EDITORIAL

Regular readers will have noticed the extreme variety of material we present, from the hard 'nuts and bolts' to the psychic and spiritual aspects. Now although some material-minded people will not agree with the inclusion of the latter subjects and class them as 'esoteric' - which seems to be a dirty word amongst 'sensible' ufologists* - to exclude such would indicate a biased approach to solving the UFO phenomenon, for all theories and possibilities must be considered.

Personally speaking, I find a combination of all the above-mentioned aspects an agreeable foundation on which to build further upon, for in this way one can truly consider everything, but not necessarily accept anything.

UFOs, of course, are just a small part of a much larger mystery which some believe will never be solved, or perhaps only partially. However true this belief may turn out to be, this should not deter us from trying to come to grips with the problem, for the quest for Truth is man's natural and, no doubt, intended purpose.

*But then again many 'sensible' scientists would consider 'ufologist' to be a dirty word!

NOTES In answer to questions put to us by various readers, Earthlink is a non-profit making magazine run by a minimum of dedicated people ... and we own no plush offices in the high street!

Earthlink now has a coloured front cover: watch out for the Spring 1980 edition with a yellow cover.

THE STRANGE DEATHS AND MUTILATIONS OF ANIMALS AND THEIR APPARENT RELATION TO THE UFO PHENOMENON, by Fernando Cerda Guardia.

Translation from the Spanish for Earthlink by Mrs. S. Codner, to whom we express our deepest thanks.

As a general rule, when ufologists comment on the strange deaths and mutilations of animals, one immediately thinks of the United States. But why do we automatically think of this nation? Obviously for two reasons: (a) In the first instance; it is there where these type of incidents manifest most acutely (many ufologists who are badly informed think or say that it is a phenomenon 'typical' of the United States). (b) Possibly it is thought to be the most important because evidently there is a failure to recognise incidents bearing the same characteristics (as the U.S. cattle mutilations) occurring in areas of other countries of the world.

In this article I will only mention those cases of the type which have happened in the USA in order to effect opportune comparisons of casuistry (1). The reason for this is that further USA cases would yield nothing new of interest, and for another thing would result in too much repetition, which, I think readers will agree, would ultimately make this article rather boring. What I really intend to do is divulge the characteristics of events that have happened in Spain and various Latin American countries. At this point I must emphasise something very important in this article, and that is to treat, in principal, these presented incidents as two very clear and distinct types, and here we come into the aforementioned comparisons with respect to the casuistry relating to the mutilations in the United States:

- (a) These cases are very closely related with the presence of UFOs and include the supposed occupants.
- (b) On many occasions these incidents include the presence of strange "creatures", which are typical of Fortean-type phenomena (2).

And now, with little further delay, I will describe those cases selected for their casuistry.

In Spain there aren't many of these characteristic mutilation cases that have been reported, but perhaps this could be due to them not being given to be known in more than just an accidental form outside the zones where they occurred, as has been able to be proved in those incidents on the island of Tenerife, which will be referred to later. Normally, the areas to be referred to are small, very rural communities with very few people who are in general culturally deficient. In reality, in my own archives, there is but only one case which happened in Serrania de Ronda (province of Malaga), together with a succession of incidents on the island of Tenerife (Canary Islands). I will now give details.

This first case occurred during the month of March (approx.) 1978 in Serrania de Ronda, province of Malaga. One day, during the night, various inhabitants of a farmhouse

(a house typical of the region) were awakened by the furious barking of their dogs.

"We came out of the house," it was explained to the journalist during the interview, "and on the small path that approaches the door we saw 'something' very strange ...

"... I had one of the dogs held in my hand by a leash," continued the head man, "and I was intrigued. What is 'that'?"

"We saw a human figure, but it was inside a metal suit. He had two legs, very long and completely cylindrical. They were like two tubes. They were brightly lit by the light of the Moon..."

Another one of the people there said:

"That person* or whatever it was came towards us. He was walking very strangely... The dogs continued to bark furiously and we had to restrain them with great force so that they wouldn't fly off down the small path (towards whatever was coming)."

When the inhabitants of the farmhouse were asked how this stranger was walking, they all said exactly the same:

"It was if he was walking sideways. Not forwards like we do..."

"After a few moments of indecision," continued these people, "we set the dogs on 'it'. But, after a few minutes, they came back as if nothing had happened! There was not even a trace of that enormous being, either! 'How could that be?' we asked ourselves. These dogs are very fast and that 'thing' with the metal legs was no more than 10 metres from the porch..."

The farm-workers were sure that from the moment the dogs were let loose the figure, that was more than two metres in height, disappeared. And it didn't return again.

When morning came, some of the workers discovered some very strange and enigmatic footprints a little more than two metres from the walls of one of the houses on the farm-estate. Some of the farm-workers' families sleep there. But nobody remembered seeing anything abnormal through the window-panes.

There were more than 50 footprints, very deep and almost completely circular, that went from the small path and round the above-mentioned house. These footprints always formed a straight line. It was almost as if the being that produced them was walking 'sideways'. They were produced by someone of great weight, and every one was of a depth that was between 8 and 10 centimetres. And their size was slightly inferior to the palm of an extended hand. Of course, it was not possible to identify these prints because they didn't belong to any animal known in the land.

However, one of the more interesting aspects of this strange case would come the same morning when one of the inhabitants of this farm-estate discovered, near the above-mentioned path that leads to the owner's farmhouse the dead body of one of the she-cats that lived for many years on this farm.

This really frightened the farm-workers who said: "What sort of animal would have seized a farm cat?..."

What remained of this she-cat was unearthened and a very prolonged and detailed analysis was made, and the conclusion arrived at was that the head and one of the front legs of the cat had been neatly sectioned through. That is to say, with some cutting instrument that had also burned the fur and flesh immediately surrounding.

No one found the head or the leg of the cat, which, curiously, was about to give birth to kittens.

When it was decided to analyse the rest of the animal by a veterinarian in the city of Málaga, this only confirmed the hypothesis that was known already: the animal had been 'guillotined' with some metallic instrument...

Apparently, some days after this event the same strange being was seen again amongst the farm-estates and villages in the mountains.

On the island of Tenerife (Canary Islands) occurred a succession of strange incidents of the same type and which were produced from the middle of April to the middle of May 1979. Due to limitation of writing space, I will only give a résumé of these cases specifying the most important details.

During the second half of April, in Icod de los Vinos, some goats were found with their throats cut under very confusing circumstances.

On April 29, in Taco, a German shepherd dog, used to guard a factory, was found dead 20 metres from his kennel.

On May 3, in Taco, another dog, again a German shepherd and guarding the same factory, was found dead 30 metres from his kennel.

In both cases, it appears, the animals displayed two symmetrical holes in each side of their bodies, and they were without viscera (internal organs) - the heart and the liver were missing - and they were without any blood in their veins; neither was there found any blood nearby. Not even traces of a struggle and neither of there having been any rascalism... and for those of you reading this just think for a moment of the size and strength of a well-fed German shepherd dog.

On May 10 (approx.), in Arafo, a Mr. Antonio Marrero found one of his goats - he owned two - dead with its throat cut. At the same time the two front legs had been cut off and the body hung upside down in order, presumably, for the blood to drain out. She (the goat) was hung in the presence of the other goat. Mr. Marrero also discovered that his finest vines - Muscatels- had been cut up as if with a hand-saw. The same sort of fate befell some of his medlar trees and some other fruits.

During the first two weeks of the month of May, in Icod de los Vinos, there was another dead goat found and under the same strange circumstances as before. I know of no more details than those given here.

During the first few days of again the month of May, and in the zone of Taco, according to the information that appeared in the Tenerife newspaper "Diario de Avisos" of May 15, was related the strange deaths of street dogs and a kid. Again I have no more information on this particular case and personally I consider that one must accept this information with the prudent reserves that are necessary with these type of cases, since together with information that is completely reliable you also find there has been added that of a sensationalistic character.

During the first two weeks of the month of May, in Taco, there were two more goats found decapitated and without blood.

During the first two weeks of the month of May, in Guamasa, appeared a pig with his nose virtually destroyed and without any viscera. He had a hole in his stomach and was found to be lacking one eye.

During the first two weeks of the month of May, in the zone denominated "El Genovés", in the locality of Garachico, there were several rabbits and goats found with their throats cut. The veterinarian of Los Silos said that the deaths were caused by a dog.

During the first two weeks of the month of May, on the "Los Frailes" estate, property of Mr. Fernando Machado, situated in the district of La Dehesa in Puerto de la Cruz, there were numerous plantation trees and cuttings totally destroyed, but with the fruits left intact. It was as if a wild animal had gone absolutely mad with the banana trees, and yet without touching any of the fruits. According to the person in charge of the estate, not even with a rake would it have been possible to produce so much destruction.

And what is really strange is that if the cause of the destruction had been due to human hands, the bananas would have suffered the same consequences as the trees, but this did not occur. There appear to have been five trees that were destroyed and two of their cuttings. These were all torn to ribbons and found in different places on the estate. And something very disturbing: absolutely no trace of any footprints...

Let us now see some of the common features presented in these incidents:

- (a) Absence of blood.
- (b) Symmetrical holes and extraction of viscera.
- (c) Absence of footprints.

These are all common in the cases of the two dogs and the pig, although this last had more physical parts missing. Of the goats we have hardly any data, with the exception of those that were decapitated. Although there is a lack of data it is very important that I assert that every one of these deaths occurred during the night.

Lamentably there was no autopsy carried out on any of the animals and the police investigations left much to be desired, since the hypothesis presented in order to explain these deaths was quite stupid. In reality, I imagine that they met with something so complex that no one could evolve a fitting theory and declare what to hunt for, let alone explain the cause of the deaths, and the statement officially given was only to calm down the population (sufficiently worried, of course) resident in those places in the proximity of where these things occurred.

I wish to add that at the same time as these strange mutilations and deaths were occurring there was observed, in the same areas that these things took place, the presence of strange "animals" (I am using the same textual words as the witnesses). Thus we have in Taco several school-children that saw "a strange thing," and in the same locality several people made reference to three "very very large" dogs that were seen at night marauding around the same areas as there were many enclosed animals.

But now let us look at more incidents of this type that have occurred in other countries. In Latin America take Brazil, for example.

This presented case is taken from the bulletin of SPIPDV (Brazilian UFO investigation organisation) in the April-October 1973 issue. Dr. Omar Rodrigues, a known lawyer in Pelotas, is the owner of an area of land which is dedicated to the breeding of sheep and is situated 25km. from the city of Santa Victoria do Palmar (in the State of Rio Grande do Sul). During mid-1972, between the months of June and July, occurred the first incident. One morning a sheep was found dead under strange circumstances because the animal had an orifice two centimetres in diameter in the left side of the head. There was absolutely no trace of any claw marks. This hole seemed to be the result of a kind of puncture, and around it there was absolutely no discharge of blood. The sheep was completely clean. The strange part about this case was to find near the dead animal, on the pasture, a perfect red circle of 1.50 metres diameter made with the same blood of this unfortunate animal.

During the days following the above-mentioned event, there began to appear more sheep found dead, or dying, in different places, and these also presented mysterious holes in their bodies, in particular above or near the heart. More, with a sheep of the Corriedale breed which was near to giving birth, it was attested that through a small hole of three centimetres diameter over the belly of the animal, the fetus was extracted.

In other cases, the objective of these mysterious visitors was solely the complete extraction of the animals' blood, because this was in evidence when the head man of the land, Dr. Rodrigues, resolved to cook one of the sheep recently murdered. When he opened up the animal he noted the total absence of blood. The head man and the other people that ate the meat did not suffer any side effects.

The sheep selected were always the best of the flock, and this to some extent invalidates the hypothesis of another animal predator for these sheep would always put up more resistance than the rest of the animals.

The disturbed shepherds notified the authorities in Santa Victoria do Palmar of the incidents and requested help, for it was impossible to continue the way things were. Finally, it resulted in everyone getting together in order to catch the "thing" in action ("thing" - a name possibly used by the author of these events), but, even so, everything was in vain. They maintained a watch all night, on constant vigil, but never saw anything. At the same time, cases were being repeated, but always in distant areas to where they were searching, as if they (the mutilators) knew of their presence. Two months passed, the incidents ceased and everything returned to normal.

Dr. Osmar Rodrigues reported that he was with his workers one night when he called their attention to a light that was coming from a strange object which was over an area of his land where the sheep were kept. Due to the noise and agitation caused by these sheep, they seriously thought that thieves were trying to steal them and put them into a lorry. So, armed with revolvers, they immediately made their way towards the area, but each time they tried to approach the luminous object, it always moved away. They were able to get as close as 500 metres in their attempt to identify it, but they couldn't approach any more. After having travelled about 500 metres, the light went out and the object disappeared.

They were dealing with an object of large dimensions, even though the witnesses weren't able to see its true shape because of the intense white light that it gave out, which made it difficult to see.

Before all these events, there was found, periodically, circles of burnt or singed vegetation.

In Mexico, also, there have been many similar incidents. I have chosen one for its high strangeness index. It was investigated very profoundly by an excellent Spanish investigator, now living in Puerto Rico, Mr. Salvador Freixedo.

On the outskirts of Queretaro, about 300km. north-east of the City of Mexico, this investigator came upon a dead coyote very near a place where UFOs had been reported to be landing. What was called to his attention were certain odd circumstances that surrounded the remains of this dried-up animal.

The most striking of all was its strangely twisted skeleton. The bones were nevertheless intact, but it looked as if someone had twisted the body of this coyote in the same way that one would wring out a wet rag. No human being or animal could have done this without breaking the coyote's bones. Also, it was amazing, that there wasn't an ant or any other insect to be seen for a good distance around the body of this animal, nor underneath him, as if the insects had been made to keep away by some sort of repellent (Freixedo appears to ignore here that this is one of the principal characteristics of the mutilations). Part of the flesh was still stuck to the bones, but it had dried in a strange way without rotting or disintegrating, which isn't normally the case with animals found dead on open ground.

In the neighbourhood there was also reported to be the remains of a Californian opossum. Also in the area there had been found traces of UFO landings...

In both cases I have no information as to the dates when these incidents occurred. Another country where the mutilation of animals has been produced with a certain frequency is Uruguay. There, also, the UFO phenomenon manifests itself in a sufficiently continuous form.

Various strange incidents related to the UFO phenomenon occurred on the "La Aurora" estate, which is situated on the boundary between the departments of Paysandú and Salto, very near to the river Daymán, a tributary of the copious river Uruguay that flows out into the Rio de la Plata. This case is very strange and it took place on February 17, 1977.

On this day the owner of the estate, Mr. Tonna, noted that during the evening the lights in his house were waxing and waning. This occurred about 21.30 hours. Coming out of the house he made his way towards the area where the electrical generator complex (diesel powered and of 220 volts output) is situated, and then observed an enormous 'mercury' light also moving towards the same place (as the generator complex). Our witness was scared because he thought that there was going to be a fire, so he began to run very quickly, but when he came into the proximity of the corral he stopped as the consequence of a light of an irresistible, constant brilliance that came into view from behind the area where the electrical generator complex is situated. The light then descended into the corral and our witness quietly remained where he was uncertain what to do next (he wasn't paralysed). He then cried out to his workers and they began to stir. In another of these corrals, sufficiently removed from this spot, the animals jumped free and headed in a stampede towards the open land. Finally, the object rose up, passed over a wire fence and remained between this fence and a large tank of water.

At that moment Mr. Tonna took charge of a police dog that he described as being very ferocious and aggressive, this being the reason why the dog was only let loose during the night. The animal advanced determinedly towards the object, but, after running some four metres, he suddenly came to a halt and let out a most pitiful cry, and then sat down on his two back legs. He did not move again until the object eventually disappeared.

Meanwhile, the object had moved and was now situated at a lesser distance from Mr. Tonna than it had previously been.

Our witness covered his eyes with one arm in order to protect them from the light and consequently suffered several burns. Finally, the light moved away and he was then able to positively testify that it appeared as three lights that were pulsating one inside the other.

The animals that are directly related to this case by reason of their close proximity to the object was the dog that we cited, a French prize bull and a stallion. These last two animals were found to be in the corral where the light descended.

