Newsletter

From the State Director

In this issue, I will summarize Katherina Wilson's presentation at last summer's MUFON Symposium entitled The Alien Jigsaw — A Fresh Look at an Old Puzzle. She had previously written a book, The Alien Jigsaw, and her talk was to be an update of that publication. Wilson began by suggesting that her presentation would deviate from the usual Hopkins-Jacobs scenario and deal a bit with teaching dreams and camouflage techniques. She feels that these kinds of events might tell us more about methods used by aliens and what they intend to achieve by interacting with us.

Wilson is an abductee and believes her experience began at age six. She would awake to find a piece of chocolate cake floating above her! After futile attempts to grab it, she eventually realized that the cake wasn't real. Then she would be flying naked over a gravel road seemingly in the presence of God. Aliens did not exist for her — only God had the power to speak "inside her head." She did not tell anyone of these experiences for 21 years.

During an abduction when she was 8 years old, she was told that she would have a small, fast-healing sore on her arm the next day. Sure enough, she awoke to find the sore which did heal in a day but left a small, scoop-marked scar. Twenty years later in 1969, she woke to a severe leg pain and blood on the sheets coming from, apparently, the scoop mark on her leg. The pain was so bad that she could barely stand up. Wilson says that if people mutilated themselves in their sleep, as skeptics would have us believe, scientists would have given the behavior a name! It would be known as some kind of disorder or syndrome. The fact that there is no name is because it is not a known behavior — people just do not self-mutilate during sleep.

Wilson describes a teaching dream as an experience during an abduction in which the person is an active participant. They are designed to let humans and aliens teach each other. The Blonde (Nordic?) is an alien type that has been involved in several of these experiences. One particular Blonde visiting Wilson can alter his appearance. She has seen him transform from a cat to a beam of light, and then back into his presumed real appearance. A transformation from a spotted-skinned being into a dog, and then back to himself was also observed. [What if Nordics are really Greys masquerading as humans? Moss.]

Wilson believes these transformations are carried out for different purposes. Some involved interest in her spiritual development, testing her ability to protect animals, and to feel empathy for animals and humans. She believes that she has been used as a tool to teach other aliens about the concept of the soul and everlasting life.

Another kind of experience has involved visions. She was given the vision of a courtyard wall being destroyed. The event actually occurred eight months later and she was almost killed as a result. Two other remarkable visions were described. During the first, she was shown a large tan dog and was made to promise that she would take the dog to Portland when she moved. She made the promise, even though she and her husband were planning to move to either Seattle or Vancouver, not to Portland. Eleven months later, she found a small tan puppy which today, looks like the dog in that experience. And yes, exactly one year later, they moved into a new home in Portland!

It seems that the aliens know long beforehand when Katherina is going to do something. About the time she published The Alien Jigsaw, she met another abductee, Doreen, who had seen Wilson three years earlier in a craft surrounded by female Greys. They were excitedly repeating the statement, "She's writing a book!" "She's writing a book!"

Camouflage techniques seem to be used often by the aliens and have been described by others under different names. It is an alien's ability to alter its physical appearance. Wilson has learned to sense alien camouflaging. Are polar bears really telepathic? No, but aliens are! Are penguins really eight feet tall, and can they levitate? No, but aliens can be quite creative! Because Katherina loves cats, a Praying Mantis-type female camouflaged herself as a cat to counteract Katherina's uneasiness. Wilson, however, wasn't fooled — she knew what was happening.

Another example of camouflage occurred when her mother and father were both on a craft with her. Her mother was complaining about how bad the service was in this "hospital." Her father was very upset because one of the aliens took the form of his aunt. Katherina, too, thought it was her great-aunt and walked over and hugged her. When she touched "the aunt," she realized it was really an alien and understood immediately that the aliens were using camouflaging to calm her father. During another situation in which she was presented with a child she believed to be hers, the appearance of the child was altered into a dog that looked half Labrador and half Cocker Spaniel (symbolizing the half-human, half-alien child). She believes the aliens made this change because she was becoming attached to the child and wanted to keep it. Nevertheless, even though the camouflaging changed its appearance, Katherina still felt the shape of the child in her arms.

