In SIGAP the Chairman traditionally does nearly all the work. I certainly did when I took over the job from Paul Whitehead, and maintained it through the first nine volumes of the current series of PEGASUS. Then increasing domestic problems arising from my wife's health gradually made it necessary for Vice-Chairman Ian Wheatley to take over the production of our journal and the arrangements for meetings. Members will surely agree that he did a splendid job in every way, so that all I had to do was collect the subscriptions, pay the bills and act as adviser and general consultant. I think it is now time we regularised the situation, so that Ian becomes Chairman and gets the credit he deserves, especially for his editing and electronic production of PEGASUS.

Some people think that it would be useful if I remained available in a consultant capacity, so I am happy to stay on the letterhead as President, an honorary appointment which will allow me to celebrate in that role my eightieth birthday, glad still to make some contribution to SIGAP's investigations. Members will be pleased to know that I will be handing over the accounts with a healthy positive balance, sufficient to see SIGAP through these times when ufology is out of favour with the public media and our membership is no longer the thirty odd it once was. The continuing loyalty of our present members has never been of greater importance to the maintenance of our independent voice in ufology. Remember that they are still here and keep on coming!

My published books are out of print and there seems little chance of my magnum opus UFOs AND HUMANITY achieving publication, but I shall always be ready to offer a comment to PEGASUS if the editor asks for it. After all, it's not everyone who can remember the wartime "foo fighters" and those first flying saucers over the Cascade mountains of Washington state! Time does give one a certain perspective on these matters, which helps in distinguishing what is relevant from what is not, the genuine from the bogus. That is what SIGAP has always been about.

G.M.

Business as usual: I am sure that SIGAP members would like to join me in thanking Gordon for the many years of time and effort that he has already given and for the insight which I'm sure he will continue to give to SIGAP. Pegasus will continue unchanged, with Gordon still penning the editorial. Any comments, ideas for meetings etc., will be warmly received at the new address shown opposite. The views expressed in Pegasus are those of the article's author and are not necessarily those of the editor, or of SIGAP.

THE CASE OF THE "INTELLIGENT DESIGNER"

By ZECHARIA SITCHIN

Was I.D. an E.T.?

In March 1925 the Tennessee legislature outlawed the teaching of any doctrine denying the divine creation of Man as taught by the Bible. In July of that same year, John T. Scopes, a high school teacher, was brought to trial for teaching Evolution in violation of the state law. The ensuing Scopes Trial (or, deridedly, the "Monkey Trial") drew worldwide attention to the seemingly irreconcilable conflict between Creationism (the old fashioned belief in the biblical account) and Evolution (based on Darwin's findings of Natural Selection).

John Scopes was found guilty and was fined $100; the Tennessee law was repealed in 1967; but the debate has not ended: Is Man, Homo sapiens, solely the product of a long process of natural selection ("Evolution"), or the result of a divine decision, a deliberate act by a Creator ("Creationism")?

The Evolutionists cannot fathom how the other side can ignore the overwhelming evidence for life's beginnings billions of years ago and claim that it is all the result of six days of creation; the Creationists, pointing out that a complex watch required a watchmaker, cannot see how the sudden appearance of Homo sapiens as the most complex life form can deny the Hand of God.

Enter "Intelligent Design"

In the past several years the debate has manifested itself again, with greater vigor, not only in the so-called Bible Belt states, but also in such unexpected places as the Michigan House of Representatives and the Pennsylvania education system. The most recent instance is Ohio, where the arena is the state's Board of Education.

Reports of these developments in the liberal media do not hide a degree of alarm at these developments -- not so much because they continue to occur, but because the attack on Darwinian teachings now come from "Creationism in disguise," and "a good disguise" at that (Time magazine). The disguise is called "Intelligent Design" ("I.D." for short); its proponents, by and large, do not take a position on how Life got here; they just deny that natural selection (i.e. evolution) alone could have brought us about. Somewhere along the way, they hold, there had to be an Intelligent Designer.

What alarms the media and the scientific community is the fact that the proponents of ID are not Bible-waving old ladies, but intellectuals and academics from varied disciplines in science, philosophy and theology. Their concerted attack on Evolutionism has been called by the established scientific community "a wedge strategy to restore Creationism in disguise" (Science magazine).

Identifying the Intelligent Designer

The proponents of the new version of Creationism, one must conclude from a study of their writings and arguments, find it easier to make a case for Intelligent Design than to answer the question: If so, who was the Intelligent Designer?

While many scientific critics of ID hold that the neo-Creationists are conservative Christians upset about the displacement of God from school curricula, "the fact is that many leaders of the new movement prefer to skirt the question, or even allow an abstract "God" to be embedded in the very beginning of the universe: "No one really knows how the universe got built with DNA that can replicate itself," (in the words of William Demski, a professor of mathematics).

A New York Times Puzzler

In its issue of April 8, 2001, The New York Times, in a page-one article by James Glanz, informed its readers that in spite of some wins by Evolutionists in Kansas, Michigan and Pennsylvania, they "find themselves arrayed not against traditional creationism, with its roots in biblical liberalism, but against a more sophisticated idea: the Intelligent Design theory."

But who, if so, was the Intelligent Designer? As I was reading the article on that Sunday morning, I was delighted to learn that:

The designer may be much like the biblical God, proponents say, but they are open to other explanations, such as the proposition that life was seeded by a meteorite from elsewhere in the cosmos, or the new age philosophy that the universe is suffused with mysterious but inanimate life force.

That proponents of ID consider the bringing of life to Earth by a meteorite as one explanation, I felt, was close enough to my Sumerian explanation that the Seed of Life (what we now call DNA) was imparted to Earth by the invading planet Nibiru during the collision ("Celestial Battle") some four billion years ago.

But it turned out from examining the newspaper's website and earlier editions, that the New York City edition that I was reading excised an intriguing and key sentence from the original article. Here is what the paragraph had read in its original version, with the omitted sentence highlighted:

This designer may be much like the biblical God, proponents say, but they are open to other explanations, such as the proposition that life was seeded by a meteorite from elsewhere in the cosmos, POSSIBLY INVOLVING EXTRATERRESTRIAL INTELLIGENCE, or the new age philosophy that the universe is suffused with a mysterious but inanimate life force.

"An Advanced Civilization from Another World"

As my readers know, what I have said in my books went beyond the common origin of Life (=DNA) on Earth and elsewhere in the Universe. I showed that according to the Sumerian texts (on which the biblical account of Genesis was based), Evolution took its course both on Nibiru and on Earth. Beginning much earlier on Nibiru, it produced the advanced Anunnaki on Nibiru but only early hominids on Earth when the Anunnaki had come here some 450,000 years ago. Then, I wrote, the Anunnaki engaged in genetic engineering to upgrade the hominids to Homo sapiens (to be in their likeness and after their image, as the Bible says).