After three days the dog died following a lengthy agony. He was found dead in the same spot where he halted when approaching the object. An autopsy was carried out at the Universidad de Salto (Salto University) and the following was noticed: the animal was without blood, as if it had been absorbed through the flesh. At the same time there were some inconsistent aspects and it looked as if the flesh had been boiled. The skin was burnt in large areas and the hairs in the tail were set on end giving the appearance of bristly wires. None of the physicians had the courage to make a diagnosis as to the cause of these abnormal effects.

The bull died of the same symptoms soon after, that is to say a week following the death of the dog. And the stallion, which was used for breeding, was left sterile...

Prior to these events, on the same estate, appeared several dead sheep. These also died under very strange circumstances...

In this same area, that is to say on this estate, it was proved that there existed a high percentage of radiation of an indeterminable type. Subsequent to the observation of February 17, 1977, there appeared continuously small dead animals like frogs, rats, insects, etc.

These events were splendidly investigated by the Argentinian gentlemen Antonio Las Heras, Washington Menendez and Roman Lagos.

Until now I have presented various incidents of high strangeness that have happened in Spain, Brazil, Mexico and Uruguay. It would be possible to give many others and also those in other countries where there has occurred similar happenings, like in Bolivia, Puerto Rico, etc., but I have preferred to present those above for the reasons pointed out earlier and also because they are practically unknown outside Latin America.

I do not wish to extend this article any more and will therefore sum up and conclude it as briefly as possible, but first I must point out something that was said at the beginning and which I consider fundamental: in contrast to the USA, in Latin America these incidents are intimately tied in with the presence of the UFO phenomenon and in Spain with the presence of strange "creatures"... but although there is no absolute clarification of this there seems to be an excess of cases which comply with this belief.

Obviously I have yet to make a composition of places and therefore I shall refrain from speculating upon this very puzzling matter. I am to continue working on this, though, and will elaborate a series of articles on this theme, although more specifically on the reactions produced in animals. Any help in this direction I would be grateful for, and anyone who knows anything of interest can write to me at the following address: Fernando Cerdá Guardia; c/. Santurce, 1, 1<sup>o</sup> -A; Madrid (17); Spain. I give in advance my most expressive thanks.

Fernando Cerdá Guardia, Madrid,
August 3, 1979.

Note: New mutilations of animals have occurred on Tenerife in October 1979. Other strange deaths registered in Spain were in Malaga, April 1974.

Notes

1. "Casuistry" - a dictionary definition gives: 'The science of dealing with problems of right and wrong by the use of specious reasoning and fallacious argument.' In the context used here, USA cases are merely being used as a basis with which to compare the characteristics of other countries' cases.
2. "Fortean" - a collective term applied to any strange phenomenon and derived from Charles Fort (1874-1932), an American chronologist of inexplicable events.

STOCKTAKING TIME - A Personal View of the Mutilations, by Crystal Hogben.

Countless reports of animal mutilations still pour out of Brazil and other parts of South America and the United States... Farmers, police, investigators are baffled. Members of the public connect the mutilations with outlaws from the scientific fraternity conducting their own experiments, or effects of past sorcery, or modern witch cults, or, because UFOs have been seen in connection with these occurrences, hostile aliens from outer space.

Several theories of how the mutilations have been done - silently and invisibly - have been advanced by down-to-earth people struggling to find logical answers. But no acceptable answer has emerged.

Sometimes when no logical answer can be found on one level, the solution lies in a different field altogether. So suppose the mutilations are viewed from a more esoteric angle.

My own visualisation of the matter is that throughout the centuries mankind has been breeding cattle and other domestic animals for his own convenience, and obviously deviations from 'nature' have occurred. Domestic animals are not the original breeds that they would have been if they had been left alone.

Anyone who accepts the doctrines of re-incarnation and karma and who understands that a New Age will rise out of the remnants of the old, will perhaps see that the time has come for some of these deviations from nature to be taken note of.

Students of the esoteric tell of forces working alongside man; forces which are normally invisible to us, and which exist in dimensions that interpenetrate the physical world. Long term experiments on animals will be recorded in a subtle manner on these interpenetrating dimensions. Many students of the nature kingdoms, 'ghost' lore and of some aspects of ufology will understand this better than I can explain it.

Following this line of thought, it is obvious that there are forces, or creative energies or beings, which are working to record the unsound results of man's interference with the animal kingdom. Most of the reports concern the mutilations of domestic animals rather than wild ones. And they are on a large scale because the misuse of animals has been on a large scale.

In addition, there are other aspects to be regarded. For instance, people of past civilisations must have used animals and experimented with the breeding of them in much the same way as we have in this one. If esoteric writings are to be accepted, some people who have lived previously in those other civilisations and who used or misused animals in those days may now have the opportunities in which to take stock of themselves. Also there may be bewildered owners of mutilated animals who, perhaps unknown to themselves, are paying karmic debts incurred through misusing animals in the past.

Also, the mutilations themselves will attract a great number of invisible forces, as well as humans with various motives. It is no wonder that unusual incidents and sights are reported in the concerned locations.

I suggest that certain organs are being removed from cattle and other animals by the same kind of invisible forces that help to create them. The reason that the operations seem evil and disturbing to us is that mankind has caused the forces to separate his false creations from the original in as violently a manner as man has treated 'nature'. So while these invisible energies are stocktaking on the organs and parts of various animals, many farmers are viewing it all as destruction of valuable stock - "stock taking" of a different kind - while the wise will be taking stock of their own ideas.

It does not necessarily mean that the UFOs seen in the areas where mutilations occur are hostile. They may be working to alleviate the suffering of the animals or to help enlighten people in a subtle way about what is really happening and the reason for it.

THE FUNDAMENT by Leonard H. Crossley

This article recognises that the evolution of the universe is governed by God. It considers the evolution of the universe and evolution of God as a joint occurrence of two interdependent processes. It also attempts to look at the question: "What was before the universe began?" and "How did it begin?".

In the infinite remoteness of past time - for there never was a beginning - The Fundament was evenly distributed throughout the entireness of all infinity. The Fundament is Fundamental Thought, or Fundamental Energy, or Fundamental Life, or God, for all these are the same. The Fundament is immaterial. Thought and life and God are immaterial, and so also is Fundamental Energy, although the energy FORMS we use and learn about are not immaterial. Fundamental energy is formless.

The Fundament was conscious and aware, but there was nothing for it to be conscious and aware of. It was aware of its own existence. It was aware of its existence as energy, and of its existence as thought, and so it became aware of the existence of a difference between energy and thought. It became aware that energy and thought were different aspects of itself, and thus it became aware that difference and aspect could exist.

The Fundament's awareness was distributed throughout its entire extent, and no part of it could have any awareness that any other part of it did not have, not even for the minutest period of time. It became aware of this. It became aware that it had not always been aware of so much. Thus it became aware of time. It was aware that time was a concept. That it had conceived time, and that time was none the less real for having been so conceived.

The number of facts it was aware of had increased. It became aware of this, and so it became aware of number and of increase, although it had no name for them, or for anything. It was not aware of name. It had not conceived name because it did not need name. Likewise, it was not aware of need. It was aware of a connection between number and increase, and of a connection between increase and time, and thus that the different facts it was aware of were interrelated, and that the interrelating of these facts revealed more facts for it to be aware of. As the number of facts it was aware of grew, so the number of interrelationships grew, and its rate of acquiring more facts also grew, and still there was only itself in the entireness of all infinity.

Its vastness was without limit. Limit did not exist. Its rate of learning had no limit. Its capacity for learning had no limit, and still there was only itself, and it was formless and immaterial.

When it first became aware of its existence the awareness created a stress pattern throughout its whole extent, and each succeeding awareness created its own stress pattern, and no two stress patterns were alike. The number of stress patterns grew continuously, and at points of inter-connection between stress patterns concentrations occurred, and the concentrations grew and became substance, and it is thus that substance was formed. So the Fundament had substance, and as the extent of its knowledge increased so its substance increased, but its substance in no way resembled the substance of which we know. Its particles are far smaller than electrons. There are different kinds of electron particles because electrons are built up from smaller particles, and they are not all built alike. The particles that formed out of the stress patterns in the Fundament are all alike. They are identical - the basic particles of all substance. They are Baseons.

The Fundament was aware of baseons and of how they would increase in number. It was aware that the distances between baseons were not all the same. Thus it became aware of distance, and in the same way it became aware of movement, and rates of movement, and changes in rates of movement. So, although it had no names for them, it learned about velocity and acceleration and direction of movement, and its new learning increased its substance. It knew that its substance was material although it was, itself, immaterial. That its substance was something it had created, which, although part of itself, was at the same time separate from itself. That because it had life its substance had life, both as a part of itself and also as substance, and that substance life was separate from Fundamental life.

The substance of the Fundament grew as the stress patterns of its increasing store of knowledge grew more complex. The baseons increased in number and began to form into groups attracted by their mutual gravity. Thus were electrons formed. Positrons, negatrons, neutrons, protons and other electrons, too, according to the nature of the stresses present at their point of formation. With the formation of baseons the first forms of material energy occurred. These were gravity and inertia. The formation of electrons brought with it the more complex energy forms such as heat, electricity and magnetism. All these energy forms combined to create the elements from the new store of electrons, and the Fundament knew of the elements and how they were formed and what forms would spring from them. The Fundament knew that hydrogen clouds would form and that galaxies and stars and planets would form, and that all these things would be living things.

The Fundament knew that it could govern its thinking and that this would govern the pattern of formation, and the Fundament had developed. It had definite ideas and wishes about the patterns of formation which would be good. So it governed the evolution of the galaxies and with them the evolution of Earth, and of the conditions which led to life on Earth. It governed the evolution of all the life forms we know on Earth today, and of all those which have now ceased to exist and of all those which are to come. Likewise, it governed the evolution of life forms on other planets and in galaxies other than our own.

Thus was the universe created out of the Fundament, and the universe is alive. The whole of the universe and every part of it. Every galaxy and every gas cloud, every white dwarf and every black hole, each is a living, conscious thing. Each proton and photon and each baseon is alive and aware, and the sum of all these individual awarenesses is added to that awareness that the Fundament itself possesses, and the continuous growth and interplay of awarenesses is a continuous cause of creation.

Such a vast and complex field of creation results continuously in concentrations of matter occurring, and within such a concentration more baseons are still being created, until the concentration breaks up, bursting outwards. They are small and brief, these burstings, and they are frequent. Every few million years there is such a bursting somewhere in the universe, but they do not last longer than a few hundred million million years, even the greatest of them. Big Bangs, we call them, but they are not so very big. Ripples, they are, spreading a few hundred million million light years out from their centres altering the tension patterns in these small regions and adding to the total creativity.

Continuous creation, however, must in the end be accompanied by continuous disintegration, and stability is only reached when the two are equal. That is when the average rate of creation is equal to the average rate of disintegration over any reasonable small period of time such as, say, a million million million years.

Thus do animal and vegetable life units die and decay into mineral. Thus do worlds and galaxies die and decay into light and heat and magnetism, and these in turn decay into baseons and into immaterial Fundament.

But knowledge does not decay. The knowledge of the Fundament is immense and beyond our comprehension, but its capacity for knowledge is infinite.

Such is the Fundament. Such is God.

Note. It should be recorded that The Fundament, from the first moment of its conception to the finished hand-written product, took just 45 minutes! Mr. Crossley felt that he just had to sit down one day during March this year and write it out, the article developing as quickly as he could write.

"Nothing quite like it has happened before," he related. Mr. Bill Eden, a close work colleague to Mr. Crossley, and a contributor to Earthlink, was "the natural recipient."

Under the circumstances, together with Mr. Crossley's own belief that he was "given" The Fundament for some purpose, it is felt that this article was channelled through him by an unknown agent.

As a last word, it should be noted that channelling of information - both verbal and written - by suitable recipients is a common occurrence in the world today. (Ed.)

4-12-78.

Dear Sir,

I am writing to you after an experience I had of almost one year ago. Before I start this story I wish to quickly add I am not a crank or mentally disturbed, but after buying your magazine on Saturday, 2nd December, I believe I have sufficient confidence to tell another person without being certified!!

Brief synopsis of myself:

Male, English Caucasian; age-26 years; single. Education: 7 'O' levels and the equivalent of 4 'A' levels. Started engineering degree, not at present completed. Travelled U.S.A., Canada, most of Europe and the Southern African continent. Hobbies: most, but NOT UFOs. Present job as a fairly responsible assistant controller for ....* Head Office. I add this last sentence as it proves to a certain extent that I am a fair judge of people.

My story is as follows (I hope you can bear with me):

It was approximately October '77 and I had been working at ....* about six months after returning from S. Africa (Rhodesia). I was in Racquels at Basildon, the first time I had ever been there - why I went I do not know as it is not my 'style'. Anyway, I had been in there approximately half an hour when I noticed this quite good-looking girl. Still having a fair suntan I went over and somehow started talking by myself to this girl who was in a group of five or six. I eventually managed to have a dance with her and talk by ourselves. I was quite surprised when she asked for my phone number as I usually never 'push' a girl or ask for her telephone number. At the end of the night she had taken my phone number and I felt to myself, "Oh, well, that's over." First instance.

Next Saturday I was working from six in the morning until twelve noon in the offices. I arrived back home, knowing that everyone would be out shopping, at approximately 12.30 pm. Imagine my surprise when just as I put my key in the door the phone rang. I quickly closed the door and answered the phone. To my shock it was the girl 'J' of the night previously. Perhaps she had been ringing all morning, but she said no, this was the first time she had rung. I had never been propositioned before but she quickly arranged to see me that night. Could I pick her up? No, she would collect me.

That night she turned up and was quite shocked to find that I lived in what can be described as a small farm. We went to a local pub and sat down.

"'J', what do you want - Scotch, Gin?" "No, only Cinzano."

After the initial rudiments of "How are you?" etc., she came out with a conversation stopper:

"Do you believe in visitors from outer space?"

I immediately thought, "Oh, boy, we have a beautiful nut," to which she replied: "No, I am not." Shock! Good job there was only six or seven people in the small pub. Using my university education I said it was scientifically impossible for the human race to be alone in the Galaxy. She said, "Good, as I would not tell you what I have to say next if you thought otherwise." I am not mad but I tested her again and to my shock she read my mind!! I thought perhaps she is psychic as I am to a certain extent. She said, "Believe it or not but I am an alien." I found it hard to believe looking into her beautiful face and big brown eyes. It took all my power to think she had been reading too many fiction books. She said, "Simon, you are my last assignment before I have to leave. I have to pack into a few months with you what usually takes me one or two years." She then told me about a course of action I had been contemplating as I had been rather depressed for a couple of months, and she quickly added, "I picked you up just in time as I have known about you for a few months."

Anyway, I hope that is enough to whet your appetite as she told me a few other facts before she 'left', such as we are not alone and quite a few "aliens" are present. I think I have met another since then as I have been told I am "one of the (chosen few)."

It would be nice to know if you think I am 'mad' or very gullible, as I do not think I am - far from it. As I know 'they' are everywhere I will phone you in the next few days and perhaps arrange a convenient place for a meeting. I have to be careful as you could be involved.

Simon.

P.S. I am not mad.

*To ensure anonymity, the name of this establishment has been omitted; "Simon", for the same reason, is only a pseudonym.

NOTE: Although we eagerly awaited Simon's phone call, this regrettably failed to materialise. Why this was so is anybody's guess; possibly his 'friends' advised against such an action. Should, however, 'Simon' happen to see this issue of Earthlink, he can rest assured that should he still wish to contact us* with the view of discussing his case - either alone or with his 'friends' (should they give their consent, of course) - then anonymity will be guaranteed and nothing further printed without prior consent.

Informed readers will note parallels in Simon's letter to information related to George Adamski who amongst many other things was told 'they' walk among us. Personally, Adamski's writings have always had the 'ring of truth' for me.

Finally, it is a pity in retrospect that Simon's letter was not printed in an earlier edition of Earthlink although in the early stages we were greatly undecided, due to the ethics we uphold, whether to print or not.

