

15/4

PEGASUS

Surrey Investigation Group into Aerial Phenomena

PEGASUS

Volume 15, #4

President: GORDON MILLINGTON – president@sigap.org
 Chairman: IAN WHEATLEY - chairman@sigap.org
 Vice-Chairman: PAUL WHITEHEAD – vchairman@sigap.org

Belmont, Markenfield Road, GUILDFORD, Surrey, UK. GU1 4PF

TEL: 01483 578419 Web-site: www.sigap.org

THE SECOND COMING?

According to Dr. Michael E. Salla (1), a reputable academic who has long researched the political implications of the ET presence here, the real goal of the current US and UK intervention in Iraq is to gain access to certain ancient ET sites in southern Iraq, to learn about the advanced technology used by the Anunnaki inhabitants of the planet Nibiru and to prevent that knowledge being acquired by Saddam Hussein, whose sponsors in this are France and Germany. The main site of interest is the ancient city of Uruk (the biblical Erech), now known as Warka. According to the Sumerian chronicles translated by Zecharia Sitchin, Uruk was the site of a magnificent temple dedicated to Anu, the Anunnaki leader, and there is a description of his state visit there which concludes with the lines:

“... and the gate shall be opened before the gods Anu and Antu, bringing to an end their overnight stay.” (2)

Archaeologist William Henry believes that the “gate” referred to is a device he describes as a “Stargate”, which the Anunnaki used for travel between Nibiru and Earth. Dr. Salla writes: “It may be argued that the Bush administration and the Hussein regime are both in a race against time to gain access and control of the Stargate in the ruins of Uruk ... before the prophesied return of the Anunnaki.” According to the Sumerian writings, the planet Nibiru returns to the centre of our solar system every 3,600 years. In conversations with Zecharia Sitchin I always felt that, without making any definite statement, he gave the impression that he guessed the return of the Anunnaki to be imminent. Perhaps George Bush and Tony Blair, Bilderbergers both, have a more precise knowledge of the coming event? But in any case, as Margaret Thatcher is said to have remarked in a similar context: “You can’t tell the people”. And they won’t!

G.M.

(1) Salla.M.E. “The Need for Exopolitics”, at www.exopolitics.org
 (2) Zecharia Sitchin, “The Twelfth Planet”, Avon Books, N.Y. Ch.4, P.93.

The following is an article by Michael E. Salla, mentioned above:

ST GEORGE AND SADDAM'S SECRET TREASURE

In popular myths, the fire-breathing dragon guards a precious treasure from rivals, thieves and heroes. The Dragon doesn't know how to use the treasure, and simply guards it until vanquished by an all-conquering hero. In the popular myth of St George and the Dragon, St George rescues a captive Princess by slaying the evil dragon in a desperate fight. The motifs of dragon, hero and treasure are the stuff of legend and have been retold many times. In fact the myth of St George is a Christian retelling of the earlier Greek ‘pagan’ myth of Perseus. A new version of St George and the Dragon is now emerging on the international arena as President George Bush prepares his military forces against the regime of Saddam Hussein.

In his role as St George, President Bush instinctively knows that the dragon, Saddam Hussein, will not surrender its treasure without a fight, and will have to be slain. The unfolding drama is as old as time itself and the final outcome can be easily predicted. What is not so clear is: what is the treasure at the centre of the conflict? According to President Bush, the treasure is a world free of weapons of mass destruction and terrorism. For President Bush's critics, the treasure is the abundant Iraqi oil fields that will power the global economy with cheap oil for another decade. There is, however, another treasure that is not well known due to a very successful clandestine government program that is global in reach. Iraq's treasure chest of extraterrestrial technology.

Clandestine government organizations, from at least 1947, have been reverse-engineering captured extraterrestrial technology. Rather than unsubstantiated science fiction, as some critics contend, such a view is supported by more than a hundred former government and military officials who played official roles in these clandestine programs or in the associated cover up. These former officials, most of whom face severe financial and legal penalties for disclosing classified information, revealed that much of the popular technology we now take for granted, fibre optics, the micro chip, and super tenacity textiles, owe their origin to reverse-engineered extraterrestrial technology.

This takes us to Iraq's secret treasure. The Sumerian scholar Zecharia Sitchin translated thousands of cuneiform tablets, and discovered that the civilization of Sumer that flourished in the territory of present-day Iraq, was aided by extraterrestrial visitors. These extraterrestrials, the ‘Anunnaki’, played a key role in developing Sumerian civilization in 3800 BC, and then mysteriously left around 1800 BC. What they left behind were more than just stories of humanity's extraterrestrial connection, but advanced technology that has lain hidden for millennia.

This extraterrestrial technology far surpasses the technological proficiency of the regime of Saddam Hussein, who is certainly aware of its existence. While he may be devoting his regime's resources to exploiting this technology, it is very unlikely he can reverse engineer it. Therefore, like the mythical dragon, President Hussein can only marvel at his extraterrestrial treasure without knowing how to use it. On the contrary,

US-based clandestine government organizations have much experience in reverse-engineering extraterrestrial technology, and want to gain unrestricted access to Saddam's treasure. However, given the grandiose aspirations of President Hussein, these organizations have decided that little can be achieved through negotiations. Thus there is a need for President Bush to play the role of St George, leading his military forces into Iraq to conquer the 'evil' dragon.

An important insight in the unfolding drama is that, rather than the treasure belonging to a covetous President Hussein, or to equally covetous clandestine government organizations, it belongs to all humanity. A war fought over such a treasure chest of ET technology would be disastrous, since it would demonstrate little but greed motivating both sides. There is no 'good' or 'evil' side in the conflict over Iraq's secret treasure. What is required is full disclosure of the hidden motives of the parties in this conflict, and a genuine effort to negotiate a satisfactory resolution. Saddam Hussein will not relinquish his treasure without a fight, but he can be persuaded to relinquish control of the treasure if he were suitably 'rewarded'.

Finding a solution that rewards the role of President Hussein in making available the assets of Sumer's extraterrestrial technology for the benefit of the global community is a challenge, given the propaganda build-up to a US led pre-emptive war against Iraq. Nevertheless, if humanity is ready for the technology of Iraq's ancient past, then the diplomatic challenge is something that needs to be met and overcome. Only a diplomatic solution will prove that humanity is ready to exploit the technology of Iraq's extraterrestrial heritage to ensure a united and prosperous future for the planet.

Copyright © Michael E. Salla, PhD (Feb 10, 2003)

Forward as you wish. Permission is granted to circulate among private individuals and groups, post on all Internet sites and publish in full in all not-for-profit publications.

Contact author for all other rights, which are reserved.

For on-line link to this article and for author information go to:

<http://www.exopolitics.org/>

THE HUNT FOR THE CHUPACABRAS IS ON

Allegations of NASA Offering A Reward

From Dr. Virgilio Sanchez-Ocejo, Miami UFO Center
ufomiami@prodigy.net Date: 4-7-3

The Miami UFO Center has learned that there have been reports of several armed searches in various parts of Chile and Argentina in order to find a humanoid creature believed to be the blood predator known as "the chupacabras." Due to the severity of the financial losses of farmers in light of recent animal mutilations, the search parties not only consist of law enforcement personnel, but angry civilian farmers are taking part as well. A group of farmers in Do'ihue, Chile, have begun a well-organized search since last Wednesday, after numerous reports of dead farm animals began to horrify the entire town. According to some villagers, the attacks have been so severe that they have suffered great financial losses. The animal mutilations believed to be caused by the alleged creature have been over two hundred, including chickens and bovines.

