METEOR PANICS BALL FANS!

BRILLIANT METEOR STABS SKY.

City startled...ball fans panic!

A huge fireball which flamed across Vancouver at 10:43 p.m. Monday has been tentatively identified as a giant meteor by Dr. R. M. Petrie, head of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Victoria.

Hundreds of persons phoned The Province minutes after the sighting. The phenomenon was described as a "a flaming airliner," "a burning satellite," "an off-course rocket" and "A comet".

It was seen by hundreds of baseball spectators at Capilano Stadium where its appearance broke up the game in the 12th inning, sent both teams scurrying off the field and caused panic in the stands.

The fireball, seen clearly for about five seconds, was streaking across the sky from the northwest to southeast; it was seen, to be made up of a number of extended sections strung out in a straight line.

Eyewitnesses agreed that it appeared to be breaking up as it fell and that it burnt itself out and disappeared.

Traffic in downtown Vancouver jammed as drivers craned their necks and stopped their cars.

Two separate police cars reported that they had seen a flaming airliner. It was seen near Bowen Island and east of Ladner.

Mr. & Mrs. Hy Loomer stopped their car on Homer street to watch the fireball through the windshield. They said it passed behind a hotel and re-appeared. Seconds later it burnt out and disappeared.

"It was travelling at a fast speed," Mr. Loomer said. "It was in two sections. We watched it disintegrate into four pieces then it went out. It looked like it was blocks long."

Frank Hughes, a North Surrey research scientist, was more specific. "I have counted about 200 meteors and this was definitely the largest I have seen." Mr. Hughes said he did meteor observation for the British Astronomical Association.

"It was on a 20 degree angle from the earth, about 10 degrees in length and travelled about 30 degrees in 5 secs. "It was glowing with a white brightness like a magnesium flare. The different portions of it glowed with varying intensity. The faintest was as bright as Venus is tonight but the brightest was very much brighter.

Dr. Petrie said that the descriptions applied to meteors but this one would have to be very large.

"A meteor is usually seen for just a second or two. This one would have to be huge to have been visible for so long or it would have burnt itself out more quickly. It's unlikely that any of the pieces would reach ground."

The fireball was seen over a vast area stretching at least to Alberta. (The Vancouver Province, Vancouver, B.C. May 29, 1962)

Jack Lee, sportswriter for the Vancouver Sun had this to say about the meteor...

It was the highest fly ball of the night but nobody stayed around to field it. It flashed out of the northern sky all green and purple and orange, an object later identified as a meteorite. Jose Valdivielso, the Vancouver Mountie shortstop and lead-off batter in the bottom of the 12th inning thought the object shedding fiery debris was a falling airplane.

He screamed his fears long and loud and headed for the shelter of the Portland Beaver's dugout.

It was good enough for the Portland players, as they headed for the dugout and the safety of its concrete runway.

The spark of panic on the field ignited the crowd of 660, and they churned toward the exits, half of them stopping only when they were outside the stadium.

"I saw the thing before the first pitch to Valdivielso," Portland first-baseman Tony Bartirone said later. "It arced from the first base to third base side (northwest to southeast) then disappeared.

"I thought to myself 'That's the biggest meteorite I've ever seen.'"

"Why did I run? Who am I to be different?"

"I watched the thing as it passed behind first base," Portland shortstop Ray Slider said. "I gotta say it was a little unusual."

And the Mounties set some kind of a record in clearing their bench at 10:40 p.m., Meteorite Daylight Time.

"I couldn't decide which way to go because my players were going every which way around me," manager Jack McKeon said.

"I was thinking of ducking under the dugout bench but thought, 'Man, that just ain't comforting enough.' So I went into the tunnel to the dressing room, too."

Mountie players were just a little confused when the melee and exodus started because the meteorite was hidden to them by the roof and back of the dugout.

"I gotta say this," McKeon said. "I never knew some of my players could move so quick. I felt like a traffic cop with all the signals jammed at green."

Mountie trainer Buck Chamberlin thought the commotion behind the dugout was a collapsing light tower. (The Vancouver Sun, May 29, 1962)

GIGANTIC MYSTERY OBJECT CAST EERIE GLOW IN SKY

Thousands of people in British Columbia Alberta and Washington and Idaho saw the fireball's flaming trail cast an eerie glow over the night sky.

An excited policeman radioed headquarters that an airliner was burning in the sky.