Theatrics are carried out for distraction and deception. During an abduction, Wilson quizzed a female alien as to whether or not she worked with dogs, knowing that the alien did. Her intention was to find out if the female alien also experimented on them. The alien picked up on her thoughts, however, handed her a chocolate writing tablet, and decided they would exchange names and addresses instead! When aliens use theatrics, it is impossible to get any meaningful information from them.

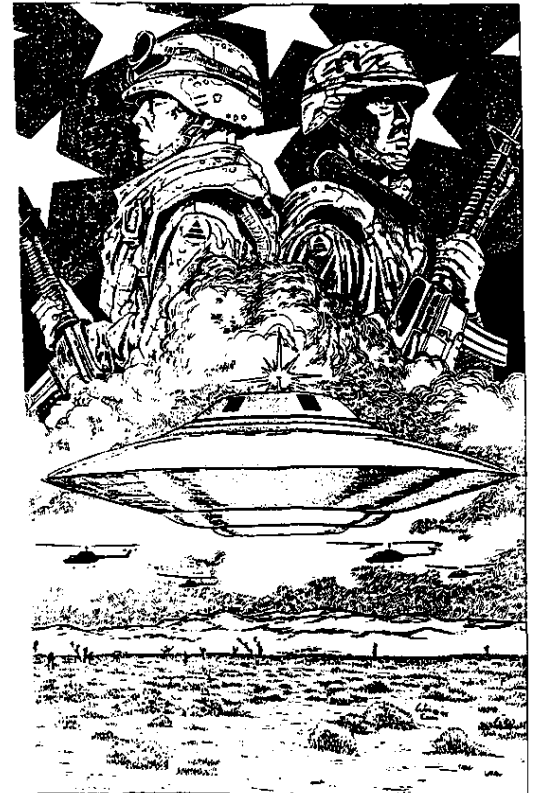

Wilson then describes four types of Greys followed by a discussion of government involvement. [Despite the fact that the sound track is very poor, I will show 15 minutes of these segments at the March meeting from the Symposium video regarding these descriptions.]

Katherina Wilson concludes that the alien-human hybridization program is only the tip of the iceberg. A possible outcome may be the development of a new kind of being with human characteristics, but who can exist in a higher dimension.

Michio Kaku is a professor of theoretical physics in New York. In his book, Hyperspace, he says that there is a growing acknowledgment among physicists that the universe may actually exist in higher dimensional space. Imagine being able to walk through walls, or having the ability to repair the internal organs of patients without ever cutting the skin! What being could possess such God-like power? — A being from a higher-dimensional world.

nformation or DISinformation

by William I. McNeff
Assistant State Director

Another source for information about the meeting in which an alleged "government representative" spoke to a group of UFO researchers has come to light. This source is a former MUFON member in South Dakota. By phone, she told me the meeting took place in Mesquite, Nevada in early December 1994. The "government representative" is associated with the CIA, and his name is Dan Smith. (Yes, supposedly "Smith" is his real name!) My informant knows the man's sister. Dan Smith is becoming fairly well known in ufological circles, as is this meeting, my informant explained. "Nobody," she said, "is quite sure what to make of Smith." She quoted him as saying, "If you have any secrets, don't tell them to me, because I'll take it straight to the CIA!" He claims to report to CIA man, Ron Tadolphi. Tadolphi is said to be well aware of Smith's involvement with ufologists, but laughs at the idea that Smith is representing the government. Smith's background is that of a physicist, and supposedly, at Johns Hopkins, he worked on the study of the brain using monkeys.

The Mesquite meeting was chaired by Dr. Richard Boylan. It lasted from 6:00 PM one evening until after midnight. (See the November/December 1995 Newsletter for details I published previously.)

My informant, who keeps in touch with Michael Lindemann, says Lindemann was invited but did not attend because he thought the meeting would be "silly."

In addition to UFO researchers, several abductees were invited to the meeting. At one point, Dan Smith met with the abductees, and told them if they would stop telling their stories, they would be "protected." Protection from whom or what, and how, I have not yet able to determine. Most of the abductees walked out of the meeting, very upset, and refusing to agree to keep still about their experiences.