Cristina Saldña and Carmen Cortès, two of the property owners affected by the financial losses due to the animal mutilations described the scene. According to them, their dead chickens were completely dry. "The carcasses appeared to be without a drop of blood in them," they said. Many villagers believe the "bloody creature" might be hiding in the local vineyards. Some skeptics, including Veterinarian Jorge Troncoso, say the animal deaths might actually be caused by an epidemic. Others attribute the deaths to the usual "wild dogs" or mountain lions. However, when these wild animals attack, they normally consume their prey and not just suck their blood.

There was a particular group of farmers that were found setting up traps for the alleged humanoid creature, and conducting night search operations. These farmers and hunters say that they were told by some individuals claiming to be "NASA personnel" in the area that they would receive a million dollars if they capture a chupacabras, dead or alive.

Another similar search operation has been taking place in the neighbouring country of Argentina, in the city of Rosario. Last month, Judge Mario Dilascio from the Southern Judicial District of Rosario ordered an intensive police search throughout the city.

The search began in light of several police reports filed by many of the local residents, many of them claiming to have been attacked by a humanoid creature in the wooded areas of the city. However, this particular creature appeared to be significantly larger than the one described as the "chupacabras." The alleged beast appears to be the Argentine version of the Yeti, according to many eyewitness descriptions. All the eyewitness testimonies corroborate. They all mention a strange large creature, about two meters tall, with long ears, shiny reddish eyes, strong and powerful arms, and hands with long curved fingernails, apparently as sharp as blades.

"We have gathered a great deal of eyewitness testimonies and interviews with people who claim to have seen a large hairy human-like creature, apparently very ferocious, and capable of attacking human beings," said Police Chief Roque Farlàs. "The Province Magistrate has taken charge of the case. He has issued us instructions to conduct two operational phases. Phase one will basically consist in verifying the truthfulness and validity of these eyewitness claims, as well as the actual existence of the alleged creature.

Phase two will involve the actual search and capture of the animal. We are going to try to capture it alive."

The chief provided additional details of the search operation. "The search operation would consist of 14 officers from the mounted police. They will search the Rosario River Area, heading north. Six additional officers will search the neighbouring areas surrounding the city dump, where a family of nearby residents reported seeing the creature as close as ten meters from their residence. A third patrol car with four officers will search the vicinity of Salado Brook, where in mid-February a couple was attacked by the alleged beast. Each team will include members of the Crime Scene Investigative Unit 3, in case any physical evidence, such as tracks, hairs, or fingerprints would require to be analyzed," said Police Chief Farlãs. Miami UFO Center has not received any recent updates about this search; therefore it is not known if the search is still ongoing.

In Cachi, Argentina, several investigators interested in animal mutilations cases have arrived. Some of them, including a few journalists, are interested in the reports of humanoid sightings. One particular French journalist by the name of Jean-Jacques Mandel is interested in the chupacabras phenomenon. He is an editor for Geo Magazine. Mandel is in the area conducting interviews and investigations to determine if the reports about humanoid creatures are real, or if they are just the product of mass hysteria. Mandel has also travelled to India to investigate the sightings of another humanoid creature known as "the monkey man." More UFOs Seen In Chile (Source: Terra.cl). The wave of UFO sightings in Chile continues to be ongoing since it began on mid-February. On March 21, several flying objects were observed at around noon in the area of Providencia, in Santiago. According to many eyewitnesses and television footage, the object appeared along with a group of lights in the northeast part of the city.

A television camera crew interviewed several eyewitnesses. According to them, the object was very big, circular in shape, very bright, and it seemed to be accompanied by other, smaller objects. Some eyewitnesses reported seeing up to seven objects around it. The smaller objects appeared to be spheres.

Roberto Rasse was one of the eyewitnesses. "At first, I didn't know what to make of it. It was strange because it happened right when the war with Iraq started. I called a friend of mine who knows about UFOs and told him to bring his binoculars. When he saw it through the binoculars, he said that there were many smaller objects around it, around 50 of them. Then, it flew away very rapidly," he said. After taking a better look with the binoculars, Cristian Aguirre said that the main object did not appear to be solid. It appeared to change shape. According to some reports, the air force said that the objects were not seen on radar.

On the day before, another UFO was seen in the city of Calama. An eyewitness by the name of Rodrigo Castillo reported seeing the flying object when he was driving from Calama to the neighbouring city of Antofagasta, in northern Chile. According to him, the object followed his truck for about two minutes.

"It was about nine o'clock at night. As I was driving, I noticed a very bright object in the sky. It suddenly began to get closer to my truck. It had an intense brightness. It continued following me for about two minutes.

I stopped the truck, and the object kept on moving in the direction I was travelling. It did not emit any sound. It was not an airplane because it was very quiet. After I stopped, it was gone within seconds," said Castillo.

Translation by Mario Andrade, Reports gathered by Jaime Ferrer, Calama UFO Center

LETTER TO THE EDITOR of Research Institute of Anomalous Phenomena:

DID THE MAORI KNOW ABOUT THE RING OF JUPITER?

Sir,

Discussing the origin of the anomalously high astronomical knowledge of the Dogon [1], it would be very important to search for and, if found, to analyze similar anomalies in mythologies of other peoples whose levels of cultural development are comparable to that of the Dogon. In this connection, I would like to draw the readers' attention to a strange astronomical conception discovered among the Maori, the native inhabitants of New Zealand, by the ethnologist E. Best (1856-1931). They call one of the planets that can be seen with the naked eye Parearau [2, pp. 43-44]. The structure of this word is rather intriguing: the word pare denotes a fillet or head-band, and arau means "entangled". "Her band quite surrounds her, hence she is called Parearau", — say the Maori of this heavenly body, considering it a companion or wife of Kopu—Venus. There is also another interesting statement: "That green-eyed star is Parearau; that is the reason why she wears her circlet." As E. Best indicates, one should see here a reference to the mourning-cap or head-band formerly worn by widows of Maoriland.

So, which of the planets of the Solar system was designated by the Maori as Parearau? E. Best gives us a straight answer to this question: "Four old natives in different localities of the Bay of Plenty applied the name to Jupiter."

However, in Best's time it seemed absurd to describe Jupiter as a planet surrounded by a circlet. Probably, for this reason alone a certain Stowell, whose words were cited by Best, believed that Parearau was nothing but Saturn with its rings [2, p. 43]. Not rejecting this interpretation on principle, Best put forward another one: the word Parearau might designate the cloud belts on Jupiter. This opinion was later supported by R. Collyns, a New Zealander and author of several Ancient Astronaut books [3, p. 145].

Today we can however re-evaluate these data. What is of prime importance, we can no more "fear" the idea of Jupiter surrounded by a circlet. Jupiter's ring was discovered by the Voyager-1 space probe in 1979. Therefore there are at present no reasons to doubt the identification of Parearau with this planet. Judging from Best's book, the Maori were quite sure of that. For a mythological-poetical mentality it would be quite natural to consider Jupiter—the third brightest heavenly luminary in the night sky after the Moon and Venus—as the "green-eyed" wife of the latter. (The gender assignment of the planets is here opposite to the "European" one.) On the other hand, when speaking of Jupiter as Parearau (lit.: "entangled by a fillet"), the Maori meant a ring rather than belts. Headgear is a separate object, external in relation to the "head" (= the planetary body). One can suppose that if the Maori had wished to describe (in their system of notions) Jupiter's cloud belts, they would have compared them to their own custom of decorating the face with coloured patterns!

Now, everything seems to point to the fact that the Maori did know about the ring of Jupiter. This knowledge is, however, more anomalous than their supposed knowledge of Saturn's rings, and even more anomalous than many components of the Dogon astronomical lore.

