Sir,

I recently received your latest issue of Cosmos-Express (Vol. 1, No. 5) and you are getting better all the time. I was really interested in Mrs. Jean Rosenberg's article, "What Is Death". She is doing folks a great service. There are so many persons who are afraid of death. It is a shame that there aren't more people around to explain how it is to people who know and don't believe nothing of the spirit world.

Mrs. Joan Howard
Toronto, Ontario

Sir,

Congratulations! I was amazed with your Vol. 1, No. 5 issue. I found it really stimulating... May Cosmos-Express have long life.

Sir,

In your Aug., 1972 edition (Vol. 1, No.5) I believe Mr. Morin has made some slight errors. According to my limited information, the two closest stars to Earth are Alpha Centauri and Proxima Centauri, both being 4.3 light-years away (1) and not twenty thousand light-years (2).

I also do not know the meaning of "gravitonic solar atmosphere" (3). Perhaps Mr. Morin would enlighten me... I am also ignorant of the key formula of "undulation mechanics" (4). I also fail to see the connection between Dr. Pagés' work and antigravitation (5).

I would sincerely hope Mr. Morin or someone on your staff would explain my errors to me.

Christopher Kenney
Richmond, Vt., USA

Translator's Answer: We have inserted numbers within parenthesis after each error that Mr.

Kenney points out, referring to answers and explanations given below. Our astronomical reference guide is "Intelligent Life In The Universe," by I.S. Shklovski and Carl Sagan:

1) The closest stars to Earth are those in the triple system of Alpha Centauri, known under the names of "A", "B", and "C". This system is 4.3 light-years away, (one point for Mr. Kenney). The second closest is Barnard's Star, a binary or revolving double star system which is 6.0 light-years away. Then follows Wolf 359 (and not 369 as Mr. Morin erred --and may we take that point back-- which is a single star at 7.7 light-years away.

The probability of life evolving around Wolf 359 is considered greater by Mr. Morin because of the fact that our solar system is a one-star-system with at least one planet, the Earth, containing life forms. (The Alpha Centauri system has three suns, and Barnard's Star has two.)

2) translator's error: It should have read, "20 000 years" and not "light-years." The "years" refer to the time it would take a modern rocket using raw fuel to reach that star.

3) translator's error: It should have read, "gravitative solar atmosphere" and not "gravitonic".

4) translator's error: It should have read, "undulatory mechanics" and not "undulation".

5) In the second last paragraph of the article Mr. Morin says, "Succinctly resumed in the last two articles," etc... This is to mean that in Vol. 1, Numbers 2, and 3 & 4 appeared "the last two articles" Mr. Morin alludes to.

...cosmos in brief...

All over the world scientists are reporting a probable catastrophe to very soon hit all of mankind.

Steacey D. Hicks, a physical oceanographer, has reported that the level of the sea has suddenly risen three inches in recent years along the Atlantic coast from Maine to Virginia, a potential for "catastrophe on low coast-lines within 30 years".

A study of the sealevel reading at the 115 sealevel monitoring stations operated by Hicks's agency showed that the oceans were inching their way upward steadily. Hicks calls it "unprecedented".

Robert H. Mead of the U.S. Geological Survey in Mass., reports that "the mean annual rise in sealevel along the Atlantic coast from 1931 to 1969, is about 0.25 to 0.35 centimeters per year, or about one foot per century".

Meanwhile, Lev and Vladimir Bankovsky, two Soviet specialists, point out that Tokyo is sinking even faster than Venice; while Venice has subsided by about 7 inches in the last fifty years, this is the annual rate of subsidence in Tokyo. In fact, since the Second World War the eastern sector of Tokyo has sunk more than 79 inches.

In Japan, the southern part of Honshu Island is advancing "forcefully" upon the northern part.

Bangkok, the capital of Thailand, is sinking at the rate of 2.7 inches a year, while the Indian cities of Madras and Bombay are going down under slowly but surely.

A big underground explosion occurred in the Soviet Union on July 8th, 1972, just north of the Black Sea. The Swedish Defence ministry, who reported the incident, said the explosion of great magnitude was probably a test in connection with an extensive Soviet program for exploiting the peaceful uses of atomic energy. In the past two years the institute has detected seismic signals from 12 nuclear explosions from 10 areas in European Russia.

Paul Griffiths, a 21 year old University of Victoria oceanography student in Vancouver, and amateur cave explorer has revealed the existence of what reporters say may be the largest cave in Canada.

Preliminary exploration of the limestone cave revealed a gold-bearing underground river with black sand, a hot spring, white frogs, an underground lake, miles of unexplored galleries with waterfalls, and super-sized footprints of unknown age.

With a companion, Blake Killins of Hamilton, Ontario, the huge cave was explored for half-mile upstream from where a river disappears into a rock wall before emerging a mile away. Mr. Griffiths said the walls of the cave were of smooth rock and parts of the ceiling had two-inch long stalactites, which means the cave is of a considerable age worthy of wonder.

