1. For some little while now quarterly editions of this magazine have been falling progressively behind schedule, a situation due to the limited spare-time involvement of all concerned in its production. So, in order to prevent further deterioration, it has been decided to issue "Earthlink" only printed with the date - month and year - it is released to readers (thereby forsaking our quarterly frequency). This new system begins with this issue, which immediately follows that of Spring 1980.
2. "Earthlink" has no connection whatsoever with any UFO group.

UFOs WERE DECEIVED - ANCIENT MAN CAUSED EARTH'S CATAclysms, by Dr. Ronald P. Anjard

Frozen, ancient creatures have been found with food still hanging out of their mouths. In frigid, barren Antarctica a massive coal field has been found. Have you questioned the landless Pacific and the rocky coasts of Maine and Oregon, U.S.A.? Have you also questioned what caused localized oil deposits literally miles below the surface of the earth? If the oil develops from ancient flora and fauna, how did they get there? The concept of constant, slow shearing pressure over millions of years generating tall and rough mountains with very steep and varied cross-sectioned layers has never seemed adequate to me. There are just too many geological answers which just don't make sense!

I've found very startling information after investigating cataclyptic geology for many years. Most is based on archeological findings while some relies on philosophy and even legends. Most people consider legends as mere myths. But one major concept is found re-occurring throughout ancient writings. Simply, the earth has gone through three major planetary crises. In each case, the earth's axis shifted, or the orbit changed or even the earth's direction of travel in the orbit changed. All these major changes caused horrendous distortions of the relatively thin earth's crust. Cataclyptic upheaval, tidal waves, volcanic eruptions, floods and the like changed the surface and land masses of the earth.

But this is just a part of the story. Each cause also increased the effects of each disaster in duration and extent. These combined effects moved land masses up and down as much as several miles. Entire continents were literally born and died. Central U.S.A., including Kansas and Indiana, had been two miles under water at one time. Each time our earth literally became a different "world". It's possible that other planetary bodies might have acted as interferences - even possibly our own moon. But I am certainly not simply restating Velikovsky's theory postulated in "Worlds in Collision" and other writings. He tries to combine "all" the world's legends and history into one great planetary clash. Like others, including Freud, he tries to prove "everything" in one theory.

Instead of Velikovsky's concept, my data shows that there have been at least three cataclyptic events. And two of these three cataclysms were caused by man himself. This may sound fantastic - hard to believe considering how long ago these occurred. But my information and theory indicate that earth man did this by misapplying technology that they acquired from ancient astronauts - ancient UFO's.

Our ancient ancestors gained much understanding and science from ancient UFO's. Yet in their greed for power and ego, earth man abused the fantastic energy available which had major repercussions. This analysis is far more fantastic than Velikovsky's. Rather than external influences outside of man's control causing earth shifts, upheaval, etc., - these cataclysms were caused by man himself. From the extensive writings from many traditions we have prepared a summary table.

Earth World Period Summary Table

Termination of the 1st Earth World Period: 50,000 - 60,000 BC - 1st Ice Age.

Calamity: Earthquakes, fire, volcanoes, land shifts.

Planetary Changes: Earth orbit increases, Earth direction changed, Earth poles shifted.

Causes for Calamity: Sudden, cataclyptic breakup of Earth's crust by tumultuous expansion of entrapped gasses. Mankind was not the cause. Ancient UFO's did try to help in the turmoil and in limited evacuation.

Termination of 2nd Earth Period: 28,000 - 30,000 BC

Calamity: Earthquakes, Major Flood (Noah's et al.), volcanic eruptions, landshifts

Planetary Changes: Shift in Earth's axis, major interference by another planetary body - possibly moon.

Causes for Calamity: Mankind misapplied science. Science was provided by Ancient U Os to help Earth men.

Termination of the 3rd Earth Period: 10,000 - 12,000 BC.

Calamity: 2nd Ice Age, floods, volcanoes, earthquakes.

Planetary Changes: Shift in Earth's axis, possible increase in earth's orbit.

Causes for Calamity: Wars and misapplied science gleaned or stolen from ancient astronauts (as Erich von Daniken refers to them).

4th Earth Period: Now in progress.

So here you have it. The causes for two of the major calamities have been directly mankind. How can this be true? Most people don't realize that man had developed scientific abilities so many centuries ago. So we've provided some brief archeological and geographical proofs. Because of space limitations, further detail is impossible.

1. Internationally recognized anthropologist Richard E. Leakey reported that skull 3733 belongs definitely to Homo erectus and was dated 1.3 - 1.6 million years old. Another skull, 406, dated about same time, belonged to Australopithecus. This indicated that there was at least one hominid species that co-existed with early man.
2. Science Digest in October, 1976, discussed the 25,000 BC Taber Child of Canada. Other findings in the U.S.A. showed civilization near San Diego, California (Southwest Coast) and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania (Northeast) 20,000 - 40,000 BC. And at Koster Dig near Chicago, Illinois (Mid U.S.A.) civilizations as early as 8,000 BC are being studied.
3. There are lost cities of unknown origin or great splendour hidden beneath the Gobi Sands. These even show palm trees.
4. There is a very ancient unusual city-state complex in Turkey with as many as 100,000 inhabitants in just one city. What's unique is that all rooms are many stories deep - all underground, with underground roads interconnecting the 30 cities. I've reported on this ancient complex in another article.
5. In Peru, the ancient city of Tiahuanaco was once a great sea port and beautiful city. It has been estimated that it was built somewhere between 15,000 - 250,000 BC. A cataclysm raised this city two miles up to form a new plateau. Geologists date this plateau at fairly recent origin, about 8,000 BC. A large quantity of sea shells are found on this high Andean plateau. No one knows who actually built Tiahuanaco. There is limited data which I've reported also in another publication.
6. In Russia, near Vladimir, a man dressed in embroidered shirt, trousers, jewellery, etc., has been dated at approximately 52,000 BC.
7. A professor in Peru has a very large collection of ancient carved stones which show a very technological civilization. Brain surgery and telescopes are just a few of the surprises. These stones have been dated by experts at 50,000 BC. These ancients of Peru pre-dated Galileo by 52,000 years.
8. In the Bay of Naples, a temple built 17,000 - 10,000 BC rose out of the water.

Now you know that man did exist and did have intelligence in many areas of Planet Earth. The historic Cavemen (such as Neanderthal) may have been parallel civilizations. Or they may have been remaining mankind who had to face the results of the cataclysms.

Now for Earth changes -

1. According to Hopi and Navajo legend, we are in the fourth world, each world separated by Earth cataclysms. The Aztec and other Mesoamerican civilizations also believed this.
2. There are many references, such as in Mayan and Egyptian writings, to a shorter calendar year of 360 days and thus to an earlier, smaller orbit.
3. An ancient major historian wrote that the sun had risen four times in the sky in different places. Twice it rose where it now sets; then setting where it now rises.

4. In a tomb belonging to Senmuth, on the arch of Queen Hatshepsut in Egypt, there are two astrological charts. One set with the cardinal points we use today; the other shows the east being where the west is now.
5. The famous Swastikas of India initially meant to symbolize the apparent movement of the sun according to Churchward. The Swastika can be found turning in both directions.
6. On top of one of the submarine peaks of a chain in the Atlantic Ocean, there are unusual shell discs; these have been radioactive carbon dated and indicate that this area had been above water 12,000 years ago.
7. The Earth's magnetic field changed, abruptly, polarity - approximately 12,500 years ago.
8. Aristotle, Plutarch and others refer to a time before there was a moon in the heavens.
9. Refer to the drastic relocation of Tiahuanaco in Peru presented earlier. In Tibet, sea shells and sea fossils are found on the very high plains.
10. Ancient Indian temples in Mexico and early American Indian totems refer to the sudden and devastating sinking of a large continent to the west - in the immense area theorized by some experts from Hawaii to Easter Island and known as Mu, Pan or Lemuria. In a recent article, I've reported an ancient stone found in Indiana which outlines this continent and provides unusual insights.

And for science and war -

1. According to Hopi legends, in the third world period, man flew on flying war shields and attacked cities. In retaliation, man flew on flying war shields and attacked the other's cities. What are these flying war shields? There has been much speculation.
2. The International Academy of Sanskrit Research Institute of India has published an extensive translation of a manuscript from the prehistoric past dealing extensively with flying vehicles. "Aeronautics" even includes the secret for becoming invisible, motionless as well as destroying enemy flying vehicles.
3. The Mahabharata, a lengthy, complicated ancient writing from India, describes something people before 1944 may not have so easily recognized. Approximately 4,000 - 8,000 BC men tampered with the "Divine Fire" so that the Earth split apart and 60 million people in great cities were drowned in one night. The sky shone like 10,000 suns, with heavy smoke. The dead enemy's hair and fingernails had fallen out. To avoid this effect to themselves, people found the only way was to wash in the rivers. So this is why there is a Holy River in India for purification? Of what does all this remind you, now? If so, they had to develop this advanced technology.
4. According to various historical writings by Tibetan Lama Lobsang Rampa, the earth has suffered three or four major cataclysms including earth shifts because of war. This agrees with our theory.
5. The unique research by E. Cayce verifies that Earth changes were primarily due to man's misuse of science.

Thus man existed on earth with scientific and other advanced knowledge before 50,000 BC. But earth man repeatedly misused science to repeatedly destroy his world and himself. The Earth's axis was changed as a direct result. There possibly may have been accompanying interactions with another planetary body, possibly our present moon, at least on one occasion.

But the value of history is that these forces, when unleashed by mankind, have distorted the Earth's crust drastically, generating floods, earthquakes and volcanic action. These forces caused massive changes of continental land masses, mountains, seas and even temperature conditions. Doesn't this new complex model explain the over-simplified geological theories? Doesn't this answer other important questions? Maybe this explains the continual interest of UFO's in our earth activities. Possibly they recognize we can do it - again!

Dr. Ronald P. Anjard,
Kokomo, Indiana, U.S.A.

An interview broadcast from Seville, Spain, on December 28th, 1977, by "Radio Nacional de Espana" ("Spanish National Broadcasting System"). Transcription and translation by Ignacio Darnaude.

The investigator, Ignacio Darnaude Rojas-Marcos, is 46, married and the father of three children. He took his degree in Economics at the University of Seville. The questions he answers were posed by Alfonso Contreras in a programme of the series entitled "WE ARE NOT ALONE",

HOW LONG HAVE YOU BEEN INTERESTED IN UFOLOGY ? About 22 years, or a quarter of a lifetime. Time enough to have taken four University degrees, but without attending lectures and from teachers who are voices crying in the wilderness. There was, of course, no graduation day or final diploma, because - as we shall be seeing in the course of the programme - in this discipline you never do get to the point of taking your degree. The more deeply you get into the matter the more mysteries reveal themselves for further investigation.

DO UFOLOGISTS MIND HAVING THEIR LEGS PULLED ? WE KNOW ALREADY THAT THIS IS A SUBJECT...

In our job we soon grow thick skins, as harvesters' hands soon harden. We are quite used to this now. But, after three decades of gentle martyrdom, Ufologists have been through the worst. People have now stopped making fun of "flying-saucers" and, instead, are beginning to be worried about the constant presence of "unidentified objects". They are not laughing any more. It is our turn, now, to compassionately laugh at them for coming round to accept a subject of vital importance just 25 years later than they could have done.

CAN YOU DEFINE THE PHENOMENON FOR US ? UFOs are purpose-built energy-centres, openly carrying out strategical exercises in our biosphere. The first thing that shouts for attention is the vast and disconcerting variety in the shape and size of their ingeniously-devised craft and the appearance of the crews. This would suggest more than one place of origin, and also that they find our astral circus and/or problem planet an enormous attraction. This bull-ring of ours is chock-full of unearthly visitors, perhaps because there never has been such a show, with Belmonte, Manolete and El Cordobes all on the same bill. "They" have shown us that the Earth is a cosmic refuse-tip onto which, in the interests of efficiency and economy and through the technique of reincarnation, are piled the most retrograde of human leftovers from the process of evolution of a vast administrative area of space. We are, in other words, on the Alcatraz for the hard-core evil-doers who were such a nuisance on several million inhabited planets and planes. This would, at least, explain the sinister history of blood, sweat and tears, injustice and irrationality of our ill-starred humanity, as unmanageable as Sing-Sing.