Specifically, this fact cannot be explained away by the two hypotheses that were suggested to cope with the "Dogon problem"—the hypothesis of a primitive telescope [4] and that of a European missionary enlightening this African people about modern astronomy [5]. The Maori could not have seen the ring of Jupiter even if they had invented a telescope—simply because the ring cannot be observed from the Earth. As we know, it was discovered using spacecraft. To learn about the ring from a civilized traveller (say, from a missionary) would have been equally impossible. E.Best completed his field explorations as early as 1911, devoting the next two decades to analyzing the collected data and writing his monographs. At that period, science had no idea of Jupiter's ring, even a hypothetical one. (A little-known fact: the existence of the ring was predicted by the Ukrainian astronomer S.K.Vsekhsvyatskiy, based on repeated observations of a thin dark strip on the equator of Jupiter. Vsekhsvyatskiy interpreted this strip as the shadow of Jupiter's ring. But this happened only in the early 1960-s [6].)

All this suggests that the Maori could have obtained knowledge of this ring only from another civilization, one that surpassed mankind at least in the field of astronomy. Of course, to verify this hypothesis, we need weighty additional data proving that the New Zealand aborigines did in fact have contact with aliens. But the sole possible alternative explanation would be the hypothesis of a purely accidental coincidence between the mythological notion of Parearau, and our present-day knowledge of Jupiter. Such a possibility cannot be ruled out entirely, but to prove this supposition, it would be necessary to show the way in which the idea of Jupiter as "entangled" could have arisen in Maori mythology. In short, the enigma of Parearau can be solved only by a detailed professional investigation. Please consider this letter as an appeal for such an investigation.

References

1. Moffett I.P. Ancient E.T. Contact Source of Dogon Astronomical Knowledge? — RIAP Bulletin, 1997, Vol. 3, No. 3-4, pp. 4-11.
2. Best E. Astronomical Knowledge of the Maori. Wellington, 1955. (Dominion Museum Monograph No. 3).
3. Collins R. Did Spacemen Colonize the Earth? London: Pelham Books, 1974.
4. Vasilyev V. Kosmicheskoye Oko Dogonov (The Space Eye of the Dogons). — Vokrug Sveta. Moscow, 1978, No. 5, p. 31.
5. Roxburgh I.W., Williams I.P. The Dogon Tribe and Sirius. — The Observatory, 1975, Vol. 95, No. 1008, p. 215.
6. Vsekhsvyatskiy S.K. On Possible Existence of a Ring of Comets and Meteorites around Jupiter. — Astronomicheskij Zhurnal, Moscow, 1962, Vol. 39, No. 2, pp. 290-302.

Source: <http://www.geocities.com/riap777/maori.html>

"Apparently they've stopped the train to search for an illegal immigrant"

UFO CRASHES IN RUSSIAN HARBOUR NEAR BALTIC FLEET

Source: Filer's files - www.Georgefiler.com

KALININGRAD, RUSSIA -- Skywatch International Inc. reports that James L. Choron provided information regarding a crash of an unknown craft on Friday, April 18, 2003. The entire Russian Baltic Fleet and a large number or residents of Kaliningrad (formerly Koenigsberg), a city of over 3 million inhabitants in the Russian Baltic enclave on the Baltic Sea, watched in awe as a "flying wing" -shaped UFO winged over rapidly and plunged into Kaliningrad Harbour at 6:17 PM, local time. The event was caught on videotape by a local RTR Russian State Television news crew, which was present on the massive naval base filming a documentary segment on the fleet for airing on Russian television. The UFO, described as a "Flying Wing," with two elongated, dome like protrusions on top, and three similar structures underneath, was overflying the Baltic Fleet. According to a Russian Naval Commander, the craft was apparently caught, accidentally, within the sweep patterns of ship-mounted search radars, which came on to track its progress, causing some sort of malfunction which resulted in the crash. "It was travelling at a tremendous rate of speed" he said to RTR reporters, on the scene. "It was very low, not more than 1,500 meters (5,000 feet) altitude, when our radars came on. It simply winged over, and dove into the water, as if it has lost either power or control." The light-grey coloured craft, with no apparent "seams" or rivet patterns visible, was estimated by onlookers to be the size of a small airliner, and travelling at speeds in excess of Mach 2 (twice the speed of sound), was absolutely quiet as it passed, but made a "tremendous noise" as it plunged into the water, causing a geyser of steam and water, mixed with small debris, which shot an estimated 500 meters (1500 feet) into the air.

A civilian onlooker said that "whoever was in control of the craft made a deliberate effort to take it away from the naval ships and the shoreline before it went into the harbour." One Sovremennyi Class Destroyer was slightly damaged by flying debris, but, so far, no casualties have been reported. Radiation levels at the site are high, but the source of the radiation, as well as its nature, have yet to be determined. Russian authorities from the Ministry of Health are quick to point out that the radiation levels are not dangerous, simply "higher than normal." So far, debris recovered have been small, averaging less than a meter (just over three feet) in diameter, at the largest. Most debris recovered to date have been what appear to be "skin material" of an unknown alloy, and interior bracing and piping, composed of a very high grade and extremely pure aluminium. All metal debris have been dispatched to various institutes and universities for analysis, including the prestigious Bauman Institute of Engineering in Moscow, and the Moscow State University School of Metallurgy. It is considered highly doubtful that any significant remains of crew, if, in fact, the vehicle was piloted, will be recovered. "This looks like your basic 'hair, teeth and eyeballs' situation", one Russian Navy diver said, somewhat grimly. It is interesting to note that, in spite of the high speed at which the craft was travelling, and its extremely low altitude, there was no characteristic "sonic boom" associated with its approach, and no noticeable vibration on the ground. This has led many observers, especially those associated with the Russian military establishment, to speculate that the propulsion system of the craft was based on some sort of "antigravity" device. "Whatever it was," said one Russian Naval Captain, "it was certainly not one of our craft, and I am also not aware of anything of this sort being present in the West." The immediate area of the crash will be dredged, starting in the next several days.

The entire episode is noteworthy in that it was not only captured on videotape by an RTR news crew, but was instantly aired, not only on RTR, but on all major Russian Network television, via a live feed from the RTR crew in Kaliningrad. Updates have followed on each regular news broadcast, since the initial downing. Russian Government officials are quick to point out that the downing was, in fact, accidental, and not a "shoot down."

Divers, however, report that the water in the vicinity of the crash is, in fact, noticeably several degrees warmer than normal. The water surrounding the crash site is, understandably, reported to be "murky", with extremely poor visibility. This leads many of the divers and supervisory personnel to speculate that at least one relatively large fragment might exist. Wintersteel enjoys a very good relationship with the Russian

Navy, as well as with the mainstream Russian media, and will be posting photographs of the site, and debris recovered, as soon as they become available. Thanks to Skywatch International and James Chorton, Wintersteel.

http://wintersteel.homestead.com/UFO_Crash_Ru.html.

George Filer's Note: It seems a crash of this magnitude would be reported world wide. It seems that if we wanted to obtain intelligence on the Russian fleet, satellites would have been used rather than a low flying craft. The Russians and the US are thought to own craft of this description.

ALL IN YOUR HEAD

 confusion of correlation and causation (e.g.,... Andean earthquakes are correlated with closest approaches of the planet Uranus: therefore - despite the absence of any such correlation for the nearer, more massive planet Jupiter - the latter causes the former).*

(from "The Fine Art of Baloney Detection" in The Demon-Haunted World by Carl Sagan)

A few weeks ago, one of my fellow guides, the Neurosciences guide to be sure, posted a feature called "Alien abductions, seismic activity, and the brain - are they related?" The article was about the "Tectonic Strain Theory" and the claims made by its leading proponent, Michael Persinger.

As we have seen, this theory claims to find a correlation between UFO sightings, alien abduction phenomena, and seismic activity or tectonic stress. We saw last week that the UFO data that was used in the correlation studies was often unreliable and that, at any rate, the theory's proponents have failed to define any mechanism by which tectonic stress can be experimentally shown to generate discrete aerial luminous phenomena in general, and objects fitting the varied descriptions of UFOs in particular.