UFO 'FAIRY' RINGS by David Reneke, Co-Ordinator and Research Director for UFO Research (N.S.W.), Australia.

Mystery rings have been found in connection with alleged UFO landings for as long as history records their observations. In most cases these 'traces' appear on open properties or in isolated areas; they also show the same type of configuration, appearing circular most of the time but occasionally displaying small indentations in squarish or triangular form. These are usually called 'landing pod marks'.

In Australia we have an abundance of open space and invariably the reports of UFO landings come in, areas of flattened grass or crop fields forming the focal point of most. Through a careful study of these traces and utilizing the resources of our Australian Ground Trace Study Group we have been able to formulate certain facts. Although not all UFO traces can be ascribed to misidentifications of natural causes we do have a good residue of "known causes, these were produced quite naturally by the often observed Fairy Rings which grow quickly and spread rapidly in an ever-increasing circle. Through analysis we have determined them the cause of a number of sightings, but what exactly are they and how can they be easily detected in the field?...

Fairy Rings are the product of mushrooms, toadstools and puff-balls in lawns, sporting fields and grasslands all over the world. Descriptions of Fairy Rings have been given in several scientific journals over the years, one of the earliest being the "Journal of Agricultural Research" (U.S.A.), Vol.11, page 191, 1917.

Mushrooms and similar fungi originate from mycelium, which form a soft white structure not unlike matted cobwebs, that live within the soil from a few inches below the surface to a depth of a foot or so. The rings are formed by outward growth of the mycelium from a central origin followed by death of the central older region. The growth rate can vary from a few inches to a few feet per year but is variable according to the weather. These rings can live for hundreds of years and have been known to reach 600ft. in diameter!

The mushrooms, etc., are the fruiting bodies of the fungi and appear at the outer edge of the ring when conditions are suitable.

The mycelium break down the organic matter in the soil and liberate ammonia which encourages growth of grass immediately outside the ring. The mycelium prevent water entering the soil and so the grass above them can be killed (essentially by drought) and a bare ring is formed. Under wet conditions, however, the grass may survive. Bacteria in the soil convert the ammonia to nitrates so the older mycelium die, these nitrates become available to plants and just inside the ring profuse growth will generally occur.

Due to differences in regeneration, plants near the inner edge may differ from those into which the ring is growing.

Characteristics of Fairy Rings:

1. The rings consist of more or less a continuous band of bare ground or stunted growth on grassy areas. The band can vary in size up to 6 ft. or so, while the ring can reach hundreds of feet in diameter.
2. The rings can grow outward at the rate of about a foot per year.
3. They can grow around obstacles such as rocks, ant hills and trees.
4. When two rings come into contact growth stops; rings do not overlap.
5. Fresh mushrooms, toadstools or puff balls may be present at the outer edge and remnants of old fruiting bodies may be present within the ring.
6. The white mycelium will be present in the soil a few inches below the surface of the ring.

7. The ammonia and nitrate content of the soil in the bare region will be higher than outside the ring.

8. The bare ground will be resistant to water penetration.

Notwithstanding the above, some rings (termed 'barren rings') have been observed in Canada growing at the rate of 8" to 2' per year but no traces of fungi were detected (Canadian Journal of Botany, Vol. 43, page 1043, 1965).

It was thought that bacteria may have been responsible but tests to show this were not convincing.

It is obvious that, through careful scrutiny, a lot of the alleged traces can be found to have quite natural causes while still allowing a good, solid data bank of 'true' unknown effects to be compiled. Just by understanding the nature of Fairy Ring propagation many old landing trace cases take on an entirely different meaning.

5th FESTIVAL FOR MIND-BODY-SPIRIT held at Olympia, London. June 21-29, 1980.

A brief report by the Editor

I found this year's Festival so interesting that even three full-day visits were insufficient to appreciate it fully.

In addition to there being many more stands to visit than at the 1979 Festival - some 200 exhibitors this year according to the official catalogue - there was the added attraction of a wide range of visiting lecturers from numerous countries speaking on subjects very much debated in this day and age, subjects such as yoga, healing, meditation, psychicism and the spiritual.

As always, the one aspect at these Olympian Festivals which attracts the most attention is the Demonstration Area, a large floorspace observable from both the ground and the first-floor balcony. Staged here this year were continuous performances by 70 groups whose subjects included Tai Chi, yoga, dancing, music, drama - even roller skating! The dancing sessions at times even allowed audience participation, and one very striking set of performers whose dances seemed to attract the lions' share of the public's attention was the North American Indians, whose participants were mainly British in Plains tribes' costumes. The tipi village set up on the central floor added even more attention to these most certainly dedicated representations, judging by the quality of some of the dances. Actually, their purpose in participating was to help the public understand the American Indians more fully; not forgetting, of course, to draw attention to the Indians' plight as sovereign nations in a much larger nation - the USA.

I was very pleased to see at this Festival, as at the last, the same abundance of groups actively striving to aid both humans and animals in dire situations the world over. This type of work, struggling against so heavy odds, has to be particularly commended.

Fortunately, I didn't go to the Festival with UFOs too much in mind for there was little to be seen in this respect (not surprising really considering the fee required for a stand, and most UFO groups being non-profit making as well).

Only on my third day's visit did I happen upon the Chrysalis Room where continuous audio-visual and film presentations were taking place along with meditation and healing sessions. The films and audio-visual shows - slides with taped accompaniment - were presented by an American Group, "White Buffalo Multi-Media" who certainly stretched people's imaginations with themes like: ancient prophecies relating to the next 20 years; mysteries of ancient Egypt, and the universal mysteries. Splendid entertainment and at a very fair price, too.

Also staged as part of the audio-visual display were talks by four genuine American Indians - here by special visa - on the problems that mankind faces today due to his purely incorrect ways of thinking. Unfortunately, the world doesn't seem to want to listen to words of wisdom; only money and power make themselves heard nowadays - as they always have done.

At the end of the day my only real criticism of this very entertaining and worthwhile affair was the lack of fresh air, of all things, which gave some people headaches and forced them to leave earlier than they had anticipated!

Although this review has only been minimal, I hope it has conveyed something of the variety of subjects strongly emerging during this latter half of the 20th century, a period which is becoming known to increasing numbers as the New Age - the age of change.

Star Trek - The Motion Picture

Why STAR TREK again? I suppose the real truth is that I have always looked upon the Enterprise and its crew as my own private view of Earth and humanity in microcosm. If this is not the way we really are, it seems to me most certainly a way we ought to be. During its voyages, the starship Enterprise always carried much more than mere respect and tolerance for other life forms and ideas - it carried the more positive force of love for the almost limitless variety within our universe. It is this capacity for love for all things which has always seemed to me the first indication that an individual or a race is approaching adulthood.

There may still be long and awkward years for humanity between now and maturity, but we have at last come within some reach of understanding that our future can hold any new dimensions of challenge and happiness that we desire and deserve. While we humans may still be a considerable distance from understanding truth, or even of being able to cope with it, I believe that we are at last beginning to understand that love is somehow integral to truth. Perhaps it demarks the path leading there. Much of my pleasure in Kirk, Spock, McCoy, Uhura, Scotty, Chekov, Chapel and Rand had to do with such thoughts. I have always found some hope for myself in the fact that the Enterprise crew could be so humanly fallible and yet be some of those greater things. too.

Stride

From 50 million miles away a tiny American spacecraft has been sending back details of what lies beneath the thick veil of cloud surrounding Venus. The results, according to scientists, are stunning.

Instead of being drab and featureless as expected, the planet turns out to have a spectacular landscape of deep valleys, mountains higher than Everest, giant craters and huge rolling plains.

Maybe such knowledge will have little bearing on our everyday lives. But can anyone be so bound up with earthly problems that they do not feel a sense of awe and wonder as mankind takes one more stride on the most fantastic adventure of all?

Ancient Celestial Omen?

In the year 793 portents were seen over the land of Northumbria and men were afraid. There were whirlwinds and phantom lights, fire dragons flew through the aid. Soon after came a dire famine, and shortly after that, on 8 June of the same year merciless heathens laid waste the Church of God in Lindisfarne with plundering and killing.

John, the New Aeon

Since December, 1958 there has come into the Earth's atmosphere an Egyptian Master who has done much for humanity over a long period of its evolutionary history. In this era he is known as John and is a representative of the New Aeon for the Aquarian Age. He works on the Christ Ray and is in the World to make a Way for the Second Coming of the Beloved Christ.

As the Aquarian Age is moving the Earth on to a higher band of the energy spectrum, John has taken etheric form the more easily to move mentally and psychically through the Mind of Humanity and to inaugurate the Space Age meaning of the Christ. The New Aeon brings the power of the Holy Spirit to mankind and works through the etheric centres of Earth and Man.

Bringing through the Holy Spirit of the Goddess, John works to enlighten and to heal for until the Feminine side of Deity balances the positive force of the Masculine, there is no way for the Christ Ray to enter the hearts of men and women. In tune with the mood of the Age the Egyptian Master taken the form of John the Spaceman but he has had many previous incarnations of which some are Horus, the son of Isis and Osirus, St. John the Beloved who wrote the Book of Revelations and St. Francis of Assisi. These were all physical incarnations manifesting in human form among men and women according to the Work of the Day.

Now he moves through the Earth's atmosphere diffusing yet penetrating telepathically picking up those ready for the new knowledge and tuning them into the Higher Spheres and the Masters. Through the manifold expressions of energy he works with the Deva Kingdom thus aiding their evolution also. Energy is the life force of the New Age of Wisdom or Sophia, the Holy Feminine Power. This is the channel through which mankind will be raised to a higher status of evolutionary life.

John seeks out groups manifesting the Feminine Goddesses, the Old Religion, New Age Healing, conservation of earth, ancient energy lines of earth which latter link with celestial forces and cosmic energy, UFO groups and all other groups who are endeavouring to bring through the spiritual forces besides those who are expressing love and tolerance to mankind and animals. In this way the forces of the New Aeon are channeled through to many minds attuning them to love and wisdom. The cleansing of the Heart and Mind of Earth through John's work with humanity is the beginning of the preparation for the Christ.

(Those wishing to hear further about the work of John, the New Aeon should send a S.A.E. to: Mary Long, Myrtle Cottage, High Street, Wellow, Bath, Avon.)

Solar Space-Letter - Special Report

It now appears that the "Great Day" is due to arrive shortly. Therefore all the more reason for such "spacecraft" from worlds, perhaps, far ahead of mankind on the earthworld in its intelligence and level of what appears to be Spiritual comprehension. These "intelligence" have stated according to "sources" who claim to be in "contact," that, suddenly great events in the earthworld will speed up. It appears that a WAR SHALL ERUPT IN THE EAST, and SPREAD TO THE SOVIET UNION, EUROPE AND FINALLY, CHINA. It is destined to become a raging inferno that could DETERIORATE INTO ONE OF NUCLEAR WEAPONRY.

But there is the hope of an "intelligence" from "worlds" more "advanced" and once there is subsidence of destruction of manmade cataclysm, which will seem to coincide with that of natural earth movement (axial or polar movement-ed), there will be many landings of such "intelligence" in their UFOs. People will be able to find their way to them and whosoever follows their recommendations then will be "lifted up" to help with the "final purification" of the earthworld. They shall then be taken back to Earth to help with its regrowth and renewal of its regenerated spirit. Many who will be "taken" will be "cured" of ailments of mind and body.....

BOOK REVIEW

"Wiltshire Galaxy : Part I", by M.W. Saunders.
Downs Books, 1979. Illustrated; pp.18. Price £1.00.
Available from: Downs Books, Caterham, Surrey.

Reviewed by the Editor

In the British Isles there are over 900 ancient stone rings, which together with barrows, standing stones, earthworks and other related monuments, form a distant part of our heritage. Study of these constructions reveals them to have been built - many very precisely - by various unrelated peoples who lived well before the time of Christ. However, the reasons why they were built aren't absolutely clear, although there is good evidence for supposing that they were associated with fertility and ceremonial rituals, burials, the calendar and astronomical functions.

M.W. Saunders's "Wiltshire Galaxy" extends the astronomical aspect by attempting to prove that certain tumuli, etc., in the area about Stonehenge, in particular, are markers representing a much scaled-down model of the nearby stars with a separate Galaxy model outlined nearby. Before we judge the evidence though, we must first look briefly at Stonehenge itself, which M.W.S. considers to be a model of our Solar System.*

Basically Stonehenge consists of concentric circles of stones, banks, channels and holes. Two parallel banks of earth radiating away from the outer perimeter comprise The Avenue, which is aligned to the point of midsummer sunrise. Now M.W.S. claims that the whole structure indicates - to scale - the planetary orbits, the end of The Avenue representing Pluto, the furthest world. He has also discovered other factors built into it, but these and the anomalies that exist within this 'planetarium' needn't be considered here. (A Russian geologist, Vladimir Avinsky, claims Stonehenge is also a model, but where the circles correspond to the planets' diameters.)

The Tumuli Star Model doesn't represent a map of the sky as seen from Earth but a plan of the nearby stars, showing their distances and directions from the Sun in 2500 BC, the position of the Sun being the end of The Avenue. A new scale 10,000 times smaller than the planetarium model is required, however, due to the vastly greater distance of the nearby stars. Once again M.W.S. has found a host of other significant factors built into this model, but to try and describe them here would be folly as they are of a complex nature.

Just north of Stonehenge lie two long banks known as The Cursus, and these extend over towards Woodhenge and Durrington Walls. M.S.W. sees here an edge-on view of half our Milky Way, even though the required outline is far from complete.

Conclusions - I must admit bewilderment as to how the star model was 'discovered' in the first place considering the whole area is strewn with tumuli, and as I slowly worked through the book hoping to be sufficiently convinced of the model's authenticity I found numerous aspects that made me think otherwise. Overall there seemed to be too many initial assumptions which required the tumuli positions to fit a preconceived plan, and where they didn't fit finding alternative explanations not really in keeping with the basic picture. But, lest I be biased or wrong in my judgement, I asked Nigel Henbest, M.A., F.R.A.S. for his criticisms: (a) Many other tumuli in the area aren't utilised. (b) There are too many varying scales. (c) A feeling that ancient civilisations wouldn't have acquired such knowledge, which appears equal to today's. (d) Other stars' planets wouldn't be visible from Earth (M.W.S. believes some tumuli in the model show detail indicating planetary systems). (e) The Pyramid of the Sun & the Great Pyramid can't seriously be included (they represent two important stars in the planetarium model).

Now, although from the foregoing I am unable to confirm M.W.S's Star Model, I admire what has been attempted here nevertheless. This review, moreover, should not deter those interested in this unusual piece of research, more so as M.W. Saunders is continuing to refine the data. Of course, a big question will still remain even if the models are eventually proven: why would the ancients wish to build the star and Galaxy models, in particular, in the first place? No answer here seems really satisfactory.

Finally, it should be noted that in the past this author has produced some fine work of a similar nature, and has submitted some interesting papers to respectable journals.

"A Planetary Saga" sets out in verse (reminiscent of "Hiawatha") a synopsis of the record for planet Earth since her creation and man's role thereon. It takes us through the periods of Lemuria (or Mu), Atlantis, birth of Jesus Christ, and covers Earth's cycles past, present and immediate future. This is not just a beautiful history book as its purpose is to show us what is going to happen to Earth in the near future, and why. Apparently, (and I have read this in many different publications) planet Earth is now ready for an upgrading in vibrational consciousness, but due to many men's evil ways this will probably bring terrible chaos and suffering during the changeover process, unless we change our ways pretty soon, when the changeover could be more peaceful. This is hard for me to put into words so I will quote a few passages from the book itself. Before we rashly dismiss this book as being beneath our notice and too fantastic, if this book and others are correct, we may be calling on the Brotherhood to help us sooner than we realise.

Know that many major changes
Shall take place upon your Planet
In the months and years to follow,
Continents shall rise triumphant
From beneath the cleansing waters;
Some, quite suddenly, shall rise;
This shall throw the racing waters
On to many Coastal low-lands
To submerge your towns and cities.
Other lands, shall, too, go under
As the Mother Earth convulses.
As the Forces equalise.