Only Mr. Griffiths, his exploring partner and provincial park branch officials know the cave's exact location, but they aren't talking.

(AP) LYNTHURST, ENGLAND --Police combed forests near this southern English town yesterday (8-20-72) for a man with Dracula-like fang teeth who raped a middle-aged woman but took away no blood. The man leaped out of some bushes naked and attacked the woman as she was deer-spotting, reported the police.

Police have checked three mental institutions in the area but so far no inmates have been reported missing. Drawings made by the police officials have been circulated to thousands of campers in the New Forest near Lyndhurst. The picture was called "Dracula of the Woods". (more...)

Many have raised the question whether we shouldn't take a substantial portion of the space dollar and devote it to earth related problems such as pollution and providing for a growing population. After Apollo 17, which sets out Dec., 6th, with a sophisticated set of new instruments and a geologist aboard to wrestle a few more secrets from the moon, Skylab will begin pioneering in that direction.

One of Apollo's greatest contribution to humankind might have been the awareness it gave man of the limitations of his own planet. To see Earth as a complete and closed ecological system floating in blackness of space was an emotional shock to many. People realized just how fragile Earth is, protected from the searing radiation only by a 40-mile-thick atmosphere.

The picture of a marble-like Earth relayed by Apollo 8 helped foster a surge in population interest for a cleaner environment, for better management of natural resources and preservation of the ecological balance.

The Skylab astronauts will conduct more than 50 different types of experiments aimed at developing techniques for surveying Earth's resources from space, determining man's ability to live and work in orbit for long periods, extending solar astronomy beyond Earth's dense atmosphere, and experimenting with space manufacturing. They will evaluate several sensors designed to locate such things as mineral and oil deposits, arable land, sources of air and water pollution, fishing areas, diseased crops and water resources.

Future missions are intended to help develop a global management system to meet a growing world demand for resources.

A scientist at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in San Diego, California, has announced discovery of a chemical test which for the first time dates bones and organic remains more than 40 000 years old.

Dr. Jeffrey Bada, an assistant professor of oceanography and an organic chemist, who made the discovery "accidentally" in 1968 while searching for a better method of analyzing sea floor sediment, said the new atomic clock surpasses the chronological range of the previously used carbon-14 dating method.

The U.S. National Space Agency sent Bada a piece of meteorite from the Murchison Meteorite that fell on an Australian farm Sept 28, 1969, for testing with his method. The meteorite contained conclusive evidence of amino acids before it fell to Earth, confirming the possible existence of extraterrestrial life.

MOSCOW --Soviet scientists advanced their arguments in opposition to the existence of a "supreme being" stating that the science of the origin and development of celestial bodies (Earth and the solar system included) commonly known as materialistic cosmogony, rejects any participation of God or any other supernatural forces in the origin of the universe.

According to theories among Soviet Scientists, the initial cause of the formation and disintegration of celestial bodies are thermonuclear reactions, in which hydrogen is converted into helium. The origin of our solar system is regarded by the Soviets as an individual case of the formation (more..

While the remarkably well-preserved remains fascinated archaeologists, art historians were enthralled by the coffin's elaborately painted silk adornments.

Father Joseph Breault, one of the members of the Catholic "Missionaries of Perpetual Adoration" is touring the U.S. this summer in the company of a 4 & a-half foot wooden statue of the Virgin Mary. The purported miracle is that the statue unaccountably sheds "tears" at odd hours of the night and day.

The statue was recently photographed in a New Orleans motel by a local priest-journalist who reported that he could find no earthly explanation for the liquid that welled out of the Virgin's eyes and dripped off the end of her nose. Father Breault explains only that the statue is one of two carved at the direction of Sister Lucia, the last survivor of the three peasant children who claimed to see the Virgin Mary at Fatima in 1917; the other statue he says, is being carried on a similar mission in Communist countries.

Msgr. Giovanni Verdelli, undersecretary of the Congregation for the Religious in Rome, Italy, says he has never heard of the Missionaries of Perpetual Adoration. He has also never heard of the weeping statue they want Catholics to venerate. (NEWSWEEK)

BONN --Women born under the sign of the Scorpion (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22) tend to marry men younger than themselves and, as a result are more prone to divorce. This is one of the curious unexplained facts that has emerged from an analysis of West German marriage statistics carried out by Prof. Rolf Danneel who was former director of the Zoological Institute at Bonn University.

His painstaking investigation into more than 11 000 marriages going back nearly half a century appears to prove there is connection between the date of birth and connubial bliss. Whether this is due to the influence of the stars or some other factor remains a mystery.

Isn't Autumn a nice season. No more dandelions popping up from our front steps, the end of bikini beach parties, and more cloudy skies; monsters in Louisiana forgetting their deodorant behind on deck, proud scientific achievements, and weird fireballs along the northwestern United States.