The theory's main proponent, Dr. Michael Persinger, is not deterred by this. If tectonic stress can't be shown to directly create UFOs, then he proposes that it creates them indirectly, by acting in some fashion on the brain of the UFO witness. Here's the alternate process, as TST critic Chris Rutkowski puts it so simply:

1. Strain is produced in the Earth's crust
2. Strain produces an electromagnetic discharge
3. The electromagnetic discharge affects human perception
4. A person believes that he or she has seen a UFO

The theory doesn't stop with UFO sightings. It also claims that these electromagnetically induced hallucinations may be responsible for alien abduction experiences, religious experiences and ghosts.

To understand this part of the theory, it is necessary to understand a part of the brain called the temporal lobes. The temporal lobes are areas of the cerebral cortex in each hemisphere of the brain lying at the side within the temple of the skull. Areas of the temporal lobes are involved in the appreciation of sounds and in speech and are also involved with the olfactory senses. It has been suggested by research that people with greater electrical activity in the temporal lobes of the brain are more imaginative and more artistic than other people. (Does this sound like the famous "fantasy-prone personality" as well?)

When this part of the brain (and/or the hippocampus) is affected by injury or disease such as temporal lobe epilepsy, some or all of the following symptoms may occur according to Robert J. Durant:

1. Paranormal/mystical experiences
2. Enhanced imaginings (especially from childhood)
3. Widening effect
4. Vestibular (floating, low frequency vibration) sensations
5. Anomalous smells
6. Intense episodes of personal meaning

Note that these symptoms are very similar to those that are sometimes produced by hallucinogenic drugs, such as LSD, psilocybin, mescaline, etc. They are also similar to effects reported by some people who have had religious experiences.

Who is Dr. Michael Persinger? Dr. Persinger is a professor at Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ontario, Canada who has been studying the effects of electromagnetic fields on the temporal lobes for years. According to an article no longer on the Internet, Persinger's studies have been partially financed by the U.S. Navy through Dr. Eldon Byrd. Also according to that article, Persinger has been, if not a member of the Aviary himself, close friends and associates with at least two purported "Aviary" members: Jack Vorona and C.B. Scott Jones. He is said to have done ...research on the effects of electromagnetic radiation on the brain for a Pentagon weapons project. Persinger, although his work on the Tectonic Strain Theory involves the disciplines of geology and neurology, is neither a geologist nor a neurologist. He is a psychologist, according to his autobiographical sketch. Also from his autobiographical sketch is Dr. Persinger's statement of the purpose of his research:

As a human being, I am concerned about the illusionary explanations for human consciousness and the future of human existence. Consequently, after writing the Neuropsychological Base of God Beliefs (1987), I began the systematic application of complex electromagnetic fields to discern the patterns that will induce experiences (sensed presence) that are attributed to the myriad of ego-alien intrusions which range from gods to aliens. The research is not to demean anyone's religious/mystical experience but instead to determine which portions of the brain or its electromagnetic patterns generate the experience. Two thousand years of philosophy have taught us that attempting to prove or disprove realities may never have discrete verbal (linguistic) solutions because of the limitation of this measurement. The research has been encouraged by the historical fact that most wars and group degradations are coupled implicitly to god beliefs and to the presumption that those who do not believe the same as the experient (experienter - Ed.) are somehow less human and hence expendable. Although these egocentric propensities may have had adaptive significance, their utility for the species' future may be questionable.

In order to test the effects of magnetic fields on the brain, Persinger and associates have devised a helmet outfitted with solenoids that are attached to a computer in order to magnetically stimulate the brain of the wearer. The helmet/computer combination can selectively stimulate different parts of the brain of the wearer with predefined patterns of magnetic field stimulation. For a description of the helmet see Examining the Earthlight Theory (www.keelynet.com/ufo/earthlgt.txt).

In a CNI news story, Jay Ingram of the Canadian Discovery Channel relates how he went to Persinger's lab to try the helmet. Ingram didn't see aliens, he merely felt a "presence."

In fact, most people who wear the helmet DON'T see aliens. They merely "feel a presence". The ones who DID see "aliens" saw them under special circumstances: a particular pattern of magnetic stimulation was applied to their frontal lobes, and with their eyes closed, a flashlight was pointed at their eyes and slowly lowered, then later the flashlight was raised. This very specific set of stimuli produced an abduction hallucination. See Examining the Earthlight Theory.

The Tectonic Strain Theory and the research that has been conducted leave me wanting the answers to several questions:

1. In order to obtain an abduction-like response from the subjects, researchers had to direct a particular pattern (computer-controlled) of magnetic stimulation to a particular part of the brain. Even if seismic activity or tectonic strain does indeed release magnetic energy that reaches the surface in sufficient strength to affect someone's behaviour, it certainly does not beam it into that person's frontal lobes in a particular pattern. So, how does the helmet prove anything about abductions? The answer is that it doesn't. It doesn't prove anything about them. What it proves is that a combination of sensory isolation and a helmet that directs magnetism in specific patterns to specific areas of the brain can produce some psychological effects. We know that some drugs can do the same, and that sometimes sensory deprivation alone can also produce such effects.

2. In order to obtain an abduction-like response from their magnetically stimulated subjects, researchers had to shine a flashlight at them and slowly lower, then raise it. Who's shining a flashlight at abductees?

3. Are TST proponents claiming that abductees have more magnetically sensitive temporal lobes than other people? TST researchers have not verified that abductees are being exposed to magnetic fields at the time of their abduction experience. In fact, they seem to be doing little actual study of the abductees themselves. We are all regularly exposed to magnetic fields of even greater strength than those used in the helmet experiments. Magnetic fields/EM fields are generated by every power line and every electrical appliance in our homes and even stronger ones are generated by machines in many workplaces. If electromagnetic fields from far underground can cause abductees to hallucinate, then why don't stronger and nearer electromagnetic fields cause abductees to hallucinate? (See how the Sagan quote above applies here...) To say that these everyday electromagnetic fields aren't the "right kind" won't suffice as a response to this unless you prove that tectonic strain DOES produce the "right kind" of electromagnetic fields (If, indeed, there is a "right kind".).

4. There must be tectonic stress release with accompanying EM fields when abductees are in the presence of others, at work or at play. Why no effects at those times?

5. On the other hand, if abductions are merely temporal lobe hallucinations of those with sensitive temporal lobes, how is it that there are sometimes multiple abductions, such as Betty & Barney Hill, or the three women who were abducted in Kentucky, or the four men in Maine? In these multiple abduction cases, everyone had the experience. If our premise is that some people have abduction experiences because their temporal lobes are more sensitive to magnetic stimulation, then we would expect there to be cases where some people in a group (those with sensitive temporal lobes...) would have an experience, yet others (those with less sensitive temporal lobes...) would not have any experience at all.

It seems to me that the way to test the TST's possible relationship to the abduction phenomenon would be:

1. Show that the temporal lobes of abductees are more sensitive to magnetic fields than those of "normal" people. (Test them for unusual temporal lobe electrical activity. Expose them to EM fields while they are hooked up to an EEG - electro-encephalograph - Ed.)

2. Show that these people are being exposed to unusual electromagnetic fields when their abduction experiences are occurring by monitoring their environment.

3. Show that the source of these magnetic fields is tectonic strain by correlating seismic activity at the location of the abductees' homes with the magnetic field monitoring that was done in #2.

4. Show that exposure to the type of electromagnetic fields that tectonic stress generates causes these people to have an abduction experience by recreating the same type and intensity of EM field in the laboratory. (An abduction experience, not just a feeling of a "presence"; not a test using a computer-generated "pattern" of magnetic stimulation; no flashlights, either.)

5. Do these same things with a control group of individuals who have never reported being abducted by aliens.

Is the Tectonic Strain Theory a good explanation for UFO sightings? Is it even good science? I'm still looking for the answers...