IS THE GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION OF UFO SIGHTINGS ACCIDENTAL ? It does not seem to be. Years of experience have taught me that they appear more frequently in certain surroundings: reservoirs and courses of drinking-water, schools, colleges and universities, hospitals, sports-grounds, bridges, cemeteries, rubbish-tips, cows, dairy-farms, barns, high-tension pylon lines, granaries, electric power stations, factories, mines, powder magazines, military installations, atomic plants, airports, microwave towers and television masts, national parks, quarries, etc. From this selective and odd list of activities we can gather that these craft are working to a carefully elaborated, strategic plan. Its detail and intentions may not be known to the man-in-the-street, but it certainly is causing headaches at the Military High Command, for the C.I.A. and among the security forces of the great powers.

DO THEY PICK THEIR WITNESSES ? Of course they do. Most of them are children and young people, or school and university teachers. And there is nothing strange about this. If you want to influence public opinion without shocking people, the best technique is to work on the perception of children. In childhood the barriers of prejudice have not yet gone up; children are, thus, more receptive.

WHY ARE THEY SUCH PERSISTENT VISITORS ? Their motives are profound, complex and many-sided. Their most immediate aim may well be to shatter our collective anthropomorphic ideology and, more importantly, do it without shocking us, gradually conditioning our beliefs over a period of fifty or a hundred years. They want to get us used to the idea that other beings exist in other kinds of life-receptacles, and to influence our earthly anthill without causing trauma by trampling on it. Another good reason could well be a justifiable concern among our celestial neighbours about our crazy warmongering and the risk of a nuclear holocaust that might well upset the overall equilibrium of the whole solar system. A desire to help us to evolve and become more humane and spiritual could be a third reason. And so on.

ARE THESE OBJECTS A DANGER TO HUMANITY ? Emphatically no! I believe that certain well-publicized cases of apparent aggression were accidentally caused. Just consider that, if they are so far ahead of us, they must surely possess enough martial hardware to have been able to wipe out the human race thousands of years ago. Personally, I incline to the opposite opinion. Not only do I not think they are attacking us, or even thinking of invading us, but that they may well be offering us aid, invisible but very powerful, in a lot of different ways.

WHY DO THEY NOT APPEAR TO US OPENLY ? Just try to imagine what would happen if they landed in force in the grounds of the White House! We belong to an ignorant and aggressive species and would thus, certainly, try to repel them by force. In any case, humanity is just not ready for such an eventuality. The panic it would produce would have unforeseen consequences, and the results would be undesirable. History shows that, when a civilization comes into contact with a more retrograde one, the inevitable end result is that the first becomes absorbed by the second and disappears. And this hardly seems ethical. In other words, they are not seeking "blanket" contact because of our evident lack of sociological maturity. Notwithstanding, a highly selective, anthologic individual contact is widely performed by an intentional UFO force field.

WHY DO THE AUTHORITIES CONCEAL THIS TRUTH ? Because they are endowed with commonsense.. and also attached to the power of their own positions. If they did so, economic disaster would follow and set off a drastic chain-reaction that would threaten our beliefs and social, political, scientific, religious and philosophic institutions. The first result of all this would be to eradicate existing privilege and create a juster and more logical order of things in the fashion of other "spatial-zoologies". Vested interest and worldwide dishonesty prevent governments from deciding to throw such carrion to the wild beasts, precisely because the truth would set us free and, at the same time, kick them out of their positions of power from which they oppress the earth. This is why the idea of the existence in space of other human beings who are watching us is deeply subservise and revolutionary and, thus, kept as quiet as possible by capitalist and marxist regimes alike.

WHERE DO THESE CRAFT COME FROM ? Possibly from other, more advanced physical planets and/or "parallel universes", "alternating realities", "vibratory frequencies", "planes", "levels", "dimensions" or "ultra-terrestrial realities". I think they "arise" from a combination of such hypothetical sources, incomprehensible to our limited human intelligence.

COULD UFOS AFFECT OUR ECONOMY ? If the RAND Corporation has not already done so, let us offer the idea to the North American President. To escape from our economic crisis we need to create vast, artificial and unnecessary consumer areas, outside the conventional markets. For thousands of years we have been able to accomplish this vital mission very nicely by going to war. But now our nuclear inventiveness and the savagery of the citizenry have rendered this impossible. To attain worldwide prosperity all we need to do is declare war on something as ambiguous and insubstantial as "the extra-terrestrials". The factories of the world could then work to full capacity producing the "defence materials" needed to protect us from an other-worldly calamity. Even the most unlikely roads lead to Rome and to full employment. And bloodlessly, too! A "Star War" of this sort would keep the wolf from people's doors for several decades. I'm only joking of course!

WHAT ABOUT THE APPARITIONS OF THE VIRGIN MARY ? They are complex, sophisticated and very well planned operations designed to set up waves of popular religiosity on a vast scale. Definitely, they are not hallucinations; on the contrary, they are provoked deliberately for real and objective agencies external to the beholders. Their influence on European human history has been immense. According to the wise Domingo Manfredi Cano, since 12th century there are more than 21,000 apparitions on record in Spain alone, although most of our earthly publicity has been lavished on those at Lourdes and Fatima. To quote just one fairly sensational case, on the night of June 10th in the year 1430, in the town on Jaén, Andalusia, the famous "Marian Puppeteers" put on a scintillating and varied religious performance with some 500 "characters" in the cast, all apparitions. It was a fabulous show for the delectation of the locals who gaped in astonishment at the long procession of half-a-thousand anthropomorphic "projections" headed by the glowing Virgin Mary as it wound through the streets, lighting them up and causing a great deal of noise and amazement. The result of this impressive display of "ultra-realism" was the cult of "Our Lady of the Chapel", which has been celebrated in Jaén for a number of centuries.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE "UMMO" CASE ? It is so disconcerting that, for the moment, we are forced to suspend judgement. Some of its documents are fantastic, for example the one entitled "THE IBOZOO UU", an authentic post-Einsteinian Unified Field Theory, or "THE PLURI-COSMOS", which claims that the Creation is an infinite assembly of distinct Universes, equivalent to our individual one, coexisting simultaneously. On the other hand, the writing in these reports is remarkably pure, without any emotive adjectives, a genuine linguistic prodigy. The UMMO papers always staggered me for their dreadful lack of a sense of humour. It seems that extraterrestrials are as serious as English ufologist The Earl of Clancarty, (Hon. Sir Brinsley Le Poer Trench). It would be worthwhile to verify if, as they themselves claim, the UMMO agents did actually live from 1952 to 1954 at No. 58, Calle Mayor, Albacete (Spain), as the guests of an aristocrat, Lady Margarita Ruiz de Lihory.

DOES THE PHENOMENON INCLUDE ANY "PSYCHICAL VARIABLES" ? There is no doubt about this, and quite astonishing ones. It appears that the Ufos are only a small part of a very much grander series of phenomena vastly strange and profound. The same root causes have been behind apparitions to human beings for centuries, although they have appeared in a number of clever disguises suitable for the historical conditions of the different peoples, places and cultures. They were angels, visions of the Virgin Mary, small planes in the thirties, "electrical" spaceships in Texas in 1897 and, most recently, the "extraterrestrials" of our technological and spatial era. This clearly shows a technique of adaptation to the social and mental co-ordinates of different peoples at distinct stages of human evolution.

IS THE SIGHTING OF UFOS A RATIONAL PROCESS ? Basically yes, I think so, because I suspect that any given logical postulate or form of thought applies to the whole cosmos at all levels. However, our sightings of objects and ufo-nauts constantly amount to what Aimé Michel calls "a festival of the absurd of increasing strangeness". Ufological behaviour often appears to us to be incomprehensible, arbitrary and hopelessly absurd. But, from our level, the trees no longer prevent us from seeing the wood. We can discern that their show is more theatrical than festive. Our visitors are not acting naturally but deliberately playing out their parts in the strangest and most carefully rehearsed of comedies, in front of our astonished eyes. Many a time, members of the cast have registered "astonishment" at discovering that they are being watched by human eyes and "fled" back to their jalopy. Other times they have been spotted "repairing" their craft in the open countryside, or busy collecting samples of flora, fauna or minerals. They have even been sighted siphoning water from pools or ditches and tapping power from high-tension cables, and abducting people for "clinical" examination. This, Gentlemen, is pure play-acting! There are a thousand ways in which our visitors from beyond could do all this without being seen. Such behaviour is put on for appearance's sake, and the rules of the game have been worked out very carefully. In other words, it is their intention to give us the false impression that the craft has broken down, they are collecting supplies of flowers, pebbles or firewood, are engaged in anatomic research, or have run short of drinking water or electricity.

The whole point is, not so much that they put on their ridiculous pantomime, but that elements of confusion are being deliberately introduced to poke fun at and distort the whole theory of ufology, to bereave it of all rhyme and reason. By thus taking the drama out of their own actual activities, they minimise their importance in the eyes of the public. This "Operation Disparagement" is staged for a very important reason. They do not want us to be shocked. Simply to prevent our taking them too seriously and too soon, they want us to get used to them gradually, over several decades. And, indeed, their tactics are very intelligent and demonstrate an advanced stage of psychological achievement.

THE RAE FOUNTAIN AFFAIR, by Margaret E. Fry

A series of close encounters investigated by Margaret Fry of Contact (UK) with the assistance of investigators Dave and Rose Chatterton, and Timothy Good, lecturer in ufology. (This is an abridged version of an original 17-page report.)

This strange case came to light after I placed an advert for Contact (UK) in a shop window in Lewisham, London, in the summer of 1978, for I subsequently received a telephone call from a rather nervous-sounding person who wanted to know if he could talk to me about some experiences he had had years previously, and which still troubled him. He had told nobody, he said, as people would think him a lunatic! But the advert he had seen said no-one would deride or disbelieve if he proved to be genuine. There then followed two or three phone calls from his place of work until it was finally arranged that he should come down to my house in Kent one evening after leaving work.

On the 12th August, 1978, at about 8.30 p.m., a taxi stopped outside my house and a man about 34 years of age with close-cut, straight dark hair and in painfully neat, new clothes was on the doorstep. This man - Rae Fountain - entered the house and after a few introductory sentences sat down and plunged into an extraordinary narration. In relating the following it was as though a door had burst within him and he was finally getting it all off his chest, something he had previously been unable to do due to his complete ignorance of the existence of UFO organisations. This, then, is Rae Fountain's story:

"This happened a very long time ago when I was nine, but it will stay in my memory forever. It was the 30th June, 1955, about 3.30 p.m. I was supposed to be going to play football at my school after school hours. This took place in a village near Leighton Buzzard (Bedfordshire) and I was loitering down a small mud track in a country lane. There were hawthorn and other bushes on either side of the road, and I was idly scuffing the ground with my boots when I noticed footprints quite close together in the mud, so I tried to put my foot in them and was tripping over as they were so close together. I then looked ahead and saw two men dressed in one-piece overalls I could only see them from the back and would not have bothered about them except for their odd behaviour. They had small foot-strides and also they were stopping all the time and picking up earth, pebbles, leaves and weeds and placing them into something in front of them which I could not see. I started stalking them, the way children do by hiding behind bushes. Then suddenly a 'thing' just swished down across the path in front of them; it was a bluish-tinged metallic grey, roughly bell-shaped craft. This hovered a few feet off the ground.

"A door in the top half slid open; there was a protruding rim just before the rounding top on which a man could stand. A sort of concertinering (sic) ladder came down and the two men climbed up this into the craft, the door closed, then the craft went straight up and across and swept into the sky."

I asked Rae if he could see into the craft. "Yes, I could; there was someone in there at some sort of a wheel or instrument." Then he said, "You know, it is funny, I said the colour was blue metallic grey; in fact it was like that, the way we would describe it, but in reality it was like no colour of anything I have ever seen on this earth." I asked what the underside of the craft looked like. "It was absolutely flat, but when it rose a bit as it was leaving, I could see three ball-like wheels with dark, raised bands across the middle."