Yep, Autumn sure is a nice season.

The following is an interesting report that appeared in LA PRESSE, (a provincial newspaper), on July 26th.:

...Citizens residing in the Outaouais valley have recently proclaimed observing unidentified flying objects "almost every evening" this past month.

Many residents from nearby towns situated south-west of Ottawa (Canada's capital) affirmed having seen the same objects early on the morning of July 25th. A housewife reported her observation of a red and green arrow-shaped object that remained in view for over half-an-hour. Another citizen affirmed having seen this same object, and the regional Provincial Police Bureau said they received over a half-dozen phone calls from other eye-witnesses.

These affirmations follow a series of other observations taking place in the Campbell's Bay region of this province where citizens declared they witnessed the fourth "apparition" of a "very intense orange light"... On each occasion, the object was seen one hour after midnight.

A letter I received on August 23rd.:
Dear Mr. Caldwell,

On Sunday night, July 16th, at about 10:45 p.m., my brother-in-law and I were getting ready to go to work. As we stepped down the front steps of our house, we noticed an object in the sky swinging to and fro, at about  $\frac{1}{4}$  mile from us. It must of been 1500 to 2000 feet above the hydro-tension-lines, looking just like the full moon, of an orange colour.

My brother-in-law ran back into the home to fetch our field binoculars and we watched the object for about another ten minutes with our wives who had just joined us.

While we were talking and wondering if it could have been a helicopter, the thing suddenly disappeared. We didn't see it for about one minute thereafter when it reappears, and this time it came much closer to us, looking like the full moon and a-half. Finally, the thing just disappeared from sight, as if you switch off your light-switch...

Mr. R. H.

Mr. R.H. also included in his letter that the object had a perfect shape of a "flying saucer" and that this object "did not change colours" and "made no sound" what so ever.

Mr. R.H. is a security guard in the city of Three Rivers, Quebec, Canada.

From Capt. Dave T. Ozanne, a UFO Field Investigator from Dallas, Texas, come the following newspaper clippings:

THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS, Sunday, Aug. 13/72
...A fiery object fell into a field in the 5700 block of Forney in East Dallas, Friday, Aug., 13th. It burned out in four spots of ashes in a 15 to 20 foot wide area, reports W.R. Draper who resides in the area.

The object was sighted by Draper and two others as they looked from the living room window between 9:30 and 10 p.m., Friday.

"It looked like it was coming down from the sky, moving fast and was a pretty good ball of fire," said Draper, of 5702 Forney.

Observers in Denver, Colorado, recently reported a fireball flashing across the Great Basin and Rocky Mountains, then vanishing. A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration there said the object "could have been a meteor breaking up" in the atmosphere.

A fireball also was reported passing west to east over Boise, Idaho. Other recent fireball sightings have been reported in the northwestern United States and Canada..

(AP) ...A Washington State University astronomer says the fireball seen soaring over the northwestern United States and Canada may have been a brilliant mass of deteriorating meteors from the constellation Perseus.

One or more flaming objects, variously described as orange, red and blue, were sighted Thursday flashing across skies over six states and Alberta province in Canada. Capt. Bob Bagshaw of Frontier Airlines, who said he viewed the object on a flight from Missoula, Mont., to Salt Lake City described it as a big fireball that was flaking off particles and leaving behind a redish orange trail.

"I've never seen anything so impressive in my life," the pilot said. "It was a beautiful sight. It started on the horizon in the south, went right across my windshield and out of sight on the horizon in the north."

Mrs. Thomas Williams of Mead, Washington said she saw a fireball about four feet in diameter with flames shooting out the back and leaving a glowing blue-green trail. It was "traveling in as straight a line as you ever saw," she said.

Dr. Sydney D. Hacher, astronomer and professor at Washington State, said the Perseus meteors, known as the Perseid, had been expected over Northern Hemisphere skies on Saturday, Aug. 14. Reports of sightings came from west of Calgary, Alberta, Canada and from cities in Washington, Oregon, Montana, Wyoming and Utah. In Missoula, a Federal Aviation Administration employee said the object was at an elevation of about 80,000 feet when it crossed east of the city, around 4:30 p.m. EDT.

Perhaps the object is a "meteorite" and perhaps it is not. If it is a hot stone, then we should most likely find it, or parts of it here on land. But, of course, if we don't find any parts of it at all, the explanation most likely to spread will be one full of cheese holes. In any case, here's a "NEW" item on the market:

LASER FUN, a space battle between two space ships is the basis of a new "Pinball machine" that uses real lasers to score points. Maneuvering above a cratered surface, each flying saucer-like spaceship tries to ZAP the other for 5 points --or 10 if a bonus target is hit... This latest amusement device is the work of engineers who have shifted their skills from aerospace to other industries!