But a U.S. customs official at Blaine, John Lium, 48, won't go along with the scientists' view.

"It was no meteor," he said. "It had all the appearances of being powered. It passed overhead at about 400 feet but didn't make a sound."

MYSTERIOUS FIREBALL IN TORONTO'S SKY

A white, silvery ball of light that appeared briefly in the southeast portion of the sky this morning could have been a meteorite or "fireball", an official at the Dunlap Observatory said.

Since the observatory's telescope was not in operation, no one there saw the light in question. Metro residents awake about 3:40, however, said the ball had a bluish white trail with an orange tinge. The light lasted about three or four seconds.

There have been no reports of a meteorite landing in Ontario or the northern New York states and the light was in the wrong part of the sky to be a part of the rocket that launched Scott Carpenter into space. (Toronto Daily Star, May 25, 1962)

'CHRIST SPACEMAN'

A Soviet university lecturer says Jesus Christ was a spaceman from another world. This theory by Leningrad University lecturer V.K. Zaitsev was published by Leningrad Pravda--but only for the purpose of holding Zaitsev up to ridicule.

The paper said Zaitsev told student audiences the Holy Trinity was really the crew of a spaceship which landed on earth. Christ, Zaitsev said, was the ship's doctor and gained fame by healing earthlings with the use of hypnosis.

I GRAVITY VS GROWTH

By Rev. Guy J. Cyr, S.M.

Einstein affirmed that certain processes must take much more time on the sun than similar processes on earth, because the gravitational pull there is so much greater than it is here. For instance, a given atom on the sun would emit light at a lower frequency than it would here on earth. I presume that this theory includes other electromagnetic activities. Now, living individuals, especially members of complex species like man, are now known to depend on various magnetic and electrical forms of energy.

Therefore, if there are extraterrestrial organisms, we should expect them to vary from those here, and proportionally to the G-s which constantly tug at all material substances in their environment. I submit furthermore that the two below-mentioned teams of scientists, proved, and perhaps without realizing it, that another branch of the Einsteinian theory is a reality. Dr. L.D. Steel of St. Bartholomew's Hospital Medical College, London, as reported recently in various scientific reviews, and Dr. Charles C. Wunder with his coworkers of the State University of Iowa, discovered amazing facts with respect to gravity and its effects on the RATE of growth of various animals; on their eventual SIZE; and on the rate of consumption of OXYGEN. Briefly, these experimental animals which were tugged at by a stronger gravitational field in comparison to the animals in the control group: 1. grew at a slower rate; 2. were smaller when mature; 3. consumed more oxygen; 4. and the latter reaction increased with temperature; 5. the effects of gravity on growth depend on the initial size of the organisms.

From these stupendous discoveries, I would like to draw the following conclusions, which, as far as I could find out, have not been drawn yet:

1. The 'little men,' although unbelievably fantastic to US, are most probably REAL and just normal, considering their own gravitational field (natural or artificial).

2. They come, not from 'little' planets like Mars, but from big and heavy ones like Jupiter, or from small but dense ones such as may exist outside our solar system.

3. The planets and moons, which, according to OUR standards, don't have enough oxygen in their atmosphere to support life, may be just right for the hypothetical living creatures there, considering their low gravity and /or low temperature.

4. Some of the 'little men', as a few ufologists postulate, may hail from caverns deep in the earth, where both temperature and gravity are high, particularly under the ocean and/or under an oil well, since the respective specific gravities of water and oil are low relatively to that of rock. Terrestrial gravity would be increased centerward, if these creatures lived under many high caverns, which, obviously would have very low counter gravitational pull. Furthermore, since the effects of the gravitational field on the growth of a given organism seem to depend on the initial size of the latter, these hypothetical humanoids would tend to keep their youngsters down there until they are mature enough to withstand the "impossible conditions" on the surface where the Adamites 'live'.

5. Finally, since the rate of growth varies INVERSELY with the strength of the gravitational field, youthful looking ufo-nauts who claim they are one thousand years old or more, are not necessarily fictitious characters. Indeed, if there are organisms living in a strong gravitational field, not only they may, but they MUST have a long life-span, if Einstein's above mentioned specific theory is correct. So far, many facets of this great scholar's theory of relativity have been proven experimentally to fit perfectly in the realities of God's material universe. Who will dare question this one, which states the relation between the rate of fundamental processes and the force of gravity.