While I was still wondering how the extraterrestrial angle was excised from the Times article in April 2001, I was delighted to read thus in its editorial on March 17, 2002. Headlined Darwinian Struggle in Ohio, the editorial explained:

Adherents of intelligent design carefully shun any mention of God in their proposals. They simply argue that humans, animals and plants are far too diverse and complex to be explained by evolution and natural selection, so there must have been an intelligent designer behind it all. Whether that designer is God, AN ADVANCED CIVILIZATION FROM ANOTHER WORLD, or some other creative force, is not specified.

The emphasis of the astounding statement is mine.

Back to Enki?

This is quite an advance in acknowledging the Sumerian data – from the general possibility of an involvement by "Extraterrestrial Intelligence" in cosmic life, to an Intelligent Designer from "an advanced civilization from another world."

It is progress spanning the tale of the collision that spread the Seed of Life to the genetic engineering by the Lord Enki.

Have the editorial writers of the New York Times read my latest book, The Lost Book of Enki?

MYSTERY OF THE ELTANIN ANTENNA

Between 1962 and 1979 the NSF Polar Research Vessel Eltanin surveyed Antarctic waters, studying the ocean and ocean bottom. In 1964, the ship photographed an unusual object at a depth of 13,500 feet. At the time, there was no submarine that could have carried a piece of technology to this depth.

The object appears to be a pole rising from the ocean floor with twelve spokes radiating from it, each ending in a sphere. The spokes are at fifteen degree angles to each other. It is located approximately 1,000 miles south of Cape Horn, beneath some of the most inhospitable seas in the world.

Marine biologists have speculated that it might be some sort of an organism, largely because it is otherwise so difficult to explain. However, there is no known form of marine life that looks remotely like this object.

There exists the possibility that it is an antenna or other scientific instrument that was lost by an early research vessel, but once again, this would appear to be a very forced explanation. It seems unlikely that an object could drop through three miles of ocean, and anchor itself on the bottom.

In addition, the position of the antenna is so exact, and so strangely significant, that it would seem almost certain that it was intentionally put there. Who did it, with what technology and why remains unknown. However, it's clear that there could be an enormous secret connected with the Eltanin antenna, and one that might not be entirely unknown to certain members of the scientific community, as will be seen.

Researcher Bruce Cathie, a New Zealander who, among other things, had a famous series of UFO sightings, has developed a theory about the antenna based on its position on the planet. Cathie's theories suggest that the antenna may be part of an ancient planetary grid that is of fundamental importance to an understanding of our planet and the great 25,000 year cycle known as the precession of the equinox.

Could it be possible that the Eltanin Antenna is a piece of ancient technology, or even technology that comes from another world? Cathie certainly thinks so. Other researchers are now suggesting that modern science might be well aware of the purpose of the object, and might be actively monitoring it or using it in some way.

Mr. Cathie considers 144, the harmonic reciprocal of the speed of light, to be an important measure of the earth's grid because it divides into the planet's 21,600 minutes of arc exactly 150 times. An individual interested in Cathie's ideas began measuring outward in steps from the antenna, and to his surprise found that the Prospect Point Antarctic Base is precisely eight of these measures away. Add another unit of 144 and you find two more Antarctic bases, Hemus and St. Kilmert.

Remarkably, a whole array of bases and earthquake stations surround the Eltanin Antenna. What this may mean is unknown, but it is certainly suggestive that the Eltanin antenna is no strange marine creature, but rather an object of great importance, that somebody understands very well.

Memorandum from Maxwell W. Hunter II of the National Aeronautics and Space Council (Executive Office of the President) to Robert F. Packard of the Office of International Scientific Affairs

Washington, July 18, 1963.

Thoughts on the Space Alien Race Question

During recent discussions the question has occasionally, though rarely, arisen that perhaps we should consider the policy question of what to do if an alien intelligence is discovered in space. Some discussion of this occurred, as you will recall, during deliberations on BNSP Task I. This memo contains some miscellaneous thoughts on the question.

The consensus of scientific view says, with quite good reasons, that the possibility of running across an alien intelligent race in our solar system is negligible. This is due primarily to the presumed unsuitability of conditions upon other planets to support life as we know it. The flying saucer advocates claim, of course, that the scientific viewpoint is nonsense, and that there is overwhelming evidence of such beings. In my own mind, I find it difficult to side with the flying saucer advocates, but the almost total impossibility envisioned by most scientists also is disturbing. Therefore, I present the problem in current perspective, as I see it.

Up until a few decades ago it seemed very improbable that intelligent life existed anywhere outside of the solar system. The chief reasons for this were a combination of scientific theory, scientific knowledge, and religious belief. The most widely accepted scientific theory as to the formation of the solar planetary system held that it was a result of the near collision of two stars. Since such a precise near miss of two stars would be an extremely rare event, it followed that there would be very few other planetary systems in the universe and, indeed, perhaps this was the only one. Religious belief said, furthermore, that life was a gift bestowed by God. This was a relatively undisputed point since no scientific data existed to bridge the gap between non-living and living materials.

The situation today is vastly changed in these respects. The most widely held theory of stellar formation would predict the formation of planetary systems to be a natural consequence of stellar evolution. On this basis, most stars would possess planetary systems, and the number of habitable planets in our galaxy would be tremendous. Our biggest telescopes cannot resolve planets at the distances even of the nearest stars, so no direct confirmation is yet available. In my own mind, however, the wide prevalence of multiple stars is an overwhelming hint in support of this theory. In addition, the biological sciences have almost completely traced a series of natural occurrences, which lead from inanimate molecules to elementary living viruses. Thus, we have the current scientific theory and data not only that there are a huge number of planets in the galaxy, but that life is quite likely to arise spontaneously on a large number of these. This, of course, does not necessarily imply intelligent life. Modern theology is not necessarily incompatible with this. The description in Genesis of the Creation certainly is a better picture of the current theory than of a stellar collision, and since God only spent seven days on this system, He has clearly had lots of time to create many more systems.

Even granting a probable existence of much life in the galaxy, there is still the question of whether another intelligent race exists in our solar system. There are, of course, two methods of its establishment in our system. One of these is that it originated on some other planet, for instance, Mars. Some of the spectacular markings of Mars have been interpreted as indicating intelligence. In particular, the famous "Canali" are rather narrow, and always run from one prominent marking to another, frequently with round splotches at intersections. As far as I know, no one has discovered a "Canali" which goes nowhere. This has quite understandably stimulated much conversation. In fact, a number of decades ago, when scientists thought that any life on other stellar systems was very remote, they seemed to feel that intelligent life probably existed on our other planets. Some of the discussions about life on Mars at the turn of the century seem to indicate a strong urge to want to find intelligent life elsewhere. Today, the situation is completely reversed, and although intelligent life is considered quite probable among the stars, it is held to be quite unlikely within the solar system. We seem more eager to listen with Ozma than to look closely at Canali.