And last, but not least, is a weirdo clipping of...

(UPI) LOUISIANA MO. --According to H.C. Hewes, director of the International Unidentified Flying Object Bureau, the large, hairy creature several residents have reported --and smelled-- trudging around the small Mississippi River town may be a visitor from space. (continued page 10...)

Although our planetary system is but one of hundreds of millions or more within our Galaxy, the Milky Way, it is inevitable that on various occasions we have been visited by exploration teams from other planets whose technology is a few thousand years in advance of our own.

That these visits are infrequent is obvious when we consider that four light-years separate us from the nearest neighboring star, and that the distance to the other side of the Galaxy is almost beyond comprehension in terms of traditional space travel.

The impact which these earlier visits have had upon our culture may have been small but in some cases it was just enough to enable one race to assume technological supremacy over others and thus advance the course of history.

BAIAN KHARA OUGA

For the last 5 000 years or more the world has been dominated by the great civilizations of Egypt and the Fertile Crescent of Iran and India, China and, to a lesser extent, on the cultures of Central and South America. But before these had come into being, there existed several prominent cultural areas in the Pacific region: One bordering on the Gobi Sea; one radiating from Abyssinia; one within the region of the Atlantic Ocean, and others. There appear to have been unexplained spurts in these earlier cultures.

Logically, the emergence of these cultures could be attributive to impulsions originating outside the planet earth. We cannot, for example, find any logical explanations for the extremely high level of astronomical and other knowledge our ancestors possessed... Let us look at some of that astronomical knowledge: At about 3 000 BC, at Callenish and at Stonehenge, solar and lunar eclipses were calculated with a precision comparable to that of modern science. The same exploit was common practice in Egypt, Iran, India, and also in China. In Mexico, transits of the planet Venus were attentively observed and registered. Planetary satellites and binary or double stars were known throughout the Old World long before they had been observed with the telescope.

Taking into account the fact that these geographically isolated peoples possessed relatively identical legends that tell of "gods" who descended in metallic vessels from the sky, and accounting for the non-existence of the telescope in those times, is it not logical to assume the elevated knowledge they recognized was imparted to them by highly evolved visitors come from outer-space?

Geological and Human concepts of time work on different clocks. To a geologist a difference of one million years is of small importance, while ten thousand years, plus or minus, is too small to be taken into consideration. But to humanoids, be they terrestrial or extra-terrestrial, ten thousand years in cultural development is a great length of time, and those evolving on planets which cooled more rapidly than the Earth might well have had that much head-start of us --we are just beginning realizing space-travel, they may have managed to do so five to seven thousand years ago.

The "Elohim" of the Hebrew text are examples of beings from other planetary systems who visited our planet thousands of years ago (1). One need but examine the Ten Commandments that were handed to Moses by a most mysterious "god" who resided on Mount Sinai to conceive of the higher knowledge the "Elohim" commanded over the humans they encountered back here on the Earth. Fortunately for us those visitors who came from time to time (and they had been very few, with several hundred million inhabited planets within our own galaxy to choose from), had sufficient good sense to abstain from giving us more than a few gentle nudges in the direction of progress, without trying to speed up the process too much.

1) "Elohim" and other "divine names" of the Hebrew text are translated by orthodox bibles

Dwellers on planets having conditions approaching our own, of which there are many, would have a resemblance to human beings in general, with variations in detail. These visitors would have to be much of the same shape and size as ourselves, although they would naturally take stringent precautions to ensure that they neither brought fresh diseases to Earth nor took them away.

The records of primitive man may have been distorted owing to ignorance but contain sufficient factual material to be worthy of closer examination...

THE DISCS

In that rather nebulous area lying off the borders of Tibet, China, Mongolia and Russia lies a range of mountains known as the BAIAN KHARA OULA, (sometimes spelled BAYAN KARA OULA). To the north-east of this lies the Gobi Desert, a well known source of archaeological finds.

Some time after the Second World War, Chinese archaeologists dedicated some of their time to the study and exploration of the many caverns that pierce the flanks of these mountains. Their aim was to investigate and review the numerous petroglyphs previously discovered by Russian explorers in the various hill caves.

During one of these expeditions, the Chinese scientists discovered a hidden valley at about 11 483 feet of altitude in which were found a total of 716 stone discs with holes in their centers. They were transported and committed to the laboratories of Peking University where, with the aid of an electronic microscope, double spirals of some unknown script starting from the central orifice and terminating at the circumference were discovered. Further investigation showed that these marked grooves were some form of ancient writing. However, from the data given, it is uncertain whether, as with a gramophone record, one starts at the rim and works in towards the center or visa versa. (The point has some importance as with the various systems of boustrophedon writing, such as that from Easter Island --one is never certain whether to begin at the left and work to the right, alternating with each line, or whether to begin at the right and work to the left. There is also the problem as to which way up the script should be held.)