II Bacteria VS Radioactivity

Dr. A.W. Anderson, at Oregon State University, Corvallis, Oregon, found that white mice injected with a solution prepared from the bacterium:

Micrococcus radiodurans, survive doses of 300 roentgens. Fatal dosage for mice and man is 650.

The pundits who always know it all and claim that life on the Moon and on certain other astral bodies is impossible because of high radiation, will perhaps have to erase that 'fact' out of their books. That goes for those who claim that it is ridiculous to believe in ufos, because the ufonauts could not survive so much radiation. Finally, since radioactivity is one of the agents that age us, the above mentioned extract, which I would like to christen 'radiodurantine', is perhaps the elixir sought for so long by the alchemists.

III 'Bridge' on the Moon

Every ufologist knows that July 29, 1953, U.T., the late John J. O'Neill, saw on the Moon under three different magnifications a "Twelve-mile bridge", stretching in a perfectly straight line across a crater situated in Mare Crisium. Dr. H.P. Wilkins, Patrick Moore and other astronomers confirmed this famous sighting.

Then, why do the skeptics doubt? They ask: 1) Why a bridge, and such a long one, on a dead Moon? 2) How can you explain its fabulously rapid construction and dismantlement? 3) How do you account for the following discrepancies: a) Many astronomers who looked didn't see it. b) O'Neill said it was 12 miles long; but Wilkins reported it was 20.

It occurred to me when I first read about this in February 1961 that all these objections and others in that category can easily be dissolved as follows: O'Neill saw a huge cigar-shaped Mother Ship...a metrufo; and later Wilkins saw two of them end to end. That explains his "bridge tapering in the middle"; also, the "tunnels" seen near the bridge; the "convex ridges" along the bottom of certain lunar rills described by famous selenographers.

LAKE LIGHTS ARE MYSTERY

In reviewing the Ojibwa's annual battle with Lake Erie ice yesterday, Chief Warrant Officer Kenneth N. Black told of the ship's strange encounter with mysterious "unidentified flashing light"

Black said the lights were sighted off Erie, Pa., last March 17. The Ojibwa wintered in Erie. He said the lights were seen by several persons including the ship's crewmen. The ship got underway and crunched through very heavy ice all the way to the Canadian shore. "The closer we moved toward them, the further away they seem to be," Black said. He said he believes the lights were the result of unusual atmospheric conditions causing lights to be refracted on the lake. (The Buffalo-Courier-Express, May 2 1962. M.K. JESSUP AND THE ALLENDE LETTERS

Many UFO fans have read the late M.K. Jessup's books, The Case for the UFO, The Expanded Case for the UFO, UFO Annual, and The UFO and the Bible. Many of you would also like to read the special Varo edition of The Case for the UFO, containing gypsy Carlos Allende's two letters to Jessup and also his marginal notes. These notes indicate the Gypsies have knowledge of the Cavern world, their original home?, and of outer space Visitors, and that Jessup came too close to cracking the secret. Copies of the Allende letters and of the introduction to the special edition, summarizing the Gypsie's main points are now available along with other material from Riley Crabb, Borderland Science Research Foundation, P.O. Box 548, Vista, California. Price is .50¢. Twenty or more pages, 8 1/2 x 11, mimeo. Because of the Jessup material, Mr. Crabb has put a new talk together, "Flying Saucers on the Moon". It is not known at this time whether it is in book form, but if enough requests are made no doubt it will be printed.

SPACE CRAFT PROPULSION

by Henry Gallart

All inventions created by man for his betterment come from his mind. Men has forged in his mind many dreams and has made them come true through his skill and technical knowledge.

Today we have in our modern civilization automobiles, trains, ships and airplanes all using as a source of power the very products of nature transformed chemically to suit the needs of each. But we must remember also that nature has given us, through the hands of our Creator, an even more abundant supply of energy which man can use for his benefit; simply, it is atmospheric pressure.

Pressure is a force exerted on a body whether this is solid, a liquid or a gas. At sea level the present value accepted by scientists is that of 14.7 pounds per square inch. It increases below sea level and decreases progressively as it extends above it.

We have seen since biblical days the appearance of flying ships of diverse shapes come into our skies. They were then called Fire Chariots, now Flying Saucers or UFOs. There have been many theories as to the system or propulsion and no doubt they are all true as they may come from other planets in this system (whether in the present or in the future), other galaxies or even other dimensions of the higher vibratory worlds around us which we do not see. One method may use a pre-gravity principle, another a jet-impulse means, another atomic energy and certainly last but not least the atmospheric pressure so abundant around each planet.