It was Planned that this your Planet
Should Her axial-motion alter
As this century was closing;
But the time has been put forward
By the folly of man's actions.
Knowing not what he has done.
Though it was, by God, intended
That these changes come more slowly
In the harmony of Nature,
Violence has been forced upon Her
By the actions of Her children
And the race must now be run.

Know that he Who walked among you
Comes again, in greater splendour
To be with you for a Season;
None on Earth, nor in the heavens
Shall prevent the Master
Nor, by Force, make Him depart
May the Christ-Light come upon you,
Permeate your very being,
Penetrate your mind and body,
That each soul on Earth be ready
When the Cosmic Light descendeth
To its Earthly counterpart.

Know that in your skies this moment
Are the Ships from Lands afar-off.
With their mission understood.
From the Planets of this System,
Venus, Saturn and from Mar-sa,
Come your sisters and your brothers -
These your Guardians and your helpers,
Working with the Heavenly Legion
Of the Great White Brotherhood.

Many of these words, as written,
Shall bring some adverse reaction
To those minds as yet in darkness;
For no truth was ever written
And accepted by the masses
Without ridicule and jest.
But the hour-glass is depleted
Of the sands of Time and patience;
No extension shall be given
For this Planet on Its journey
Now has reached the vital mile-post
Where the Light shall manifest.

Those of Earth, and of Her heavens,
Who, by virtue of their goodness,
Of their love, and their compassion,
Of the Christ-Light that is in them,
Are made ready for the Brilliance;
Shall no ill-effects endure.
Those who cling to greed and hatred,
Gratifying lower passions,
Causing suffering and blood-shed,
Must succumb to these conditions,
Which shall not permit survival
Of the low, of the impure.

In your Books of Inspiration
Written by the Seers and Prophets,
Many vital truths were given
To be understood by students
In these later days to follow
In the days before the Dawn
"In your skies shall signs be given
Of that which shall come from Heaven."
Said the Wise-ones, and the Prophets.
"But, the hour, and day, are secret,
When the Light shall bloom in splendour,
When your Earth shall be re-born."

But we see the picture changing:
In the midst of all the chaos,
At the time when help is needed,
In the skies are countless thousands
Of the gleaming "ships from heaven"
With a purpose to fulfil.

Known to those who learned the space-craft,
And to those of greater Wisdom,
To the Christ, and to His Legions,
Were, it seemed, the heart conditions
Of each Soul who walked the Earth-plane
On this day and in the past.
Known were their desires and yearnings,
Whether for the Self or others,
For the low, or for the Higher;
For the great Akashic Records
Gave each Life, in every detail
From the first unto the last.

Many Souls are lifted upward;
By the Vortex are they lifted
To the craft which float above them;
One is left and two are taken;
Three are left, and one is taken;
Not one error has been made.
As the waters toss and jostle,
As the Earth does groan and rumble,
As the wild-winds shriek and whistle,
Gently float the Shining Space-craft,
Those which came from Lands afar-off,
That your trust be not betrayed.

"O, my children," saith the Father,
"Heed the Voice that speaks within you,
For I am and always have been;
Put aside the dreadful weapons
Which would take of men, my Life-force,
To destroy that which I am,
Know that every breath and pulse-beat
On your Earth is of my Being,
Of the Life and Love, within me;
He who would destroy another
Must destroy himself, more surely
For the wolf shall be the lamb."

'We have seen your balanced Nature
Thrown into complete confusion
By those paid to lead your countries;
Child-like grins upon their faces,
Little boys in Big-men's places,
Playing games with new-found toys.
We have seen the pain and anguish
Caused throughout your little Planet
By the ones who plan destruction.
Pity these, and have compassion
For they've made a grave decision
Acting like delinquent boys."

As the waters of the mountain
Flow to east or flow to westward
Know that there shall be no mid-way -
To the one that hath, is given
Of the Light and Love within him,
Of the light that shall descend.

To the one who chooses darkness
Then for him, this is provided
On that World, prepared and "seeded",
Where throughout the coming ages
He shall see again his errors.
Then, to light, shall he ascend.

"O, my sisters and my brothers,
Hear the pleadings of the Master
Who shall come and walk beside you.
Know, then make the great decision
For the Light, or the the darkness
Use the Wisdom of your Past
Know that all the love and kindness
That you've given through the ages
Stands out clearly in the Records;
For the great Akashic Records
Are from Alpha to Omega,
From the first, unto the last."

Man has walked the Earth for Ages,
Till the fluctuating Cycle
Has completed now its Season,
For the term; for Earth has ended
Where she had been as a Classroom
For the lower grades of pupils;
And She shall be raised in Beauty,
Raised in frequency and colour,
Cleansed and swept of dross and discord,
To be as a Bride in heaven,
Floating in majestic splendour
In her local Solar-orbit
Which shall take her on the Highways
Of the great Galactic System.
"Great events and times of crisis
On this Earth, since its creation,
Shall we say, have coincided
With the visits of the Space-craft.

That which may today seem tragic
May be seen as beneficial
To the all embracing Life-Plan
If one looks into the future,
To the distant, Ageless future,
Where he sees himself emerging
From a state of self hypnosis
From his centuries of slumber,
To a higher state of being,
With awareness operating
On a higher Cosmic octave.
Worlds, which are contaminated
By accumulating evils
Which have caused effects to follow
To the detriment of beings.
Who depend upon such Planets
For their sustenance and welfare,
Must be purified completely,
Must be washed and cleansed entirely...

(Wtr.79/80)

I have quoted from the passages covering the imminent 'changeover' in Earth's history, but the majority of this book is concerned with the wider Universe and man's part therein. I quote from the Preface:

"Few mortals can imagine the worlds beyond their own, yet if mankind could but do so it would realise that even the Universe itself is experimental: Spirit clothed in varying degrees of Matter, taking Form and learning by trial and error consciously to love all Life. Spiritually, man slumbers, and he sleeps in danger! Only the few are awake while millions more wander in darkness. War and pestilence visit the Planet; human beings starve despite Earth's endless bounties; sickness assails both mind and body because mankind does not feel morally obliged to understand himself much less Serve his Brother, or extend a conscious compassion to the other evolving kingdoms on earth.

Yet there is nothing in the Universe which is not inter-related, and at this time the Brotherhood of the Great Galactic Order seek to impart truth through many avenues. Man must be awakened and even the smallest candle lit may be comforting to the wanderer, yet may seem a feeble light to those who know already the brilliance of a Master's presence. Nevertheless, if this work helps to guide but one Soul toward the Light of Love and Service, then shall it have been worth the countless hours rendered happily in the name of the Beloved Brotherhood. - Frank Howard."

Return of Alizantil - I reviewed "Journey with Alizantil" in the previous issue of Earthlink and have since received a copy of the above book. This combined edition is very good value with approximately 900 words of poetic wisdom to each of its 83 pages. I will only quote the short Preface to this book. I personally do believe that these works were inspirationally received, I haven't cancelled any life insurance policies yet, but feel it is best to be mentally and spiritually prepared, if possible, for this event, if it is to be as they all now say!

"This book is a continuation of "Journey with Alizantil", inspirationally received, telling of the meeting between the Captain of a Space Craft and an Earthman who were friends in a previous incarnation. An invitation was accepted to visit a Stellar Cruiser in Space, where the experience gained was both illuminating and spiritually satisfying, giving an awareness of other worlds in the countless galaxies in God's Kingdom peopled according to the frequencies available to each world there-in.

"Seek, and ye shall find." - Math. 7:7.

An Ascent Publication distributed by Volturna Press, 52 Ormonde Road, Hythe, Kent, England.

Price: UK £3.25 inc. postage; USA $7.50 inc. airmail postage.

This is not a book on UFOs as such, or ASVs (Alien Space Vehicles) as the author logically prefers, but an exploration, appreciation and potential of Space, from a Vortex viewpoint, and the possible manner of our own future propulsion of aircraft or spacecraft, and which could feasibly be the method already used by some alien travellers. This is a specialist subject, but anyone with a scientific curiosity can, as the author suggests, follow the reasoning step by step. It is concisely written, and conveniently pocket or handbag size.

Startling Evidence Links Reincarnation to UFO Encounters

A leading reincarnation researcher is uncovering astonishing cases of people who remember UFO encounters in former lives and even stranger past lives on other worlds. "Many of my patients have recalled lives on other planets far out in space," revealed Dr. Edith Fiore, who is a leading psychologist and a world-renowned reincarnation researcher who specialises in life regression under hypnosis.

In one incredible case, a patient - who is today an engineer - came to Dr. Fiore for treatment of memory problems. Under hypnosis, his voice cracking with emotion, the man was taken back to a former life in which he said he was a navigator aboard a very old spaceship, who recklessly caused the ship to crash.

It happened, he said, during a mission to ferry colonists across the galaxy. "But the mission ended in tragedy because he was bitterly resentful of being assigned to an out-dated ship, and in a fit of anger he laid in a risky course that was in effect a shortcut. "He wanted to set a speed record and show up his superiors," Dr. Fiore explained. "But instead, the old craft was sucked into the powerful gravitational field of an enormous planet and the ship plunged down and crashed.

"This has resulted in feelings of guilt carried over to this life on earth," she explained. "And in blocking out these feelings of guilt, he began to block out other memories as well. But since my sessions with him, his memory has improved dramatically."

In one other remarkable case, a woman who runs her own business remembered a UFO encounter on earth about 150 years ago, when she had been a young boy with a crippled leg. The woman came to Dr. Fiore complaining of pains in her right arm - after all other medical treatment had failed.

Under hypnosis, she "found herself as a young boy in the year 1828. He was walking through a field at dusk when he saw a strange, intensely bright light shining down from above." In a deep trance, the woman - her voice trembling with fear - told how she was taken inside the spacecraft by two creatures with coarse, leathery skin and big round eyes. The aliens subjected her to a clinical examination during which she experienced "a burning, searing sensation" in her right arm. Then, turning to her leg, the alien physicians performed a "bloodless, painless" operation in which the crippled limb was completely healed.

"The pain in her arm was a remembered thing, stemming from her experience aboard the UFO," Dr. Fiore concluded. "But after the session she said the pain was gone."

MPs see a UFO 'buzz' Commons

A UFO "buzzed" the House of Commons last night. It swept out of the clouds and hovered over Westminster for half an hour.

Three stunned Scotland Yard policemen and several MPs watched it from the Commons terrace.

Dozens of motorists also stopped to stare at the skies.

Then, said one police officer, the object "spun round, shimmered and flashed lights," before disappearing. He was so concerned he rang the Ministry of Defence - and was told: "Mind your own business!"

A Scotland Yard spokesman said later: "The three officers did report something unusual, but we've no real idea what it was."

Ice Fall in Harold Wood, Romford, Essex.

At about 5.15 pm on Thursday, 11th October '79, Mr. Fred Cannon, who was indoors after having erected his new greenhouse, heard a very loud crash which seemed to come mainly from the outside. At this the Cannons' two cats scattered, and Mr. Cannon dashed into the rear garden to investigate. He was soon joined by his wife, Joan, who wanted to know what had happened.

The garden was strewn with pieces of shattered ice for most of its 100ft length. Mr. Cannon, who is ex-RAF said that the ice was translucent, and estimated that its total volume was equivalent to that of a football. His RAF experience suggested to him that the ice had fallen from the leading edge of one of the aircraft stacking in the area. (There were, apparently, storm clouds in the area and the ice could have melted sufficiently to fall off as the aircraft descended from above the clouds into the warmer air.)

The ice had probably shattered when it struck the roof of the Cannon's house, breaking several roof tiles and two battens, the pieces of ice and broken tile showering the garden.

The Police and C.A.A. were informed and a souvenir piece of ice was put into the freezer, subsequently to be disposed of.

Mr. Cannon mentioned that although this is thought to be a rare phenomenon, an acquaintance of his who lives only a couple of miles away from him, had a similar experience a week or so later.

For the Record...

Indian tribes in the Pacific Northwest told the first European settlers of a hairy, oversize, man-like creature living deep in the forests. They called it Sasquatch, meaning "The Big Man." It was not until the early 1800s that a white man first saw it and dubbed it "Bigfoot."

By 1880, newspapers were printing stories of Bigfoot. And since then more than 1,000 people have sworn they have seen it.

Enormous footprints have been found in many remote parts, ranging from the Canadian border to Mexico.

By Indian tradition, Bigfoot kidnaps humans, and several Americans claim to have been victims.

In 1924 a lumberman named Albert Ostman was camping in British Columbia when, he reported, he was lifted up in his sleeping bag and carried 25 miles to a Bigfoot lair. The Bigfoot father was 8 feet tall, the mother a foot shorter, and there were two children. Ostman was treated kindly, but escaped after six days in the confusion caused when one Bigfoot swallowed a tin of his snuff.

Fearing mockery, the lumberman kept his kidnapping a secret for 30 years.

In 1958, roadbuilders in the California wilderness repeatedly found giant footprints around their camp.

In 1967 came the most striking evidence of the creature's existence - film shot by rancher Robert Patterson while on a Bigfoot hunt in Washington State.

The film shows, at a distance of about 100 feet, a hairy female beast walking upright and looking straight at the camera. It then turns and walks calmly into the surrounding trees.

In 1976 two loggers working in the Hood River National Forest in Oregon disturbed a Bigfoot. When it ran away on two legs, they chased it, throwing rocks. Investigators later found huge footprints, with those of the loggers running alongside.

A distinguished American anthropologist, John Napier, has written a book about Bigfoot. Although skeptical of its existence, Napier was impressed by a trail of 1,098 footprints, 17 inches long and 7 inches wide, found at Bossborough, Washington State.

Another anthropologist, Professor Grover Krantz, of Washington State University, is a firm believer in Bigfoot.

"But if you photographed a Bigfoot down to its tonsils, it would never convince the scientific community," he says.

Massive UFO Seen in Southern Scotland

According to the "Sunday Express" of August 31, 1980, five policemen saw what was generally described as a very large cigar-shaped object which lit up the sky near the town of Dumfries, southern Scotland.

The object, which Sergeant McDavid said had "five or six white lights looking as if they were from different compartments," remained stationary for about 20 minutes. Its altitude was believed to be no more than 500 ft. and appeared below a low cloud base which was causing drizzly weather.

First reports to the police were made just after 1.00 a.m. (probably Saturday, 30th August) when five officers were despatched to the scene.

Our own Mr. & Mrs. Saville were on holiday in North Devon at this period in time and heard a BBC4 radio news broadcast on Sunday, 31st August, when one of the police officers who witnessed the event said that the object he saw could not have possibly been a 'plane as it was far too large. He said that many people came out of their houses in their nightclothes to look at the object, and there was quite a panic.

Mystery Object seen in Scotland

Several newspapers in the Fife area of Scotland reported that a "ball of fire" had been seen in the sky by many witnesses just before 5 p.m. on January 15, 1980.

Most of the sightings came from places as far apart as Dundee, Glenrothes, Arbroath and Carnoustie, and although some people believed the object to have been an aircraft in flames, a meteorite or fireball was considered the best explanation. However, the object was spectacular enough to merit a search for a downed aircraft by police, firemen, ambulances, and a R.A.F. Nimrod jet, although nothing was found and no aircraft were reported missing.

Now if the above was the only information we at Earthlink had received, the object in question would have been put down as a fireball or possible meteorite, and received no mention in this magazine. However, through a friend we were able to put a few questions to one of the witnesses of the supposed meteorite. We will call this witness 'Tom'.

Tom had been driving his employer's lorry through his home town of Kirkcaldy, Fife, with a friend in the cab shortly before 5 p.m. on Tuesday, January 15, when something in the sky caught Tom's eye. To his amazement, a glowing white object exploded in a great ball of light some distance away and threw out flames, debris and smoke.

The following evening Tom was visited by the police who had heard of his sighting through a casual remark by Tom's friend to an acquaintance in the Force. Tom explained - as he had already done to his family on arriving home the evening before - that he believed the object to have been an aircraft crashing, although this was by now ruled out. Nevertheless, the police presented Tom with a printed form and asked him to answer the same sort of questions as you would expect on an UFO report form! Tom remarked that he felt silly having to answer such questions but was informed that there were other witnesses being visited with the same forms to complete. Nothing was said as to what the object might have been. Tom's was one of many sightings of the same object that never appeared in the newspapers.