One school of flying saucer advocates claims that the Martians have been mining our moon for natural resources for some time. At first thought, one would think they would rather mine earth. It is interesting to speculate, however, upon space flight from the point of view of a Martian. The escape speed of Mars is only 16,500 fps, and, of course, braking speed on our moon is less than 10,000 fps. Thus, Martians looking at earth would tend to view it the same way Terrestrials look at Jupiter. Our moon might not be less work to get to, since atmospheric braking to earth is possible, but would be very much easier to return from, while the energy requirements to go to and return from the surface of the earth might well be so high as to discourage interest, at least initially. Interestingly enough, even a normal high energy chemical rocket could make a trip from Mars to our moon at favourable times while carrying almost 10% of its gross weight in payload. Space flight starting from Mars, then, is a much easier prospect than starting from Terra. If a suitable refuelling base had been painfully established on our moon, the operation could be done quite commendably with merely chemical energy. (The aforementioned high energy chemical rocket could carry at favourable times almost 50% payload back to Mars.) Of course, many flying saucer advocates claim that the discovery of both Martian moons within a week in the latter part of the Nineteenth Century indicates that they are large artificial space stations, otherwise they would have been found earlier. If we were to discover Martians on the moon, it would result in surprisingly little readjustment of our scientific thinking. The biggest question would be why they were there rather than among the Asteroids.

In fact, if we were not as scientifically sure of ourselves as we are, three recent events would be hailed as broad hints of intelligent life on the moon. (1) The discovery of hot gasses emanating from the crater Alphonsus when the moon was supposedly dead. This would be considered evidence of civilization and, since Alphonsus is close to the visible edge, interpreted to mean that the other side of the moon was teeming with population, which had begun to spill around to this side. (2) The infra-red scans which show hot spots. These would be interpreted as indications of cities or at least mining camps. (3) The fact that no lunar or planetary probe of significance has been successful, in spite of major efforts on the part of two very successful earth orbit faring nations. It would be supposed that someone was denying us deep space. (The other-side-of-the-moon pictures from Lunik III show no details of consequence, and the same can be said of the data from Mariner II compared to what we had already known about Venus from earth-based measurements.) Should the Martians have colonized the moon without discovering nuclear energy, then they represent no real problem, and our current national policy would be made to order for the situation. If all of this were true, of course, I would expect the Martians to be scared to death of what they have seen recently on this planet, and would expect that the highest priority development program in the solar system is being conducted by the Atomic Energy Commission of Mars.

Even if we are secure in our belief that intelligent life never would develop on Mars or some other solar planet, there is still the question of visitors to the solar system from other stellar systems. This is normally written off as an extremely low probability, due to the tremendous distances between stars, and the Einstein limitation on travel faster than the speed of light. Therefore, even if there are a large number of intelligent life forms in the galaxy, and even if they are continuously searching for other races, the frequency of investigation of any stellar system would be only once in many thousands of years and contact would rarely, if ever, be achieved. It might never be achieved, since presumably intelligent races die out. (What happened to the planet whose pieces now are spread around the Asteroid Belt? Or, for that matter, why is Uranus lying on its side?) I am not sure that this travel restriction is quite as infallible as it sounds. I believe that it is possible with what we now know about nuclear energy to envision ships driven at half to three-quarters of the speed of light. This, since the galaxy is 100,000 light-years across, still does not make a search of the entire galaxy feasible within the life span of the average man. But suppose some race under pressure of population explosion were expanding as fast as technically feasible from star to star throughout the galaxy. If their ships averaged half the speed of light, and if, on the average, they stopped every 10 light-years for a twenty-year stay at a stellar system to deposit colonists, refuel, and build extra ships, they would only take two hundred thousand years, starting at the centre of the galaxy, to spread throughout the whole system. Since the earliest known remains of man have recently been dated at approximately one million seven hundred thousand years, a sustained drive for merely two hundred thousand years may not be unreasonable. Of course, if we were to run across representatives of this kind of interstellar race, they would not be nearly as tame as the previously hypothesized chemical Martians, and our policy would need to be revised accordingly. Fortunately, travel time restrictions would inhibit their ability to bring all forces to bear, in case we should develop differences of viewpoint.

The third possibility, scientifically abhorrent, is that the Einstein theory may only be an approximation, and an alien race which actually travels faster than light exists. If we were to meet such a race, our policy had better be to negotiate fast, because the implications of their far better understanding and control of the fundamental forces of nature would be obvious. If all the scientific speculation were to turn out wrong and we were to stumble across an alien race, we would want to know as quickly as possible which of the three types I have indicated it was, as our diplomatic policy would damned well be influenced by the results.

Conclusions

Although all plausible scientific thinking suggests that we will not find any other intelligence race, the probability that we will is finite, and perhaps should not be completely ignored. Were we to find one, the question of whether it was a race with primitive chemical space flight, space flight equivalent to our best understanding of nuclear energy, or space flight based on physics beyond Einstein should be ascertained as rapidly as possible, since our policies would be affected in the most drastically possible way. In any event, a policy of the immediate burying of all Terrestrial hatchets would likely be in order. Even if we only found tame chemical Martians, or merely the debris from some intergalactic survey mission, it would be a good idea to proceed on the assumption that the human race would finally have found a bigger problem than the ones it has created for itself. There likely is nothing to be done at the moment to prepare for these possibilities (the only body of writing on the subject available in an emergency is science fiction), because no one of consequence is going to take this rubbish seriously unless it happens. At that point, our policy will be determined in the traditional manner of grand panic.

Maxwell W. Hunter, II

A REALISTIC OVERVIEW?

THIS INFORMATION COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE AND FREEDOM. IT MAY ANSWER QUESTIONS ON: THE COMING "OFFICIAL" ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE ALIEN PRESENCE ON EARTH. WHY "STAR WARS"? THE HUBBLE SPACE TELESCOPE? THE SUDDEN FALL OF COMMUNISM?

What is going on? Something very sinister is going on. Polls reveal that over 90% of the American people believe in UFO's and 95% of these people believe the government is keeping this knowledge from the public. But Why?

Are they afraid the people will panic if an "Official" announcement were made? Hardly. Such an announcement would create interest and excitement and many questions, particularly by the churches, but not panic. Why then the continued cover-up?

There is overwhelming evidence in the past several years from "Whistle Blowers", retired military officers, who have finally said, "Enough is enough! It's time the government told the people the truth!" These officers, such as Navy Intelligence officer, William Cooper, Major John Lear (whose father founded the Lear Jet Corp.) and Air Force officer William English, to name but a few, have all discovered the truth, and at the risk of their very lives, are trying to alert YOU to the secrets behind the UFO's and the Alien Presence on this earth. These people worked on the secret projects, had access to 'classified' Top Secret documents, had seen with their own eyes 'captured' aliens, or extraterrestrial entities, UFO's and the incredible technology they brought with them.