We will refer to the system using atmospheric pressure as being one employed within a planet's vicinity and not outside of it. How are we able to use this power so freely found around us? The answer lies in the creation of a vacuum around the ship. A vacuum being a zone of zero pressure if absolute and low pressure when required. How is this vacuum created? It is brought into play through the emission of powerful cathodic rays coming from projectors distributed all around the periphery of the craft.

It is to be noted that this system is ideal for the saucer and disc type of UFO but not so for others. The amount of vacuum created depends upon the intensity of the current used at the time which could easily be controlled through rheostats. High current and voltage are necessary and one means of producing it would be through solar energy...also abundant everywhere... accumulated in a way similar to our present satellites but highly increased in intensity. Varying the current, directly affects the degree of vacuum.

If you want to check the thrust caused by atmospheric pressure, try it on a saucer shaped UFO of 60 feet in diameter by multiplying its area (it being r^2 ... equal to the constant 3.1416 and r is the radius) by 14.7 remembering always to have the dimensions expressed in feet. The force resulting is over 3,000 tons...an immense and exorbitant amount but quite true, of it there is no doubt.

The UFO can maneuver in any direction and still maintain its present speed simply by changing the vacuum to the desired angle of travel. The hovering so often seen performed by these crafts is due to the fact that the vacuum is being maintained in both sides of it making the ship nearly stationary in appearance. When straight upward thrust is exerted underneath the ship, it propels it at a speed as yet unthinkable for our present conveyances.

Aren't the people inside affected by such sudden changes? Not in any way if we take into consideration the fact that for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction. And every molecule of the entire craft as well as the beings inside of it are affected in the same exact way, not the craft itself for is such were the case the ones inside of it would be crushed to pieces by the G forces, and we know in reality ...relative to the many different crafts seen...that this is not so.

Some of the rare abilities of the cathodic rays employed to create a vacuum are those of penetrating matter enabling one to see through it...probably this was the way Daniel Fry viewed New York City in his ride...and also the fact that they decompose the elements that make up the atmosphere that comes in contact with them.

The vacuum is effective due to the ability of the atmosphere to absorb the ionized particles thus produced by the decomposition of its elements. Due to this ionization taking place, different colors are seen on UFOs at night varying themselves according to the degree of vacuum being used.

The travelling might be done usually in a semi-vacuum or even less depending on the purpose in mind. But if an absolute vacuum were used, than the craft would no longer be within our range of vision and would disappear in a flash now so commonly observed...this is the reason why they seem to come out of thin air sometimes.

Explosions are often heard in our skies in relation to UFOs. One possible reason might be a short circuit in a remote controlled craft or in a maneuvered one...a total current failure would certainly cut the source of power and thus with a great thrust on one side & an equal one on the other (where previously we had a vacuum), the craft would return to its very elements indeed.

It is truly^amarvellous system of transportation. Why hasn't it been used before...that is, on Earth? Well, because man has always taken advantage of the things he has considered more readily available to him and in so doing has bypassed this tremendous source of thrust, which could indeed bring the present state of mankind towards a higher and better living standard. Travel across the earth would be cheaper and easier & then man could understand his brother better as things now stand.

This may be the so often called "Free-Energy" mentioned in so many books. It's free & it is energy; man has to find & re-discover the way of using it to his advantage but at present this doesn't bit his curiosity or inventive genius. The system of propulsion, given above as such, is quite impressive and factual. When are we as humans going to take up the idea...put there for us to see since the beginning of Creation.... and use it?

FLYER WHO SAW UFOs GETS MESSAGES

John B. Lea of Orange, Texas, who is a commercial pilot over Louisiana, Texas and Mexico is begging information from every source he can find that is relating to saucers and their methods of signalling. "I've seen two UFOs, one in Mexico near Torreon in 1956, one here in Texas in October, 1960," he said. "That's not the worst," he continued, "I'm hearing from them by ESP or on some frequency unknown to me ---maybe from the two bolts I have holding my spine together---could be acting as antenna. I'm sure as H. going to find out who is broadcasting on my wave-length, and if they are the boys in the saucers, as I believe, maybe I can get a job as a tower traffic controller at wherever they are going to set up a Space Port." Another pilot suggested that he drag a chain around, like a gas truck, so he would be grounded and not hear all this stuff. A radio technician said he would try and rig up a volume control. This may sound funny to a lot of persons, but to Mr. Lea, it's no joke! (Credit: Bill Rawlinson, El Paso, Tex.)