Source: <http://ufos.about.com/library/weekly/aa041299.htm>

GEORGE W. BUSH: HIS UFO STORY

By Grant Cameron

"As President watchers know, we have a President who likes secrecy. He has hired tested leak-proof and loyal staffers, effectively sealing the Bush White House. He has had his records as the Governor of Texas hidden, shipping them off to his father's Presidential library, where they are inaccessible. He has stiffed the Congressional requests for information about how he developed his energy policy - refusing to respond. Not since Richard Nixon has there been as concentrated an effort to keep the real work of the President hidden, showing the public only a scripted President, as now." - John Dean, former legal counsel to President Richard Nixon

"It would be easier if I was a dictator." - Statement by George W. Bush shortly after becoming President

As the Clinton administration came to a close, many researchers inside the UFO community were becoming aware that they could, with a little effort, influence the White House attitude and actions related to the UFO situation.

One of these efforts to influence the process was undertaken by Peter Robbins, a British researcher, and co-author of the best-selling book on the 1980 Rendlesham Forest UFO case "Left at East Gate." His effort involved attempting to confront the candidates who were competing to succeed Clinton in the White House.

In December 1999, Robbins and some of his colleagues began Campaign Watch 2000. The campaign was designed to act as a pressure group contacting presidential campaigners, and compel them to deal with the UFO question. As part of the plan, every one of the candidates for President in 2000 election was asked the same three questions:

1. Will you grant immunity from prosecution to military and intelligence officers who are prepared to blow the whistle about the Government's knowledge of the UFO issue?

2. Will you order the release of classified government documents related to the UFO issue?

3. What statement will you issue concerning the public's right to access government-held UFO information?

Peter Robbins wrote to all of the 2000 presidential candidates to answer the three questions, and hopefully obtain their comments on the UFO subject. When it came to Governor Bush, Robbins came up against a brick wall. Robbins reported that he "had written, faxed, e-mailed and telephoned the candidate and his headquarters since early December 1999 . . . to no avail." Not even Certified Mail, requiring a signature from the recipient, seemed to make it to the destination. It was the first indicator that Bush and UFO openness didn't mix.

The second strong indicator that Bush was not open to UFO disclosure came from the experience of John E.L. Tenney, the co-founder of M.A.I.N, or the Michigan Anomalous Information Network. His efforts to get campaigner George Bush to talk about UFOs met with the same failure that Peter Robbins had experienced.

On February 22, 2000, Governor Bush made a campaign visit to Tenney's hometown of Royal Oak, Michigan. Tenney planned to ask Bush about UFOs during a scheduled meeting between local residents and Governor Bush at a local restaurant.

Governor Bush's advance people selected the people who would be in the restaurant (Jimi's, Coney Island). After answering a series of screening questions, Tenney was picked to be one of the people to meet with Bush.

Due to the large number of people in the restaurant, Tenney decided that his best time to ask Bush about UFOs would be when Bush was exiting the restaurant, so he waited outside the restaurant for Bush to leave. He chatted with the CNN crew that was also waiting for Bush to leave.

As Bush exited the restaurant, Tenney shook hands with Bush, and asked him, "As a presidential candidate, would you like to issue a statement concerning the American public's right to access whatever information the United States government currently has available on the topic of UFOs...?"

According to Tenney's recollection of the event, no sooner had the word "UFO" come out of his mouth, when a Texas Ranger with Bush grabbed him by the arm, pulled him out of the crowd away from Bush, and turned him around. Another Texas Ranger pushed Bush into a van, and the van quickly left. Tenney recalled the event,

I was instantly turned around by a Texas Ranger, Mr. Bush was pushed into a van, another Texas Ranger grabbed my arm and pulled me out of the crowd and before I knew it Mr. Bush was gone. "What was it all about?" I asked the officer who pulled me away from the crowd. He shook his head and walked away from me without saying a word. The crew from CNN came up to me and the camera-man said, "Well that was weird. It was like they knew you were going to say something strange."

Despite a positive July 2000 experience researcher Charles Huffer had in asking Bush about UFOs, the experiences of Tenney and Robbins ended up foreshadowing President Bush's clear, utter disregard of the UFO problem.

Once Bush became President, there were other signals that UFO disclosure was far from the President's mind. Voters who had written the President about their UFO concerns were totally ignored.

A prime example can be seen by looking at the responses sent out by the Bush White House staff in response to questions about Dr. Steven Greer's UFO Disclosure Project. The Disclosure Project was a project initiated by Greer "working to fully disclose the facts about UFOs, extraterrestrial intelligence, and classified advanced energy and propulsion systems."

On May 9 2000, as a part of the Disclosure Project, Greer held a Washington news conference at the National Press Club that involved twenty high-level witnesses. Each of them spoke about their official, secret role in the government's UFO cover-up.

Due to the fact that the event created a large amount of media interest, it was hoped that the Bush administration would be positive in its reaction to the witness statements, and to the idea of now disclosing the truth about the UFO situation.

The responses received from the Bush administration to people writing to the White House about the UFO Disclosure Project, and the May 9th news conference, however, were anything but positive. Kevin Ketchikan from Woodlands, California, for example, wrote President Bush about the Disclosure Project and received a response back from Deborah Hair, Special Assistance to the President. Hair's letter resembled that of an ill-prepared student attempting to bluff a short answer question for which she had not studied:

The President appreciates the interest and thought which prompted you to write. Because of the large number of similar requests received by the White House, I must decline your request, I am sorry this must be a disappointing response. Thank you for your understanding.

Another writer, Lance Cassino, received this letter from the Office of Bush's Vice-President.

This is to acknowledge that your correspondence has been received by our office. At this time, we have forwarded it to the appropriate individual for review.

Donald G. Ewing wrote a letter to President Bush related to the Disclosure Project. On July 31, 2001, he also received a letter in reply, which made absolutely no reference to the UFO question he had asked. The letter, surprisingly, was actually signed by George Bush himself.

I believe Government should be active but limited, engaged but not overbearing. Your views are helpful as my staff and I work with Congress to address our obligations to our citizens and to meet the Nation's pressing needs.

Michael Rieker wrote a letter to Bush asking for UFO disclosure. In reply, Rieker received this letter from Deborah Hair dated August 7, 2001:

On behalf of President Bush, thank you for your letter. He appreciates hearing from the American people about their concerns and welcomes their suggestions. President Bush is strongly committed to pursuing policies and programs that meet America's priorities and address our needs. By working with Congress and focusing on results, his Administration is making significant progress on an agenda that is worthy of our great country. In support of this goal, President Bush welcomes the ideas and opinions of all Americans. Thank you for writing to him, and best wishes.

The answers received by the voters questioning the President about the UFO Disclosure Project were disappointing, but they were much better than the replies coming to other voters who had written to President Bush regarding UFOs. Some received no answer at all, and some received letters from agencies they had not even written to. None of the reply letters contained the word UFO, or anything similar.

One such person was Robert Barrow, who had exchanged more than one letter with both Congressman Gerald Ford and Senator Robert Kennedy on the subject of UFOs. On August 13, 2001 Barrow wrote a letter to President Bush asking for answers to the UFO mystery. His letter read in part:

Dear Mr. President:

The international controversy surrounding the existence and identity of unidentified flying objects (UFOs) has troubled many people from all walks of life for decades. My reason for writing is to express my fervent hope that you will use your Office and influence to get to the bottom of the UFO issue. You will agree, I know, that it is the responsibility of this government to tell the people the truth . . .

I believe there are people out here, kicking around the UFO research area, who have high hopes that you will address the UFO issue during your term. Some are scientists and some are current and former high-ranking military personnel. I feel there is much to be said to the American people, unsettling or not, and the rewards of a renewed scientific investigation may be overwhelming.