Sightings of UFO's have been reported throughout history, and biblical and historic references to "Flaming Chariots" huge flying 'birds' and odd-looking beings predate our history by thousands of years. In the 1940's several alien spacecraft were recovered by the U.S. and other countries, along with a few dead aliens and one live one they named EBE (a name suggested by Dr. Vannevar Bush which was short for Extraterrestrial Biological Entity).

In 1953 astronomers discovered large objects in space which were moving toward earth. At first they believed they were asteroids, but later evidence proved the objects could only be spaceships. Project Sigma and Project Plato intercepted alien radio communications and using the computer binary language, were able to arrange a landing that resulted in face-to-face contact with alien beings from another planet. Meanwhile, a race of human-looking aliens contacted the U.S. Government, warning us that the aliens orbiting the equator were hostile beings from Orion. These human-type aliens demanded we dismantle and destroy our nuclear weapons, that we were on a path of self-destruction and we must stop killing each other, stop polluting the earth, stop raping the earth's natural resources and learn to live in harmony with one another. President Eisenhower rejected these demands.

Later in 1954 the race of aliens, known as Greys, from the Zeta Reticuli area in space, who had been orbiting the equator, landed at Holloman Air Force base. They stated their planet was dying and that they needed quarters on earth to conduct genetic experiments that might allow their race to survive; this in exchange for certain technology. President Eisenhower met with the aliens and a formal treaty was signed. The treaty stated the aliens would not interfere in our affairs and we would not interfere in theirs. We would keep their presence on earth secret; they would furnish us with advanced technology. They could abduct humans on a limited basis for the purpose of medical examination and monitoring, with the stipulation that the humans would not be harmed, would be returned to their point of abduction, that the humans would have no memory of the event. It was also agreed the alien bases would be constructed underground, beneath Indian reservations in the 4 corners area of Utah, New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado. Another was to be constructed in Nevada in the area known as S-4, about 7 miles south of area 51, known as 'Dreamland'. A multi-billion dollar secret fund was organized and kept by the Military Office of the White House, supposedly to build secret underground sites for the President and his staff in case of military attacks.

By secret Executive Memorandum, NSC5410, Eisenhower established a permanent committee known as "Majority Twelve" (MJ12) to oversee and conduct all covert activities with the aliens. This included FBI director J. Edgar Hoover and six leaders of the 'Council on Foreign Relations, known as the 'Wise Men' and later others from the Trilateral Commission. George Bush, Gordon Dean, and Brzezinski were among them.

A major finding of the commission was that the aliens were using humans and animals for a source of glandular secretions, enzymes, hormonal secretions, blood - and in horrible genetic experiments. The aliens explained these actions as necessary for their survival; that if their genetic structure were not improved, their race would cease to exist.

The ruling powers decided that one means of funding the alien project was to corner the illegal drug market. A young ambitious member of the Council on Foreign Relations was approached. His name is George Bush who at the time was president and CEO of Zapata Oil Co. based in Texas. Zapata Oil was experimenting with offshore oil drilling and it was arranged that the drugs could be shipped from South America to the offshore platforms by fishing boats, then transferred to the U.S. shore by normal transportation, thus avoiding search by customs agents. The plan worked better than anyone expected, and today the CIA controls all the world's illegal drug markets. One should remember, it was George Bush who first started selling drugs to our children. The drug money was used to finance the deep underground alien bases.

Conclusions: the Bilderburgers, the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission are the SECRET GOVERNMENT and rule this nation through MJ-12 and the study group known as the Jason Society.

Throughout history the aliens have manipulated and/or ruled the human race through various secret societies, religion and the occult. The CFR and the Trilateral Commission are in complete control of the alien technology and the nation's economy. Eisenhower was the last president to know the entire overview of the alien problem. Succeeding presidents were told only what MJ-12 wanted them to know, and it was NOT the truth. MJ-12 presented each new president with a picture of a lost alien culture seeking to renew itself, build a home on this planet and shower us with gifts of technology. Each president has bought the story hook, line, and sinker. Meanwhile, innocent people continue to suffer unspeakable horrors at the hands of alien and human scientists who are engaged in barbarous research that would make the Nazis seem pale in comparison. As if that is not enough, many people end up as food for the insatiable alien appetite for biological enzymes, hormonal secretions and blood. At least 1 in every 40 Americans have been implanted with alien devices that are used to control them if necessity calls.

By 1989 over 3 million 'Greys' were occupying these deep multi-level underground complexes. Level 7 at Dulce is called "Nightmare Hall". They have welched on their agreement on abducting humans; today over 25 million citizens have been abducted and implanted, a literal army awaiting orders to march! (Whitley Strieber has written best sellers on his personal experience as have many others). For this reason other nations were informed. Within 5 months the communist monolith Russia was dismantled to unite with the U.S. and its technology to fight the invasion. The Hubble Space Telescope was created to keep a watchful eye on the invasion fleet; Star Wars technology has been developed to hopefully stop them in outer space before they can get to the earth.

Today, the government is on the horns of a dilemma. Too many sources are releasing alien information. The public could get angry at continued secrecy. So MJ-12 plans soon to make an "Official" announcement, under controlled conditions, probably Area 51. Network TV will be called to meet the staged 'landing' of the aliens, these being the Greys. They will come bearing gifts, technology that supposedly will heal Cancer and AIDS, retard aging, etc.. They will tell us they are 'saviours of humanity' who have come to defend the earth against an invasion of man-eating aliens called Reptoids.

This story is a LIE, they already work for the Reptoids! Their plan is to unify the world into a One-World Government, a 'New World Order' with the argument that only this can defeat the invasion by Reptoids. This is a trap to enslave the world's population. Control will be accomplished through the money system, a universal currency controlled by certain international bankers, who for years have been lackeys of the aliens, who seized upon their greed and lust for wealth and power as a means to bring about their evil plan to control the earth. (This also being the scenario predicted in the Bible's 'Book of Revelation' wherein only those who accept the Mark of the Beast (the aliens being the 'Beast' and the 'Mark' being some sort of laser tattoo or Credit Card they will use, which will allow people to buy and sell goods). Those who do not accept this 'Mark' must live outside the money system and survive somehow on their own, through barter and the like.

SO BE AWARE! ONLY YOUR KNOWLEDGE OF THIS FAKE INVASION AND FAKE RAPTURE CAN PREVENT IT FROM HAPPENING. DEMAND THE TRUTH FROM YOUR GOVERNMENT. TELL THEM YOU KNOW ABOUT THE ALIENS AND THAT THERE ARE GOOD ALIENS AND BAD ALIENS AND THAT MJ-12 IS PROMOTING THE BAD ALIENS AND THE ONE WORLD GOVERNMENT THEY HOPE TO CONTROL.

CHINA DENIES MANNED MOON MISSION PLANS

By Dr David Whitehouse

BBC News Online science editor

China will not be launching a manned mission to the Moon in the foreseeable future, according to Ouyang Ziyuan, chief scientist of China's Moon exploration programme.