I exclaimed that I, too, had seen such a craft barely 35 feet from me on the 17th July, 1955. I felt Rae was telling me the truth because of these minor points in his description of the craft, which must surely have been the one and the same that I saw 17 days later. Rae then said with relief, "Then you know I am telling you the truth - that I am not a 'nut'."

"There is one point," I said. "I am struck by the fact that you described the man as having closely cropped hair: have you heard of Cedric Allingham?"

He displayed a bit of interest and said, "Is he a member of your Club? Would I be able to see him and talk to him?"

I explained that this man published a book in 1954 about a similar meeting he had had at Lossiemouth, Scotland on the 18th February, 1954 with a man who indicated he had come from Mars. I said to Rae, "This is the only other description I have seen of a spaceman having closely cropped, dark brown hair. The craft was also the same as you described and which I saw, too."

I then brought the book for Rae to see and he got very excited over the picture of the craft saying, "Yes, yes, this was exactly what I saw. You said Lossiemouth, Scotland. I was on holiday on the 27th April, 1975, I think, and I was walking in the hills above Holyrood Palace (Edinburgh). I love walking. I go for long walks and like being alone. I am rather an introverted being. I was walking on the hills near Arthur's Seat and there was no-one there at all. I was sitting on a ridge looking down onto the hills below when I saw three craft coming down together and hovering on a flatish plateau below. They were exactly like the one I saw when I was a boy. I suppose you will think I am putting this on, but I did come here to get all this off my chest. So I assure you it did happen and again another time. This time one of these craft, the one in the centre, came up to where I was sitting and it hovered about 30 feet above my head. I just thought, 'You had your tabs on me before, now let's see what you think now I am grown up'. It let a rod with a head like a loud speaker on the end down and this thing just moved down and sideways as I moved an arm or leg. It seemed to be some kind of photographing device. The rod then retracted up and the craft started spinning and flew up a bit and then it went down towards the other two craft. Then they flew off in formation towards the sea.

"The next occasion was on the 14th August, 1974 at Dover, Kent. I was working in an hotel at Dover. I told you I liked walking. I used to go for long walks on the cliffs in the evenings when I was off duty. I seldom saw many people there. This time there were no people about that I noticed. I was looking out to sea when I saw three craft hovering in the distance. This time I felt afraid. I went down a cliff pathway and hid behind some boulders, peeping out on them at the same time. They gradually came in from the sea and one landed or hovered just above the sand on the beach below me and the other one came and hovered over it. These were exactly like the previous craft I had seen, metallic grey and bell-shaped. The central one, which somewhat resembled an elongated football, landed right on the edge of the cliff. If you have not been to Dover, the edges of the cliffs curve one after the other and this was on the curve of one of these edges, so that I had a side-angle view. I was surprised it (the UFO) was not the same shape as the other two. This really looked like a football. It was standing on three tripod legs and there was a door open with the same concertineering (sic) ladder. Suddenly two people all in enveloping silvery-white suits came down the ladder. I pressed back, afraid, as they started to come down the cliff pathway. They were talking loudly."

I asked if they passed the rocks he was hiding behind. "Yes," he said. Did they see him? "I don't know. They appeared not to. They were talking to each other all the time. Their heads were completely covered by a whitish head-covering with a visor over the eyes. They passed down the path. One had a shining receptacle in his hand. One appeared much slighter and shorter - I thought it must be a woman."

"Why did you think the other person was a woman? Could you see any shape?"

"No, the garments were loose - similar to what an American astronaut wears; not quite so bulging, but you could not distinguish the shapes of them exactly. They went down towards the two craft hovering over the beach, but when they went down there was a small pool in the rocks below where they stopped. They sucked up some water through a tube, then they looked for a few moments at the smaller craft."

When asked about the craft's size, he answered:

"I'd say about 35ft., the same as on the other occasions, but the big one on the cliff was longer. They then turned round and started to walk back up the path. I felt very afraid and pushed well back. As they started climbing up the cliff path they were talking loudly all the time in their own language. I couldn't resist peeping as they came nearer. All I noticed was the eyes, the visors over their eyes must have enlarged them because I could see them distinctly. They had two pupils - one was still and the other appeared to be moving."

"Are you sure you saw this? They must have been a few feet from you."

"Yes, I know. I don't know why, because I've thought of this since, but I could see the eyes distinctly as they walked past me. The pupils were deep mauve and the part where we have white seemed green."

I commented, "My God! Surely you were scared?"

"Yes, I was. I shrank back but at the same time I felt compelled to look. They did not seem to see me at all, they just passed on up to the top of the cliff. Then I next saw them going up the ladder. I then pressed back again. Then the two craft on the beach rose and flew backwards to the sea. The larger one joined them and took up the same position in the centre, then they flew backwards in formation until they disappeared."

While narrating this, Rae appeared to be reliving most of the experiences and scarcely noticed me. The few questions I asked were hurriedly replied to as he went on to recall what he had seen. However, he now seemed to come back to me and a bit nervously said: "I don't think I am the only one who has had these weird experiences. I have a friend at work who on the 16th July this year (1978) was motoring from the Kent coast in the evening on the A20. About 9 p.m. he was passing Farningham when a large dark craft swept down across the road. He was on the slow lane at the time and on the grass verge just ahead of him to the left was a derelict, abandoned car. Time seemed to stand still, he said, and all traffic sounds stopped. A terrific but invisible force seemed to paralyze not only him but the car. This force lifted the derelict car horizontally into the air before his disbelieving eyes. It just scooped it, evenly and not-too-fast, up into the under-side of the craft, then something seemed to shut and it zoomed off. This man went back to the same spot a few days later with a friend to examine the grass verge. He found the markings of the car and realised he had not imagined it all and that it had happened."

This made me sit up in my chair, for unknown to Rae Fountain a Mrs. Daphne Thomas of Thamesmead had rung me a few weeks earlier to say she had read a little about me in the "Kentish Times". She hesitatingly told me she didn't really believe in UFOs, but on the 16th July, 1978 she and her husband had been motoring up from the coast. It was a fine day with a blue and cloudless sky, and she had been idly watching a craft following the lines of the motorway. It was quite high up in the sky and was glowing orange with the last rays of the sun. A continuous orange flame shot out from the rear of the craft. She pointed it out to her husband. He had to watch the traffic, but when the opportunity arose he stole a second or so's glance and said he thought it was a jet. This went on for about 50 miles, and after watching it intensely she said: "It can't be a jet, the flame at the back stays the same short length. It's cigar-shaped and is leaving no vapour trail. Perhaps it's a UFO!" So he glanced up every so often and said she might be right. At about 9.05p.m. (it was now twilight) they reached a known spot on the A20 at Farningham..... where the craft suddenly disappeared!

Oddly enough, a Mr. Titler (ex-RAF) and his wife were returning to their home in Farningham at 2a.m. on the 5th March, 1978 when at the same spot on the A20 they saw a brilliantly lit, turquoise cigar-shaped craft with some type of cockpit at the front. It rapidly crossed the road and passed across the fields and open country-side. (There might be some significance to the theory that a UFO may be seen by different people perhaps months or years later in the same spot.)

With regard to the abduction of the derelict car by the UFO, I reported this incident to my local police station, and they appeared to be more than casually interested. (I take reports of all UFO sightings within my area to the local police.) On this occasion they asked me numerous questions and I had the impression that they keep a list of all abandoned cars within their territory, and that they had noted this car had gone.

Returning to Rae Fountain's account, he continued by saying that once the craft took off, his friend returned to normal and could hear other traffic. At the same time he began to move again, but 'move again' was not quite the words he used for his limbs were trembling so violently that he did not know quite how he drove to London and home. He felt that if that was what they could do to a car that was empty, the next time they could do it to him. He was so afraid that he swore Rae to secrecy.

I have since thought that Rae could not possibly have known about Mrs. Daphne Thomas or Mr. Titler, and so, improbable as this may seem, the derelict car business must be true. So I should reasonably suppose that what he had been telling me is also true for his own experiences.

Addendum by the editor

When Rae left Margaret Fry's house that evening he promised to contact her again for another interview, but he failed to do this. Timothy Good then helped her to trace Rae, but it was to be a year later and with the help of Dave and Rose Chatterton before he was finally traced to a S.E. London address.

In the interim Rae had worked in Scotland and married, and upon seeing Margaret Fry again he explained his reasons for not maintaining contact to her satisfaction. Three further interviews took place where all the investigators had a chance to question Rae. Some inconsistencies arose, but nothing major enough to discredit the overall validity of the case. Dave Chatterton, for example, considered it to be a virtual impossibility for a large tourist attraction spot such as Arthur's Seat at Edinburgh to be devoid of people for half an hour (two hours all told, exactly) during Rae's 1975 UFO sighting. However, to Margaret Fry and Rose Chatterton who have had personal UFO experiences of time and space distortions, this did not come as much of a shock. Indeed, many cases received in the past by "Earthlink" have displayed this anomaly. Noted investigator Timothy Good spoke at length with Rae and considered the sightings did actually take place, i.e. Rae was not lying and only relating what he believed he saw. To Rae's credit also, there was never any indication that he desired publicity or money, even though he was desperately poor.

THE FIERY CROSS OF POTSDAM, by Mr. Jean Bastide.

Translation from the French by Alan D. Poyner.

In his bulletin "UFOs and Company", No. 20, May to August 1980 (GEPO, M. Delille, 42470 Saint-Symphorien-de-Lay), Mr. Delille reports the observation of a colleague who saw a strange cross of fire:

"Neubrandenburg(RDA), 23rd or 24th April 1945, about 1800 hrs. The prison camp has been deserted by the German guards who have fled before the Russian advance. The French prisoners of the A64 Command - Stalag 2A - comprising 15 persons, are gathered together in the yard of the camp and are getting ready to take flight also, when one of the prisoners attracts the attention of his comrades, this being our colleague who is the trusted man of the squad. In the distance, roughly over Potsdam, which is about 80 km. away as the crow flies (130 km by road), a pink cross, inclined at about 40°, which appears of enormous proportions despite the distance, seems to hang in the air giving off a glow very much as if the town is under continuous bombardment."

I will be putting forward a possible natural meteorological explanation in "UFOs and Company", No. 21. But a recent article gives us, perhaps, the explanation of the riddle. This is, in fact, what happened during the bombing of Tokyo on the night of 9th/10th March, 1945 (therefore one month before the event related above, and when bombing techniques would have been similar):

"This was to be the task of 334 Superfortresses; stripped of all defensive weapons and loaded on average with 6 tonnes of incendiary devices, they weighed 65 tonnes on take-off from the air-strips of Saipan, Tinian, and Guam. On the way, they reconnoitered Iwo Jima where the enemy resistance was on the decline. At 15 minutes past midnight, two of them, an initial thrust team, were dropping their bombs along two perpendicular axes and the waves of bombs which followed were aligned with this burning cross."

REPORT ON FIELD TRIP TO WANDLEBURY CAMP OF FEBRUARY 15, 1981, by Bernard Gowing and Bill Eden.

Introduction: The ancient art of water divining, or dowsing, is also known to be somewhat successful in tracing ley lines, those invisible paths of energy so appealing to UFOs that criss-cross the landscape of the British Isles (and other countries). As Bernard Gowing - one of the authors - felt dowsing leys might prove interesting, both he and Bill Eden decided to test their abilities by visiting Wandlebury Camp - about four miles south-east of Cambridge - and tracing the established and known-to-be dowsable ley coded "E1" in "The Ley Hunter's Companion" (1). (Ed.)

This Iron age work consists of a circular depression with some buildings just inside the S.E. quadrant, and a wall around approx. 75% of its inner circumference, while near the centre lies a hollow area (2) about 40ft. in diameter containing trees.

As a matter of interest, a 13th century legend associated with the camp states that a warrior entering Wandlebury on a moonlit night shouting "Knight to knight come forth!" would be confronted by a supernatural knight on horseback.

