's information on the discovery and rectification of what is called the "aging gene" (Corroborated: researchers now recognizing the genetic role in aging), and Plejarian warnings about a deep impact scenario and the need for a defense system against dangerous incoming objects, are already being reflected in our scientific media.

While daily revelations in the news continue to confirm many of Meier's prophetic information, some information from this 251st Contact (which is already in the book "And Yet They Fly!" published on September 16, 2001) appears to deal with events very close upon us.

"On a broader scale, expect a strike involving the USA and its president that will stun the entire world." (When I asked FIGU, earlier this year, if this was related to the WTC attacks I was told no, it referred to attacks that would be forthcoming from the USA against Iraq and other countries.)

"Uprisings, revolutions, wars, and other diverse forms of unrest will escalate tremendously with Islamic fundamentalism playing a very sad part in the scenario." This statement, which followed the preceding one, seems to support the current timeline.

As provocative as this is information, none is more troubling than the prophetic information from the 215th Contact, February 28, 1987. Formerly available only in German, this contact was recently translated into English and it contains, among many items, advance warning of destruction of the WTC by terrorists, ominously stating that it is only the beginning of such troubles for America. While this contact details events on a worldwide level that appear to transpire over a number of years, there is specific mention of the destructive repercussions of American foreign and military policies that will not only stun the entire world (as is alluded to in the later 251st Contact) but come back upon the USA in unforeseen ways.

What Does It Mean to Us?

The material in this case plainly states what should be obvious: The universe, and everything in it, are governed by unalterable laws, basic among them is the law of cause and effect. Once the pendulum is sent out on its way, it will eventually return with the predictable result. The law always fulfills itself, in its own timing and its own way.

Foundational to the purported purpose of Meier's extraterrestrial friends, and his publication of their (and his own) prophetic and predictive information is the premise that certain things can be changed when human consciousness recognizes its errors and makes an effort in the correct, positive direction to alter those outcomes which can still be changed. Prophecies refer to those events which are the likely outcome of causes put in motion which are still alterable, to some degree. Predictions refer to those events which, for a number of reasons, will occur with certainty. Some predictions are simply prophecies that went past the point of no return.

It should be noted that special emphasis was placed, in the 215th Contact, on America and these very times we are in. More recent comments by Meier have also carried a heavy warning regarding the current American administration and leadership and the danger of it leading the world, irrevocably, into the next World War.

Certainly it doesn't take an extraterrestrial to hold this or any other opinion on current world events. So it is up to each interested person to do the necessary research to determine the accuracy and authenticity of the Meier UFO Contacts for themselves. Should the most important event in human history actually have occurred perhaps we may then understand that this is less about UFOs and extraterrestrials than it is about us and our survival.

Leaving car to enter house and looked up to 80 degrees to see 4 lights on bottom of craft plus two strobes on pos. wings. All lights were white, two in front and two in rear but spaced further apart not including the strobes. THIS Object was traveling north. Other object was a plane for reason that it had usual colored lights and was traveling NW. THE first object was half a hand at arms length. The object could have been a plane but the light pattern seemed not common. IT was traveling about 150mph. It sounded like piston engine but could have been other object. AS I SAY I would not report this but for the fact of the light pattern of all white lights. THE object appeared to be 10,000 ft. approx. It was partially foggy at the time.

Case Brief

*Mr. Peter Davenport
Director, National UFO
UFO Reporting Center*

Preliminary NUFORC statement regarding the footage captured by FOX 23 television in Albany, NY, on Sunday, October 20, 2002.

By Peter Davenport

Albany, NY Fox TV UFO Case

At 07:30 hrs. (Pacific) on Monday morning, October 21, 2002, the National UFO Reporting Center received a telephone call from a television news reporter, Mr. Dan Bazile, with FOX 23 news (a Clear Channel Communication-owned station), who apprised us that one of their photographers had inadvertently captured brief footage of a very bizarre object streaking across the sky near Albany, NY. He described that one of their photographers had been out on Sunday afternoon, October 20th, photographing aircraft at a nearby airport, and that the peculiar object had been detected in the news studio when the footage was being examined at slow speed.