After some twenty years work the archaeologists produced a monograph which, for reasons beyond our knowledge, was promptly banned from publication by the Peking Academy of Pre-History. It has since appeared under the title: "GROOVE WRITING RELATING TO SPACESHIPS WHICH, AS RECORDED ON THE DISCS, EXISTED 12 000 YEARS AGO."

Supplementary studies of a few discs carried out in Moscow revealed they contained a quantity of cobalt and similar metals while, in addition, it is said that they vibrate to an unusual rhythm --as if they carried an electric charge or had formed a part of an electronic circuit.

into "God", "Eternal", etc... According to Jean Sedy, in his book "La Lune Cle De La Bible," "Elohim" is the plural form of "Eloah", and "Eloah" appears 40 times in the book of Job of the Old Testament. Because of its singular form in that book, Sedy says that "Elohim" is not, 'therefore', "God," but "gods". It is the equivalent to such English plural nouns as family, group, tribe, etc... It is a proper name for a group of people, signifying a plural noun. Jean Sedy stipulates that, according to logic and an objective and meticulous study of the original Hebrew text, the "gods" or "Elohim" is a title for the group of beings who visited this planet in biblical times.

2) Lobsang Rampa affirmatively states that in certain regions of the Tibetan Highlands exist hidden caverns containing illustrious machines built by a people of high technological intelligence who inhabited those regions thousands of years ago. Details appear in his book, "CAVE OF THE ANCIENTS".

THE ENIGMA

Just recently, after 22 years of research, Dr. Tsoum Oum Nui, member of the Peking Academy of Science, declared having identified the vibration of the discs and also believes he's found the meaning of the writing.

According to him, the discs tell of a mission executed by inter-stellar humanoids who visited the Baian Khara Oula area some 12 000 years ago. Dr. Tsoum Oum Nui says that, according to the history outlined on the discs, at that time occupied spacevessels landed, and after thorough explorations those mountains, they decided to penetrate into the many caverns wherein laboratories of a scientific nature were later constructed (2-see bottom of page 9).

Many thousands of years ago, recites Dr. Nui, a group of inter-stellar visitors scanned those regions for possible future habitation. Unfortunately, they didn't have much choice of return to their home planet for, during landing, their spaceship was damaged, and thus they were forced to remain here on the planet Earth where many of them quickly adapted to terrestrial conditions while others perished.

Once again, continues Dr. Nui, thousands of years passed, and again another spaceship lands on the proximity of the now inhabited caverns. But, by now the cave dwellers, having completely forgotten of their origin and, in consequence, existing in a rudimentary terrestrial lifestyle, were horrified at the appearance of strangely garbed visitors issuing from flying vessels landed on the threshold of their primitive homes. Fear made contact difficult at first but, eventually a dialogue was established and when the cave dwellers realized that the strange creatures were peaceful, communication took grounds.

Dr. Nui's declaration culminated on the affirmation that the deciphered script reliefs, the identification, and the interpretation of the disc's vibrations revealed that the Dropa and Ham tribes, who actually reside in those cavernous regions, are the descendants of those inter-stellar visitors the discs make reference to.

SOME ELEMENTS OF SUPPORT IN FAVOR OF DR. NUI'S THEORY

Although Dr. Nui's statements are historically unsupportable at this stage of scientific research concerning the enigma, we are to note that first of all, it has been reported that the cave walls are covered with petroglyphs depicting the rising sun, the moon, and the stars, surrounded by numerous pea-sized dots which appear to be approaching the mountain ranges. Secondly, ancient graves containing small human bodies with huge craniums and underdeveloped skeletons were found in the caves which at first made the experts think they were dealing with a species of ape. But, the essential differences between man and the other primates lies in the fact that human beings bury their dead and learned to write, whilst none of their cousins ever managed to accomplish this.

Other elements supporting Dr. Nui's theory come from Chinese legends and myths that allude to invasions from the skies of small, gaunt yellow faced men. As their large heads and small bodies made them objects of disgust, "some people on fast horses pursued and beat them"...

And what do the traditions and legends of the people presently living in those regions

Hewes said witnesses have provided information compatible with data recorded in similar sightings of tall, hairy beasts in the Florida Everglades and near Vader, Washington, in 1971. They have also been sighted near lumber camps in northern California and Oregon, USA

The Louisiana monster, which has been named Mono --short for Missouri monster-- closely resembles the giant hairy biped, one of four classifications of alien beings the UFO Bureau has on record.

Believed to have the intelligence of a chimpanzee, the hairy biped is said to have a large pumpkin-shaped-head, glowing eyes, an ape-like growth of hair, large feet, clawed hands, and arms that reach to its knees. These creatures "range in height from two-foot small hairy biped, to the 7-foot tall giant hairy biped", said Hewes. They emit a sulfur-like odour and react violently if disturbed by human beings.

say? Well, we know that the area surrounding the caves is now inhabited by two tribes called the Ham and the Dropa. These peoples are slender and delicately built, averaging 4-feet, 2-inches in height, and live in dirt-wood habitations erected directly in the caves. They hunt, fish, rear animals, weave material and tan the skins of animals which provide their clothing.