Dowsing the Ley A cross point was obtained with the dowsing rods (3) at a spot where the path from the camp wall meets the N-S path to the west of camp. Further cross-points were obtained 10ft. to the S.E. of the initial point and 40ft. to the N.W. of it. These three points aligned well with each other and on the predicted line bearing of 327°, which crossed the path at the prescribed place. We thus felt that the ley line had been verified. We were to have tested the effect of dowsing over a model pyramid on the line, but the fact that we forgot highlights the need to adhere to a project sheet!

Gog Magog Figures These chalk-cut figures were noted about 50 yards away to the S.E. of the camp's perimeter. They appeared, by eye, to be on the ley, but dowsing here was not attempted on this visit. Legend suggests they were giants, and Gog was the sun god and Magog the moon and great earth goddess.

The Round Barrow - Wormwood Hill We next visited the round barrow to the S.E. of the camp. The base of this barrow is about 100ft. in diameter, while its height is at least 30ft. On the banks grow many beech trees which cease some 20ft. from the summit, this being crowned by an evergreen-type oak tree, the only one to be found in the area. This tree consists of about five main trunks - each about 12 inches in diameter - and several smaller ones, and may have been coppiced.

Two cross-points were found to the S.E. about six feet and ten feet from the oak, and one to the N.W. about six to eight feet from it. Once again the points aligned well, by eye, with the ley.

Wormwood Hill has dragon connections for "worm" is taken to mean "dragon", and "dragon" to mean "energy".

Effects on the Round Barrow

Bill Eden: Whilst I was dowsing, Bernard, who had been explaining the mound, became silent. He had been imagining the mound as it may have been in the distant past and grew apprehensive to the point where he wanted to leave.

Bernard Gowing: Bill and myself walked to the top of the barrow and Bill began to dows the ley as I stood still near the unusual tree (at this stage unidentified) at the summit. I was looking across to Wandlebury Fort (approx. ½ mile distant) and attempting to get the feel of the past environment and of the people who constructed the site. I was breathing deeply and slowly over a 15 second period and closing my eyes. I then noticed a gradual build-up of what I can only describe as strange feelings. Although Bill was talking and the traffic on the busy A604 - 100 yards away - was rushing past, I could no longer hear them. I began to feel a pressure in my chest and right-hand side of the brain. I opened my eyes but the sensations were still increasing, and I began to feel out of balance - a clockwise disorientation. The pressure point on my brain felt like the beginning of a migraine attack and I began to breathe deeply to try and ease the pressure. As the sensations built up at an ever increasing rate I felt that I would 'leave' my body if I allowed the surge to continue.

At this stage I forced my attention to Bill and the traffic for I did not wish to continue, and felt I should no longer stay at the top. So I walked down and just past the ring of beech trees found that the sensations ceased.

I decided to test the strange feelings by walking around the barrow and then slowly into the ring of trees. The pressure began at this point, but only if I 'opened' my mind. Walking further towards the summit only increased the build-up. I tried this exercise at various points with the same results, and although Bill asked me to try again to see what would happen I really felt it was unwise to proceed past the feeling of 'leaving' my body. Because of the speed of build-up at this point, I felt I would no longer have any control and that the insurge would have accelerated too quickly for me to switch my attention in time.

AN UNUSUAL CONTACTEE: THE CONTINUING STORY (PART V)

Contactees are people who are believed to have had contact with unknown, possibly extra-terrestrial intelligencies. Bob (pseudonym), of Saffron Walden, Essex, is thought to be one such person, and, as readers of the four previous episodes will know, he has experienced the most extraordinary events, these being traceable back to the mid-1950's.

Besides witnessing UFOs, Bob (31) has acquired the incredible ability to see - due to UFO intervention- unknown symbols, spacecraft, alien planetary scenery, views from space of unknown solar systems and various other far-removed spectacles as if they have been projected onto a screen directly in front of him. In the main, these images - in black and white or colour - are produced inside Bob's own mind/optical apparatus, but appear to lie a particular distance beyond his physical eyes. The general feeling thus far amongst readers is that the symbols, at least, are of great antiquity, possibly stemming from the days of Atlantis and Mu. Why and how, exactly, Bob is receiving these and untold other visions cannot be answered.

In Part IV we read of an unknown entity (but a being similar to a human) that Bob stated he could see inhabiting the same physical space as his own body occupies. Also, it was tentatively suggested that some of the sights Bob was witnessing might be indicative of another world possibly interpenetrating our own (obviously an extreme viewpoint and one generally reserved for sci-fi writers, but then this is an extreme case). Whether or not the latter suggestion agrees with the facts, however, is now left totally to the reader.

When Bob is driving from his home in a northerly direction (Cambridge area) he frequently perceives a mountain range with large hemispherical domes in the middle distance and a red planet hanging in the sky (fig.2). When driving south Bob sees many of these domes shrouded in a haze of sunlight emanating from two suns: to the east and west, however, nothing clear can be made out (?).

Sometimes the view ahead on these roads changes into that of a tunnel, but as seen through "frosted glass" with a criss-cross structure supporting it (fig.3), and running along the sides of the tunnel a pair of rails with, at times, a rail-car visible to the left (fig.4).

On another occasion:

"Today, Sunday, 23rd November, 1980, while walking in Saffron Walden the now-constant mind projection is giving me views of a rather large planet (which) at arm's length is 150mm. across - nearly 6 inches; very vivid in appearance and it sits at a 30° angle from the horizon in the NNE.

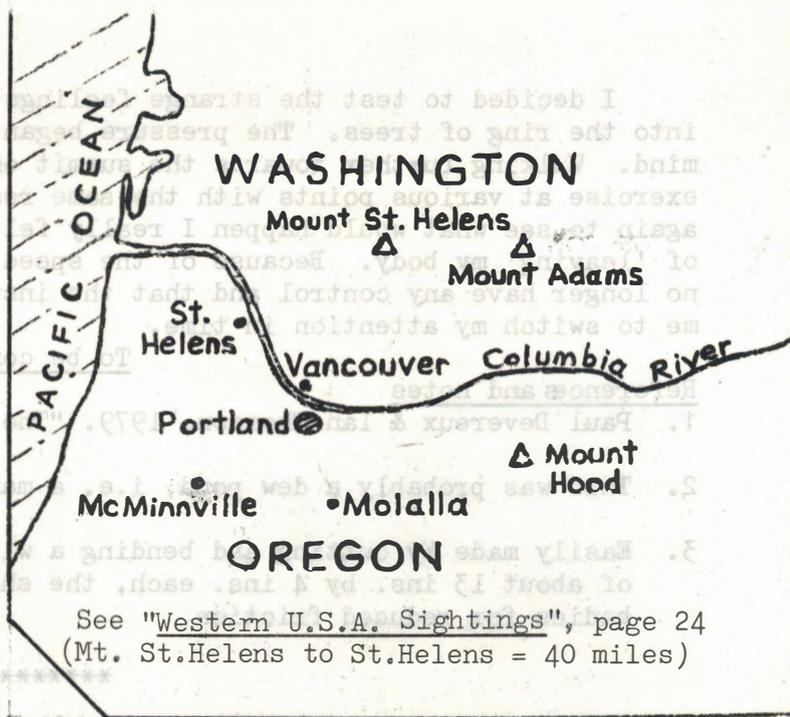

"That was early this morning. By 3 p.m. it was higher in the sky and more easterly, and it seemed to measure 270mm. across (over 10½ inches)."

Also in the sky was a large greyish craft, but whether this was the cause of Bob's vision, or it just happened to be present on that other 'world', is a matter of conjecture.

The next event is just as baffling, and was part of an experience that lasted for 2½ hours - an unusually long time:

One evening in August 1980 Bob was driving home from Stowmarket, Suffolk, and while on the A45 dual carriageway his "mind switched to a new dimension." The A45 became one road for one-way traffic with great inward-curving stone arches lining both sides of it (fig. 5). At the same time as these arches suddenly became visible, strange vehicles in the shape of cars and trucks came rushing by, but they were without wheels! These vehicles were also visible when Bob was confronted with the aforementioned tunnel.

At this stage it should be made known that all these strange sights appeared superimposed on our real world so that both worlds, if you like, were visible, but with the unknown world dominating Bob's perception of the exterior scenery. Bob admits that these situations would be very dangerous if he was unable to see the real world while driving, although to do so he has to "dismantle" the unknown images or forcibly "switch them off."

Now it has been suggested by some that Bob is experiencing a form of schizophrenia, but if this is so would he be able to see his other self, who, by the way, has some odd physical features? And what form of mental disorder also produces the unknown voices Bob often detects inside his head, voices which speak in strange tongues although on occasion have spoken in intelligible English? These are symptoms far more assignable to the UFO phenomenon.

For some time Bob has suspected that a certain percentage of his down-to-earth visions are being produced by his own mind, for thoughts of past events are sometimes turned into pictures - often in colour. Now Bob can take some comfort from the fact that Dr. Nikola Tesla, the genius and great inventor, suffered very similar visions, for during childhood "when a word was spoken, the image of the object designated would present itself so vividly that I could not tell whether what I saw was real or not..." Tesla would pass his hand through the image in front of him, which remained unaffected. Here the similarity ends, however, for other pictures Bob sees are firmly believed to originate from an external source, although distinguishing between the two is sometimes difficult. In Bob's opinion, the external influence was greatly accentuated by his previous major UFO encounter of 1976 when a beam of whitish light emitted by this object struck him in the face. He further believes that during this encounter a part of his mind was exchanged with that of an entity thought to be the one now inhabiting his body!

If the situation isn't already confusing enough, Bob has lately found the tasks he sees this other entity performing to be very mundane and familiar, for they are roughly the same as we here on earth perform - eating, writing, etc. Bob therefore wonders if he is being shown life similar to ours but on another world, life which as time goes by he sees "getting more complex."

Throughout Bob's case run characteristics typical of the global UFO phenomenon, and therefore he may be just another participant in what seems to amount to a great and serious global plan for the future of earth's inhabitants. Bob's mind, as we have seen, displays some virtually unique qualities, and like so many other people all over the world who possess what we might describe as finely tuned minds, he is particularly amenable to the unknown forces or intelligences producing UFO phenomena. As for Bob's actual role in the plan and the plan's end result, well, these are questions unlikely to be positively answered for some years to come.

OUR RELATIONSHIP TO ANCIENT ASTRONAUTS, by Dr. Ronald P. Anjard

At one time, Bigfoot was a curiosity only of the American Northwest. Later, we learned of the Indian name, known by them for a long period, being Sasquach. Over several years, sightings were reported in many other parts of the United States including Indiana, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and the Carolinas. The American creatures are sometimes reported to be violent and usually distinguished by a strong unpleasant odor. These creatures are very similar to the famous Yetis or "abominable snowmen" of the Himalayas. They too appear to be a combination of human and ape features, tall - eight feet, and also covered with brown hair. They leave human-like footprints just like their American counterparts. According to a Tibetan lama, Lobsang Rampa, the Yeti are actually a spin-off from the human race. Afraid of past wars, they fled from civilization. Rampa reports that the Yetis evolved down from "man". Other similar creatures have been reported in Malaysia, East Asia, Australia, Tasmania and even China and Russia.

In New Zealand, there are three types of unusual creatures. The "Maeroeios" are savage beings, covered with long hair, who lived in the mountains. The "Aitanga-a-nuku-mai-tore" are reportedly "one degree advanced from the animal level". They dwelt in the trees. The "Yowies" literally scare the aborigines because they are carnivorous - killing and eating the aborigines. The "Yowies" also exude a strong unpleasant odor.

In another article this author reported that the Oahspe, written about 1890, describes the very early races of man. The earliest race did not walk upright as man does today, but had long arms and became extinct in time. The Oahspe indicates that extra-terrestrial visitors purposely mated with these creatures to advance them physically and intellectually. Thus subsequent races were hybrids of the first stage with "ancient astronauts".

This description is virtually the same creature shown by the eminent archeologist, Richard E. Leakey, in his book Origins. This early stage, known as "Ramapithecus", reportedly has been found in Asia, India, Africa and even the Mediterranean region. It looks remarkably like Sasquach, Bigfoot, Yeti and Yowie. An important note, in a book by B. Steiger, he reports that Sasquach creatures have a direct relationship to UFOs, and that the Indians in the area not only know this but actually support the creatures with food.