From that first telephone conversation, NUFORC was not left with a clear understanding of the nature of the object and its appearance, but Mr. Bazile offered to forward to NUFORC still images from the tape. NUFORC offered to help identify the object, if possible, and to put the station in touch with photo analysts, who might be able to assist in further analysis.

In a second conversation with Mr. Bazile on Tuesday morning, October 22, he apprised NUFORC that the original video tape of the object had been forcibly "confiscated" from the "young photographer" by "four FBI agents," from the Albany, NY, FBI offices, a statement which now is in question. (Please see paragraphs below.) Mr. Bazile went on to describe how the agents had invited the photographer outside the station, and that the agents had then "taken" the "original" tape from the photographer, who had it on his person at the time of the meeting with the FBI personnel. When NUFORC suggested that such an act, in the absence of a court warrant, might be illegal, Mr. Bazile averred that he agreed with that assessment. However, he stated that the station still had in its possession several copies of the original tape.

When NUFORC asked Mr. Bazile whether FOX 23 was planning to do a news report on the incident with the FBI, he responded that the station was "considering" that possibility, but such a decision was out of his hands. He then stated that in order to answer that question, he would like first to speak with his "supervisor" about the matter, and that he would call back "in a few minutes."

After approximately 45 minutes had elapsed, NUFORC telephoned FOX 23 and requested to be put in touch with Mr. Bazile. After a short period of time, he came on the line, but after only a very short conversation he said he would like to put his supervisor, Mr. Dave Brown, Station News Director for FOX 23, on the line.

During our 7-minute conversation with Mr. Brown, he stated that a copy of the tape had been provided to the personnel from the FBI by his station voluntarily, because his station "willingly co-operated with members of law enforcement." He added that he personally had provided the video to the FBI, that it had not been "taken" by them, as had been suggested by Mr. Bazile. Mr. Brown stated that he had arrived at work on Sunday evening "at about 8 or 9 o'clock," and that FBI personnel had been photographed in the station while they watched the tape, and that that footage had been aired by the station on Sunday night as a news report. Mr. Brown implied that this fact illustrated that there had been no "mystery" surrounding the FBI's interest in the footage, and that, in his opinion, no impropriety surrounded the transfer of the tape to the FBI personnel.

Mr. Brown also added that he did not know whether the original tape had been provided to the FBI, or whether they had received a copy. However, he said that with digital tape, it really did not matter, since very little fidelity was lost in a copied tape.

When asked how many representatives from the FBI had been present at the station on Sunday night, he said that he did not know, but there were at least two representatives from that office present. He said there might have been more, but he could not be certain, since "there were so many people present in the station that night."

Mr. Brown closed the conversation with the statement that FOX 23 would not be devoting any more news coverage to the footage, suggesting that the story was now old news, and that, in his opinion, it did not warrant any further attention by his station.

Following our conversation with Mr. Brown, NUFORC contacted the FBI offices in Albany [(518) 465-7551]. We spoke with Lisa Massaroni, a public affairs spokeswoman, who apprised us that to the best of her knowledge, the FBI office did have a copy of the tape, that their personnel were planning to analyze it, but that she did not know the status of the investigation. She directed us to her supervisor for any further questions, and added that he would be out of his office until October 24th.

NUFORC also was contacted by a gentleman from Birmingham, AL, Mr. Brian Huff, a forensic video analyst, who had captured the video from the FOX 23 website, and who has analyzed the tape. We provide elements of his video analysis with this statement. Mr. Huff has stated to NUFORC that, based on his analysis of the footage, the object is genuine, and that it is not a superimposed image. He also stated that the object is on the other side of the clouds, which provides some perspective as to the size of the object, and its velocity, which Mr. Huff concludes is considerable. We extend our gratitude to Mr. Huff for sharing his analysis with NUFORC and Jeff Rense.

3d Forensic Graphics, Video editing, production and verification, Virtual crime scene 3d walkthroughs, Expert Witness and Consultant. Specializing in verification, visualization, and re-creation.