In spite of their primitive way of life, it is said that they are endowed with extraordinary powers inexistent in normal man, notably a remarkable mastery of Self and of meditative practices. In addition, it is said that they are totally indifferent to their destiny; In cases of necessity, they can instantly acquire super-normal physical forces for protection from exterior dangers. It has also been rumoured that the Ham and Dropa tribes do not belong to any existing ethnic group of peoples on this planet and that they quickly die when introduced to environments outside their inhospitable regions for too long a period.

The first text translated concerning their legends reads: "The Dropa came down from clouds in their gliders. The men, (women and children of the Ham tribe) hid in the caves ten times before the sun rise. When at last they were able to interpret the signs made by the newcomers, they realized that their intentions were peaceful."

Another legend refers to the loss of the spacecraft owing to a crash-landing on a mountain side and the impossibility of building new ones (because of the lack of suitable technology).

The Chinese legend above quoted, as well as the legends of both the Dropa and Ham tribe tend to agree with Dr. Nui's interpretation of the script reliefs found on the discs. There exists other evidence leading towards the veracity of the Dr.'s story: In 1965 the Tass News Agency reported that a "stone-age drawing found at Fergana, Uzbekistan, showed a cosmonaut-like figure wearing an airtight helmet with antennae and carrying a contraption for flight on his back." It has been dated at 7 000 BC.

The other element of support comes from Alexander Kazantsev when he reported in c. 1962 that a Soviet-Chinese Palaeontological expedition, headed by Dr. Chow Min Chen, discovered footprints in the Gobi Desert which had remained undisturbed for thousands of years. The shape of the footprint was that of a boot of a spacesuit. How and when these became imbedded in the sandstone is an open question which, according to some, is relative to the drying of the Gobi Sea about 12 000 BC.

CONCLUSION

There are multitudes of other archaeological discoveries in those Communist regions depicting strange flying vessels, giant astronaut-like figures carved in rock, etc.. All these finds contain the air of objective mystery, without any scientific explanations as to their significance.

Nonetheless, let us be content in what bits of information have fortunately crossed our way and lie back on our easy-chair to contemplate a proverb which perhaps is of Chinese origin: "NO SMOKE WITHOUT FIRE" !

DID YOU KNOW THAT...

...the Chinese have used acupuncture (from the latin ACUS, "needle," and PUNGERE, "to sting") for perhaps 5 000 years. Legend says the practice evolved after a soldier, struck by an arrow in battle, noticed a sensation of numbness distant from the wound.

Acupuncture may not be exclusively Chinese; an ancient Egyptian papyrus refers to "vessels" in the body that could correspond to acupuncture meridians, and an isolated tribe in Brazil has long treated disease by shooting arrows into various parts of the body.

In traditional Chinese theory, the art of acupuncture is based on the flow of ch'i or "life energy," through the body. Ch'i is controlled by the yin and the yang, the Taoist concept of universal opposites existing through out nature. Yin represents negative forces, darkness, femaleness, passivity, cold, while yang represents the positive of light, maleness, heat, activity. Disease results when there is an imbalance of the yin and the yang that disrupts the orderly flow of ch'i through the body .

The art of acupuncture has currently become one of the most outstanding controversy in medical fields. But, in an official statement, the American Society of Anesthesiologists warns that "a potentially valuable technique which has been developed over thousands of years in China, is being hastily applied with little thought to safeguards or hazards"

ANTIGRAVITATION

by Michel MORIN

(Editor's note: Due to the lengthy and detailed story of Dr. Pagès' activities in relation to his revolutionary theory as told us by Michel Morin, we have condensed the original text so as to present a general outline of Dr. Pagès' social and active developments to our readers. The original and complete text plunges head-on into international and national relations Dr. Pagès encountered throughout the major part of his life as his theory became a principle controversy amongst nations. Michel Morin, a scientist himself, personally knew Dr. Pagès and thus communicated together on the unravelling of the many principles involved in Pagès' antigravitation theory. The intimate relations between these two men is obvious in the original text. We thought the reader might find it disinteresting in reading a biography of a man's struggle through life and the jungle of aroused frustrations brought about by exterior motives and thus present here the following modest abridgement.)

To retell of Dr. Pagès' adventures would be somewhat similar like repeating the story of the many other scientists who've received the orthodox cold shoulder. But after history finally proves the authenticity and correctness of their "unorthodox theories," the conventional thinkers, somewhat embarrassed, pour warm apologies over that shoulder.