This information suggests that the earliest stage did not become absolutely extinct. These could be ancient ancestors from a period thirteen million years ago. This even suggests that we are now a "super-hybrid" race and have a special relationship to ancient astronauts as our ancient ancestors.

CRASHED SAUCERS' OCCUPANTS: DR. HURTAK REVEALS SOME FACTS

.....from Borderland Sciences Research Association comes further information taken from the talk on 14th April, 1979 - "UFOs and Advanced Civilizations in Space" by Dr. J. Hurtak, Sedona, Arizona, sponsored by Lehmann W. Hisey:-

"I wish to share with you specific biological information regarding the physical bodies that were removed from space vehicles that crashed in New Mexico, Arizona and Mexico proper in the late 40s and 50s. I wish to point out at this time an event which occurred in 1946, one year prior to official UFO studies, when a space vehicle crashed just outside Great Falls, Montana.

One of my colleagues was part of the Air Force retrieval team that carried out the bodies. The bodies were shipped to the Edwards Air Force Base facility in California. It was determined the green hue on the bodies was due to the nature of the chemistry of the fuel system. After extensive studies the bodies were put on dry ice and sealed in aluminium canisters.

Obviously this subject matter was placed in an area even beyond Top Secret classification, which cannot even be touched by computer information sources.

In the early 50s President Eisenhower asked Winston Churchill if this matter should be brought before the public - that there are physical evidences of extra-terrestrial bodies held in military captivity. And Churchill replied that the Western world was not prepared for it. So, due to conditions that the Air Force could not control the air space over North America, due to the various philosophies of science that did not accept parapsysics, did not accept post-Einsteinian mathematics, it was decided not to make this matter public. However, things have changed after 30 years of conditioning and I share with you in part the details of what is connected with physical specimens.

The approximate height of most specimens is between $3\frac{1}{2}$ and $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet. The head, by human standards, is large in comparison with its body. Facial features show a pair of eyes described as large, sunken or deeply set, far apart or distended more than the human and slightly slanted as oriental or mongoloid. No ear lobes or apertures on the side of the head were seen. The nose is vague. The apertures or holes are indicated with a slight protuberance. One or two holes have been mentioned. The mouth area is described as a small slit or fissure. In some instances there is no mouth at all. It appears not to function as a means for communication or for food. The neck area is described as being thin, in some instances as not being visible at all because of the tightly knit garment. The hair? Most observers describe these humanoids as hairless. Some bodies, however, have a slight hair patch atop the head. Others appear with what appears to be like a silver skullcap.

There were no breathing attachments or communication devices. This suggests telepathy with higher intelligence. In one instance there was an opening in the right frontal lobe area, revealing a crystalline network. This implies the development of a third brain. Just as we have the extended reticular formation in the cerebral cortex, a second brain (the arousal center at the top of the spine) for advanced mathematical functions, the extraterrestrial humanoids appear to have in a section of the brain a crystalline network which gives them the capacity to work with the multiple human language system of this planet, and thousands of other planetary systems.

The arms are described as long and thin, reaching down to the knee section. The hands each contained four fingers with no thumbs. Three fingers are longer than the others. Some are very long. Others are very short. No description is available of the legs and feet. Some pathologists indicate that that section of the body was not developed as we would anticipate, showing that some of these beings were adapted to life in the water, the ocean. There was a webbing effect between the fingers on most of the specimens. According to most observers the skin is grey. Some claim it is beige, tan or pinkish grey. One stated it was almost bluish-grey under deep freeze light. Mind you the bodies are kept at military installations. The official seals and call letters (in computer listing?) are changed from time to time, which means that no official or scientist can speak publicly in support of the evidence without a team effort, obviously because the signs and seals and even the morgue can be changed.

Now we come to the reproductive organs. Listen very carefully. This biological region is sensitive. That is to say, secret. One observer claims no male or female organs were identified. No phallus, no womb. In my non-professional judgement, the absence of sexual organs suggested some of the aliens, or perhaps all, do not reproduce as the humans. Perhaps they use a method of cloning.

In some instances of retrieval the humanoids appear to be from a mould, sharing identical racial and biological characteristics. There is no blood as we know it, but there is a fluid. I call your attention to an ancient Greek text that refers to the Ekor, or the grey, greyish fluid that exists within the body of the Visitors.

There are several medical centres in the Eastern United States that are now conducting specialized research. I anticipate, in years to come, chromosome analysis of the bodies, and a collective statement made by a team of scientists will bring out information showing four different racial types of intelligence that have visited our planet. Yet I wish to state that these humanoids are not on the level of the ultra-terrestrial beings of 'Light', those known historically as the Benai Or, the Brothers of Light, those who have graduated beyond this stage of three dimensional evolution. And so we'll talk about both the extraterrestrial physical, who are two to three technological evolutions in front of us, and those who are simply beyond the Galactic paradise - those who combine themselves in multiple waves, those who are multi-dimensional. They are behind the Galactic cleanup that is taking place as the government of extraterrestrial intelligence is being changed. This is caused largely by the great irresponsibility that has been exercised on this and other planets, resulting in a history of religious wars, inquisition, genocide - you name it! Is this history? Is this a planet? The question is not whether Higher Intelligence exists but whether higher intelligence exists on this planet! We have to look very carefully at the myths behind the myths, and the science behind the science..."

BRSA Editor, Riley Crabb comments:-

"It was the Army Air Force in 1946. Hurtak's revelation confirms what was obvious in the Maury Island encounter of the third kind in 1947 - the granddaddy of all Flying Saucer sightings. The Army Air Force intelligence service already had solid, 3-D evidence of the reality of Flying Saucers in the Great Falls crash of the year before. When Lt. Frank Brown of Military Intelligence stepped into Ken Arnold's Tacoma hotel room, July 31, 1947, to take a look at the Maury Island Flying Saucer fragments, he was already with the Cover-up. The "Silence policy" on Flying Saucers had already been well established. Brown treated the fragments with disdain, but nevertheless he very carefully gathered them all up to take back to his Hamilton Field base with him. Then when Arnold and his fellow reluctant UFO researcher, Smith, learned that Brown's bomber had crashed on the way back to the AAFB, they were chilled with a brief glimpse of a war already raging overhead, the war for the control of the planet."

Price £5.25.

Although just one of a growing number of accounts concerned with the abduction of human beings by extra-terrestrials, this case is noteworthy from the point of view of the number of people reported abducted - a family of three adults and two children.

The story goes that late one evening in the summer of 1978 as this family was motoring home along a little-used road in rural Oxfordshire, they beheld a strange object in the sky, and, after parking the car, were escorted aboard a large, saucer-shaped craft by silver-suited people.

Once inside the family was split up, various crew members taking them to different parts of the craft for a mixture of medical examinations, guided tours and film shows. The films depicted the occupants' home world of Janos and the happy life they had had there until giant meteorites struck their nuclear power plants, which totally contaminated the surface.

Members of the family were given to understand that Janos's survivors were now looking for a new planet on which to live, and earth, their original home untold millenia ago, had been chosen - should we humans agree to their sharing our world, that is.

Nearly one hour later the family was returned to their car and allowed to continue the journey home, a journey marked with a high degree of strangeness, confusion and amnesia - all very common in abduction cases.

Only upon arrival home was the time discrepancy discovered, but it was to be many months before help was sought and hypnosis used to recall the events of that unusual trip home.

Although I found this an interesting and sincerely reported case, there is little doubt that the story of a catastrophe on Janos and that of millions of their people awaiting a home on earth is a deception, for many of these alleged visitors from beyond are presenting us with a considerable amount of falsehood with snippets of the truth intermixed. For the author to accept, therefore, everything the family was told as fact shows an unusual degree of credulity.

In view of the foregoing, one should now really ask if the abduction itself truly took place, or if it was just an hallucination planted by some unknown intelligence(s). This, however, is an impossible question to answer (although we all have our views) and it applies to every abduction case reported, but whoever or whatever is behind the stories' origins, the extra-terrestrial viewpoint dominates the scene, and it may be that our belief in this is one of the main objectives behind a significant part of the UFO phenomenon.

"The Janos People", is a gold mine of detail and should not be discarded because of its author's beliefs, for the facts - as the family recalls them - are all there.

"WORLD MESSAGES FOR THE COMING DECADE: A COSMIC SYMPOSIUM"

Guardian Action Publications (USA) Third edition, February 1981. Pp.80.
Spiral-bound. Price $4.50.

This monumental work, mentally received through one 'Tuella' during a seven-day vigil in the mountains of New Mexico, has, we are told, been planned for some time by the Hierarchy (Jesus is but one member of this highly evolved and benevolent fraternity) and consists of 27 messages to mankind from as many communicators, among whom are El Morya, Lord Maitreya, Lord Kuthumi, The Elohim, Lord Michael, etc.

The messages are divided into four sections - World Chaos, World Changes, World Guardians and World Deliverance - with the basic, overall message to us all being one that has been touched upon at times by various contactees: planet earth is in a very bad way and on all fronts, and man, the cause of earth's plight due to his wrong thinking, must very quickly prepare himself for major global changes which will 'wipe the slate clean'. For many, however, who are judged 'worthy', there is promised salvation for the next (cleansed) earth.

Prospective purchasers with virtually no knowledge of this type of work will, of course, wonder if it is little more than science fiction, and perhaps the result of some psychosis. Now, although I feel inclined to say this certainly does not appear to be the case, to respond in favour of these messages being genuine in both origin and content would demand some sort of evidence and not just a personal opinion. However, for those who believe fore-knowledge of the future is possible then these messages may have some meaning despite their incredible origin. Also, let's not forget the theory that global catastrophies obliterated ancient but advanced civilisations, for (who knows?) these early peoples may have been receiving the same messages and other phenomena that we do today... and for the most part ignoring them, no doubt!

For many, of course, these messages will sound like nonsense, and for these people I can only comment in Tuella's words: "Read not to contradict, nor to believe and take for granted, but to weigh and consider."

For those who care to read their Bible, a summary of prophesied near-future events can be found in St. Matthew, Chapter 24.

"THE ROSWELL INCIDENT", by Charles Berlitz and William Moore.
Granada, 1981. Pp. 176. Price £5.95 (paperback, £1.25).

Charles Berlitz, of course, is well known for his excellent works on the Bermuda Triangle, the evidence he cites being reasonably convincing. His latest work, however, of a flying saucer alleged to have come down on July 7, 1947 near Roswell, New Mexico, lacks on-the-spot investigating at the time of the event, for most of the relatively few witnesses - both civilian and Army Air Force - have only recently been discovered - some 30 years later!

Numerous stories of crashed saucers exist in various countries, of course, but, like the widely reported transitory UFOs, no material or other firm evidence (nothing but the craft and occupants could be considered firm evidence) is forthcoming.

A common feature in virtually every one of these cases is that of the army who manage to quickly cart both saucer and (often) occupants away to a secret base where A1 security is maintained, bystanders and other witnesses to the affair being swiftly silenced... but perhaps, as this book indicates, not indefinitely.

To be fair, Berlitz and Moore have carried out their investigations as well as can be expected, and although their evidence is dated it is sufficient to be regarded as a fair indication that the cover-up campaign known to operate within military establishments extends a good deal further than just UFO sightings.

A good book and well worth reading.

"SUPPOSED AND INCREDIBLE INVENTIONS", by John Freeman. 2nd revised edition April '79. Pp.72. Prices: Book US $7.95 plus postage / Report style with no cover US $4.95(3½ ozs.) Available from: FRY'S, 22511 Markham, Perris, C.A. 92370, U.S.A.

This is the book for budding inventors, engineers and indeed all people with a thirst for knowledge. The book fulfils its title, with weird and wonderful inventions and discoveries crammed on to every page, often illustrated by photo's or meticulous drawings. The drawings are rather small (but readable) on our Report style review copy, whereas the book itself is probably of higher quality production.