MORE UNIDENTIFIED THINGS OBSERVED IN HIGH FLIGHTS

Seattle (AP)-- The second instance of observation of unidentified objects at high altitude was reported Thursday by X-15 pilot Joe Walker.

Walker told a scientific conference that films taken during his recent flight to a record height of 246,700 ft. showed the presence of five or six objects of undetermined size at some distance from the plane.

The film was taken by a camera mounted on the X-15's fuselage.

The mysterious objects, apparently disc-shaped, showed up on the film as the X-15 arced over the top of its flight and headed back toward earth.

"I don't feel like speculating about the nature of these objects," Walker said.

"All I know is what appeared on the film in later study. I saw nothing myself during the flight of this nature."

Walker mentioned the objects only briefly in a panel discussion at the second annual conference on the peaceful uses of space. On the panel with him was Astronaut John Glenn, who previously reported seeing tiny "fireflies" during his orbits of the earth. (The Sarnia Observer, May 11, 1962)

SKY OBJECTS FLAKES OF ICE

Los Angeles (AP) -- U.S. space agency engineers said Tuesday unidentified objects filmed during an X-15 flight Apr. 30 were bits of ice flaking from the rocket planes fuel tank area.

The film which recorded the objects came from a camera mounted on the planes lower tail. Film from the cameras on other parts of the X-15 showed ice breaking off the plane's fuselage at about the same time, a spokesman said. Test pilot Joe Walker had previously described the objects as disc-shaped. (The Sarnia Observer, May 16, 1962.)

Ed. Note: Walker said in the first item above that the objects were at some distance from the plane. To my way of thinking, this means maybe even a mile or more, or even possibly less, but certainly not inches away as the "ice-flakes" came off the fuselage. And it's dollars to doughnuts we'll never be allowed to see them in a news feature either on TV or in the theatre.

STRANGE OBJECT REPORTED BY UK PILOT

Dublin (Reuters)-- An Irish International Airlines pilot and his crew told reporters Monday of a strange globe-shaped object which streaked under their plane as they were flying across southern England.

Captain Gordon Pendleton said he was at about 15,000 feet in his Viscount airliner when he saw the object "streaking towards us below, at about 500 feet. It was brown colored, smaller than the Viscount. He added: "It was not a balloon." He reported it to the RAF and British Air Ministry. (The Owen Sound Sun-Times, May 23, 1962.)

"FLYING SAUCER" SHOCKING

Buenos Aires -- An Official Argentine television station last night told the story of a woman rancher who saw a "flying saucer" at close quarters and was taken to hospital suffering from shock. The woman, from the south-central province of La Pampa, was reported to have seen two strange men resembling robots near the unidentified object.

Experts confirmed that grass in the area where the object was supposed to have landed was singed in a circle six yards wide. (The Manchester Guardian and also The Toronto Daily Star, May 25, 1962)

NEED I SAY MORE?

By Timothy Green Beckley

The worldwide recognition of the objects called "Flying Saucers" is quietly building up. The Brazilian and Mexican governments have recently opened up their files to the public, however the governments of the rest of the world have not followed in their footsteps, the question is why?

The debate between the believers and unbelievers still continues in this field, the case below is tailor-made for the "believers". Bruno Ghibaudi had a most startling experience in which he took two photos of the mysterious celestial objects that were streaking through the sky above him.