"No one is prophet in his own country," so says that old familiar saying. And this is particularly true for Marcel Pagès: While France, his own country, persists in refusing him any aid or recognition, foreign offers and interventions continue to accumulate; "Deliver us your fantastic formula; it is of interest to all humankind... All our laboratories and technicians are at your disposition... You'll have no more monetary worries..." This is the way the Soviet Embassy in Berne welcomed Dr. Pagès.

The United States Embassy

in Paris, as well as the British R.A.F. and the Italian Airforce rolled out the red carpet to Pagès also: "Come to our country," they pleaded "your price will equally be ours"!

The Russians, wanting to rid of their inferiority complex that says "I'm Number 2 in the space-race," offered their aid --BUT! under the condition that a "contract" be elaborated in which Dr. Pagès would pledge to leave them the liberal disposition of his invention for 20 years. But the doctor, patiently waiting for that distant day when his country would accept the profit of his discovery, declined all foreign propositions.

However, thought Pagès, a conference is a conference is a conference, and so, in June 1959, he was invited to the International Rocket Congress in Paris where, for the first time, he publicly exposes the leading principles of his revolutionary theory. There he affirmatively demonstrates that the notion of antispace should be replaced by repleted space (plenum), the local energy of space being estimated at 10 thrusts, 27 joules per centimeter cube. "Transposed into mass," explains Pagès, "it represents 10 million tons per cm cube."

This initial speech effectively lead Pagès principally to the USA, where he was asked to attend conference upon conference, exposing his ideas to all of America. But somehow taken aback when noticing that almost every listener would register his complete speech on tape recorder and thus fearing to be robbed of his ideas, he quickly refuses to give any further conference.

Dr. Pagès' situation can only be called strange: While the world tries to appropriate his discovery, France is opposed to any experimental verification of his theory. According to Pagès, the reasons for their ...more relentless opposition are simple: "It is obvious," he explains, "that with the official acceptance of the theory certain conventional relativistic views may be weakened."

"Antigravity is incalculable using modern methods, and thus the consequences of its concrete discovery, and the planning of its possible practical application will be of such a nature that, inevitably, the face of the world will be radically changed. Also, take into account the fact that, in accepting the anti-gravitation theory, scientific and industrial values risk the price of burial ceremonies and extinction."

Yes, everything is there; too many theoretical, philosophical, social and industrial buildings may collapse the day anti-gravitation is realized. This is one of the major reasons why Dr. Pagès is still called heretic. Perhaps if he were living in the Middle Ages he would have been "degravitated" on a stake by the Inquisition by now!

For the sake of inner peace having apparently used up all possibilities of expressing himself in France, Marcel Pagès resolved, in October, 1970, to offer his letters patent to various foreign countries. The answers were not long in coming, --neither the propositions...

+++THE BEGINNING

"Each year aeronautics engineers from the Quebec and Canadian Aeronautics and Space Institutions reunite after having studied progress in these fields," declares Professor L. Doczy. "These back-room conferences are supported by all private industries such as Canadair Ltd., Canadian Aircraft Limited, etc..."

The public never exactly knows what goes on behind those closed doors despite the many journalistic reports. One thing is certain though, the subject of UFOs is included on the list: "We call flying saucers," says Dr. Doczy, "something that we as yet know nothing. It is a formula more or less applied by the mass media who don't exactly know how to define the unidentified objects they report seeing. For us, however, flying saucer means other things; they are reported to have circular form in most cases, for example, for us this strangely resembles the future airplane wing now in preparation or, better still, the turbine engine propelling contemporary planes."

There is absolutely no evidence supporting the theory of their extraterrestrial origin. The majority of unidentified aerial objects reported and collected by certain people have either been explained or have not been publicly released from various official files. This is probably due to the fact that many of the meteorites, for example, that fall into our atmosphere may have completely disintegrated to nothingness before hitting ground where a piece for substantial proof of its observation could be obtained. Thus you have a report of a "fire ball" streaking across the skies, but that is all you have to work with, a report, and no concrete evidence that it was either a flying saucer or meteorite --unless, of course, we accept the witness' word of honour, which is not valid in science.

According to Dr. Doczy, flying saucers are vehicles specially built for travel in an atmosphere. Probably they are crafts fabricated by man here on Earth, conditioned with the knowledge of terrestrial technology and thus built to move only within atmospheric limitations --The Apollo and Soyuz rockets were specially constructed for propulsion in space, where the atmosphere differs greatly from that of the Earths.

However, some believe that governments who constantly prepare wars and prefer not to make their immediate plans public favor that people believe they are being invaded by flying saucers from other planets rather than ...more

NOW! NICOLA TESLA'S life-long companion and friend brings you a small wonder: "IS REVELATION A MYSTERY?" Here's what author Arthur Matthew himself says: "The whole Bible was written to prove the existence of the one God who made all that is; we have trouble because we do not believe! This is the whole lesson of Revelation. There is no mystery in the story. The apparent mystery is put there to test our belief... Will man ever change? Will he turn to God before the world is destroyed once again? There is hope in this book..." --"IS REVELATION A MYSTERY?" by Arthur Matthews, ONLY $1.00 (postage and handling covered). expose the hidden colossal truths behind scientific research and future plans. In this way the Russians and Americans launch all the satellites they desire knowing very well that all space material they sent up will return back to Earth, while the mass believes they've observed flying saucers.