Whatever the facts, I hope you will publicly deal with the UFO subject once and for all, and head us in some direction with integrity . . .

In a P.S. to the letter, Barrow reminded George Bush that Bush had undergone pilot training at Moody AFB in Valdosta, where Barrow had run an independent physical therapy clinic for the pilots. "I know well that those who fly for the military are a special kind indeed," wrote Barrow. "A disturbing number are also on record with dramatic UFO encounters, of course, and I think they who risk their lives daily in defence of the free world, in particular, deserve answers."

Barrow sent his carefully written letter, but despite the common Moody AFB background that Bush and Barrow shared, George Bush did not reply: "I actually did not get a reply from the White House," wrote Barrow. "My letter was unceremoniously shoved off to NASA, and a representative sent me the customary NASA handout."

The Briefing of the New President

Many UFOlogists were aware of the efforts by Laurance Rockefeller to brief President Clinton in an effort to bring a disclosure of long-held UFO secrets. When it came time for a new President to take office, some of these UFOlogists made plans to brief the new President. They hoped to avoid the mistakes that had been made in the efforts to get UFO disclosure adopted by the Clinton administration.

One group who began discussions about what lobbying efforts should be made included Ronald Pandolfi, the scientist who had acted as CIA liaison to the Clinton White. Pandolfi had been invited to a supper meeting with Dan Smith, Joseph Stefula, and Gus Russo, despite his reservations about briefing Presidents on the subject of UFOs. Pandolfi felt that "the various intelligence agencies are in no way bound to cater merely to official curiosity," and that if the CIA Director makes a determination that the President shouldn't know, then "indeed the President does not have a need to know. Period." The group met in mid-November 2000, just after the election, and during the time of uncertainty in the Florida voting recounts.

The participants were invited by Joe Stefula, a New Jersey UFOlogist, who had previously met and corresponded with the CIA's UFO expert Pandolfi. Gus Russo was a journalist/author/experimenter who has attended two previous meetings with Dr. Pandolfi. Dan Smith was also a friend of Pandolfi, who had been used by Pandolfi to leak UFO information into the research community.

The plan for the briefing was to go through Nancy Bush Ellis, the sister of George Bush Sr., who was a neighbour of Dan Smith's sister. While attending Yale University a young George W. Bush had spent a lot of time with the nearby Ellis family.

The plan to brief President-elect Bush failed. Dan Smith's sister would have nothing to do with the idea, and Pandolfi refused to cooperate, because according to Dan Smith, he did not want to "rock the boat." Despite this setback, this author was told in November 2001, that Dan Smith still planned to brief President Bush.

Dr. Steven Greer also had plans to provide the new President with information on UFOs, and had at least one member of "the team" who had run Governor Bush's campaign for President in one of the biggest states.

Greer felt, however, that these types of Presidential briefings rarely had the desired effect, and had given up on using Presidents to achieve disclosure. He had learned this lesson following President Clinton's refusal to do anything after two briefings that Greer had provided for him. Clinton had sent a message back through the briefer to Greer simply saying "I can't do this but you can."

Greer had publicly stated in 1999 that the effect to motivate Clinton was dead: "The President is not inclined to take the risk to do this. We have this – We know this for a fact."

The September 11th Effect

The events of September 11 were a great setback for the hopes of a UFO Disclosure. It had become a time of war where principles of openness, disclosure, and the brotherhood of man were exchanged for secrecy, a limiting of personal freedoms and principles of the Constitution, and revenge projected towards perceived evil in the world. Anyone who opposed this new militaristic world view was quickly labelled unpatriotic, and a provider of aid and comfort to the evil forces aligned against the United States.

UFOs suffered from a lack of focus that affected also every other aspect of society and thought. Charities not directly aligned to the terrorist attacks quickly saw money they would normally get being channelled towards the bombing victims. Those who had died in the September 11th events suddenly became the only victims in America.

Public issues such as health care, new roads and social security suddenly took a back seat to the perceived terrorist threats and their effects on the economy. The issue of UFO and a disclosure of the truth went from a trivial issue to a non-issue.

During the first days following the terrorist attack, even UFO message boards and E-mail groups did not discuss UFOs. A major national UFO convention was cancelled. The Santa Clara, California UFO Expo continued on, but many speakers did not show, either because they had a hard time getting a plane, or they felt "it would not be proper to speak, in light of what had happened."

The World UFO Congress in Laughlin, Nevada held its convention to only a fraction of the usual crowd, and with many speakers missing. All the speakers tried to tie their UFO messages into what had just happened in New York and Washington, D.C.

Just as, during the time of the Vietnam War, when personal freedoms and thought were curtailed in exchange for United States national security and a victory on the war front, this wartime mentality will end. Once the war has ended and victory is achieved, the American people will again turn to questioning the morality of some of the things being done. They will also turn to issues such as UFOs, which involve principles of where the world as a whole is going, and re-examine higher principles of our place in the universe.

Until then, it appears that "secrecy" will be the watch-word of the day. It will be defended by a public wishing to be safe, and afraid of being declared unpatriotic, or an aide to the world's terrorists.

The terrorist situation created a situation where all the Bush White House had to do is say "protect the national security" to get greater latitude regarding secrecy restrictions. Examples of new secrecy include Bush's attempt to restrict who in congress could get intelligence briefing on the war in Afghanistan, in order to prevent leaks. The most telling sign the new Bush administration favoured secrecy over openness and disclosure: On October 29, 2001, when President Bush drafted Executive Order 13233 which would withhold a former President's or Vice-President's paper from public review even if the former President wanted the material released to historians. The move was a clear sign that UFO disclosure in a George W. Bush administration was a long-shot, at best.

In a world where UFO secrets thrive in the dark underworld of the unacknowledged black budget world, the new Executive Order will provide more protection for secrecy: "The executive branch is moving heavily into the nether world of dirty tricks, very likely including directed assassinations overseas and other violations of American norms and the U.N. charter," said Vanderbilt University historian Hugh Graham: "There is going to be much to hide."

The Bush move towards instituting blanket secrecy over Presidential records seemed, in part, motivated by 68,000 pages of confidential communications between President Ronald Reagan and his advisors that were opened under law in January, 2001, or twelve years after the end of the Reagan administration in 1989.

The records scheduled for release would have included confidential communications of George W. Bush's father, who had been Vice-President in the Reagan administration. The move to release the files was backed by the National Archives and the Reagan Library. The Bush White House however, prevented the release three times to "review constitutional and legal questions." Now, with the Executive Order, the files could remain secret for decades to come.

Another thing that the Bush administration feared from the release of the 68,000 pages of files, according to some historians, is that they would reveal less than stellar things about former Reagan officials who now work for Bush. Those included in this list would be Secretary of State Colin Powell, Budget Director Mitch Daniels Jr. and White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card. All were once aides in the former Reagan administration.

3. In late-December President George W. Bush made public the fact that he will use his presidential authority to sidestep a rule requiring the White House to provide Congress with written notice of U.S. intelligence activities. The CIA was even alleged to have been given secret powers to assassinate those considered enemies of the United States.

4. In December, the President increased the budget of the new less restricted intelligence community by 7%.

5. Cheney reportedly now provides information to the President in private, beyond the hearing of other top officials.

6. Even one year after coming to office Vice-president Cheney refused to release any information about an energy task-force he had headed in the early days of the Bush Presidency. On January 25, 2002 when the head of the General Accounting Office made public the fact that he would sue the Vice-president to obtain the subpoenaed material Cheney held his group stating he would release nothing.

7. Even the location of the formally highly-visible Dick Cheney has become a state secret. When asked about his whereabouts, reporters are usually told Cheney is in an "undisclosed location."