Back on April 27, 1961, while driving five miles out of Pescar, Italy, about 2 p.m. his car had slight motor trouble so he pulled to the side of the road. It was then that he noticed a dark spot that was oscillating strangely under the low-hanging clouds. He later stated "It came out of the south without any noise at all." He reported that the strange object was elliptical. From the side of the object came two smaller triangular wings that had a vertical rod in the center. The UFO was a very light orange color, but did not have lights of its own. It would at times stop in mid-air and other times it would pick up in speed. Next thing Bruno knew, two more objects were in view at this time. The first object was speeding out of view, these two new objects were perfectly saucer-shaped crafts. The object Bruno reported was thicker in the center than any other place. These objects were silver colored. The diameter was later estimated to be 65 to 70 feet. While he was looking at these mysterious objects which were moving out to sea, two more came into view this time from the southeast. They came to a dead standstill three miles off the beach. Then they came directly in toward the shoreline. Out of the lower section, Bruno reported, came three globes, which might have been used to help the craft land, and clearly seen on the top section was a dome which reflected the bright sun. While these two objects played a game of tag in front of Bruno, the other object which was the first one sighted came back into view from the south. This time they all came together into one group. About this time Bruno noticed that the air around him was getting hotter, as a strange sensation came over him he stated, "It felt like something heavy was pressing on me." It was then that he picked up his camera and took two now famous photos. Later he said "It seemed like hours" before they went away, however, looking at his watch he said the sighting really only lasted for a few minutes. Since that day, Bruno who is a technician, has been trying hard to find others who saw what he claims he saw on that day in April. Unknowns are few and far between said the Air Force in their most recent press release. If the above was not an UNKNOWN UFO-FLYING SAUCER, than please tell me what was it Bruno saw? It could have been a balloon, satellite, meteors, planet Mars, searchlights playing on scattered clouds, large Canadian geese flying low over head, would be the Air Force's reply if they had investigated the sighting. However, this was not the case. Steps should be taken to offset this censorship, of course help is needed from everyone, and not just one in a hundred thousand.

Most people only scoff off all reports of UFOs because they feel that only unreliable persons see and believe in saucers or UFOs. The statements below are presented in the hope people reading this article who are skeptics will see that the mystery at hand is more than the Air Force would like you to believe.

- Sen. Barry Goldwater: "Flying saucers --unidentified flying objects -- or whatever you call them are real."
- Cdr. R.W. Percy: "I personally believe UFOs are spaceships from other more advanced planets."
- William Lear, president of Lear Inc.: "I believe the flying saucers come from outer-space, piloted by beings of superior intelligence."

Need I say more?

SPECULATIONS

By Rev. Guy J. Cyr, S.M.

As is well known by now, crybiologists are able to take living red corpuscles at room temperature, plunge them into a medium at 345 degrees below zero Fahrenheit and then resuscitate them, provided they thaw them out as fast. They have run similarly successful experiments with spermatozoa and even fertilized rabbit-ova. They are progressively succeeding with more and more complicated organisms in lower and lower temperatures.

These truly scientific developments, plus the recent discovery of live monsters, which expert taxonomers cannot fit into the animal kingdom of this our geological era, lead me to believe that God, through His laws of nature, has deep-frozen eons ago many and various organisms, which, given the proper circumstances, thaw out and revive.

To corroborate this view, let me give a few recent examples: The Associated Press reported that at the beginning of March 1962, a 20-foot-7-ton monster was washed up on one of the beaches of Tasmania. The Australian scientists were, and perhaps still are, baffled as to its origin, relationship and identity. I don't think I am guessing too wildly when I say that NORMALLY there should be others like that, at least in that area: brothers, sisters, cousins, in-laws and other relatives. Now, if there were or there are others in the expected numbers, it seems to me they would have been seen. Considering the huge size of this animal; the increasingly great number of humans plowing on, under or above the oceanic surface, or living, working and playing on or near the beaches, I feel that someone, somewhere, sometime or other would have come in contact with this beast's relatives through his eyes, or nose, camera, binoculars, etc.

I submit that none as far as we know were contacted, because there weren't anymore, at least not many of them. How do I explain this solitary specimen? He and many others like him, thousands, perhaps millions of years ago, suddenly deep-froze in a cake of ice because of some cataclysmic change, like for instance a sudden change of direction in the earth's axis. This prehistoric animal supposedly remained there for ages entombed in ice which recently detached itself and floated away as an iceberg. Then "accidentally" it drifted right over a sub-oceanic volcanic eruption, which had enough heat to thaw out almost instantaneously 'casket' and 'cadaver', melting away the one and resuscitating the other.

Another recent and as fantastic riparian event in the same general area may help to explain this one or vice versa:

A few days before and up to December 21, 1961, along a 200-mile Australian coastline, "millions of fish" of many kinds, some weighing up to 20 pounds, swam with their heads above the water and hurled themselves on the beach. The experts, one of them with 40-years experience in that field, said they had never seen anything like that and that they had no satisfactory explanation.