If ever there occurs a catastrophe, like recent Earth tremors and unnatural floods infesting every corner of the Earth, we like to think that the cause is natural, brought about by nature's will or, as many believe, "evil extraterrestrial entities," while the men responsible for nuclear explosions, for example, deny the catastrophe has any relation to their tests.

"It has been quite some time now since the American government fabricated the first bomb destined to blow up Hiroshima. We officially declared that what people felt all over the world was the vibrations of an "Earthquake." But in reality it was a displacement of air caused by the A-bomb. In this way way the officials could hide the truth behind that coming blow from the public, thus keeping society temporarily at ease with this false notion."

"Governments pollute the air like we pollute water, but all that drops to Earth is always analysed, provided the object has been procured, by air pollution service centers."

Each year aeronautics engineers from all over the world reunite in their countries after having researched their fields. The unidentified aerial objects phenomena constantly reappears on their list...

CROSSES: CIRCLED, SINGLE AND DOUBLE

Down through history crosses have been used as symbols for religion, danger, and other purposes. The upright cross has a background of the "burden of man," "the crucifixion of Christ," and the marker placed over graves as the symbol of eternal rest. The doublecross is known as the act of deceit and dirty dealing

Suddenly in this time of world-wide tension and disorder, the circled cross appears, upside down with the horizontal crossbar broken as a symbol of "peace".

As far back as 60 A.D., the records of ancient Rome show that the Emperor Nero used this symbol as "the sign of the broken Jew," to designate an anti-God expression.

In the writings of Rudolph Koch, he describes this ancient symbol as "a death symbol of man," "a witches foot," and it was well known as the symbol of Satan.

The cross upside down with the arms broken symbolized death and evil and, when enclosed within a circle, is supposed to bring grief and destruction to the wearer. This symbol was branded on the bodies of Gypsies and Jews in 1936-1939, in the Spanish Civil War, and appeared on death certificates of German soldiers under Hitler. It was used by black magicians and was said to have mystical properties.

It is astounding that this symbol of death and destruction has been foisted off on innocent young people and used as a symbol of "peace". --Those who use this symbol have been doublecrossed!

WHAT IS TRUE BLESSEDNESS ?

COSMOS-EXPRESS is a monthly, non-profit periodical

To serve wise men rather than fools, to give honour to whom honour is due

The material contained herein may be reprinted or quoted in whole or in part without permission of the editors, but copies of the article(s) in which the material is used are requested. Material so used should be attributed to Cosmos-Express

To dwell in a pleasant land, to have done virtuous deeds in a former existence, to have a heart filled with right desires; this is true blessedness.

Much wisdom and much science, the discipline of a well - trained mind, and right speech;

To wait on father and mother, to cherish wife and child, to follow a peaceful calling;

To give alms, to protect kinsfolk, to perform blameless deeds;

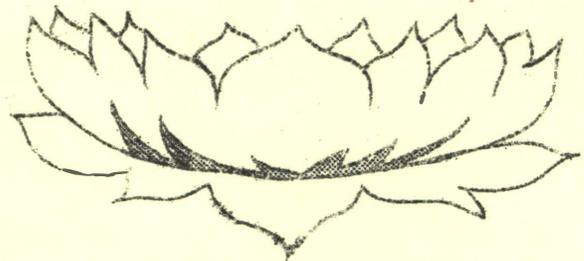

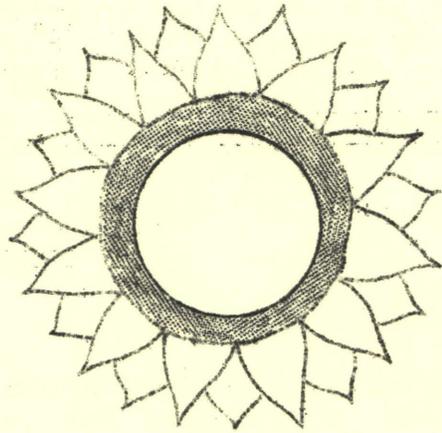

To cease doing evil, to persevere in right conduct; this is true blessedness.

Reverence and humility, contentment and gratitude;

Patience and pleasing speech, penance and chastity, discernment of the realization of peace;

A mind unshaken by the vicissitudes of this life, inaccessible to sorrow passionless, secure; this is true blessedness.

They that observe these things are invincible on every side, on every side they walk in safety; yea, their's is the true blessedness.