John Freeman introduces his book thus:

"The more radical concepts in this work have good company in the 'Buck Rodgers' of yesterday,.. yet they too will be but 'tinker toy' technology to the material changes of the future. Some of the more radical concepts here may be incorrect... but the goal is the thing of importance. References to some of the exotic technology of the past has been included to help kindle an interest in these areas. In the recurring cycles of life, know that legends will live again and today's dreams will become the reality of our tomorrows. The 'when will be up to you.' (Note. The publisher has manuscripts, yet unprinted, which can later fill in many details of the goal and potential). J.F."

Chapters include: "Super Mileage Autos & Fuel Systems", "Incredible & Unusual Motors", "Unusual & Free Energy Systems", "Unusual Machines & Inventions", "Unusual Concepts & Principles".

I found the chapter entitled "Flight & Anti-Gravity Concepts" very interesting as it contains diagrams of patented models, including UFO flight concepts. There is lots more very interesting UFO material in the book. Also, many alternative energy innovations, including mind power, etc.

A fascinating publication!

"OUR COSMIC HERITAGE", by Chris Francis. 1980. Pp.143.Hardback. Price £3.25 plus postage (weight 9 ozs.) Available from: Rainbow Age, 18 Shore Road, London, E9 7TA. (or Libraries and Bookshops).

"Our Cosmic Heritage" refers to the wisdom preserved and handed down by the ancient Mystery Schools, from the earliest recorded times on our planet. Chris Francis offers his personal interpretations of this ancient wisdom in relation to our modern everyday lives. He also examines certain passages from the Bible, etc., although he pushes no particular religion - believing in reincarnation and other Eastern concepts also. I think Mr. Francis writes from a very enlightened point of view and has much to offer to a spiritually enquiring person, (whether one accepts his ideas, or not).

Chris Francis says:

"There is a strong bond between God, man and other creations. This relationship is binding through eternity. Man can ignore this union but he cannot escape from it.

Is it possible for God to give man life, if life does not serve a purpose? A physical body without life is useless. To extract the best from life, biological needs and cosmic consciousness are equally important.

Soul, mind and body are God's gifts to us. Carefully blended and transformed, the invisible and visible manifestations become our greatest assets. Those who achieve this transformation attract sublime serenity and sooner or later are reabsorbed into the cosmic. They have no need for rebirths and earthly problems.

Man can postpone Christo-Centric union and vision, to his detriment but he cannot avoid them."

The aim of this book is to show how we can progress up the spiral of evolution, in our lives, and the author offers advice and encouragement. He stresses that: "Persistence and sacrifice are essential to ensure wisdom and immortality".

I find this a stimulating little book - different to the usual spiritual-type books one usually comes across. Nicely bound and printed also.

Gloria Saville.

"ARE WE BEING WATCHED?", by Janet and Colin Bord. Angus and Robertson, 1980. Pp.96. Hardback, Illustrated. Price £3.95.

This is one of the most recent books by Janet and Colin Bord, who investigate diverse intriguing subjects, (their previous book was entitled "Alien Animals") all of which many people, including myself, suspect are closely related, if we could only fit the pieces together of this cosmic jigsaw.

"Are We Being Watched" covers UFO sightings and experiences by children up to the age of 16 years, from all over the world. It contains many interesting true accounts, with some nice drawings, to give a fair selection of UFO types and entities witnessed.

UFOs are often drawn to children - to watch or be watched - I wonder?

There is also a chapter entitled "Where do they come from?" which covers much current popular thought on the UFO enigma.

This book is very nicely produced, (with a striking UFO sighting, in colour, on the front cover) and would make an ideal purchase or gift for anyone for an introduction to the subject, as the UFO phenomenon appears the same for children and adults.

UFO NEWS AND EVENTS AROUND THE WORLD

Mother Earth's Flying Saucers Psychologists at Laurentian University, Canada, believe they've found a correlation between UFOs and minor earthquakes. After contacting the U.S. Bureau of Mines in Colorado, a Dr. Brady was found to be studying underground rock bursts and their associated phenomena.

When quartz-bearing rock broke up, Brady noticed minute balls of light - short-lived, but as intense as lightning. During the micro-second of their existence, they might streak away, hover and then move again... tiny UFOs!

The Chinese call the full-sized version seen during earthquakes "earthquake lights", and spectacular UFO sightings are reported from California, which is split by the San Andreas Fault, thereby providing an explanation.

Iran: UFOs Interfere. Teheran - Appearances of UFOs are increasing in number in the skies of Iran and have on occasion given the Iranian Air Force cause to employ its anti-aircraft weapons. In Tabriz, in Azerbaidjan, the Air Force fired on a luminous object which promptly disappeared.

A UFO "resembling a rainbow" has been seen for forty-five minutes at Heydarabad, as well as in Azerbaidjan. The object revolved on its axis before disappearing. Another appearance at Chahrizba and at Kaadj was "a luminous object bigger than the moon, in the shape of a semi-circle and light green in colour". The object grew paler as it also grew in size.

Last week the Minister of the Interior opened an office to allow the populace to report any "suspicious activities of aerial or luminous objects".

Western U.S.A. Sightings (see map, page 14) While UFO activity in any one country may vary greatly from year to year, there always seems to be considerable activity somewhere in the U.S.A., and many newsclippings received by "Earthlink" over the past nine months or so tell of a preponderance of sightings in the western states and particularly around the recently eruptive (May 1980) Mount St. Helens, Washington area where Bigfoot's presence has also lately been evident (many other states have had sightings of UFOs and Bigfoot during this time, however). UFOs seen in the Pacific coastal states up to the time of writing - June 1981 - have been triangular and disc-shaped, balls of fire and coloured lights, while events such as brilliant flashes and glows, detonations and earthquakes have been experienced mainly in California and Oregon. Now although some of these events may be due to natural geological and atmospheric phenomena, many witnesses there believe the bulk of UFOs sighted are extra-terrestrial craft, which some researchers feel are attracted by the energy unleashed in this earthquake zone.

An interesting report worth relating occurred at 4.10 a.m. on March 17, 1981, outside St. Helens, Oregon where police officers and others witnessed two orange balls hovering near the Columbia River and emitting a strange whining noise. At least one object was eventually seen to dive into the river, but nothing more was seen of them although an hour later the weird noise was heard again, for by this time a thick fog had developed and prevented anything being seen.

A more incredible report told of a 53 year-old man named F.B. Moore who claimed a ride in a spaceship. Moore lives alone in the foothills near Molalla, Oregon, and on the evening of March 29, 1981 a large glowing object landed in his yard, panicking the farm animals and at the same time 'freezing' Moore to the spot. A "man" then appeared through a hatch and said there was a small repair job to be done to his "ship." However, before leaving the man invited Moore aboard for "a ride," but because Moore hesitated in accepting he found three of the ship's occupants hauling both he and his dog inside the craft.

Apparently the first stop was the Moon where the ship landed and the occupants gathered rocks, which Moore said were like "lava." He was then taken for a tour "arouhd a couple of other planets or moons" before being returned to his home. The man told Moore his home was some two hours after departure, a long way from Earth and they were planetary explorers. Amazingly, Moore soon found his arthritis had cleared and the sight in his dog's one blind eye was fully restored again!

While the newspaper reporter who took this story remains unconvinced, many facts related by Moore agree with those of other contactees.

A not-so-happy ending befell two middle-aged women and a child - this time in a state far removed from Oregon. On December 29, 1980 as these people were driving along a lonely road near Houston, Texas, a brilliant object appeared ahead of them. Upon stopping the car, a searing wave of heat was emitted and the women felt compelled to get out, although only one did so. After some 15 minutes the object drifted away and the women continued their journey, but after only three miles "a terrible roaring sound" commenced and the light returned together with 23 helicopter-like objects which circled it! After a time both objects and light vanished. Later headaches, huge boils, impaired eyesight, cataracts and sunburn were sustained together with the loss of a good deal of the woman's hair (a press photo shows this clearly). A doctor quickly diagnosed radiation poisoning, and the woman affected most has gone into seclusion.

To conclude this short series of reports we return to the state of Oregon where on May 29, 1981, a "possible UFO" was found on the beach of the small Pacific coastal town of Newport, which lies some 60 miles S.W. of McMinnville.

According to a report by police Chief Larry Spencer, a citizen reported the object at about 2.30 a.m. saying that it was 20ft. by 6ft. and "glowed" when kicked. Two police officers who subsequently arrived at the scene couldn't identify it and they mentioned no "glowing" effect; neither could they tell if it was metal or wood. When daylight came an officer returned to find the object gone, although Spencer felt it might have been washed out to sea.

The mystery, as always, continues.

Riddle of 100 UFOs A probe has been launched into more UFO sightings in an area where there are two nuclear power stations. In the same area - the Scottish Borders - 12 people have died in mystery plane crashes.

Mrs. Mary Watson and Mrs. Joyce Byers, both of Annandale Road, Moffat, Dumfries, have logged the series of UFOs in a diary provided by Eskdalemuir Observatory. They are convinced the Moffat Hills are a "base" for flying saucers. And they believe there is a link with the fact that two nuclear stations, Chapelcross and Windscale are not far away.

Mrs. Byers said: "We have noted everything from swirling, saucer-shaped objects to orange and red triangles."

Mr. Stuart Campbell of the British UFO Research Association said: "Inquiries are being made as the two women concerned are not the sort to make up stories."

"Daily Star" (UK), May 13, 1981.

Morning Visit Mystery A day-time sighting of an UFO, which allowed one witness to approach within 20ft., has been reported from Upper Swaledale. The circular object, two feet across and nine inches deep, was reported to have hovered close to the ground at Pepper Hall Farm in Arkengarthdale, "for several minutes" before disappearing.

It was seen at 9.50 on Thursday by the farmer, Mr. Clark Stones, 45, his wife Greta, 43, and Mr. Stanley Watson, 47, a friend from Stockton-on-Tees.

All three agreed on the size of the object which appeared to be made of a very shiny metal.

Mr. Watson said he approached the object as it was hovering a few yards each way along the line of the fence, but as he came nearer it moved back five yards then climbed vertically and silently into the sky.

Saucer caught in Fishing Line... but later destroyed*

... unidentified objects around Ulster have not been confined to the air. One of the biggest mysteries of recent years happened a few years ago when a Carrickfergus man was out fishing in Belfast Lough, but he caught more than fish! Watson Kernohan - a prominent joinery merchant in the town - suddenly felt a huge tug on his line that almost stalled the engine by its force. When Watson and a companion pulled in the line they discovered a large saucer-shaped device with legs and antennae about six feet in diameter. None of them had ever seen anything like it before, and with considerable effort they managed to haul it on board the boat and take it ashore.

The contraption was a blue-green colour and was apparently made of something like fibreglass. Yet it was far too heavy for fibreglass.

Safely back on dry land he brought it to his joinery yard and contacted the Air Force and Navy in a bid to find the owner.

Experts from both services and the Royal National Lifeboat Institution came on several occasions to inspect the 'catch'... but after two years no one was able to tell Watson what he had got tangled up in his fishing gear that day.

And it lay forlornly beached in the Carrick joiner's yard until two years ago when Watson put a match to it, and the device went up in smoke.

Whether it was something planted by the Russians or the only Irish evidence of extra-terrestrial interest, nobody will ever be able to say.

Do you believe in 'mutes'? They do.

David Perkins and Carl Seawell of Farisita, Colo., say in four years of studying cattle mutilations in the southwest, they have only two plausible explanations left. The first is extraterrestrials, beings from outer space who drop in now and then to gather some bovine tissue.

The second is a kind of mass psychosis - a collective imagination - which is filling the gap left by the disillusionment with traditional religions. If the mass psychosis theory is correct, Perkins and Seawell have been pulled in, too. In their years of studying and photographing the supposed mutilations, they've come across several things that they can't explain.

These include clamp marks on the back legs of cattle, signs indicating the animals had been dropped from a short distance, an absence of footprints or blood, reports of lights in the sky, predators which avoid the carcasses, cameras and tape records which don't work right and evidence of drugs in the carcasses.