8. Most importantly, the White House has been able to coerce its top officials into keeping secrets. Much of this is attributed to the working of Cheney, bringing with him the corporate attitude of secrecy being a prized commodity. "I've been here 29 years, and I have never seen a White House this loyal," said Charles Cook, who publishes a Washington-based political report. "That translates to being tight-lipped." Asked about the apparent excessive secrecy, reporters have been told that the White House dismisses any negative connotation related to such statements, and actually takes these observations as compliments.

Does Bush Know?

Some feel that George W. Bush actually knows a great deal about what is going on regarding UFOs. Reasons advanced to support this belief include the belief that George W. has likely been given information by, or because of, his father George H. W. Bush.

Bush's father had some knowledge of the UFO situation because of his former role as Director of Central Intelligence under President Ford, his eight years as vice-president under President Reagan, and his four years as President.

A second reason people give for their belief that Bush is knowledgeable on UFOs is that he is a Republican president, and there is a general belief Republican presidents are told more than Democratic ones because they traditionally have had much greater support from high-ranking military officers who are more likely to have been "read in" on UFOs.

A third reason that is given for believing Bush has knowledge about the true UFO situation, is that he is surrounded by people who are part of the unacknowledged, unelected policy control group that makes decisions about the UFO problem. These members would include Vice-president Dick Cheney and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, who have been reported to have long held deep knowledge about the UFO situation, as is Secretary of State Colin Powell, who is also rumoured to have some knowledge on UFOs.

One of those who maintained that George W. Bush is not well-versed on UFOs was Dr. Steven Greer. In a Disclosure Project Town Hall meeting in Salem, Oregon, Greer described how the younger Bush had followed a different career path from the one his father had taken. This background has limited how much need-to-know he has for UFO information:

You have to understand that Bush (senior) was CIA Director prior to being President. He was of course, aware of the subject and had files. I don't think that he was in that top 25 of the pyramid. He was in that group of 200-300 that I mentioned before that we know about, and with some of them with whom I've met.

The current Bush - the son - was on a different career trajectory. He has people in his administration who are very aware of this issue . . . I doubt very strongly whether George W. Bush has much, and even if they have knowledge it doesn't mean that they have control. President Clinton used to say that the White House is the crown jewel of the federal penitentiary system. I think he realized quite quickly that the emperor had no clothes . . . knowledge of it and having effective control of it are two separate things. . . you cannot assume knowledge equals control. This is one of the dangers of this whole issue. We are supposed to be an institution of laws, but in reality, on the most pressing and important issues, these leaders whom we elect, are except in very rare cases, very poorly informed.

Whether or not Bush had much UFO information prior to coming to the White House, there can be little doubt that Bush has had some sort of briefing after becoming President, for a number of reasons.

The official who encountered Larry Warren outside the White House stated he was aware of the Disclosure Project. It appears, therefore, that the large UFO news conference at the National Press Club was having some impact inside the White House.

The Bush White House has also been the recipient of a great deal of UFO mail, perhaps equal to that received by President Jimmy Carter's White House. Much of this mail was generated by Dr. Greer's Disclosure Project which held a series of Town Halls all over the country.

In the town Halls, Greer had an organized method to get the hundreds of people attending to write to their Congressmen, and to President Bush. As well, Greer provided forms that could be filled in on the Disclosure Project home page where people could fax the White House by simply filling in a form.

The Bush White House was also under attack by California protester Lara Johnstone, who went on a hunger strike to get President Bush to address the UFO promise he had made to researcher Charles Huffer. Although the hunger strike ended after 44 days, Lara Johnstone did a number of interviews around the country about Bush's UFO promise, and did elevate the issue to some public degree.

The UFO Disclosure efforts taking place in the nation's capitol, and all the mail coming into the White House, may not have been seen as a major threat, but it did put the subject on the White House radar-screen. It even got the attention of the High Priest of the voice of the right-wing of the Republican party, Rush Limbaugh. Limbaugh actually came to Bush's rescue on the UFO issue. He took time on his show to attack Disclosure Project legal counsel Daniel Sheehan for his attack on the Bush father and son team for their handling of UFOs.

"So let me get this straight," Limbaugh stated. "The Bushes are at the heart of the vast right-wing conspiracy to keep the oil companies rich by hiding extraterrestrial solar panels or super-warm sweaters or whatever it is they showed Jimmy Carter."

Limbaugh made it clear he wasn't buying the idea that George Bush knew of, and was hiding, extraterrestrial secrets. "You may be surprised to hear me say that Mr. Sheehan is half right," Limbaugh says. "There is alien life - but we are not hiding it. We see Dick Gephart plain as day!"

As George Bush enters his second year in the White House, most UFO researchers agree that the Bush knowledge question will not be answered until after the new perceived threat from terrorism is completely dealt with. In fact, many would agree that everything in the field of UFO disclosure is on hold until that day as well.

NEWS IN BRIEF/ SIGHTINGS ROUNDUP

'TIME-TRAVELLER' BUSTED FOR INSIDER TRADING

Wednesday March 19, 2003, By CHAD KULTGEN

NEW YORK -- Federal investigators have arrested an enigmatic Wall Street wiz on insider-trading charges -- and incredibly, he claims to be a time-traveller from the year 2256!

Sources at the Security and Exchange Commission confirm that 44-year-old Andrew Carlssin offered the bizarre explanation for his uncanny success in the stock market after being led off in handcuffs on January 28.

"We don't believe this guy's story -- he's either a lunatic or a pathological liar," says an SEC insider.

"But the fact is, with an initial investment of only $800, in two weeks' time he had a portfolio valued at over $350 million. Every trade he made capitalized on unexpected business developments, which simply can't be pure luck.

"The only way he could pull it off is with illegal inside information. He's going to sit in a jail cell on Rikers Island until he agrees to give up his sources."

The past year of nose-diving stock prices has left most investors crying in their beer. So when Carlssin made a flurry of 126 high-risk trades and came out the winner every time, it raised the eyebrows of Wall Street watchdogs.

"If a company's stock rose due to a merger or technological breakthrough that was supposed to be secret, Mr. Carlssin somehow knew about it in advance," says the SEC source close to the hush-hush, ongoing investigation.

When investigators hauled Carlssin in for questioning, they got more than they bargained for: A mind-boggling four-hour confession.

Carlssin declared that he had travelled back in time from over 200 years in the future, when it is common knowledge that our era experienced one of the worst stock plunges in history. Yet anyone armed with knowledge of the handful of stocks destined to go through the roof could make a fortune.

"It was just too tempting to resist," Carlssin allegedly said in his videotaped confession. "I had planned to make it look natural, you know, lose a little here and there so it doesn't look too perfect. But I just got caught in the moment."

In a bid for leniency, Carlssin has reportedly offered to divulge "historical facts" such as the whereabouts of Osama Bin Laden and a cure for AIDS.

All he wants is to be allowed to return to the future in his "time craft."

However, he refuses to reveal the location of the machine or discuss how it works, supposedly out of fear the technology could "fall into the wrong hands."

Officials are quite confident the "time-traveller's" claims are bogus. Yet the SEC source admits, "No one can find any record of any Andrew Carlssin existing anywhere before December 2002."

Weekly World News will continue to follow this story as it unfolds. Keep watching for further developments.

Source: <http://tv.yahoo.com/news/wwn/20030319/104808600007.html>

THE MAJOR FIGHTING IS OVER IN IRAQ AFTER UFOs SEEN

NAJAF -- According to Joseph Trainor editor of UFO Roundup, on March 27, 2003, an oblong luminous UFO hovered over the holy city of Najaf located about 60 miles south of Baghdad not far from the ancient city of Babylon. A photo showing the unknown object, with a G.I. of the 3rd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division pointing at it with his forefinger, appeared in the newspaper Euronews. UFO Roundup correspondent Mohammed Hajj al-Amdar stated, "The UFO's appearance caused great excitement among the Shiites who saw it. They said it had come from Allah's Gardens of Bliss to protect the Tomb of Ali." Najaf is a holy city to Shiite Muslims because of the golden-domed mosque that stands over the grave of Ali, the son-in-law of the prophet Mohammed. Babylon and ancient Babylonia are located in present day Iraq. The looting of the museums is a great tragedy and every effort should be made to recover the lost artefacts.