In an exclusive interview with BBC News Online he said he wanted to clarify news reports in the Chinese media that Beijing would be putting a man on the Moon by 2010 with the establishment of a Moonbase soon afterwards.

"We will explore the Moon certainly," he said from his office in Beijing, "but with unmanned spacecraft."

"One of our goals is to bring lunar samples back to China for analysis. We are interested in the minerals on the Moon. We will prepare an unmanned spacecraft to do this."

No specific date

Ouyang Ziyuan is an academician of the Chinese Academy of Sciences. He is an expert on meteorites and cosmic dust.

"We are not setting a specific date for a landing on the Moon," he said. "We are just at the start of preparing plans for our exploration of the Moon."

"I am very confident that China will complete the first phase of its lunar exploration by 2010. It could be completed earlier by 2007 perhaps."

"First, our spacecraft will take a ride around the Moon looking at its resources and environment. After that we will develop a soft-landing machine. We have many plans for such things."

Ouyang Ziyuan pointed out that he was not the official responsible for manned space missions but he did say that currently astronaut training was not linked to any future Moon mission.

"Our aim is a space station not later than 2005," he said. He was unable to say whether China would be putting a man into space before 2005. Western experts believe that China could stage a brief manned mission as early as next year.

Moon, then Mars

If reports of a manned landing by 2010 are exaggerated, Ouyang Ziyuan was willing to say that he could foresee manned outposts on the Moon in the long-term, "perhaps by 2020 or 2030".

"The Moon could serve as a new and tremendous supplier of energy and resources for human beings," he said. "This is crucial to sustainable development of human beings on Earth."

"Whoever first conquers the Moon will benefit first," Mr. Ouyang added. "As for China, it needs to adopt a strategy based on its concrete economic power and technology level."

"We are also looking further out into the Solar System - to Mars."

FIERY END OF EARTH'S ECCENTRIC LITTLE BROTHER

By MARK HENDERSON, SCIENCE CORRESPONDENT, THE TIMES, LONDON.

The Solar System once had an extra, Earth-like planet that spiralled to a fiery death in the Sun almost 4 billion years ago, a British scientist says.

The lost world, part of the Sun's original family of satellites formed 4.5 billion years ago, was smaller than Earth and sat in a regular orbit just outside that of Mars. Over the next 600 million years, it was wrenched out of its place by the gravity of its neighbours and sent spinning on an eccentric path that took it to its destruction.

Its legacy survives in the form of boulders and craters on the Moon, the result of a hail of meteors caused by the planet's ploughing through the asteroid belt on its collision course with the Sun.

The missing world has been named Planet V, as it was the fifth rocky planet in the Solar System after Mercury, Venus, Earth and Mars. The NASA team behind the theory at first wanted to name it "Icarus", after the mythological character who flew too close to the Sun, but that name is already held by an asteroid.

The ghostly presence at the dawn of the Solar System has emerged from a study led by John Chambers, a British scientist working for NASA's Ames Research Centre in Moffett Field, California.

It offers the best explanation yet for the pattern of rocks and craters found on the Moon that has puzzled researchers since the Apollo landings. The new theory also adds weight to the case for sending spacecraft, manned or unmanned, back to the Moon, to gather evidence that could prove that the Earth had a long-lost neighbour.

The Solar System is generally accepted to have formed about 4.5 billion years ago, as clouds of gas and dust around the Sun condensed to form planets and the asteroid belt.

The Moon was created at about the same time when another small, lost planet collided with the hot Earth and ripped out chunks of debris that clumped together to form our satellite.

The Earth and the Moon took a pounding from asteroids and other space rocks careering through the Solar System throughout their early lives, but evidence collected by the Apollo moon landers and other probes indicate that there was a sharp "spike" in such bombardment about 3.9 billion years ago.

This period, which is known to astronomers as the "lunar cataclysm", has always been a puzzle, with standard models for the shape of the young Solar System offering no explanation for such a sudden storm of meteors.

"All the large craters and basins appear to have been formed by impacts over a relatively short period, between 3.9 and 3.8 billion years ago," Dr Chambers said. "The question of why there were none before or after has been a mystery ever since the Apollo programme."

This is where Planet V fits in.

Dr Chambers, working with an Ames colleague, Jack Lissauer, and Alessandro Morbidelli of the Côte d'Azur Observatory, has calculated that a rogue planet on a cosmic walkabout would have prompted such a volley of rock. "My idea is that when the Solar System formed, there was an extra planet along with the ones we see today," he said. "It started in a reasonably stable orbit just outside Mars, but gradually, over 600 million years, gravitational perturbations from other planets changed the shape of its orbit."

Planet V began to orbit in an ellipse, crashing through the asteroid belt before spiralling into the nuclear furnace of the Sun. "The effect would have been like a leaf-blower, scattering asteroids all over the place," Dr Chambers said. "Some would have ended up crossing the Earth's orbit, and crashing into the Moon."

"Ultimately, this extra planet disappeared, and the bombardment stopped. As its orbit became more and more elliptical, it got too close to the Sun and was sucked in. It really was like Icarus. That would have been a marvellous name, but unfortunately it's already been taken by an asteroid and there would have been too much confusion."

The theory, which was presented at the Lunar and Planetary Institute's annual conference in Houston, Texas, has been received with interest by other astronomers.

Duncan Steel, reader in space science at Salford University, said that it would be argued about but it was an interesting new idea that fitted in with the observational phenomena. "It seems eminently sensible, and it would explain something that has been a long-term puzzle."

GRAND STRATEGY OF THE REPTILIANS

This paper is meant to acquaint the reader with the tools they will need to raise their level of awareness about the abduction phenomenon and allow them to avoid the misfortunes which are common to many abductees.

My name is James Bartley and I am a colleague of Eve Lorgen. I am an abductee. I am a student of military history and have studied the occult connection with the UFO phenomenon.

We humans reside in what is essentially a reptilian sphere of influence. The symbology of the reptilian overlordship is all around us. Phallic worship and the marginalization of the feminine principle have reduced the human race to what it is today, a thundering herd of bewildered sheep.

The Grand Strategy of the reptilians has been to divide and conquer the human race by exploiting inherent vulnerabilities and weaknesses within us. I know this is a bitter pill to have to swallow but we must be mature enough to look the facts in the eye and not allow ourselves to be held in perpetual spiritual bondage by our own ignorance and wishful thinking. The strategy of divide and conquer manifests itself both in our personal lives and on a global macrocosmic scale.

We have been subjected to a long-term process of genetic and soul matrix manipulation. The human life span has been artificially shortened to facilitate the recycling of our souls for purposes known only to the reptilians who see the human race as a resource. The dark gods of this world are well aware of the geological calendar of this planet and have prepared themselves accordingly.

What we are involved in is nothing less than all out spiritual warfare on a cosmic and multidimensional scale. At stake are our very souls. We can either choose to break out of this state of spiritual bondage and spiritual enslavement or we can be recycled once again and our descendants will have to start all over from scratch with little or no understanding of what has gone on before. The Dark Ages revisited.