I suggest that one or perhaps a school of these recently de-iced prince of the oceans, charged at them with a prehistoric weapon, say an electromagnetic ray, against which modern fish have no defense, having survived in their evolutionary struggle against enemies with different weapons. Probably this 'beam' although not lethal in itself, disrupted the fishes 'radar system' and caused them to panic.

Further support for my hypothesis that prehistoric animals, having been in suspended animation for ages, are now actively living again, will be found soon, I hope and pray, by polar explorers, who will apply the above mentioned principles of cryobiology when they thaw out frozen organisms. Every ufologist now knows that around 1954 scientists in Paris ate mammoth steak from an animal which had been encased in ice for thousand of years. Since these pachyderms were tropical and since the fodder found in their mouths and stomachs was yet unaffected by the digestive enzymes, it is logically assumed that some very SUDDEN cataclysmic upheaval froze them there on the spot with lightning speed while entombing them in freezing water. I suggest that this cold was so fast, so all-embracing and so intense that it didn't remove life, but just arrested it; and that careful cryobiologists would have resuscitated them by applying very intense and all-covering heat such as would be found in a bath of water saturated with various dissolved minerals and boiling under fabulous pressure, such, as I presume, is found naturally between a tall column of ocean water and gurgitating 'mouth' of a violently active suboceanic volcano. The resultant turbulence, caused by the great disequilibrium of the various forces at work, would be just the thing required for the proper application and distribution of heat.

Not only a quick freeze-thaw, but also dehydration, implantation of certain chemicals will cause in varying degrees of success a dormancy-resuscitation phenomenon.

Therefore, I expect some day, perhaps when the Egyptian pyramids are "dismantled" prior to the planned flooding of the area, the scientists will resuscitate (which is not resurrect) prehistorically 'embalmed' or 'fossilized' human 'corpses', who will continue to live, and after learning of our languages, will tell us about 'the good OLD days' and perhaps something 'out of this world.' God grant it.

Some of us believe that since some monsters do not seem to fit in our animal kingdom, they must have been brought here from other worlds by the ufonauts. I, for one, am changing somewhat my flexible views on that in favor of the above theory, which, I believe accounts for at least some of the monsters. Along that line, I expect that soon someone will run across the corpse of a huge and unidentified TERRESTRIAL animal floating in the ocean or washed on the beach. Maybe the 7-ton beast mentioned above is one of them, for, Australian scientist, Bruce Mollison who couldn't identify it said it was "neither fish nor fowl". (Emphasis mine) Chances are he (the monster) is not an aquatic animal. Then how did he get there? He floated in an iceberg, I suppose; then thawed out. But he was too far from shore. So he drowned.

MORE ON THOSE 3 NEVADA OBJECTS

In the February issue of S&S we told you about three objects found in the Nevada desert 3 or 4 years ago. Now Mr. James Wardle of Salt Lake City sent us additional material concerning them.

A Mr. Gordon who works at the University bookstore contacted the woman who had taken, or had professed the original photograph. He obtained the name of the person who owned the objects, a man who at that time, was the head of a local plastics firm. This man brought the objects to a Mr. Gunnerson, who was then the Curator of the Museum of Anthropology. Here he was told that the objects were fakes and that they had been made from some plastic-like substance. The owner insisted that they were genuine. All of the above is based on what Mr. Gordon's contacts said Mr. Gunnerson had come to the conclusion that the objects had been fabricated from some material, perhaps paper-mache, into which the hair had been stuck in small clumps. Mr. Gunnerson is certainly familiar with human material, mummified or otherwise, and would surely recognize dried skin, embryonic or adult, of human or other animal origin. If the objects were extra-terrestrial, the mere fact that they were made of something resembling paper-mache would not preclude their being the remains of some form of life. However, Mr. Gunnerson states that he came to the conclusion that the objects were fabricated, and this would seem to preclude the possibility that they were a lifeform of any sort.

GIANT CREATURE FOUND ON BEACH

Obihiro, Japan (AP) Fisherman Yoshiheru Tsuruga, 35, spotted a giant snake-like creature on a beach Wednesday, discarded his bicycle in fright and ran. Then, wondering what the creature might be, he cautiously returned. The newspaper Asahi said the dead creature was more than 45 feet long, had a head about one foot in circumference but no eyes, nose or mouth. Its body measures six inches in circumference. It has no scales and is grey in color. Fishery experts from the nearby marine industry laboratories said "We've never seen anything like it." (The Daily Gleaner, Fredericton, N.B. June 7, 1962)