On Sunday, April 6, 2003, UFO Roundup reports that about 1 AM, Baghdad time, five cylindrical UFOs were seen hovering over the Khulfafa mosque in the Shebab district, on the east bank of the Tigris River. The faintly luminous cylinders were "caught by a fixed, night-vision camera" and aired live on FOX TV (which would have been 4 PM, April 5, 2003 in the USA- Thanks to Joseph Trainor- Volume 8, #16, April 16, 2003.)

PRAVDA REVEALS ATTACKS ON UFOs AND KGB RESEARCH

In the April 1 edition of Pravda, Russian journalist Dimitri Sudakov claims that the attacks mounted by the military against UFOs are always unfruitful. In his article, UFOs Impossible, Sudakov reviews at least five real and documented incidents of attacks by military aircraft against UFOs, where they suffered no known damage. The journalist indicates that the first incident took place in October of 1944 in Europe. US Air Force pilots encountered several ball-like UFOs in the airspace. Pilots decided that they saw new secret Nazi weapon, which was rumoured a lot back in those days. Americans opened fire on those balls, although no bullet managed to cause any damage to them. Sudakov offers in its article concrete evidence that guarantee the reality of these facts, including the commission opened by Sir Winston Churchill in England in 1952 to investigate to the UFOs. Apparently, he was worried because no military weapons could damage the extraterrestrial craft.

Pravda also reports the KGB ordered 4 million soldiers to watch the sky in search of UFOs until the dissolution of the KGB and the Soviet Union in 1990. Yuri Andropov, leader of the Ex- Soviet Union's KGB, showed an acute interest in the UFO and ordered the creation of a program that lasted 13 years that forced each soldier to monitor the Russian sky in search of sightings. Igor Sinitsin, who worked with Andropov for six years in the Politburo, revealed that the Soviet leader maintained a file on the UFOs in his daily agenda. Sinitsin added that the KGB controlled what was published on this subject in many other countries. Both military and civilian UFO research centres were created under the direction of the KGB. Thanks to: <http://english.pravda.ru/society/2003/04/01/45389.html>

ARGENTINA MUTILATIONS RETURN

CUCHILLO CO -- TV producer Francisco FAZIO, reports there are many animals being mutilated in Cuchillo-Co, La Pampa. Some farmers and producers of the town of Lihuel Calel are upset by the repeated bovine animal mutilations on their farms. A young producer who has her field near Provincial Route 13, says, "I have had cattle mutilations since April 2002, right up to April 13, 2003, of this year without interruption." All Argentinean provinces have cattle mutilations with the same characteristics. "In 15 days I had six fat young black cows mutilated in a very good field with last occurring on Tuesday only 500 metres from the street and 4 kilometres from my house. On Friday, in General Acha there were similar mutilations". "They have perfect cauterized cuts of the testicles and vagina". "Its very strange because there are strong shocks on the body, similar to a hot fire". "These are no natural disease causes, no dogs, no native people of La Pampa, or no mice causing this economic damnation. Its a big problem, say the farmers"

By: Francisco Fazio. ufoargentina@yahoo.com.ar

Teléfono: 00(54)(9)(2345)659644

UK Man Photographs Police Helicopter Chasing UFO

Source:News Shopper.co.uk 4-23-3

An alien hunter says he has caught a UFO on camera with a police helicopter chasing it. Chris Martin, 42, was telephoned at home by his sister, Patricia Roberts, who was watching events unfold from her back garden at around 9.30pm. He rushed to Prince of Wales Road, Blackheath, near Mrs Robert's Lochaber Road home, where he says he saw a flying object being tracked by the chopper nearby.

Mr Martin, of Patrick Connolly Gardens, Bromley-By-Bow, says he filmed the helicopter focusing its searchlight on a light-emitting flying object. The father-of-one told News Shopper: "I can't say what it was, but it should not have been there, and was definitely a UFO.

"The police helicopter seemed to be chasing it and shining its searchlight onto it. I believe they were sent out to intercept the craft."

Martian-mad Mr Martin gave up his job as a session guitarist to study UFO sightings and suspected alien visits full-time in 1997. The extraterrestrial enthusiast, who had a book on the subject published in 2000, says the aliens do not come here just to see the sights.

He said: "I believe in life on other planets and I believe they visit us regularly in their alien craft.

"They come to collect information and gather genetic material by abducting humans and animals."

Mr Martin added: "The aliens are using their advanced technology to create hybrid species."

But police have denied any knowledge of UFOs in the area and have told News Shopper the helicopter was tracking a less unusual target on April 8. A spokesman for Greenwich police said: "A police helicopter was in the air, in that area and at that time, because of a traffic collision.

"A person was seen running away from one of the cars involved and a helicopter was sent up to help in the search for the man who was never traced.

"We were not responding to any reports of UFOs in the Blackheath area."

http://www.newssshopper.co.uk/news/lewisham/display.var.720854.index.man_phoned_at_home_to_go_ufo_hunting.html

#####

The views expressed in Pegasus are those of the articles' authors and are not necessarily those of the editor, or of SIGAP.

#####

UFO DISCLOSURE SURVEY RESULTS POLL

John Colaw, Membership Director of Skywatch International, ended his survey poll April 9, 2003, contacting 740 participants with interviews from 24 different news teams and radio shows from all over the world, which helped keep the poll from being skewed to only UFO lists. The results:

- 1) Have you ever seen a UFO? Yes (384) 53% No (191) 26%
Possibly (147) 20%.
- 2) Do you know anyone who claims a UFO sighting? Yes (549) 76%
No (171) 24%
- 3) Do you believe some UFO reports are extraterrestrial space vehicles?
Yes (607) 85% No (111) 15%
- 4) Do you believe there is a UFO cover-up within the US government?
Yes (588) 82% No (76) 11% Not sure (55) 8%
- 5) Have you read any books or magazines about UFOs?
No (77) 11% One or Two (147) 20% Three or More (495) 69%
- 6) Do you believe all UFO reports are mistaken or hoaxed?
Yes (79) 11% No (642) 89%
- 7) Do you believe in Angels? Yes (444) 63% No (261) 37%
- 8) Do you believe in Demons? Yes (365) 52% No (333) 48%
- 9) In your opinion, does the Bible mention UFOs? Yes (345) 48%
No (99) 14% Possibly (223) 31% Probably not (48) 7%
- 10) Do you believe aliens are benevolent? Yes (47) 7% No (30) 4%
Do not believe in aliens (51) 7% Some good, some bad (363) 51%
Not sure, but let's be careful (227) 32%
- 11) If UFOs and Aliens are visiting, should the public be told what governments know? Yes (587) 82% No (14) 2% Depends (116) 16%
- 12) Do you believe there is a connection between Aliens and Angels or Demons? Yes (176) 25% No (226) 32% Maybe (241) 34%
Do not believe they exist (73) 10%
- 13) Do you suspect you may have been abducted?
Yes (154) 21% No (459) 64% Maybe (105) 15%
- 14) Do you want to know the truth regarding UFOs/Aliens?
Yes (687) 95% No (21) 3% Not sure (12) 2%
- 15) Do you have an open mind regarding the UFO/Alien question?
Yes (695) 94% No (46) 6%.

Thanks to all those who contributed to this effort, including Bill Hamilton and Cliff Capers of Skywatch, Filer's Files, John Hayes of UFO Roundup. <http://www.skywatch-International.org>
<http://www.ufodisclosure.com>