Spiritual Warfare

As Spiritual Warriors we must be mature enough to realize that the reptilians and their followers know our weaknesses and vulnerabilities better than we do. Many abductees, no matter how metaphysically oriented they are, have to endure sheer misery in their lives. Abductees typically experience one emotional or psychological trauma after another never realizing for a moment that much of the negativity in their life has been externally imposed.

Trigger mechanisms are programmed into abductees to detract them from coming into their own truth vis-à-vis the reptilians and the other dark gods of this world. Likewise certain individuals are sent into our lives specifically to sow confusion and discord. Now more than ever we must be wary of who or what we allow into our experience.

There is a fundamental occultism basis for much of the abduction phenomena. There are aspects of this phenomenon that are indistinguishable from demonic infestation and demonic possession, Sorcery and Witchcraft, as frightening and unpopular as that may be.

The ongoing interaction between humans within the Deep Black World of the Intelligence/Security apparatus and the Aerospace community with non-human intelligences has an occultism basis which was thousands if not millions of years in the making. There is nothing new about humans interacting with and working for non-humans.

Under the Influence: Reptilian Hosts

Most abductees are not even aware that possession does occur and that a significant number of individuals heavily involved in UFO research are literally hosts (with alien entities attached/indwelling) for reptilian and other malevolent entities. These hosts have lectured publicly, written books and spoken on the Art Bell show. So why is the average abductee ignorant of this fifth column within our very midst? Because most abductees are still looking for the truth outside of themselves rather than from within. As stated above: We are the products of a long term genetic and soul matrix manipulation designed to keep us individually and collectively in a subservient status vis-à-vis the reptilians and the dark gods of this world.

Discernment and Maturity

Now more than ever we must recognize that there are trigger mechanisms programmed into us which are meant to keep us in perpetual bondage. Whether your particular vulnerability is over-eating, substance abuse (especially crack cocaine or crystal meth which is the drug of choice of the dark gods) promiscuity, love obsessions et al., it's all spawned from the same source. This is all predictable. What is also predictable is that there will be "people" in your life who will characterize you as being "fear based" and "spiritually un-evolved" merely because you have the self worth and the self respect to want to get at the truth of your experiences. Don't listen to these weather-beaten New Age La-di-dahs. The latter are merely useful idiots. They are members of the "Muppet Show" meant to keep you under the control of the dark side. Now is the time to proclaim our personal sovereignty and throw off the yoke of spiritual enslavement and cosmic vassalage and give our children and our children's children a fighting chance to break out of this mess.

Sincerely, James Bartley San Diego California

UFOs WERE SEEN OVER AIR FORCE NUCLEAR WEAPONS FACILITIES

The Disclosure Project reports that several military and intelligence witnesses who were members of the Strategic Air Command (SAC) and other nuclear specialists have come forward with testimony proving that UFOs are real and appear to be concerned about our nuclear weapons. The Project has obtained the firsthand testimony of several such insiders whose documents and corroborating testimony proves that UFOs have monitored sensitive nuclear facilities since at least the 1950s. While the UFOs were not hostile, it was made clear that they were very concerned about human weapons of mass destruction. On one occasion, UFOs over a SAC Nuclear launch area took more than a dozen intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) off line.

Lt. Colonel Dwyne Arneson: US Air Force, ret. states: "I was the top-secret control officer at Malmstrom AFB for the 20th Air Division. I happened to see a message that came through my communications centre. It said...that 'A UFO was seen near missile silos'...and it was hovering. It said that the crew going on duty and the crew coming off duty all saw the UFO just hovering in midair. It was a metallic circular object and from what I understand, the missiles were all shut down. What I mean by 'missiles going down' is that they went dead. And something turned those missiles off, so they couldn't be put back in a mode for launching."

Captain Robert Salas: SAC Missile Launch Officer [1964-1971]: "The UFO incident happened on the morning of March 16, 1967, at Oscar Flight one of five launch control facilities assigned to the 490th Strategic Missile Squadron. I received a call from my topside security guard...and he said that he and some of the guards had been observing some strange lights flying around the site and the launch control facility. I said, you mean UFO? He said, well, he didn't know what they were but they were lights and were flying around. They were not airplanes; they were not helicopters, they weren't making any noise... [A little later] our missiles started shutting down one by one. By shutting down, I mean they went into a "no-go" condition meaning they could not be launched. These weapons were Minuteman One missiles and were of course nuclear-tipped warhead missiles...this incident was of extreme concern to SAC headquarters because they couldn't explain it."

Colonel Ross Dedrickson: US Air Force/Atomic Energy Commission, ret.): "After retiring from the Air Force I joined the Boeing company and was responsible for accounting for all of the nuclear fleet of Minuteman missiles. In this incident they actually photographed the UFO following the missile as it climbed into space and, shining a beam on it, neutralized the missile. I also learned of a number of incidents such as a couple of nuclear weapons sent into space which were destroyed by the extraterrestrials. Our government sent a nuclear weapon for explosion on the moon's surface... [And] the ETs destroyed the weapon as it went toward the moon. [Apparently] the idea of any explosion in space by any Earth government was not acceptable to the extraterrestrials, and that has been demonstrated over and over."

Professor Robert Jacobs: Lt. USAF 1369th Photo Squadron: "...we were testing ballistic missiles that were to deliver nuclear weapons on target...my duty [was] to supervise the instrumentation photography of every missile that went down in that western test range...and into the frame came something else. It flew into the frame and shot a beam of light at the warhead. Now, remember, all this stuff was flying at several thousand miles an hour, so this thing fires a beam of light at the warhead, hits it... The warhead tumbles out of space. The object, the points of light that we saw, the warhead and so forth, were travelling through subspace about sixty miles straight up, and they were going somewhere in the neighbourhood of eleven to fourteen thousand miles an hour, when this thing caught up to them, flew in, flew around them, and flew back out."

Mr. Harland Bentley: "I have been in a graduate program for nuclear engineering...and have been working contracts since 1963: NASA, Department of Energy, and several other electronics firms in the DC area. I was at a facility in California...doing classified work...which I can't say too much about....Our astronauts were doing a loop around the moon in 1967 or 1968...I heard them say they had a bogey [term used to denote UFOs]...it was another type of ship. There were portals that they could see into. They could see beings of some sort. They did not describe these beings, they just took photographs. They just said it was a saucer shaped craft. Then they said, 'There they go,' and they [the bogey] went out of sight almost immediately." The Disclosure Project, a non-profit research and public interest group, has identified hundreds of military, intelligence, government and corporate witnesses.

UFOs Taken Seriously in U.K.

17-Jun-2002

Despite the fact that the British government recently declared that there is no evidence for the existence of UFOs, the BBC sent TV weatherman Mike Powell out with UFO hunter David Kingston to see if he could find any signs of UFOs. Powell knows all about weather and can't be fooled by cloud shapes, Northern Lights or ball lightning.