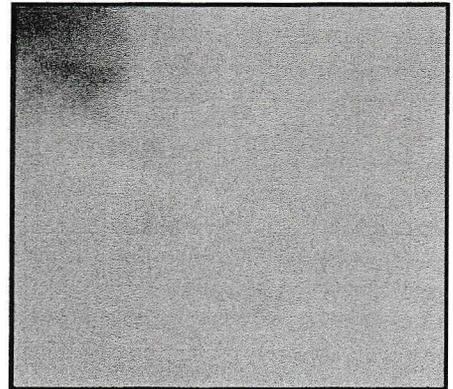

Goal 1 - Verify authenticity of video with respect to object as an original embedded component.

Goal 2 - Clarify shape and size for analysis and comparison

Goal 3 - Establish that object is not of the nature of a small "close proximity "rod" (as identified in the research of Jose Escamilla -ed) or insect illusion.

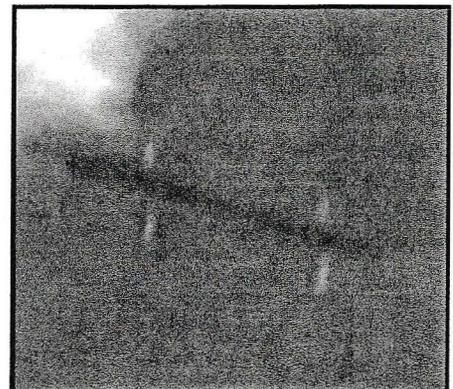

Object Verification

Direct color inversion of non-enhance video still. Objects in the atmosphere generally reflect the color of their environment-and appear somewhat as monochromatic images. Direct color inversion is useful for detecting overlays, pasting, chromakey, and other methods used to "fake" photo and film. An authentic image should invert to an alternative pseudo-monochromatic color scheme, with no obvious foreign colors or anomalies-sharp lines, ect.

Object Definition—light source

Object defined by contrast increase 61% and brightness reduction of 18%.

Comment:

Was It A Missile?

From John LeFrancois - 10-26-2

FBI Grabs Fox UFO Video - Expert Certifies Object Genuine, the object in the video looks very much like a surface-to-air missile. It would be interesting to discover who was in the plane that was flying over at the time. It might be possible to find some indication locally of where it landed or if there was an unexplained detonation sound around that time.

Could this have been a botched pseudo-terrorist event? Or perhaps someone like Senator Paul Wellstone was in one of the planes flying over or landing at that time?

UFO Sightings

Granisle, British Columbia

Date: October 22, 2002

Time: 10:25 p.m.

(HBCC UFO Note: Granisle is a small town 45 minutes northeast from where I live in Houston, British Columbia, Canada. Granisle has a population of 400 residents and the main industries are tourism and logging. Once the site of a copper mine. (Granisle Copper & Bell Copper) who had two large open pit mines).

I was contacted by a gentleman (I will say this, it was a person in authority) recently who gave me quite a story. The witness was with another fellow driving north just a couple of kilometers south of Granisle, B.C. (their exact location when they viewed the craft was at Topley Landing. The two large forest companies here in Houston have a barge which runs back and forth across Babine Lake carrying logging trucks) The old Bell Copper mine is directly across the lake from the witnesses position. An approx: guess would be a 3/4 to 1 mile between the craft and the witnesses.

The fellows observed a large glowing orange/gold almost saucer shaped (oval?) object hovering right over top the old Bell Copper mine. They said it was very low to the ground. At this point they pulled over to have a look and to try to figure out what they were seeing. As they watched the object hover, it would rise up very slowly and come to a complete stop, move sideways then stop and drop down roughly the same height from the ground when the witnesses first seen it. (HBCC UFO Note: I asked if they witnessed any type of light coming from the object, meaning a downwards beam of light). They both told me no, no lights were seen coming from the object. They did say that it almost looked as if every time the object moved to another position and dropped back down, it seemed to them the light intensity grew from the object while it stayed stationary. At "one" point the object moved out over the lake and stopped for a few seconds, then went back over top the mine once again.