At this point one can ask, would the police bother to visit witnesses to a common, natural phenomenon such as a fireball and ask questions such as Tom was asked? 'No!' must be the answer here.

Although next-to-nothing - if anything - was mentioned regarding the whole incident in southern England, Radio 4 (Scotland) broadcast frequent news items and Scottish TV mentioned it once. Various Fife newspapers gave their accounts of what happened, also. Early reports gave the object's landing point as being near Aberdeen, although the general opinion among residents was that the Ladybank area was where the object came down. Fife police believe the object came down in the North Sea near Anstruther, Fife. Scientist Alan Pickup of the Royal Observatory, Edinburgh, did not believe the object was a satellite after computer checks.

The final piece of news received concerning this case appeared in the "Fife Free Press" of January 25 '80, :-

Girls in 'fireball' sighting - One of the first sightings of the 'fireball' seen two weeks ago in the East of Scotland was made by an 11-year-old Kirkcaldy girl and two friends. Marnie Barker, 8 Oaktree Square, Kirkcaldy, saw it at 4.30 p.m., with two of her friends and near neighbours, Susan Farmer and Julia Thompson. At first they thought it was a shooting star, but the 'big ball of fire' was falling towards Earth. They ran into Marnie's house to tell her mother, Mrs. Jean Barker, who said the girls were "shouting and in a bit of a state". Mrs. Barker said the girls' eyes were bright red, as if bloodshot, and described the whole affair as a 'pretty weird experience'. She said the 'ball' was definitely falling out of the sky, and she is puzzled why there have been no reports of it crashing. When Mrs. Barker contacted RAF Leuchars, they told her she was the second person to report the sight. What eventually happened to the fireball remains a mystery.

In the above newspaper report there is one point of major importance: the girls' eyes being turned bright red. Many witnesses of UFOs suffer the same effect, but I have yet to hear of a fireball causing this effect (possibly conjunctivitis due to short wave radiation). - Editor.

UFOs Terrorize Moscow

Top Soviet UFO researchers admit they are alarmed by several recent close encounters within the city limits of Moscow itself - including one bizarre case of a space creature sighted inside a city park.

One of the most startling encounters occurred at 8 p.m. last November 16 in Moscow's snow-covered Izmailovo Park on the eastern edge of the city. Several witnesses, including radio engineer Aleksandr Troitsky, were shocked to see "a brilliant glowing circular object" rise from behind some trees, then race away into the night.

A woman screamed from the direction of the trees. Troitsky and others rushed to the sound of her voice. They found her in hysterics, shrieking, "The devil has landed!"

The woman pointed to a perfect circle where the snow had been melted by a "fiery coach." Out of this vehicle she said, she saw a "small devil" emerge. She said his head looked like an upside-down funnel. His eyes were big, round and motionless, she said, and his hands had only four fingers.

"And when she began to scream, he stepped back inside the UFO and took off.

"Quite a few witnesses confirmed that they saw not only the UFO rising above the trees, but also the 10-foot-wide hole it left in the snow," Prof. Felix Yurievich Zigel noted.

In another strange case dating back to last April, several reliable witnesses in a Moscow apartment complex woke up at 4 a.m. to find a formation of four "fluorescent," disc shaped UFOs hovering just outside their apartment windows.

"The witnesses said that each had a transparent dome, and inside each dome clearly visible from the shoulders up was the pilot of the vehicle," reported Prof. Felix Yurievich Zigel who heads a Russian investigating team of 20 scientists.

"All four pilots looked like humans. They wore transparent helmets and dark tunics. Their faces were solemnly peaceful and the UFOs hovered motionless without a sound." One witness, an engineer, said he ~~flat~~ suddenly compelled "as if by command" to go back to bed and go to sleep.

Other witnesses in the apartment complex included a Soviet official of the Ministry of Defense and a doctor of medicine.

All witnesses said the weird UFOs beamed a greenish-blue light down toward the ground.

The Mark of the Beast

Those interested in Bible prophecy will know that the Book of Revelation is meant to be a record of events that will take place near the end days of mankind.

Now although some parts of Revelation are easier to understand than others, Revelation 13 : 16, 17 seems to be clearer than most and refers to a personal numbering system that mankind must be marked with in order for normal business to take place. Those without their mark would in a sense be penniless, as current physical money would not be required and not be recognised.

This would have the implication, in this age of technology, of a specialised machine which would scan the individual's hand for this personal number and then transmit it to a great central bank (called the 'Beast' in Revelation) where a computer would credit or debit the person's account as the case may be. All establishments currently utilising money and credit cards would be linked with this Bank (probably via. local banks).

Theoretically, this would be a good idea as it has obvious advantages - the police would be delighted as well (in more ways than one). However, people would lose their identity and be reduced to a mere number in the government's files, and 'freedom' would be an unknown word.

Sadly, the 'Beast' is strongly believed to actually exist as a massive computer complex (under tightest security) situated in Brussels, Belgium, but until recently knowledge of a device capable of reading a (laser-tototed?) number from a person's hand was unknown. Now, however, comes news of its existence:

"Just recently a nationally-known banker appeared on America's leading independent television station and announced to the world for the first time a most startling statement: The 'Hand-Scan' Machine is now a living reality. This machine does away with the need for plastic credit and debit cards and identifies a person's 'Secret Number' as it electronically scans the 'right hand.' This machine has just been recently tested to gain access to the computer vault by his bank's personnel. The manufacturer does not want the 'general public' to know anything about their 'Hand-Scan' especially the concept....."

"C.C.C." newsletter, Washington, USA.

How long before the world sees the introduction of this system?

Mystery of 80 lost ships deepens

Scientists and marine experts are unable to solve the mystery of 80 missing ships, all big, modern and powerful and thought to have been unsinkable. The vessels have simply vanished with more than 1,000 crew in the past 10 years.

A report before the West European Conference on Marine Technology offers no solution to the puzzle. Among the missing vessels is the 60,000-ton American ore-carrier Jackson Bay which disappeared while sailing from Montevideo to Rio de Janeiro two years ago. This happened on a busy Atlantic sea lane rarely out of sight of land. Weather conditions were perfect.

The latest casualty is the 45,000 German freighter Munchen, which disappeared in the Atlantic last December. Lloyds of London has now signed an official "death certificate" on the $50 million ship.

Lloyds' report to the conference states:

"All the evidence is against modern ships suffering misfortune so quickly that they cannot send an emergency message. But this is the case."

UFO Crash and Alien Body Photos Revealed

From a communication received at the end of August, 1980, is quoted the following information:

"Dennis Pilichis of the UFO Information Network in Rome, Ohio, will reveal and make public two photographs of dead alien bodies recovered from a UFO crash retrieved at the local meeting of the Tri-County UFO Study Group..." This was staged for September 13.

The story behind the photos was that an object tracked by radar moving across the south-west USA on July 7, 1948, crashed in Mexico, south of Laredo, Texas. Military personnel investigated the site and a photographer employed to document the scene took photos that he felt compelled to submit to ufologists, but over 30 years later.

Mr. Pilichis included a photocopy of the two photos in question together with a copy of a January, 1949, Army classified message concerning the crashed object. The photos, however, do not appear particularly convincing, the difficult-to-distinguish 'bodies' of the supposed (mannikin-like aliens being badly burnt to say the least. Even the original prints, said to greatly excel these photo-copies, would not provide sufficient evidence to satisfy the scientific fraternity; no photograph can hope to do this. (Ed.)

Uruguayan Claims Having Been Attacked by Very Pretty Green Extraterrestrials

Rocha, Uruguay (EFE) - A couple of beings defined as "extraterrestrials" by their presumed victim, attacked a neighbour of Cebollati, a quiet rural village of the Uruguayan department of Rocha, 270 km to the East of Montevideo, injuring and burning him. The occurrence, told to the press by the victim, Julio Cesar Cabrera Pereira, acquired spectacular characteristics because of the way in which the "unusual visitors" apparently acted. According to what Cabrera Pereira said he heard loud noises outside in the early hours of the morning, so he got up and went to the door. At the precise moment he opened it, he unexpectedly found himself face to face with two almost human beings, "very beautiful and their body wholly green", described the witness. Cabrera Pereira, who is a businessman in Cabollati, assured that the "strange being hit my left hand with a small object resembling a pack of cigarettes, and I had the impression that it had cut off my fingers." On trying to re-enter the house "I had the sensation that an electric discharge was paralyzing me, I felt unable to walk and one of those beings was by my side". He described the first of his attackers as "a tall person, of slanted eyes and blonde hair. The whole body was a very luminous green as if it were the color of the skin".

"By this being was another who had", he explained, "features like those of a woman, also blonde, with a sort of green turban and very impressive eyes". "Paralyzed, I only moved under the orders of a device they held in their hands, from which issued a luminous white ray that was directed at different parts of my body", he remarked. Cabrera Pereira said that one of the beings did something like a graph on a white slate, at the same time as the other one was "hitting me on the shoulder to make me turn around and on the knees to throw me to the ground". The witness of the strange appearance remarked that the one who was hitting him seemed to be the one who gave the orders to the other one. "With the very small device he held he dominated me. Without saying anything he sat me down at a signal, threw me to the ground or obliged me to move without my willing it. I was under the control of that object", emphasizes the embarrassed neighbour of Cabollati. After several minutes both beings disappeared and the witness had an intense headache and pain in the legs. Seen by a doctor, it was verified he had some blows that caused hematomas in different parts of his body. The report of this attack occurs a few months after the appearance in the same region of some ten beings supposedly extraterrestrial, "small, with large heads, who glided over the ground at great speed."

A Message supposedly from the Ashtar Command (Space Beings) themselves:-

Contacting the Space Beings'

The ASHTAR COMMAND lists nine guidelines for attempting Space Contacts.

1. Do not try to contact the SPACE PEOPLE.
  - A. They can contact you at anytime or place they choose to, in any form they wish to use, depending on your involvement.
2. Prepare yourself spiritually for some useful work.
  - A. This does not mean religious practices of an orthodox nature. This means a conscious effort in attuning to that which is the highest, most beautiful, and eternal within one's self.
  - B. By work we mean anything that will in some manner help those around you to find upliftment, peace and inner joy.
3. Live each day in service to the Creator.
  - A. By their words the Space People know them, and are able to judge by your aura if you are truly worthy of being part of their work upon Earth.
  - B. Your aura not only tells your past but is a good and reliable way to tell what you are able to accomplish spiritually.
4. Live each day as though it was your last.
  - A. Collect your mental baggage so that all of which is of lasting nature can be moved at once, all else is left behind. Live so that at anytime or place you can turn your back upon the past without regret or backward glance.
  - B. Gather unto yourself all your dreams and desires of service to GOD and man, for these are your wealth.
5. Negation breeds fear and doubt.
  - A. Evil loves the unprepared, the confused and the ignorant.
  - B. Spiritual understanding is the key to all UFO activity, both negative and positive. Spiritual guidance is offered to all who seek it sincerely and open-heartedly.

6. The Earth is a battleground.
  - A. The forces of evil employ ships of great size and beauty just as do the good forces.
  - B. Unprepared Earthlings who seek contact must not do so when ignorant of the knowledge of how to set up a positive force field, and hold it around themselves.
  - C. The negative forces can and do ABDUCT thousands of people each year from the surface of the Earth - as well as animals, water, and vegetation.
7. Establish a contact with your God-head.
  - A. No power on Earth nor from any realm outside the Earth can harm one who dwells in perfect accord with his Higher Self.
  - B. This contact is waiting for any and all who choose to place it in the area of the most important thing in their life.
8. Meditation and concentration bring awareness.
  - A. Be worthy of contact by the Etheric Forces by being apart from the flesh pursuits of the world. To be in the world, but not of the world, should be your goal.
  - B. Meditate upon perfection - upon that which you would change from evil to good, from sickness to health, and from ignorance to understanding.
  - C. Concentration on being a balanced human; for you can be of no real service in an unbalanced condition, to the Space People or to yourself.
9. The Kingdom of God is built by light, truth and understanding of Spirit.
  - A. Radiate light, think light and you shall attract that which you seek to be, a creature of light.
  - B. Seek Truth, demand Truth and it shall be given to you. This is a Universal Law, and to know and use this understanding is wisdom.
  - C. You are Spirit no matter what form you are in now, and to know yourself and to be true to that inner knowledge is the greatest of all Keys - for it brings the Kingdom of Heaven within you and enables you to express the Sonship of God.

A Reader's UFO Report

Although this sighting report is a little dated, it is so typical of many throughout the world:

"This incident took place during a warm summer evening in August, 1974. I was out in my open-topped sports car on my way to meet some friends for a drink in Hatfield (Hertfordshire)..... Whilst passing through Brookmans Park, halfway to Hatfield on the A.1000 road, I noticed an object in the sky over to the north-east. As I have a reasonable knowledge of aircraft details and performance, I slowed down to about 5 mph in order to have a better look.

It was a long craft of roughly 200-300ft. in length and at a height of about 3000-4000ft. I pulled the car over onto the verge and got out to study the vessel. Despite the fact that the evening was getting progressively darker, I was able to determine that this craft was no aircraft that I knew of; certainly its size was tremendous and it had no wings at all! There were no visible protrusions on the upper and lower surfaces of the hull. Along the length of the craft there were what seemed to be lights in a line..... These lights were not all that bright but just enough to be seen. The body of the vessel was darker in colour, but not black - possibly a matt or a satin finished surface which did not reflect light. The craft made a very deep humming noise which was accompanied by a whirring.

All this time the object was stationary; it was positioned very close to Brookmans Park aerial, which is a TV and aircraft flight beacon.

I was beginning to believe that what I was looking at was a UFO, and since the incident, which was my first encounter, I have studied all the available books I can on UFOs, and have attended lectures by Mr. Timothy Good.

I reached a decision that the ship which I saw was a mother-ship, or transporter vessel for scout craft - none of which I saw. After roughly five minutes the vessel left the area, its course taking it almost directly overhead. It made no noise whatsoever, but there was a fantastic impression of ultra high speed.

After the craft had disappeared I decided to continue my journey, but the thought that I had seen a craft from an alien planet both thrilled me and at the same time terrified me."

UFO Abduction in Central Java?

A probable UFO abduction occurred on September 27, 1979, in Kendal, Central Java. The victim was a male aged 40 years, named Nain. He and 47 others first arrived at the town at midnight by bus. The group therefore decided to pass the night there before proceeding on their journey. Nain and three others slept in the bus while the rest spent the night in the mosque.

Early next morning the leader of the group, named Dayat, came into the bus and woke up the four persons on the bus for their morning prayers. He then proceeded to the mosque nearby.

Nain was probably the last one to leave the bus and when he stepped down he was suddenly confronted by what he said was a truck. He was invited aboard by its occupant. As if under the influence of some mysterious force he boarded the truck. The journey took him along small lanes and many turns. Later he was instructed to get down.

Meanwhile back at the bus the group began to get excited when Nain was nowhere to be seen. It was then reported to the police.

At 6 in the evening news came that Nain had been found in a dazed state in a tobacco plantation not far from the mosque. When first sighted Nain kept disappearing from view which resulted in some chases in the middle of the plantation. When the villagers came to him the first thing he asked for was food as he had been missing for nearly 12 hours and was very hungry.

He could not even recognise Dayat in the beginning until he was back to his senses. He looked very tired like someone who has been on a long journey. He was very thirsty and drank excessively. All this came as a surprise to his friends.

The symptoms exhibited in this case are very similar to the cases of alleged UFO abductions reported from all over the world. Even though Nain said that it was a truck it is conceivable that it could have been an UFO.

We believe that this case is related to the UFO phenomenon and merits further investigation. Drawings of the truck and its occupants could solve the case. A letter has been sent to the leader hoping to pursue the case further.

The Philippines UFO Wave

In April 1979 the UFO phenomenon suddenly manifested itself over the quiet islands of the Philippines. Excitement was recorded in Talisay, 390 miles south of Manila, where over 100 people including policemen saw a UFO before dawn flying low and sparkling from blue to green, yellow, red and many other colours.