Kingston, who used to be in the Royal Air Force, has interviewed pilots all over the world who have seen UFOs from their cockpits. He has many videos taken by people who have seen UFOs flying all over England.

Together, they visited college lecturer and UFO investigator Craig Roberts and watched as he went under hypnosis in order to retrieve his abduction memories. His students have won awards for their UFO investigations.

They also investigated a recent UFO sighting that occurred Friday March 22, when a fleet of UFOs was seen over the English countryside that was videotaped by local resident Anthony Woods. Woods says military helicopters flew over the area afterwards. His wife Samantha saw the UFOs as well and they were both amazed by the large number of them. They appeared to be white luminous spheres of the type that were widely seen in Mexico a few years ago.

Woods says, "I first noticed a fleet of spheres above my home around midday; there were hundreds of them! Me, my wife and daughter watched them; I taped over 30 minutes of footage. They were locked together in strange formations, some moving as others hovered, some were touching each other. There were at least 100 objects, probably more. I have never seen so many together before." He describes the main craft has "a huge, dark red glowing, kind of dual big sphere structured object definitely at very low altitude with a rotating sequence."

Then on June 16, Britain's Sunday Express newspaper had a headline saying, "Flying saucers - After 50 years the cover- up conspiracy goes on...." The story talks about John Callahan, a former accident investigator for the Federal Aviation Authority, who has testified about the Japan Airlines Flight 1628 UFO sighting in November 1986, when the flight crew and radar operators saw a UFO 4 times the size of a 747 doing acrobatic manoeuvres.

Reporter Hamish Mackenzie says, "What is clear is that a large number of individuals have come forward and made statements whose implications, if true, are profound. If the witnesses are who they say they are - and are found to be lying - then we should be very concerned about the type of individuals who fly our planes, control air traffic, man the missile silos and protect our communities. If, on the other hand, the witnesses are telling the truth then - no matter how extraordinary - this is a serious issue."

None of this will come as a surprise to UFO investigators in the U.S. But what is surprising is that the government- controlled BBC and a major national newspaper have taken an interest in the subject. Imagine if the New York Times or NBC news did a serious investigation of UFOs—it's something we can't imagine happening here.

U.S. Summons Experts to Draft Asteroid Defence Plan

Toledo Blade
The Cincinnati Post
June 7, 2002

The U.S. Federal Government is summoning the world's top scientists to an urgent conference this summer to plan defences against an attack that could wipe out an American city or disrupt the whole country's infrastructure.

No, it's not global terrorism.

The scientists will map ways to combat an asteroid attack, a cosmic sucker punch like the collision that killed the dinosaurs 65 million years ago and flattened a Siberian forest in 1908.

While the world's attention is focused on the real threat of terrorism, the theoretical asteroid menace has been garnering a surprising amount of behind-the-scenes attention.

Britain's Royal Astronomical Society hosted an international meeting of experts on the asteroid impact threat in December. In January the world's astronomers petitioned Australia's government to fund a special asteroid-detecting telescope. In February NASA announced the "Workshop on Scientific Requirements for Mitigation of Hazardous Comets and Asteroids," which will be conducted in Washington in September. In March, NASA activated "Sentry," a new system to monitor near-Earth objects (NEOs) and assess their threat to Earth.

NEOs are small objects—asteroids and certain comets—that orbit in the solar system relatively close to Earth and could one day collide with Earth.

"We've had a couple of close shaves during the past few months," says Brian G. Marsden, with the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

One asteroid caused public jitters when discovered March 12. Named 2002 EM7, it came from the direction of the sun—an astronomical blind spot where objects are hidden in the sun's glare.

Astronomers didn't detect 2002 EM7 until four days after it came within 288,000 miles (460,000 kilometres) of Earth, which they regarded as a close encounter. [The moon is about 239,000 miles, or 385,000 kilometres, from the Earth.]

The asteroid was about 200 feet (60 metres) in diameter—big enough to fill two-thirds of a football field—and could have flattened a city, unleashing the energy of a five-megaton nuclear bomb.

"I think Mother Nature has given us yet another wake-up call," says Donald K. Yeomans of NASA. "Objects the size of 2002 EM7 pass as close as this one did every two weeks or so. We just haven't found them all yet."

Another scare occurred in January, when a 1,000-foot-diameter (300-metre) asteroid came within 375,000 miles (600,000 kilometres) of Earth. Astronomers detected the mountain-sized rock only a few weeks earlier.

Astronomers are detecting more and more asteroids that sped by unnoticed in the past.

NEWS IN BRIEF/ SIGHTINGS ROUNDUP

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE DISC SEEN

BINGHAM, NOTTINGHAMSHIRE -reports that on May 5, 2002, a disc shaped object appeared several miles south of Bingham. At 3:00 AM, I looked out of my bedroom window and saw a flashing light which at first I thought to be a light aircraft. I realized the object was flashing different coloured lights erratically and was not moving. Two small white lights appeared to move outwards from the main body of the object and remained like this for the rest of the sighting. I fetched my binoculars and viewed the object observing a disk shape with clusters of green, orange, yellow and red lights. It appeared to be moving in a spinning and rocking movement. I woke my girlfriend who also viewed it and confirmed what I saw. I then fetched my digital camera and photographed it as best I could. The object remained virtually stationary for over an hour. When I stopped watching, dawn was approaching. During the period of the hour the object appeared to have moved slightly further south. Thanks to Clive Howe, <http://ETcontact.com>

QUANTUM WORMHOLES COULD CARRY PEOPLE

by Charles Choi. Source: New Scientist

All around us are tiny doors that lead to the rest of the Universe. Predicted by Einstein's equations, these quantum wormholes offer a faster-than-light short cut to the rest of the cosmos - at least in principle. Now physicists believe they could open these doors wide enough to allow someone to travel through.

Quantum wormholes are thought to be much smaller than even protons and electrons, and until now no one has modelled what happens when something passes through one. So Sean Hayward at Ewha Women's University in Korea and Hisa-aki Shinkai at the Riken Institute of Physical and Chemical Research in Japan decided to do the sums.

They have found that any matter travelling through adds positive energy to the wormhole. That unexpectedly collapses it into a black-hole; a supermassive region with a gravitational pull so strong not even light can escape.

But there's a way to stop any would-be traveller being crushed into oblivion. And it lies with a strange energy field nicknamed "ghost radiation". Predicted by quantum theory, ghost radiation is a negative energy field that dampens normal positive energy. Similar effects have been shown experimentally to exist.

Delicate balance

Ghost radiation could therefore be used to offset the positive energy of the travelling matter, the researchers have found. Add just the right amount and it should be possible to prevent the wormhole collapsing - a lot more and the wormhole could be widened just enough for someone to pass through.

It would be a delicate operation, however. Add too much negative energy, the scientists discovered, and the wormhole will briefly explode into a new universe that expands at the speed of light, much as astrophysicists say ours did immediately after the big bang.