They mentioned they heard no sound at all, but keeping in mind that the two fellows were some distance away from the object when viewing it. (HBCC UFO Note: I asked them if they could give me an approx: size of this thing). There rough estimate was about the size of the Moon (maybe a hair smaller). They also said there were a few other cars and trucks that passed by them at the time, but no one stopped. (HBCC UFO Note: I can certainly understand why no one stopped to see what was going on, as I know who the witnesses were).

But they did say that everyone traveling the highway had to have seen it, you couldn't miss it. They said the area around the object, (ground area) was lit up for some distance. Also due to the brightness of the craft it cast it's reflection on the lake. The men watched this event for approx; 7 minutes before it rose up and left slowly heading north, still at a low altitude and out of their sight.

(HBCC UFO Note: I find this a very interesting case to work on. Three things come to mind, why was this craft sitting over the old Granisle/ Bell Copper mine. Why did it move and stop over top of the lake. Why did the intensity seem to grow when it moved to a new position and hover. Actually I have a million questions I could think of to ask, but who ?? I am not sure if I can gain access to the mine, but I am going to check into it, as I would love to take a drive out to have a look around. Also something to keep in mind, Granisle Copper & Bell Copper mine's sit on an island on Babine Lake. Since the mines have been closed for sometime it may be hard to get onto the property. Also rumors have been floating around that one of the companies were thinking of going back in and high grading the remaining ore. One other note to this story which may be of interest. On the mine site there have been a good number of fossils found, one which has brought a lot of attention has been the Mammoth. Bones have been found, and also were buried by the mine sometime ago when it was in operation. From a newspaper article in the Smithers Interior newspaper a while back the company thought it best to not have their mining operation stopped, or slowed down by having folks digging for these fossils.

Anyway, there you have the short version to this case, but I wanted to get this one out as I just received it this past week. there is a lot more to do on this one, in hopes of finding some more answers to this amazing case. Also I think it would be a good idea to pop into the newspaper office and see if they will run the sighting report in hopes that some of the other folks who drove by might come forward and give their take on this.

Thank you to the witnesses for their report.

Hello Brian

On Saturday Dec 21, 2002 I was on the ferry going to Victoria from Vancouver. At 9:20 a.m. I went out on the deck to have a cigarette. I was the only one out at that time because it was quite cool and windy. Their was blue sky but with lots of clouds that were moving quite fast because of the wind. I saw a white ball or sphere shaped object approaching a cloud. It didn't move very fast, it seemed to float but I know it wasn't a balloon. It was very white. It didn't look very big but how can I tell at that height. I watched it for about ten seconds not taking my eye off it. As it was approaching the cloud and then was covered by the cloud I waited for it to reappear after the wind moved the cloud (the cloud wasn't big) but I never saw it again. It either moved with the cloud or disappeared. It was moving in the northwest direction until it was covered in the cloud, then I don't know what happened to it. Other people came out and I was going to ask them to look at it but it never came out of the cloud so I don't know if anyone else saw it. The length of the event took approx: 10 to 15 seconds. I have contacted some sources in hopes of trying to solve this case.

Thank you to the witness for their report.

Granisle, British Columbia

Date: December 27, 2002
Time: approx: 2:10 a.m.

HBCC UFO note: It has been an exciting year for me here in northern British Columbia. After a slow start in for the year 2001 (6 reported UFO sightings, my investigation into the Vanderhoof crop circles and a cattle mute), 2002 has been an unbelievable time for a UFO investigator. With this sighting report, this will bring the total cases I have worked on to 120 cases. Most of the cases are for the pacific north-west here in B.C. I have talked to over 200 witnesses for these 120 reported sightings. I still am working on two more still yet to come for the end of this year.

Did the same Golden UFO return to Granisle?

I had a telephone call from a nice fellow who reported that he, and three other co-workers were doing some last minute work around the logging camp which is located across Babine Lake, just across the lake from Granisle, British Columbia. One of the workers gave out a loud cry telling the other workers to look into the direction he was pointing to. Approx: a half kilometer away from their location, which would have been to the north. The men all witnessed a bright, white/yellowish light coming from behind the trees in the distance. At this point all that was visible was a a brightness shining above the trees.