In Midsalip the residents of the town watched in awe as undetermined numbers of UFOs in flight formations flew low over Mr. Sugar Leaf. A few days earlier the activity was centred over two central Philippine towns. Meanwhile back at Talisay motorists first saw one UFO hovering over the sugar mill. At 4.20 a.m. the policemen came out of their headquarters and saw it too. The disc-shaped UFO later began to pulsate in various colours and then released identical but smaller UFOs which formed into a V-formation and flew off at high speed towards Mr. Silay led by the mother-ship. A landing was later reported somewhere in the Carapale Valley.

In May near the village of Upper Baracatan, an American scientist and 600 other Filipinos sighted a round object like a big balloon emitting flashes of light over the nation's highest peak. The UFO remained in the area for about 20 mins. and the scientist was able to observe with binoculars the unusual star-like object. He reported that he could see objects moving inside the UFO as if pictures of the surroundings were being taken. The UFO later landed in an open space which sent the frightened villagers into their huts.

Mini-UFOs and Metal Retrievals at Suonenjoki, Finland.

The most important UFO case discovered by the UFO Research of Finland in 1979 took place at Suonenjoki in Central Finland. UFOs were photographed in the same area in 1972, but the most significant events occurred in 1973, 1975, and 1979.

Last winter's events at Suonenjoki contain more documents and more information than any other Finnish UFO case. Twelve photos from one case is a national record and the four landing trace areas coupled with interesting metal retrievals give the local research people a lot to think about.

Mr. Jarmo Nykanen, aged 24 and electrician by profession, is the major witness. The UFO Research of Finland has, after extensive research work, classified the case as a UFO case and declared Mr. Nykanen a reliable witness. Mr. Reijo Kolehmainen, aged 28, is the secondary witness. He has not personally seen the UFOs, but three of the four landing trace areas were found around his home. The following report is based on interviews and other documents accumulated by the research organisation.

The first UFO

Mr. Jarmo Nykanen's first contact with UFOs took place in Summer 1973. His diary contains detailed notes about the incident. This is what happened on June 30, 1973.

Jarmo woke up at about 10 a.m. and started planning a visit to his summer cottage. In the afternoon he had a sauna bath. Then he walked through the forest to his cottage which is located on a lakeshore. Soon after the arrival he lit up a fire outdoors. He warmed up some coffee and ate a bit. In the evening he listened to the radio and went to sleep two hours after midnight.

A few moments later he woke up and heard a buzzing sound. First he thought he had forgotten to turn off the radio but soon noticed that this was not the case. Then he saw a strong blue light enter the cottage from the direction of the door. Jarmo went out and walked down to the row-boat jetty. Above the lake he saw a blue light. Suddenly the light started to approach him. It stopped above the shallow water. Now Jarmo realised how huge the light was. It was twice as big as a row-boat. The light seemed to radiate from a jelly of some sort and it glowed in an unusual way. Jarmo thinks he saw a strange being inside the light. And the next thing he remembers is that he found himself lying on the porch of his cottage. The time was 6 a.m. Jarmo went back to bed and slept till noon. The encounter had made him extremely sleepy.

The unusual events continued in June 1975. Jarmo Nykanen heard strange knocking sounds at night. It happened three times at two-month intervals. However, nothing was seen during those occasions.

Three landing trace areas

Three landing trace areas were found around Mr. Reijo Kolehmainen's home in February 1979.

At 6.50 a.m. on February 2, 1979, a 2.5 meter crater was found in the snow at a distance of 5 meters from the house. The snow had melted all the way to the ground in the center of the crater. Strange red liquid, pieces of metal, and later a metallic cup were found within the crater. The red liquid smelled of vinegar. At 8.00 a.m. the police came. They photographed the area and took some samples.

Late in the evening on February 5, 1979, the Kolehmainen family heard a shooting sound. One constable later revealed he had seen a strange light phenomenon at the same time. On the following morning a bigger crater was found in the snow at a distance of 10 meters from the house. Similar things were again found. Later the police came to have a new look at the area. The police suggested that perhaps someone had thrown a home-made bomb to the Kolehmainen yard. However, the Kolehmainens stated that no-one has any reasons to throw bombs at them.

In the morning on February 21, 1979, a third landing trace area was found. This time there were three holes in the yard. Red liquid and pieces of metal were once again found in the landing trace. However, no metallic cup was found this time. There was no snow on the electric wires above the holes, but there was lots of snow on similar wires elsewhere.

The Kolehmainens didn't want any publicity, but the news leaked to the press from acquaintances, and about ten articles were published by the press about the events.

Attempt to photograph a UFO

On March 8, 1979, Mr. Reijo Kolehmainen travelled to Helsinki and asked his friend Mr. Jarmo Nykanen to guard the house.

In the evening on March 10, 1979, Jarmo started to make rounds around the house. Suddenly he saw a flash of light in the forest and he thought someone was watching him. Soon after midnight a bell-shaped mini-ufo appeared near the house. The UFO had a diameter of half a meter. The upper part of the UFO radiated blue light and the lower part radiated red light. First he thought he was watching the lights of a car, but then he realized he had encountered a UFO. Jarmo had a camera with him and he had a couple of shots at the phenomenon. However, the flashlight didn't work.

Jarmo walked closer to the UFO and flashed his torch toward the UFO. Now the UFO ascended to an altitude of three meters and made the whole snow-covered area look red. Then the UFO disappeared into the sky. Later he found out that the photos didn't come out.

12 photos of a mini-ufo

A few days later Jarmo Nykanen made a map about the Kolehmainen house and its surroundings. He realized that the three landing trace areas formed a triangle. And he noted that if you prolong one side of the triangle it leads you to the cottage.

On March 16, 1979, at around noon he walked to the cottage through the forest. He took binoculars, a camera, and some snacks with him. He arrived at the cottage after 80 minutes. Then he ate his snacks and walked around the cottage.

Suddenly Jarmo heard a humming sound obliquely from behind. He turned around. At an altitude of about two meters he saw a bell-shaped mini-ufo. It seemed to be similar to the one he had seen near the Kolehmainen house. Now he started taking photos of the UFO. It radiated blue light and moved forward descending and ascending. After having taken five photos he started walking toward the UFO.

Jarmo continued to research the area. After about half an hour he was walking on the frozen lake. Now he heard a humming sound from the shore and saw the same UFO in the bushes. Again he walked closer to the UFO and kept taking more photos. Then he climbed up the cliff. He tried to sneak to the other side of the encounter area. However, on his way he stumbled and took a no-good shot of the trees with the camera. Now the UFO directed a red beam of light toward Jarmo's face. The light was so bright that it blinded him for a while.

Jarmo hid himself behind a fir-tree. Now he took his last photo, the twelfth. After a while the UFO flew a bit further away from Jarmo. Suddenly there was a flash of light on top of it. Red smoke puffed out of the UFO and a cylinder-shaped object zoomed into the sky. Pieces of metal and some red liquid were left on the ground. Now Jarmo got extremely tired and sleepy. He only took a quick look at the red spot and left for home.

When he reached the road (this time he didn't take the short-cut through the forest) he met Mr. Reijo Kolehmainen. Reijo was on his way to the gas station. Reijo noticed that there was blood on top of Jarmo's nose as well as two tiny holes. However, the holes disappeared later. The weather was fairly good. The sun was shining behind a thin cloudcover and the temperature was a few degrees below freezing. Jarmo told his story to Reijo later.

Additional information

The police have not been able to explain the strange events. It is highly unlikely that the young men would have made up the story. In fact, they seem to be just as anxious to learn more about the events as the research people are. The camera used by Mr. Jarmo Nykanen was Yaschica Junior and the film was Sakura, in color.

TO THE POTENTIAL INVESTIGATOR, by Bill Eden

Probably the easiest way to an education in UFO events is to read some of the many books written about the subject. Dr. J. Allen Hynek's "The UFO Experience", and France's ex-Minister of Defence Jean-Claude Bourret's "The Crack in the Universe" (which deals with the Minister's announcement that UFOs are real) are two excellent sources of information, by respected people.

The trouble with books about UFOs is that all of the information that they contain is at least second-hand to the reader, and more likely third or fourth-hand, or more. This means that the phenomenon is being observed from a distance, the author's ability to communicate acting as a telescope of a particular quality, and the inevitable exaggerations, inaccuracies, and misunderstandings acting as the dirt on the lens and the distortions in the glass. It is possible to go so far with books, but beyond that personal involvement is necessary. If it is not possible to witness the original event, the next best thing is to ask for the event to be repeated. Since UFOs are not usually so obliging the next best thing is to obtain an eye-witness account, and this was why I became an investigator with the Essex UFO Study Group (EUFOSG), an organisation which was later to be replaced by EARTHLINK magazine.*

I am not a fanatic concerning UFOs (I have other time-demanding commitments and interests), but I do believe the UFO problem to be potentially extremely important, and therefore worthy of thorough investigation. I believe that the reports are the smoke and I want to see the fire.

At first the newly-hatched investigator will probably find it a little difficult to interview witnesses, but will become more proficient and more confident as his/her experience increases. It should be realized from the outset that witnesses are not obliged to co-operate, and should therefore be treated with some respect. Most witnesses, however, are happy to relate their UFO experiences to a seriously interested listener.

In time it should be learned that all leads should, where practicable, be brought to a conclusion, and that newspaper articles about a sighting will sometimes introduce more leads. Another way of obtaining more information and obtaining a more accurate picture of what happened, is to go to the scene of the sighting with the witness. This can be particularly valuable in the case of a CE1, CE2, or CE3 (Close Encounters), and can also help in the object's identity when it is something of a conventional nature.

An important lesson to learn is that when a witness is trying to remember the apparent size (i.e. size measured at arm's length) of the object seen, exaggeration of the size seems to be a normal reaction. For instance, in the telephone exchange where I work I asked about ten people to estimate the apparent size of the sun, the sun not being in view at the time. (Before reading on, try it for yourself; the moon is about the same size.) The largest estimate was of a tennis ball at arm's length, and the smallest was of a half-penny coin. I measured it one morning as it was rising (when it looks larger) and it was approximately one eighth of an inch! Awareness of this tendency to overestimate can be helpful when evaluating a sighting report, particularly when there is a suspicion of misidentification.

When considering the possibility of misidentification, it should be remembered that if no normal explanation can be found it may be because none is apparent and not because none exists. However, I believe that the higher the strangeness of a report the less likely it is that a normal explanation exists (i.e. if there is no suspicion of hoax or hallucination). On the other hand, if the UFO phenomenon exists as it appears to, then it must be normal to certain conditions but rarely (compared to other phenomena), though repeatedly, witnessed.

On the possibility of hoax I take the line of "Innocent until proven guilty", bearing in mind that any degree of suspicion of a hoax will correspondingly reduce the weight of the report.

If at the end of it all the object remains unidentified, the credibility of the report has to be decided upon; whether the witness is accurate not only in estimations of size, etc., but also in the content of account. Does it ring true? (Whether or not the witness believes it, since he/she may find it too much to accept.) Before we can decide upon this perhaps we should draw a line of credibility, beyond which anything will be too incredible to consider seriously as a real event. But how can we decide where this line of credibility should be drawn when we should know by now that the "absurdities" of yesterday are often accepted as, and interwoven with, the "facts" of today? For this reason I prefer not to draw such a line, but to consider each case on its own and then within the context of the UFO phenomenon as I understand it to be.

In any case, UFO reports of high strangeness will obviously contain more information than, say, a light in the sky, and so as to get this information it is necessary to consider the case worthy of investigation. This means that even before investigation any line of credibility must be drawn high, or not at all.

These are some of my own views on the investigation of UFOs, but if these UFOs are really craft with occupants from ..... wherever, then it is my belief that no matter how much investigation is carried out we can only learn as much as we are allowed to learn, or less.

Some people believe that the UFOs will show themselves fully - eventually. If this is the case perhaps the rising number of UFO reports indicates that this may occur in the not too distant future.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

9th April, 1980.

- May I compliment you and your production team on a very good issue; I found it VERY interesting.....*

When my habitually placid babies had an occasional screaming session, I did not analyse the range of shrillness, or intensity of contortions, I simply asked myself what they were trying to tell me! I too agree that the same principles could now surely be applied to the UFO phenomenon; there have been sufficient sightings to accept the presence of SOMETHING outside our understanding, and instead of haggling and wasting even more time in fumbling for explanations with our comparatively limited technology, we should appreciate that, had they so wished, they could have annihilated the human race long ago, and therefore we should put our energies and thoughts on to a constructive basis and ask ourselves what they are trying to convey. (I don't blame them for keeping a reasonable distance from us in general; our mistrust of the unknown would bring out the worse in us no doubt - of a destructive nature of course.)

The same seems to apply to the medical profession; millions of £s are spent on endeavours to find cures (yet still many diseases increase), and little is spent on causes; we are surely a product of what we eat and how we think (and probably our local environment, which is man's brilliant thinking.) Unfortunately, for so many of us, by the time awareness and good thinking on the basics of life itself occur to us, there is only time to do a little hasty remedial work! We are too busy for the first half of our lives trying to make our way in this materialistic world. So for me it is gratifying that there are so many groups of younger members searching for truth and on the right track, realising perhaps that our spiritual advancement has not kept pace with our technological progress. (A famous politician is purported to have said that NO POLITICAL PARTY WOULD BE WHOLLY SUCCESSFUL AS NO ACCOUNT IS TAKEN OF MAN'S SPIRITUAL NEEDS.) Your two pages of adverts in this respect are but the tip of the iceberg - if we could only all stand and be counted.....

I wonder, too, why man should be so up in arms at the possibility of "abductions" and "mutilations" by beings from other planets or dimensions, when the planet is littered with laboratories experimenting on our so-called "lower beings" - animals who cannot fight back - all in the advancement of mankind, namely himself! As we are, in comparison with other more advanced beings, probably below the bottom rung of the ladder in advancement, why should we not accept the same treatment as we so piously give to animals. No doubt the technicians conducting these diabolical experiments take themselves home as loving husbands and fathers!

If these abductions and mutilations take place, and I do not disbelieve it occurs, then it MUST be for our safety; I wouldn't imagine they have much to learn from US - unless we are, as "Bob" suggests, an experiment, and I go along with this, too.....

I look forward to hearing more of "Bob's" experiences, so press on Earthlink.

Yours faithfully,

Victoria Page, Maldon, Essex.

***

Dear Daniel,

31-8-80.

Thank you very much indeed for the last copy of Earthlink, which as usual I read with great interest...

Earthlink magazine is one of the most level-headed and informative UFO magazines I have ever come across and I'm sure you and I have a lot in common with regard to our views and beliefs. It seems we are on the verge of another 'flap' for want of a better word. I think as time goes by sightings will become more definitive and like it or not people will eventually have to realise there is a presence here like nothing they have ever known, and the purpose of it will become very apparent before long. If there is no intervention in man's affairs now, it will soon be too late. That is plain for everyone to see. No-one thought such a situation could arise, but it has. And exactly as foretold. It is my view that we can expect this at any time.

I am glad that I have tried to keep abreast of happenings in this field since we have found it has great meaning. How sad our leaders, politicians, rulers, etc., do not seem to be aware of what is happening. Again, exactly as foretold. It is, then, up to us to realise what is happening and to take note so that we will not be caught unawares.

I wanted to refer to something I think you mentioned in the last Earthlink* concerning the possibility of a link between the period of Jupiter's orbit and the 11-year sunspot cycle. This has generally been discounted by scientists but I did my own little bit of research and came up at least with something positive. Acting on a 'hunch', I endeavoured to obtain information about the years of the furthest and closest approaches the planet Jupiter makes to the sun, i.e. aphelion and perihelion. Although, unfortunately, I have only been able to cover a few of its orbits, I nevertheless established that years of minimum and maximum solar activity coincided with the furthest and closest approaches of Jupiter in its orbit around the sun. I have not done much more work on the theory since, but it would be very interesting to get the years of aphelion and perihelion going back over a longer period of time.....