For now, such space travel remains in the realm of thought experiments. The CERN Large Hadron Collider in Switzerland is expected to generate one mini-black hole per second, a potential source of wormholes through which physicists could try to send quantum-sized particles.

But sending a person would be another thing. To keep the wormhole open wide enough would take a negative field equivalent to the energy that would be liberated by converting the mass of Jupiter.

DISCLOSURE PROJECT (UK)

Mark Hall writes, "I have come up with the following draft proposal and goals. The UK Disclosure Project (DSUK) will not be selling any material. If anyone wants copies of the press conference video, etc or wishes to make large donations, go to www.disclosureproject.org. We are not interested in sponsorship or large donations at this time. Anyone wanting to donate any money, please do not donate any more than £10. The one thing that we do not want to be accused of being is only in this for the money". If you want to make a large donation, please go to the above US website. Volunteers should put up a table up in the local town/city centre, with briefing material for the general public to read and show the Disclosure Press Conference tape on a portable television, and/or show the Press Conference tape in local church halls etc.. Our ultimate aim is not open hearings, or full disclosure. This is too high an aim to head for, especially for a voluntary group. Our aim is to have a meeting between ourselves, Steven Greer and UK Prime Minister Tony Blair. Or if we cannot achieve this, a meeting with a senior Blair Government Minister. We hope to achieve this by our contacts who are personal friends of Tony Blair, and by involving famous UK theatrical personalities who are open to the truth, interviewing and gathering the testimony of UK/European military/government/contractor UFO related witnesses. Also to conduct media interviews and lectures and produce a UK/European government briefing video. I have been massively overwhelmed with the amount of new Government and TV contacts I have made, by simply talking about Disclosure. Let me know if you have contacts and make sure you see your Member of Parliament or Congressman. Mark Hall - mhall@disclosureproject.org.

MARS HAS VAST OCEANS OF WATER ICE AND LIFE

New data collected by the Mars Odyssey spacecraft now confirms the existence of vast oceans of water ice just below the surface of Mars. Based on my analysis of recent images coming from Mars, and other intelligence information there is strong evidence that intelligent life once existed on Mars and may continue to this day as predicted in Filer's Files #9 (Feb 27, 2002). As a former Air Force Intelligence officer my analysis is based on my interpretation of the Mars spacecraft images that clearly showed that there was water on Mars. Scientists often state where there's water there is life? There is now scientific confirmation of vast amounts Martian water. There is enough ice to indicate that ancient oceans, and a warmer climate, might have supported life. Scientists now confirm there is enough ice to flood the Red Planet if it melted. A BBC news leak has prompted a major science journal to lift its news embargo, and scientists are now verifying preliminary findings. The journal 'Science' will publish findings on May 31, 2002, confirming there are vast amounts of water. The scientists claim they have extensive data confirming a layer of hydrogen across much of the planet within three feet of the surface.

I also have confirmation of large amounts of heat being produced underground and the ruins of geometric structures at the surface. The heat correlates to areas suspected of having underground geometric structures inferring metropolitan areas may be present. A Martian civilization faced with diminishing atmosphere, lower temperatures, and bombardment by meteors would logically go underground for protection. My analysis of this data indicates that intelligent life once existed on Mars, and most likely went underground in the past and likely still exists. Our own robots or astronauts travelling to Mars would be able to use this water making Mars a more hospitable place. My own interpretation of NASA images clearly indicates that life, even advanced life forms have existed on Mars. See URLs:

EUROPA HAS RAW MATERIALS FOR LIFE

Hazel Muir 19:00 22 May 02 www.newscientist.com

There is good and bad news for the prospects of finding alien life on Jupiter's moon Europa. The raw materials for life do exist on the moon, which is thought to have a liquid ocean under its icy surface. But we may never get to look for any life there because the frozen crust is at least 19 kilometres thick.

Elements such as carbon are crucial to life on Earth. But nobody knew if Europa had large enough amounts of these elements to make life possible. To find out, Elisabetta Pierazzo of the University of Arizona in Tucson and Chris Chyba of the SETI Institute in Mountain View, California, calculated the numbers of large comets that hit Europa's surface since it formed.

Assuming the comets' make-up were similar to that of Halley's Comet, the impacts would have dumped between one billion and 10 billion tonnes of carbon on the moon's surface, along with a billion tonnes each of nitrogen and sulphur. If micro-organisms in Europa's ocean mopped up all the carbon, they would now populate the oceans to levels of about one per cent of their counterparts in Earth's oceans.

But could a space probe ever sample the ocean to look for bugs? Some scientists thought that the overlying ice was around a kilometre thick, in which case a lander might one day be able to burrow through. But that was too optimistic, says Paul Schenk of the Lunar and Planetary Institute in Houston, Texas.

Schenk compared Voyager and Galileo images of craters on some of Jupiter's moons with craters on the rocky surface of our Moon. On Europa, all the craters more than about 30 kilometres across have concentric rings, which could be "ripples" created when a comet or asteroid smashed into the ice powerfully enough to "feel" the fluid ocean beneath. If so, the pattern suggests the ocean lies more than 19 kilometres below the ice.

SEVENTY SEVEN NEW PLANETS AND COUNTING

The Ames Research Center reports that outside our solar system there are now 69 planetary systems. There are 77 planets and 7 multiple planets systems. Science is now starting to add credibility to my assertion that there is life on other planets. Many of the stars being examined have planets, many have multiple orbiting planets all indicating planets similar to Earth and able to support life are common in the universe. Furthermore, some of these planets have likely sent messengers, and are at this moment or have, in the past, have visited Earth. If we take a moment to examine the evidence we find almost every major group on Earth claims to have been visited and taught by visitors from other planets. Throughout our planet there are structures that cannot be explained. Many such as the pyramids could not be built today to the specifications that exist in the ancient monuments. The ancient history or almost every major religion, speaks of visitors from space. Many aborigines and Indians believe they were transported to Earth.

Numerous religious leaders readily accept the concept that God could have created and planted life on numerous planets throughout the universe. We can assume that a type of morality was also provided for us. Most civilized people can agree that certain standards of behaviour or laws are normal for a civilized society. Many great religions teach that commandments were brought to Earth from alien messengers often called angels. Today within the US, judges are ordering the removal of the Ten Commandments from schools and public places. The Commandments that man should not murder, steal, and lie. These commandments provide the minimum standards for man to enter the universe and live in peace with other civilizations. The moral teachings of ancient Egyptians, Babylonians, Hindus, Greeks, and Romans are surprisingly similar to our own today. There is a kind of law of human nature, that we all agree to, but don't necessarily follow. This seems to be bred into our genes. If we realistically examine the human race, we can speculate our Earth may be the home for problem or unlawful type personalities of the universe. However, we seem to be born with an inner knowledge of what is right or wrong, what we ought to do, not what we do.