(HBCC UFO note:) I know the area well as I have spent a lot of time fishing the lakes in the area, and there is nothing out there other than forest, lakes and streams. Of course cut blocks in which are being logged. I asked the fellow if there may have been logging equipment working in the area where the light was seen coming from, using their bright lights to log and harvest the timber. He said NO ! The loggers were making ready the area/camp for logging to start up again after the holiday season was over and done with.

After dropping everything the men were doing, watching and wondering what this glowing light was, to their shock a large glowing golden/orangish disk shaped object with a large halo of white around the craft rose up in the distance and stopped and hovered. I was told they observed the object for approx: 10 seconds at the most, which the fellow said seemed like a life time. As the object moved away from their location, heading roughly to the north they did lose sight of the craft quickly, but after losing sight of the object they still could see the bright light, which they figured was the light which was given off from the object for sometime. (approx: 5 minutes after seeing the object). The light grew faint and disappeared.

Thank you to the witness for their report.

UFO Sightings

Smithers, British Columbia

Date: February 20, 2003

Time: approx: 2:40 a.m.

Canadian Toll Free Hotline: 866 262 1989

Received Report - February 20, 2003

I had a witness call from Smithers, B.C. this morning. She mentioned to me that her husband thought she was seeing things, but it sounds like she was certainly witnessing something rather strange. The woman was up with her baby at 2:40 a.m. and has a great view of Hudson Bay Mountain and the ski runs, (which is located in Smithers). Actually the witness sits at the base of the mountain. Her blinds were semi open and allowed her to see a very bright light crossing the mountain, and then coming to a complete stop over one of the largest runs, which is called "Cold Smoke". She went on to say the light was dead center of the run, and wondered if it was just hovering, or "maybe" it had landed. She also reported hearing a clicking sound from the direction of the object. (HBCC UFO Note: My son lived a while back in the very same area as the witness lives now, and I know many sounds bounce off the mountain which allows everyone to hear different noises much clearer). The object moved from east to west before coming to a complete stop over the run. Approx: 5 minutes went by and a train could be heard coming in the distance and the object disappeared. "Her words, turned off". After the train had come and passed, and approx: one hour later, the object once again showed up. She knew the times for certain as she was up with their baby.

After the second time the light showed up, she said I got frightened and closed the blinds. I asked if she could describe the color of the light to me, she went on to say it was a extremely bright white, with an orangy light coming from the center. The light moved quicker than a helicopter, or any small plane that she knew of. (keep in mind that this light was spotted travelling some distance just below the peaks of the mountain and came to a sudden stop above the ski runs).

When the witness observed the light the second time, or after the train had long passed. She did not notice the light moving, but just showed up in exactly the same position it was observed before. The second sighting only lasted a couple of minutes. She reported her cat, which was also sitting on her bed, perked it's ears up looking in the direction of the window. I asked her an approx: size to the light. She said it may have been half of her thumb nail and round in shape.

HBCC UFO Note: After I received the telephone call I phoned the Smithers Ski Hill in Smithers to ask if any equipment was working on the runs around the time of the witnessed sighting. I was told work was being done on four runs throughout the early morning, and would be continuing throughout this week and over the weekend in the wee hours. This sighting may be the result of grooming equipment working on the ski hill, "but", what puzzles me is that the object was spotted travelling an approx: 3 kilometers along the mountain before it came to a stop. I also just called the witness back to clear up one point about this sighting, and that was, did she see the object before it got close to the ski runs?? She said "yes, I observed the light as it traveled over rough terrain, then got to the runs and stopped." So still puzzled at what was saw.

"Magnificent Obsession"

UFO Documentary - With Brian - HBCC UFO
Chris Rutkowski for the Life Network

The Canadian Life Network, and Chris Rutkowski flew in from Manitoba, Canada to Smithers, B.C. to film a UFO documentary which is called the "Magnificent Obsession", for the Life Network program. They all arrived on February 4, 2003 and filmed Chris and I for an hour or two later that evening. On February 5, 2003 we were filmed for 14 hours or more. The film crew had a couple more stops across Canada, before heading to Florida and then onto England to shoot a film on crop circles.

The program will be seen later this year, so if you are interested in viewing it, you can keep tabs on when it will be airing by checking out the Life Network's website.