Perkins describes himself as a freelance writer, and says he has sold one story on mutilations - or "mutes," as he calls them - to New West Magazine. After a couple of years of informal study of these occurrences, he and Seawell formed Animal Mutilations Probe, a non-profit organization devoted to collecting information on mutilations.

Perkins said the peak year for cattle mutilations in the United States was 1975, when thousands were reported in 22 separate states.

Perkins and Seawell say cattle mutilations in this country may seem less frequent because ranchers are increasingly reluctant to report them, police agencies less eager to investigate them and newspaper reporters too cynical to write about them.

Ken Rommel, the former FBI agent who was hired with a special federal grant to investigate the mysterious happenings in northern New Mexico, prefers to keep possible mutilations "low key," Perkins said. "He didn't want to cause a panic, like in Colorado in 1975, when people were taking shots at helicopters."

Perkins also said he has discounted theories that the animals are butchered by scientists who need tissue for biological experiments or by satanic cultists who need organs for their ceremonies. Legitimate scientists wouldn't have to resort to such devious means and no cult would have the sophistication required to pull off the mutilations without being detected, he said.

The mass psychosis theory was once espoused by Swiss psychologist* Carl Jung to explain the frequent reports of flying saucers, Perkins said. "He said the saucer shapes were symbols of unity, the need that we feel for a wholeness, the collective need for religious salvation."

Update - Since August 1979, cattle in various Canadian provinces have been new targets for the mutilators, but even the RCMP, who generally "get their man", have totally failed to apprehend the culprits.

Ken Rommel, the former FBI agent, published his findings in April 1980 following much alleged research and lab work. His conclusions, reached on a $50,000 Law Enforcement Administration grant, leave much to be desired for he puts the cattle deaths down to wild animals and natural causes. This has left everyone - particularly the 'hit' ranchers who know otherwise - far from satisfied as they feel he's ignorant of a cow's biology and hasn't looked into 'classic' cases (or has been instructed to produce a bogus report!).

Apart from sporadic outbursts, the mutilators have since been keeping a reasonably low profile.

Mammoth Cabbages, Onions : Mexican Farmer's Own Secret

Valle De Santiago, Mexico Jose Carmen Garcia, an illiterate peasant farmer, has been deluged with questions about how he produces 60-pound cabbages, 10-pound onions, radishes the size of footballs and collard greens the size of palm fronds.

Naturally, the Dept. of Agriculture soon became interested and challenged Garcia to a crop-growing contest. In December 1978, two 25-acre plots side by side were allocated, one for Garcia, the other for the Dept. who used the most modern techniques. Garcia produced 106 tons of vegetables/acre compared to the Dept's 30 under identical conditions.

How does Garcia do it? In 1947, Garcia related, he was 17 and struggling to exist on his three-acre farm. One day he met a stranger - another peasant - who told Garcia he had been held captive by tall, fair humanoids in a tunnel beneath a nearby volcano. He said these people spoke an unknown tongue and lived on gigantic vegetables, and when released he was given a formula (on paper) which consisted of a series of geometric designs. If Garcia studied the designs, the stranger said, the message would become clear, which it did after several days. Garcia planted seeds and watched in awe as they grew into crops of monstrous dimensions.

Garcia has refused to divulge his secret,* although he will say that "a farmer must change his mentality before he can change the size of his produce." Arredondo, a local half-owner of the Garcia farm, said the seeds are energized before planting and the secret has been given to the San Jose Rosicrucian Order. (Ed.)

A U.F.O. Above Brussels?

A reader of Uccle (a suburb of Brussels), Mr. G.V.d.W, sent us the above photograph* which he took not far from the Vivier d'Oie, Sunday, around 6 or 6.15 p.m. (local time).

Does it show what one calls a U.F.O., popularly known as a flying saucer?

Another reader, Mr. J.L., of Berchem-Sainte-Agathe (another suburb of Brussels) telephoned us to mention the passage of an object "of a circular shape" whilst he was driving along the Avenue Charles Quint as he was returning from the coast where he had spent the weekend.

The object - the observation of both readers agree on this point, though they each give a slightly different description - seems therefore to have travelled at a great speed in a south-east to north-west direction over Uccle, St. Gilles, Molenbeek and Ganshoren.

According to Mr. V.d.W., the object was silent and did not fly at a very great altitude. It was of a dark colour "a little like a clay pigeon". According to Mr. J.L., this object travelled "at a variable speed"; it accelerated during the few seconds during which he was able to observe it. He affirmed that he has sufficient knowledge about aviation to exclude the hypothesis of a plane.

According to the I.R.M. (Royal Meteorological Institute), "No abnormal phenomena was reported at that time at that place".

Nevertheless, with Mr. V.d.W's permission, if a reader can explain this phenomenon or complete our information, he may write to us (The Editor, "Le Soir", Place de Louvain, 21, 1000 Brussels, Belgium).

The photograph in the "Le Soir" shows a disc-shaped object above the observer's house. The object is less dark and well defined than the antenna on the roof and appears quite small, three points that seem to indicate that it was already a certain distance away before the observer was able to take the photograph.

A "Robot" Dog Sighted in Spain

Madrid - A Spanish family states that during the night of February 12 to 13, they sighted a "robot" that came down from an UFO, the incident occurring in the small city of Fuentecen, Burgos province, 200 Km. north of Madrid.

Madrid's evening newspaper "Pueblo" published an interview with one witness - Mr. Luis Dominguez, owner of a bar. That night, at about 4.00 a.m., Mr. Dominguez had just closed and was returning home with his wife and son when all three saw, in a nearby meadow, an object which emitted two red lights.

"The night was dark," recalled the witness. "Suddenly we heard some steps: it was a parallelepiped-shaped robot. It was about 140 cm high and 70 cm large(?). It barked as our dogs do but more slowly."

Is the Earth Hollow?

In 1926, the US government sent an expedition to the North Pole, led by Admiral Richard E. Byrd. In 1929, a newsreel of the expedition shown in all US cinemas showed mountains, trees, rivers and animals. Admiral Byrd thought he had landed on another planet. An optical illusion of an island in the sky caused by reflection of the Earth's surface on the sky has been observed by many polar expeditions.

Admiral Byrd discovered 17 lakes in the Arctic, two of them free of ice, with both blue and green waters. Both lakes were so bright that it appeared there was something under the surface reflecting the colors. An ancient legend tells of the existence of an Arctic city called Rainbow City which was built thousands of years ago, even before the great flood. In the Arctic, the further north you travel the weather gets warmer. Why? Even warm blooded animals have been caught in the Arctic region. How is it possible?

A large area of snow there is often found covered in a black substance, yet there are no active volcanoes in the Arctic. Where does this substance come from? A number of explorers have come across snow of various colors - Pink, red, blue, green and yellow. Where does it come from? Some of this snow contains a vegetable matter not found anywhere on our earth. Where does it come from?

Over the past few years, photographs taken by satellites have picked up what appears to be holes in both the North and South Poles. Entrances to the hollow earth society?

All over the world unknown creatures have been sighted, including the Yeti, Big Foot, Sasquatch and Yowie. Where do they come from? Inside the earth?

J.R.R. Tolkien described a race of beings inside the earth in his million seller book Lord of the Rings. Where did his ideas come from?

Author Richard S. Shaver in 1944 wrote that he believed the Earth is inhabited underground and claimed that nearly 12,000 years ago a race was forced from the surface by deadly rays from the sun. There existed two races of beings called the Dero and the Tero; the Teros were intelligent, while the Deros were midget idiots. The Teros managed to maintain a high state of mental awareness and had incredible machines such as vision rays, which could penetrate through miles of solid rock, picking up scenes from all over the Earth's surface. They could also instantly teleport anything from one point to another over thousands of miles and had machines which caused solid illusions, dreams. Even more amazing, they possessed ben rays, which could heal and restore any part of the body.

In the 12th century, a man in England discovered a young man and girl climbing out of a cave in Suffolk. Both were green and they were wearing strange clothing of an unknown texture. As the years passed, their skin color slowly disappeared. The male died after a short period, but it is thought the girl may still be alive, as their bodies never aged. They said they were from St. Martin's Land, where no sun rose and there was no open sunlight.

Recently a man reported in Australia that he was taken aboard a UFO and visited a society living beneath the surface of the earth. He claimed the UFO entered an old electromagnetic shaft, descending 800 miles into the Earth's core. The shaft was fitted with a number of elevators on its outer wall and which then crossed to a number of small, underground cities.

The weather was hot and humid and it rained almost every day in short cycles, although it was permanent daytime. There were also a number of blue holes which connected the inner and outer oceans together, the man reported. He said dinosaurs were plentiful and were there to protect any surface people from entering. (This may be where the Loch Ness monster and the monster recently sighted off the coast of New Zealand comes from).

In the hollow Earth society, the males were not fertile beings and the females could only bear children during certain cycles. Their food was similar to our society although there were many fruits unknown on the surface of earth and the people don't eat meat of any kind.

A number of the people of the hollow Earth society don't eat food at all, as they have no digestive organs, instead they feed themselves directly into their bloodstream with a special substance which leaves no by-products in their body.

There appears to be so much written on the hollow Earth society, yet will we ever discover material evidence to prove their existence. In fact, it is highly possible that there exists several other civilisations upon the surface of the Earth, but in other dimensions.

One day in the near future we may discover how to unlock all these other dimensions, but first, I think we should learn to live in peace in our own world.

Did the UFOs cut the Power over Venezuela?

Caracas - A Venezuelan electricity company has admitted that it has not been able to determine the cause of the gigantic power failure that deprived a large part of the country of light during the night of 30th and 31st December.

According to the press, some unidentified flying objects were responsible for this failure, numerous reports of sightings of UFOs having been registered after the power-cut.

Officials of the Caracas Observatory have discounted as fantasies claims that UFOs were behind this mysterious blackout.

They have not in the meantime been able to 'confirm or deny' the existence of UFOs, having insufficient means of detection.

"Le Parisien" (France), January 9, 1979.
(N.B. There were sightings all over Great Britain on 31st December, following closely on the heels of sightings over New Zealand and Australia as well as in other parts of the world. Also over Jerusalem on 3rd January 1979.)

'Kite-shaped' UFOs over the Antarctic*

Some unidentified flying objects have been seen by members of a Japanese expedition to the Antarctic, reported the Japanese newspaper "Asahi Shinbun".

The members of the expedition were on board a ship when, on the morning of 6th January, out of a very clear sky, three of them saw a mysterious flying object, stated the newspaper. It had the form of a 'European kite' and was flying at an altitude of 3000 to 5000 metres. According to one of the witnesses, the flying object flew horizontally and according to another, in a zigzag fashion. These two witnesses were both agreed, however, that the speed was considerable and its colour white or blue.

According to the newspaper, other members of the expedition and of the crew of the ship had later seen some identical objects, that an expert in aviation matters who also was on board, has not been able to identify.

A photo of these UFOs had also been taken.

Mystery Submarine Leaves Swedish Waters - Stockholm (Associated Press) The Swedish Navy said it has ended a futile three-week search for an elusive foreign submarine because the craft, first spotted September 18th, 1980, has apparently left Sweden's territorial waters. The last contact was made September 28th when a depth charge was fired in an attempt to force the intruder to the surface to be identified. The search engaged 600 men from the navy and the coast guard, 20 ships, and 8 helicopters and aircraft. The cost of the hunt was estimated at $700,000. Vice Admiral Bengt Schuback, chief of the defence staff, acknowledged it was embarrassing not to have been able to force the intruder to the surface for identification. Although the sub was believed to have been Russian or Polish, in London Western naval sources averred that all submarines of the Western Nato Alliance are accounted for and the Russians have not acknowledged that it is one of theirs. This is not the first time phantom subs have been chased in Scandinavian waters.

Down came a Shower of Little Green Frogs - Athens.

... the inhabitants of Nafplion, in southern Greece, woke up one morning recently to find it raining thousands of little green frogs.

Scientists at the Meteorological Institute in Athens believe the frogs, weighing no more than a few ounces each, were sucked up from north African marshes as a whirlwind passed over the area.

Then a fast air stream carried them 500 or 600 miles over the sea to Greece and there the little frogs came to earth again. Many of them remarkably escaped injury and have taken to their new home, keeping the local residents awake at night with incessant croaking.