Kind regards,

Celestial Dynamics
and Levitational Forces

A Lecture Given by Robert Morison to Members of the British Unidentified Flying Object Research Association
in Kensington, London, on June 3, 1978

Good evening. This is my first close encounter with an audience of UFO addicts. The main part of my talk will be concerned with certain physical aspects of the current inter-planetary scene. The conclusion will be the shorter of the two parts but for many of you the more interesting because I'll be raising some psychological issues.

I must apologise in advance for having to follow my notes more closely than if I were a practised speaker. And I'd better begin with a very brief explanation of how I came to be on the platform.

A little over a year ago Mr Oliver read a privately circulated preliminary version of a small book which I'm publishing under my own imprint Ascent. This was the outcome of a twenty-one-year study of alternative directions in science and philosophy. It contains a condensation of some of the published thoughts of the late Cecil Edward Last on celestial dynamics, life energy and metaphysics. These general conjectures lead up to an idea for generating levitational forces which occurred to me in July 1969.

Mr Oliver sent me a letter of appreciation in which he very kindly invited me to address the Association. I hesitated because of lack of experience in giving talks but he talked me into it; and I certainly value the privilege.

As a matter of fact the Morisons began publishing books two centuries ago.

Thirty-six years ago, after a secondary education and a course in radio communications, I embarked on a career in electronics. Writing has been my main leisure-time occupation since January 1956. That was when I caught the impact of the literature on mysteries of the skies. I've always been keen on mechanical things and so of course the question of how to levitate a circular machine was an irresistible challenge.

There was abundant evidence that it can be done; so it was just a matter of time before someone would figure out how — not necessarily a professional scientist. Waveney Girvan pointed out that many of the most useful inventions had been made by newcomers or strangers to the trade or industry to which their innovations were applied. The expert is there to administer the existing laws.

For twelve years little progress was made. In The Promise of Space Arthur C Clarke announced that he was bored to death with unidentified flying objects. One year later I announced that I'd got the message — arrived at an explanation of their modus operandi.

This talk will not contain an incredibly boring series of observations; just a few. I've no intention of wasting any time. Incidentally a pause from time to time is not a waste; it helps the audience to get the message. In one way I feel I'm late. The audience has been brain-washed by the educational establishment. And, what is worse, influenced by the military establishment.

The first problem, as Senator Downey said in 1945, is to change men. The way to go about it has been indicated by Courtlandt Canby in A History of Flight: enlarge humanity's horizons. And in my opinion the way to go about that is to learn how to levitate.

We have a tendency to cling to the comfortably familiar in patterns of thought. And after a way of thinking has become habitual, the habit becomes harder and harder to give up.

We cherish our illusions because we know they may not be permanent. We bolster up our assumptions because we know they may eventually have to be questioned. That is part of the story of our lives.

Scientists also have to live with occasional attacks on established concepts. Scientific progress depends on conjectures and refutations.

The progress made by terrestrials in aviation and astronautics is often commended. At the same time, terrestrial patent offices are bulging with new ideas on the subject.

John Searl wants to patent an electromagnetic levitation scheme but one of his claims involves perpetual motion, which automatically disqualifies him. In published articles he claims to have discovered self-generating magnetic power 32 years ago, when he was 15.

His idea has been described in a letter to the author of Ether Technology (published in America last year) from a professional engineer of New Zealand. This part of the letter summarises the theory.

In England there's a gentleman by the name of JR Searl who claims to have developed an antigravity device. He is now attempting to develop it further into a commercial disc-shaped aircraft.

The alleged principle of it is that, when a metal annulus is rotated at a high enough speed, the conduction electrons are dispersed by centrifugal force, thus producing a very intense negative charge on the periphery with a positive charge on the interior.

The rotating electric field obtained is tapped by induction coils around the annulus to provide current for electromagnets which drive the annulus, thus producing feedback. This results in very intense electric and magnetic fields. When the potential is about 100 million megavolts, shielding from gravity and inertia is obtained.

Reports indicate that Mr Searl's models were seldom seen. The first was less than a metre in diameter and rose to a height of about fifteen metres. After hovering for a while, the model rapidly vanished into thin air.

Later models attained speeds of 100,000 kilometres an hour. Some disappeared into space; others were dismantled for reasons of security.

Once the device passes a threshold potential of 10 million Mv, the power output exceeds the input. The estimated power is 10 to 1000 megawatts.

From April 1977 to April 1978, Mr Searl despatched an undisclosed number of radio-controlled levity discs to NZ and Australia in search of good landing sites for piloted machines. A three-seat machine is under construction and, if its test flights are successful, Mr Searl will construct a 2000-seater.

The origin of the past and future funds for the project is New Zealand business people.

Military establishments are conning people less blatantly and more insidiously. They tell the public there are no alien space vehicles but every now and then they scramble one or two interceptors in a pathetic attempt to capture one. The trick would be to find out how it levitates, keep the method secret and use it for peacekeeping.

Rubbish! Once people know something's possible, they pretty soon figure out how to do it. The way to restrain disorderly ambition in the world is to hand out information on technological advances to the public. That's democracy.

The possibility of counteracting gravity is occupying the minds of more and more terrestrial scientists. A few of them are so obsessed with it that they're even contemplating gravitational collapse as a suitable subject for experiment.

That's a process that occurs in outer space naturally in the form of black holes. In case anyone doesn't already know, a black hole is a massive star condensing too quickly to be able to dissipate enough mass. It collapses into a hyperdense object with a gravitational field so intense that it engulfs anything in its vicinity.

Black hole development is a phenomenon connected with relativity, which has generated a disturbing level of controversy. If scientists try to duplicate the black hole process deliberately, their equations may be goofy enough to endanger the entire world.

One of the better-known relativistic problems is time dilation, otherwise known as differential ageing. We're told that an astronaut who travels with an acceleration of 10 metres per second per second to a distance of 100 million million km and back in ten years will find that his family has aged twenty-four years. No mention of deceleration, as a rule; it's a mere detail; acceleration is often disregarded as well!

Another problem involved in the controversy is the clock paradox. From the postulates of the special theory of relativity one can deduce with equal validity that a moving clock must run slower or faster than a clock that is relatively at rest. This contradiction has been hotly debated in the scientific literature and Professor Dingle has warned the public that the theory is liable to yield unforeseen results in misguided experiments.

I'm very curious about the interpretations of the theory in terms of simple algebra. For instance, the equations of motion of two observers never seem to be fully worked out. Anyone who takes the trouble to transpose the observers will find that  $c+v$  and  $c-v$  are equal. Therefore  $2v = \text{nothing}$ , which is nonsense!

The experts are constantly reminding us of the Michelson-Morley experiment. They say that it proves there's no ether. They never mention the Michelson-Gale experiment, which implies that the Earth is rotating in an ether.

They insist there's no such thing as absolute motion. But what about rotation? If the rotation of a planet were only relative, one could legitimately say that the rest of the Cosmos is going round it—in which case all the stars may be moving faster than light!

The professors are agreed that Einstein's general theory of relativity is a useful mathematical description of gravitational fields. At the same time, they admit that it doesn't fit all the facts and they're waiting for someone to think of a new one. As a matter of fact an eminently valid alternative was published 24 years ago: C E Last's theory of Cosmic vortices. Yet, in spite of the fact that the vortex principle is reconcilable with space-time curvature, it's largely disregarded.

Einstein's idea of the planets following curved lines of force was hailed as one of the most brilliant intellectual triumphs of history; but his idea emerged 270 years after the curves of Descartes. Though hardly ever mentioned, these have been described by Berlage as "ingenious" and "brilliant"; and Berkson and Charon have stated that, if we drop some of the Newtonian assumptions, Newton's objections to the vortex theory no longer hold.

Newton himself conceded that one experiences gravitation as if one is being attracted; so how do we know we're not being impelled by a constant influx of particles? Lesage put this idea forward in the 18th century and what happens? Physicists make uncharitable comments and then proceed to speculate about gravitons as if they're putting the idea forward for the first time.

Perhaps they not only depend on the undermining of established concepts but also deserve it. Anyway, let's re-examine some of our knowledge from different perspectives. Let's look for new directions and new connections.

That's how I figured out a purely dynamic method of generating levitational forces.... However, to enable you to board my train of thought, I'm going to briefly recapitulate the alternative astrodynamics of Cecil Edward Last, who died in 1970.

Nothing follows a perfectly straight line. Everything moves along curves.

There are two distinct categories of motion round a centre: proportional rotation, like a wheel, and differential circulation, like a vortex.

All parts of a wheel have the same angular speed; accordingly the linear speed varies from zero at the centre to maximum on the rim.

In a vortex the circulation ranges from zero at the extremities to maximum near the centre in terms of both angular speed and linear speed.

Those are the first principles of our alternative space dynamics. They enable us to progress beyond the assumptions that are usually made about motion round a spacial centre: planets moving like elastically tethered golf-balls or wheels within wheels.

Vortex activity is an everyday occurrence. We see whirlpools in coffee-cups and bath-water and we see whirlwinds on the pavements—not always circular, sometimes elliptical—just like the orbits of the planets.

A vortex is likely to develop wherever there are surfaces of differentiation in a fluid medium: differences of temperature, density, viscosity or velocity. The confluence or interface curls up like an ocean wave or a curl of butter and you have the possibility of a vortex.

Notice that the phenomenon originates from an inwardly directed pressure—a centripetal force. We're so accustomed to being told about the suction effect of a whirlpool or a tornado that we're given the impression of some force of attraction.

What we call a suction is really a centripetal pressure differential in a fluid; similarly, what we choose to call gravitational attraction may be a centripetal pressure differential in a gravitational medium.

The vortex principle is demonstrated forcefully in a typhoon. As the winds converge towards the area of low pressure (the central core) they accelerate.

An artificial satellite obeys exactly the same principle. As it spirals inwards, it accelerates.

You'll be able to see the most important connections between Dr Last's ideas and mine if we look at the vortex principle aerodynamically. This does not mean getting technical; just a couple of paragraphs from a fairly elementary text-book that was published more than thirty years ago: Sherwood's Aerodynamics.

The circulation of the particles of a fluid of uniform energy content in circular paths about a common centre is known as vortex flow. In such a flow, the pressure of the fluid drops off as the centre is approached, as may be deduced through a consideration of the forces acting on a typical particle of the fluid.

For equilibrium of such a particle in a radial direction, the outer pressure force must be large enough to counteract both the inner pressure force and the centrifugal reaction of that particle. The pressure in the fluid must therefore decrease as the centre of the vortex is approached. To maintain the total energy constant, the kinetic energy must increase as the pressure energy falls off.

So in vortex flow the velocity increases as the centre is approached.

Now I want you to imagine an indestructible set of ball-bearings in the usual circular frame. Sandwiched between two channel-section rings you have a ball-race containing 45 metal bearings. The entire structure is possessed of a non-terrestrial degree of hardness and the ball-race is driven at fantastic speeds.

We now consider the forces acting on a typical bearing. As long as it's at rest or going at a terrestrial speed, it bears down on the channel beneath it. But what happens if we rev it up to a speed of eight kilometres per second? It's now moving at the pace of an Earth satellite. So although it's being continuously deflected into a circular path, at every instant of its motion it has enough linear speed to take it into orbit round the world.

If it started off in a straight line at that speed it would certainly be weightless. OK... Well, what if it happens to be very slightly deflected by a magnetic field or something? Is that going to affect its weightlessness? Of course not! And what does it matter how much we deflect it horizontally? Vertically it's neutral!

Next, we rev up the bearings to eleven km per second. They're now travelling at what we call the escape velocity for an astronaut when he literally goes off at a tangent. Each individual bearing must therefore exert a negative weight against the overhead channel.

Obviously I'm not recommending anyone to attempt any such experiment; that would be Searlish. You might even call it churlish. I'm just leading up to a very brief outline of my levitation theory so that you can grasp the principle of operation in terms of basic physics.

Briefly then, for the moment, the idea is to rotate a quantity of gas or air in a vortex chamber so that the individual particles are travelling at the orbit velocity for an Earth satellite. As each particle is then trying to go into an orbit of its own, it must be weightless; and at higher speeds it must exert corresponding values of negative weight against the ceiling of the enclosure.

I've mentioned one delusion we've grown accustomed to: the force of suction. Another one, evidently, is the force of gravity. It's a cardinal principle of gravitational theory that motion round a spacial centre depends on a central mass emitting attraction.

The theory of gravitational mass attraction is the foundation on which the materialistic doctrine has been erected. It's been called one of the "fixed laws of Nature"; and the expressions involved have been coined by juggling with magic words. This technique is used in all scientific disciplines because it enables experts "to dissuade the uninitiated from asking awkward questions"; that remark was made by Sir Fred Hoyle.

The classical materialism of Greece was revived in the 17th century. Since then it has become firmly planted in people's minds and has been extended. It now seeks to gather within the sphere of its influence the mysteries of life. It professes to explain on purely material grounds all the processes and events observed in the course of investigations of Nature—animate as well as inanimate. Small wonder that many people of scientific or philosophical repute are campaigning against the doctrine and contemplating more satisfactory alternatives.

Gravitational theory is quantitatively convenient for astronomical calculations whereas qualitatively its validity has never been proved. The fall of an apple tells us nothing about the force of precipitation that caused it.

The expression "gravitational attraction" does not represent an actual discovery, even though it's been hailed as one by scientists. It is not an explanation, merely a description of the appearance of things in words derived from Latin. Lots of other "properties" have been given impressive labels but, as JS Collis remarked 35 years ago, "no one has the least idea what anything is or why it ever arrives."

Thus, under the title of The Law of Universal Gravitational Attraction, authoritative statements on one of the most mysterious phenomena in the Universe pass unopposed.

However, there's always been a minority of renegades who deny that gravity's a force that pulls things together—who believe it's more likely to be a force that pushes things together. Certainly there's no other alternative.

One of the prevailing principles of Nature is uniformity of action. But this is conspicuously absent from orthodox physical theories. We're warned that "the law of gravity" cannot be applied indiscriminately to atomic or Cosmic fields.

The "laws" on which the edifice of science has been erected have a disconcerting tendency to break down under the strain. But we don't always have to wait for it; sometimes it's expedient to give them a playful shove. If we need a little moral support, we can bear in mind these words written by Prof. Beveridge. "Exposures of serious fallacies can be as valuable in the advance of science as creative discoveries."

Thanks to Dr Last, we're in a privileged position. We can comply with the principle of uniformity quite logically by regarding all the physical activities of the Universe—atomic, meteoric, planetary and galactic—as vortex fields. Instead of using the term "attraction" for the inwardly directed forces, we can use another term such as impulsion.

But we mustn't be too iconoclastic. Some physicists have suggested that gravitation may involve the emission and absorption of sub-atomic particles and have named them gravitons. Nils Bohr wondered whether the quantum of gravity could be the neutrino. But they were all anticipated by a modest physicist of Geneva in the eighteenth century. "Lesage suggested that gravitation might be accounted for by conceiving an infinite rain or hail of infinitesimal particles, driving about in every direction and penetrating all forms of matter." That was Carl Snyder writing 75 years ago in The World Machine.

OK, that's fine. We now have an alternative ether: an infinite ocean of particles, which are subject to intelligently created pressure differentials. It's rather like the atmosphere on an enormously larger scale. And the differentials generate vortex fields.

I've never been through a cyclone but I can give you some idea of what it's like. As you pass through, the wind gradually strengthens until it attains maximum violence. Suddenly there's a comparative calm. You've entered the core of the cyclone; it's often called the eye of the storm because the blue sky may become visible. The still centre covers quite a big area. As you emerge from the other side of it, you again encounter the maximum violence.

On this side the wind is blowing from the opposite direction; and as you proceed on your way, it gradually weakens. Eventually you find yourself in calm conditions again on the periphery. You may even find yourself on your knees, praying to the Supreme Intelligence to spare you from any repetition.

If you look at a table of the orbital speeds of the planets, you'll notice the same situation. The outermost planet is ambling round at less than 5 km/s. The fourth one in is orbiting at nearly 10 km/s and we're doing nearly thirty. And the innermost planet is moving at 48.