Found - Footprints of a size 58 boot ... and marks of a Tripod in Sangonera la Verde (July ? 1979, Murcia province, Spain)

Together with other sightings judged to be of lesser importance, near Monteagudo and San Miguel de Salinas, students of UFO phenomena have found footprints of a giant foot that would have had to have worn a shoe at least 58 centimetres* long. Also, in the same place there appears to have been found three symmetrical marks that on flat land would form a triangle, which leads one to speculate that these belong to the tripod (landing gear) of an extra-terrestrial vehicle.

Ping-Pong Ball in Sky' Mystery

Peking - Eyewitness reports had been received from five places in Tibet on July 24 "of a bright object the size of a ping-pong ball surrounded by a ring of blue-white light moving from east to west at about 90 miles a minute," the New China news agency said yesterday.

The CHENGDU daily reported from Szechuan UFO sightings around the city and in some other areas the same night. These came almost four years to the day after similar reported sightings in Chengdu.

Secret of the South China Sea Triangle

Another Devil's Triangle, this one in the Far East, has been gobbling up ships for nearly 3,000 years, say experts. "The Bermuda Triangle is nothing compared to the South China Sea Triangle," says historian John Murphy, who teaches at the University of California at Los Angeles. "Ships have been vanishing in the area for thousands of years, and an island the size of Manhattan is reported to have been swallowed up by the sea - of something in it."

The feared area, bounded by Manila, Hong Kong and Taiwan, is said to have been the site of many unexplained disasters, including:

- * The mysterious disappearance during World War II of two Japanese aircraft carriers and three destroyers in calm waters.
- * Numerous sightings of giant squids, which attacked and sank many wooden ships in the last century.
- * The vanishing of an oil tanker and two freighters since May 1979.

Harold L. Johnson, a retired Rear Admiral who served in the Pacific during World War II, said seas were calm that day in 1942 when the Japanese suddenly lost five ships.

"The Japanese base at Hong Kong received clear signals from the ships stating all was well," Johnson, a naval historian, told GLOBE. "Then, suddenly, the radio transmissions stopped in mid-signal. Nothing was ever heard from the ships again. The Japanese thought the ships had been sunk by submarines. But none of our subs ever reported sinking a carrier that day or at any date near it. If they had been overtaken by natural disaster, their radio transmission would not have been cut off so suddenly."

Giant squids, some with tentacles 40 feet long, have recently been reported in the South China Sea. Herman Leggett, a University of Seattle ocean biologist, says: "Such creatures did and do exist, and are quite capable of destroying wooden sailing ships. During the previous two centuries in that area, British, American and Japanese sailors claimed their ships had been attacked by giant sea squids."

Some researchers have attempted to explain away the phenomena, including the recent vanishings, by pointing to ocean currents and whirlpools. But experts in unexplained phenomena have been far from convinced. They say the area is located above the lost continent of Mu, where powerful energy machines continue to exist and emit forces that cause violent storms. Those machines, occultists say, are nearly identical to the energy devices that destroyed Atlantis and create magnetic storms in the Bermuda Triangle.

Other experts trace the similarity of the two areas to the fact that they are located directly opposite each other on the globe.

"There is a spear or column of electro-magnetic energy completely unknown to science that passes through the planet," says Barry Cullum of the Fortean Society, which investigates occult occurrences. "This energy, influenced perhaps by magnetic forces in the earth's core, sometimes brings the earth in touch with another dimension. When that happens, a kind of doorway is opened through which objects are drawn from one world into another."

UFOs over China

... for the newly established China UFO Research Organisation (CURO), 1980 was the Year of the UFO.

"UFO sightings reached a new peak in China in 1980," CURO chairman Cha Leping said recently in the central Chinese city of Wuhan, as he looked over the 77 reports of UFOs from January through November. "We don't reject the idea that they come from outer space," he said. "We just have to study these things with an open and scientific mind."

CURO was officially formed in May 1980 from an informal liaison centre for UFO fans at Wuhan University which has recorded 208 sightings over the last few years. CURO is now a member of the Chinese Society for the study of the Future, set up to research into unexplained phenomena. It has branches and 400 members throughout China. Cha Leping, 25, the chairman, is a student at the space-physics faculty at Wuhan University.

Some of the sightings reported to CURO in 1980 make incredible reading. Like the report of a group of machinery workers who were on a night prawn-fishing expedition at Dagang, the north China coastal oilfield. According to one of the machinists, 31 year-old Hong Changgui, the UFO appeared about 3 a.m. on October 5, 1980. It was cone-shaped, he said, flying at about 3,000 feet and apparently not very large. But, gazing up at the strange object, he felt an intense heat on his face. "It was like standing under a stove," he recalled. "It gave off a very bright light, something like a welding arc. It was bright red at the centre and blue-green at the edges, except for the trailing edge which showed a white light. The whole incident lasted about 10 seconds as it flew overhead with a whistling sound."

Another member of the group, 46 year-old Jin Guomin, said; "Frankly, I was scared. We didn't know what it was and it made such a terrible noise. But my young son started calling to it 'UFO! UFO!' as it went overhead."

A month later, on November 5, Li Penpei and Li Laijun, office workers at a textile mill in Jinghai county, near the big port city of Tianjin, were also up and about in the early hours of the morning. They spotted a dish-like object emitting a green light and flying on an irregular course...

Less than a week later on November 11, three students at Wuhan University sighted a UFO over the eastern outskirts of Wuhan at about 10 o'clock in the evening. According to the report the students gave to CURO, the UFO was carrying two yellow lights and two white lights. The white lights were dazzling at times. They said: "The shape was like a dish with the middle part protruding a little. We estimated it was about 3,000 feet above the ground and we had it in view for about 15 minutes..."

Perhaps the most solid 'proof' of the presence of a UFO over China is the picture taken by two students of the Beijing Mining Institute in August while they were camping out in the mountainous county of Changping on the outskirts of the capital, Beijing. The students, Xin Sheng and Bi Jiang, said in their report to CURO: "At about 4 o'clock on the morning of August 24, we were watching the stars when we saw an object emitting a white light emerge from behind a mountain to the east of us. At first it was partly hidden by the mountain and looked like an incomplete moon. But from its irregular movement we decided it was a UFO. We climbed to the top of a big rock to get a better view of it and we watched for about half an hour. As it moved away from us it appeared like a tight cluster of three stars. At other times it came towards us and then floated away again. During the whole sighting it made no noise."

... According to the newly-collated records of CURO, at least one visitation caused death and injury. It happened on the evening of July 7, 1977, when more than 3,000 people were watching an open-air showing of a film at a playground in Zhangpu county, Fujian province, east China.

About 8.30, a section of the audience spotted two mysterious objects hurtling towards them out of the night sky, flying so low they nearly touched the ground. The objects - there are conflicting reports about their shape - were giving off a strong orange light and flying only a few feet apart. They made no noise. Panic spread like wildfire and in the scramble two children were trampled to death and 300 people were hurt. Within a few seconds the UFOs had streaked overhead and disappeared. Later, the local Public Security Bureau ran the film under the same atmospheric conditions, but nothing abnormal occurred.

The CURO file seems to show a strong link between sightings in China and sightings in other parts of the world.

On October 23, 1978, a group of Chinese air force pilots watching a film out of doors in Gansu province, northwest China, spotted a massive luminous object in the sky. They watched it for two or three minutes as it flew overhead at an altitude of about 21,000 feet. The pilots said it was rectangular and carrying very bright lights. (CURO's chairman believes there to be a link between this UFO and the one seen two days earlier in Australia by aircraft pilot Frederick Valentich, who mysteriously disappeared while reporting the incident over his radio. "The descriptions tally - very large, rectangular and emitting a strong light.")

In another sighting that strongly suggests a link with phenomena in other parts of the world, Fan Da, a farm official in Guangxi, south China, saw a silvery object on November 11, 1979. It was flying at high speed and apparently spraying some liquid or dust.

A day earlier, a UFO matching the description of the one over Guangxi was reported to have forced a Spanish jetliner to make an emergency landing.

In a recent article, Cha Leping has placed descriptions of the UFOs in three categories. He said 80% of them appear to be like a dish, a ball, a ring, or egg-shaped shining with a silvery light during the day and glowing orange or red at night. Several cases of UFOs trailing smoke have been reported. In the second category he lists large rectangular objects - rarely seen - and in the third, UFOs that appear as spiral nebula, with a bright core and many small points of light around it...

Farmer: Aliens Use My Ranch as Their Landing Place

A Wyoming farmer, placed under hypnosis by an expert, claims that aliens from another dimension are using his ranch as their UFO landing place. Amazingly, reveals Pat McGuire, 38, the aliens have helped him find water for his 5,100-acre ranch on the high, arid plain.

Huge, saucer-shaped UFOs visit his ranch quite often, McGuire insists, and his family and others claim to have seen them too. Under hypnosis, McGuire also recalls visits on board a UFO.

And according to Dr. R. Leo Sprinkle, Ph.D., a psychologist and professor at the University of Wyoming in Laramie, his hours of hypnosis sessions with McGuire have convinced him "Pat is reporting sincerely what he experienced."

"Under hypnosis I sometimes find myself in an oval room, sitting in a comfortable chair," McGuire told The Enquirer. "The aliens are six feet tall, slender but muscular, with large eyes, a short nose, thin lips and no hair. They are dressed in all black. Their heads are bigger than ours. They didn't lift their feet as they walked - they shuffled along. Their skin was real white and they all looked exactly alike."

The most tangible evidence supporting McGuire's claim is his farm, a lush, green 5,100-acre oasis in the midst of a dry plain. McGuire bought the desert land in 1970 saying he would drill a well big enough to grow cash crops - something unheard of in the arid region. But McGuire wasn't worried. "The aliens told me to drill the well and they would bring the water to me," he explains simply.

That was in 1971. Neighbours were really surprised when McGuire hit water soon afterward, but they were shocked when, seven years later, he tapped an underground river. Now he irrigates 1,400 acres of malt barley.

Many other ranchers in the area have since tried to tap the same water source with no success. "Before, neighbours thought Pat was a little strange because he was going to dig that well and because he could see all these flying saucers," Dr. Sprinkle revealed. "Now he's strange only because he sees the flying saucers - anybody can go out there and see the well."

And McGuire's wife, Wanda, and their eight children all say they have seen UFOs too. Local newspaper and television reporters have also seen strange lights darting over the McGuire ranch.

"Under hypnosis the aliens tell me they are from another dimension," McGuire said. "They're not from another star system. But they say there are UFOs that are from this dimension - from other stars. I've seen as many as seven spaceships at one time, with two of them sitting on the ground less than half a mile from my house and the other five hovering above them."

"I believe Pat is credible," Dr. Sprinkle told The Enquirer. "There is no specific factor that would indicate that he is lying."

Space People's Arrival Awaited ... lots of people are still waiting for space people to arrive and save us from ourselves. In El Cajon, California, for instance, 80 year-old Mrs. Ruth Norman says she is getting signals from outer space that spaceships from 32 planets are heading for the area, and she's rented a theatre to help prepare for their arrival.

The news is especially good for those with heating problems, says Mrs. Norman, because the spaceships will form a tower of power to supply all the energy needed on earth. Arrival time is only three to six months away so her group (Unarius, the Science of Life) has rented the 1200-seat East County Performing Arts Centre in El Cajon for a 12-hour readiness briefing in the near future. She says a staff of more than 60 people, including scientists, engineers, composers, artists and film producers is helping her prepare.

'The spacecraft have been configured and built in special sizes so that the biggest will land first and the others will land on top in descending order of size to create an energy tower' she says. 'They are planning to reach the earth world people and to help them.'

The proposed landing site is 67 acres of land which Mrs. Norman and her husband Ernest bought for just such an occasion in 1977. He has since died, but for three years she has heralded landings which have been delayed. In 1977, for example, the visit was frustrated 'because of too many negative frequencies from leaders of the earth world,' Mrs. Norman says.

Participants in the forthcoming briefing, called the First World Conclave of Light, have registered from throughout the United States and Canada.