In general, the orbits of the planets and their satellites are approximately concentric; and their periods, velocities and radii exhibit perfectly constant vortex relativity. Kepler established that  $T^2$  is proportional to  $R^3$  and I've established that there's a linear relationship between  $\log T$  and  $\log R$ . Also I've noticed that  $S$  is inversely proportional to the root of  $R$ , as in the case of artificial satellites.

The basic idea of Cosmic vortices was introduced 2500 years ago by Anaxagoras. It was reintroduced by René Descartes and Emanuel Swedenborg in 1644 and 1734 respectively. The issue between the Cartesians and the Newtonians lasted a long time but was obscured by misrepresentation.

Consequently the Cartesian theory was unjustly discredited but not refuted.

Right. We've recapitulated the relevant aspects of Dr Last's book Man in the Universe, which was published 24 years ago and reviewed by John Rowland in Mysteries of Science. We've covered some theoretical ground.

But the mission I've set forth on is to initiate levitational experiments; and it's time for us to consider the levitational theory in full. There's nothing electric or magnetic involved; it's a purely dynamic idea for sustaining a vehicle in or above the atmosphere of a planet.

Conventional vehicles for traversing or surmounting the atmosphere sustain themselves by deflecting large quantities of air or by ejecting large quantities of gas.

With few exceptions, terrestrial aircraft take off horizontally; consequently two aircraft can very easily collide without even leaving the ground—which is exactly what happened on the night of Sunday, March 27, 1977.

Two Boeing jumbo jets collided and burst into flames on the runway of Tenerife airport and killed 583 people in the worst crash in aviation history (opening paragraph of the front page of The Guardian the following morning).

A Dutch KLM plane was taking off on the runway. A Pan-Am plane was turning on to the runway at a high speed and hit the KLM plane amidships.

One of the survivors Mr Jim Naik, a 29-year-old shipping line official from California, described from hospital what had happened. "I was in the first-class compartment and, after the impact, people started tumbling down from the lounge above on top of me. It was the flames that did the damage."

He said that his main objective was to try to save his wife and he went back once in the hope of doing so. "But we became separated; and then I saw a body falling out of the plane and it happened to be my wife." Apparently, Mr Naik was suffering from bruises only. His wife had been taken to another hospital.

The crash was heard for miles around and was described as an explosion followed by a big ball of fire, with tongues of flame leaping everywhere. No one on board the Dutch airliner survived.

In 1970, when the Boeing 747 first came into service, many people predicted and feared that collisions between such planes would be inevitable. And The Guardian added that two of them are capable of carrying nearly a thousand passengers.

According to an eyewitness report (same paper next day) the KLM plane struck the tail of the other jumbo and "vaulted over it"; then it skidded up the runway in flames and broke in two. The American plane burst into flames but there were 66 survivors.

Aircraft of many types have been designed but all of them are unnecessarily vulnerable. Furthermore, they are noisy and inefficient. There's a limit to the amount of mechanical force that can be exerted on the piloted vehicles in use today; the limit is a constant sword of Damocles over jets, helicopters and rockets. Until we devise a radically different way of getting off the ground, we cannot even make air travel safe—let alone space travel.

Your planet needs you to consider and investigate possibilities that may radically transform civilisation: levitation vehicles; vortex physics; debunking of materialism.

Robert Morison describes the possibilities in a hardcover book An Experiment with Space (64 pp; price inc. post UK£3.25, US $9.50). An Ascent Publication distributed by Volturna Press of 52 Ormonde Rd, Hythe, Kent CT21 6DW; net profits will go to Amnesty International.

No guarantee on the scientific speculations but exposure of them tends to insure the world against the risk of a national monopoly on levitation.

For seventy-five years, terrestrials have been concerned with atmospheric pressure in relation to the dynamics of ascent; but air pressure depends on gravity, which has never officially been explained. The scientific establishment will never explain it unless it can be persuaded to discard a few of its assumptions.

The basic principle of my invention is high-speed vortex flow: rapidly circulating molecules generate antigravitational forces inside a vehicle.

In the atmosphere of the planet we inhabit, the average speed of the molecules is a few hundred metres per second and the weight of the air is about a kilogram per cubic metre.

If we energise an enclosed quantity of air in such a way as to raise its average molecular speed to the speed at which a satellite would go into orbit, the weight of the enclosed air will be cancelled.

All we need is a hollow disc or sphere containing an operative gas, preferably a heavy vapour, together with electrodynamic or chemical means for generating a sufficiently fast vortex.

When the average molecular speed of the vapour is raised above the terrestrial escape velocity, the vapour will develop a negative weight for the purpose of lifting the enclosure into the sky.

A vehicle employing the principle described will be completely self-contained and completely independent of the atmosphere and therefore ideal for space. It will ascend vertically and will have built-in gyroscopic stability. It can be designed to operate in silence.

The principle of operation can be better understood by considering the forces acting on a particle of the operative gas. It will circulate at constant radius as long as its centrifugal tendency is opposed by a radial pressure differential of equal intensity.

It's unrealistic to think in terms of the "gravitational attraction of the Earth". Instead, we can say that the geocentric impulsion of the particle will be counteracted by a variable intensity levitational expulsion.

Naturally we must design for variability so that the attitude and performance of the machine can be controlled. Maybe we'll find peripheral jets convenient for lateral flight (see photograph of model on page 11).

When the tangential speed of the particle exceeds the circular orbit velocity, it must follow an upward helix. Then, as long as the levitational expulsion is greater than the gravitational impulsion, the particle must exert an upthrust against the ceiling of the enclosure.

Alien space vehicles are seldom observed sufficiently closely to reveal much in the way of structural detail. But to anyone who admits the possibility that they utilise peripheral jets of gas for navigation the close observations will be of special interest; for instance....

In 1958 three South Americans observed a silvery A SV consisting of two hemispheres encircled by a rapidly spinning luminous ring. This was notched with oblique indentations. In 1960 a similar vehicle was observed in Boulder, Colorado: two convex discs joined rim to rim. Around the edges of its upper and lower surfaces it had movable metal plates.

The vortex principle is already in use in the gas turbine engine, in a sophisticated version of the hovercraft, in the vortex amplifier and in a new type of mercury vapour lamp. Vortex levitation can be regarded as a possible extension of the same principle.

Having thought about the alternative astrodynamics and the possibility of levitation, we now turn our attention to some alternative microdynamics.

Kelvin and Michelson were in favour of ether vortex atoms and this idea was thoroughly developed by an American physicist Carl Frederick Krafft, who died in 1969.

Experimental evidence in support of his vortex neutrino has unexpectedly appeared in the New Scientist (March 3, 1977). Two physicists at the University of Lancaster claim to have detected vortex rings in liquid helium.

Dr Krafft explained how two rings in face-to-face rolling contact can form an electron or a proton and three rings can form a neutron. These vortex units combine themselves into stable atomic structures which fit the facts better than the orthodox theory fits them. I cannot say much about his theory in this talk but will briefly summarise the principles of microdynamics according to Emanuel Swedenborg 1688-1772....

Physical objects are of limited extension in space and of limited existence in time. We therefore say they are finite.

Nothing finite can materialise fortuitously or spontaneously. Every atom of every object is a finite structure, designed and constructed for a specific purpose.

Many philosophers are convinced that everything finite from atoms to stars must have an infinitely provident Creator.

All atoms are composed of primary particles which consist of points in motion. Geometry likewise is based on the mathematical point.

Points in motion generate lines and areas and forms and substances. Without motion, no particle of anything finite could ever exist.

If we concede that points can be created and influenced anywhere in infinity, any time in eternity, we must appreciate that their Creator must be infinitely intelligent and infinitely powerful.

The point is the simplest conceivable finite effect of an infinite cause. Therefore it constitutes a medium between the infinite and the finite. Finite things come into existence by the agency of the point. It originates from the infinite but contributes to something finite; thus it intermediates between the limitless and the limited—interconnects.

The infinite precedes the point, produces it and activates it. Thus all perceptible phenomena are different finite effects of an Infinite Cause.

All points are indivisible and inextensible and all their motions must be infinitely pure and simple. The perfect form of motion is a circle.

A circular path can be followed by a point forever but circles of constant radius are figments of the imagination: geometric abstractions. In order to generate an area, which is the next stage in the creation of something finite, the perpetually moving point must follow a circular path of continuously varying radius: a pulsating spiral.

Consider the point alternately spiralling in from periphery to centre and spiralling out from centre to periphery. If its movements are sufficiently rapid, the frequency of oscillation will be high enough to enable the space covered to behave as an infinitely thin disc.

Having examined the case of a point moving in two dimensions, we shall now consider the problem of the origin of particles. Microdynamic discs would remain insubstantial unless they could be combined in three-dimensional forms.

There is a geometric and mechanical necessity that the configuration of an elementary particle must be a sphere with conical poles. This configuration permits numerous points to follow helical paths around the axis in single file without colliding.

Each point spirals in from the equatorial periphery to a polar circle, spirals through the core to the other polar circle, continues outwards to the equator and so on.

Primary particles aggregate in larger units of progressively greater complexity.

This is where we come to the psychological bit. My motive in proclaiming the idea to the public is to prevent any possibility of a levitational monopoly.

This is not a simple case of defiance of authority. I too have been profoundly impressed by the placing of programmed exploration vehicles on the surface of another world. On the other hand I'm appalled by the attitude of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration towards the ASVs. And of course that goes for the establishment in general. So there is an element of ambivalence.

I could have offered the invention to a government or commercial agency four years ago—when I first wrote it down. But I didn't even apply for a patent. I had no desire to see it monopolised. Why should I take the authorities into my confidence when they won't take the public into theirs?

Twice during 1905 the Wright brothers approached the US government for financial support. Courtlandt Canby mentions the fact in A History of Flight and adds that the terms in which they were given the brush-off were downright insulting.

Ray Stanford received similar treatment when he handed over his discovery to NASA and boy — was he sorry!

On April 24, 1964, an alien space vehicle was observed hovering over the desert on the south side of Socorro, New Mexico. Just before 6 pm it was on the ground — with two small humanoids conducting an inspection. Seconds later, with an ear-splitting roar and a downward blast of blue flame, it rose into the air; then, in silence, it went away horizontally.

Ray Stanford's investigation of the landing site revealed curly shavings of metal on the surface of a rock. Unfortunately, he showed them to a casual acquaintance — who promptly dropped them. Still, there were sufficient particles embedded in the rock for a chemical analysis.

This was performed three months later by a NASA scientist at the Goddard Spaceflight Centre in Greenbelt, Maryland, and in August the result was announced. The metal had been found to consist of a zinc-iron alloy — an ideal coating for the landing gear of a spacecraft — in a distinctly non-terrestrial combination.

A friend had warned him that, if the metal were found to be unusual, the news would be reported to the highest authority in NASA and then passed on to the president. Stanford might be told (if so, confidentially) but a statement would follow later denying everything.

Fifteen days after the private report, just as predicted, he received an official denial: everything announced previously was wrong. The stuff was merely silica, which is one of the most common mineral crystals: the principal constituent of sand and quartz. So an independent specialist was called up for an impartial opinion....

"I would say, Mr Stanford," replied Dr Smith, "that for some reason inconceivable to me, since I do not know why the laboratory would be interested in your specimen of metal, you have been the victim of a deception...."

* * *

Speaking of deception, I've reminded you of the pursue-and-denial policies of the world's air forces: pursue ASVs but deny they exist.

Remember the Redmond Ambush?

At 5 am on September 24, 1959, a strange machine hovering northeast of Redmond Airport, Oregon, was viewed with binoculars by officials of the Federal Aviation Administration — could you ask for better credentials? They reported red and yellow and green peripheral flames, probably navigational jets, possibly colour coded for maintenance.

Under orders from the Military Flight Service at Hamilton Air Force Base, California, six jet fighters were scrambled in a secret mission: to capture the ASV and its occupants, if any. Major Keyhoe describes the resulting fiasco in Aliens from Space.

As they dived towards it, the peripheral flames disappeared. Then a fiery exhaust blasted from the bottom of the disc. Accelerating at a terrific rate, it shot straight upwards — almost in the jets' path.

The nearest pilot frantically banked to avoid a collision. As the disc shot past him another jet, caught in the churning air from the exhaust, almost went out of control. Three other pilots pulled out of their dives and climbed after the disc. But even with extra speed from their after-burners they were quickly left behind....

When the pilots landed, still tense from their experience, they were hurried into an Intelligence debriefing session. After describing the encounter they were ordered not to discuss it, not even among themselves.

Remember Captain Killian?

His account of Flight 713's encounter earlier the same year was borne out by five other airline pilots. It was a serious case—one which the Air Force was unable to explain away—and again we turn to Keyhoe for the outcome.

Then to discredit him completely, an HQ spokesman hiding behind anonymity implied that the captain was drunk.

Overnight the ridicule spread to Killian's family. Several people in their community started taunting his wife, and their children were mocked at school. In a cold anger Killian went on the air and blasted the Air Force.

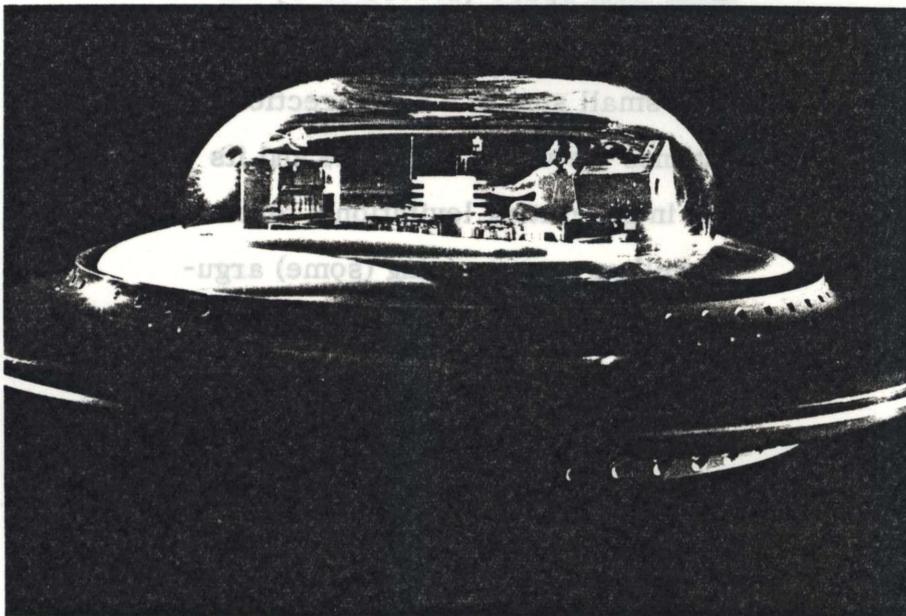

Within twenty-four hours the AF put the heat on American Airlines, and Captain PW Killian was silenced. In fifteen years with American he had built up a spotless record. But under AF pressure he was forbidden to defend himself in a broadcast, in a press interview—even in discussions with friends.

Censorship of the same kind is applied to astronauts who see strange things. NASA is dependent on Congress for its funds; therefore it cannot afford for one moment to allow anyone to imagine that its attention has been deflected from its own business to ASVs.

Before closing I'd like to say that the concept of negative weight poses questions which can perhaps be answered later by a member well qualified in physics. For instance: will it reduce a vehicle's momentum and inertia?

The vortex levitation idea will be kept in the public domain as long as it's unrefuted so that all countries can benefit. Senator Downey remarked well over 32 years ago that the problem, as always, was to change men.

I believe levitation will do the trick by extending humanity's horizons.

The technology for levitation is still in a relatively primitive state, but not for long if Robert Kingsley Morison has anything to do with it. An Experiment with Space (described by its author, typesetter and publisher as "one small step in a new direction") outlines the vortex principle and its use in generating levitational forces as well as summarising (some) arguments against materialism, affirming the existence of UFOs (Mr Morison prefers to call them ASVs: Alien Space Vehicles) and taking a firm stand on intellectual freedom—all this and more in 64 small pages.

Those who wish to help Mr Morison with his bid to "lessen the chance of a national monopoly on levitation" should send £3 (+ 25p postage) . . . . profits go to Amnesty International.