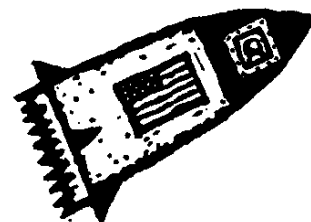

Because of her acquaintance with Dan Smith's sister, my informant felt bold enough to call Smith directly. When she asked him to confirm the alleged government three-phase ET education program which he alluded to during the meeting, he equivocated. Among other things, Smith told her that the aliens are expecting an earth cataclysm in 1998, and they will offer humankind assistance if they are invited to do so! These aliens are said to be a humanoid type that represent many other ET races. Smith wanted her to publish some of this "information" on the Internet!

Another item related to government involvement was indicated by my informant. It seems that Lawrence Rockefeller is said to be very interested in UFOs, and met with Bill and Hillary Clinton in July 1995 in Jackson Hole, Wyoming. Rockefeller, who has donated to Clinton's campaign, asked Clinton to sign an amnesty allowing all military personnel to publicly reveal their UFO-related experiences. According to my informant, a group of military personnel have decided to do this soon — whether or not Clinton signs such an amnesty!

Once again, I must explain that I don't know whether this is information or disinformation. It's interesting to ponder though, isn't it?! As the song goes:

"Off we go into the wild blue yonder..."

UFOs: Why Don't They Land on the White House Lawn?!

by S. Christopher Early,
GA MUFON State Director

They know better. Besides, they were seen all over Washington, DC in the 1950s. Our government, with its wealth of information, can't agree on the budget, much less on the subject of UFOs.

Human nature, being what it is, causes our scientists to seek electromagnetic signals from distant space. They cannot believe that they are already here! Some of our best UFO investigators wind up in violent disagreement over what happened when, where, to whom, etc. disinformation is often injected into what we consider substantial data.

From 1947 and before, there have been literally hundreds of thousands of sightings throughout the world. All of these people can't be faking it! There are those whom embellish their stories with science fiction. There are those with few credentials, who set themselves up as authorities in order to make a quick buck! yes, UFOs are a great mystery, but they are indeed a presence.

There is really a lot of physical evidence of substance (where are the chemists?) in addition to photographs, electromagnetic effects, ships with colored lights and gassy shrouds, pseudo gravitational attraction, immense acceleration and speed on radar, that defy our laws of physics. Here the scientific community has not looked far enough because the, like many others, are afraid of ridicule. I can understand that anyone who has a job with the "establishment" is reluctant to identify with this subject. UFOs just don't fit into that world! The tabloids are the ones that take up the subject with zeal, because of the entertainment value. However, I don't want to be critical because there is a good chance that the foreign entities, without the government's help, might want us to know just so much! Just two hundred years ago, anyone confronted with airplanes, automobiles, TV, electric lights, trips to the moon and computers would not believe it! If something more advanced comes to us from some place in the universe, or another dimension, we, like those of old, are reluctant to accept its' presence.

Is there a message? UFOs must know a lot about us. I believe they reveal just enough to get the wheels in our brain turning. We UFO investigators are a special lot. We probably will be the first ones to walk through the window of a new reality. We are curious and want to know the truth — whatever that is. I believe they want to change something in us, so that we begin to examine our spiritual values. Perhaps there are those who might seem good or evil, who come from different places. Read Childhood's End, a classic fiction by Arthur C. Clarke.

Is it morally right for some entity to take someone out of their bedroom in the middle of the night, for an examination, [while that person is] in an induced subconscious state? Like the KGB, they don't even ask! Some people have their lives disrupted mentally. In those cases, I suggest prayer to a higher being. There are some people who enjoy it — they get attention — [perhaps] they live somewhere in the boonies and it's the greatest thing that ever happened to them!

What is reality, anyway? We know it is framed somewhere in the gray matter at the top of the spine. It must be some sort of composite of all our sensations and experiences in life. Perhaps no two humans have the same concept of reality. Do you wake up in the middle of the night and ask yourself, "Who am I — where did I come from? Where will I go after this world?" Stop for a moment: You, as a human being, can say "I AM." No other plant or animal, derived only by evolution, can contemplate that statement. In religious history this simple profound awareness is allied with God.

My main message is that UFOs are telling us to look within ourselves and see what we are doing to this planet. We cannot exploit it forever. material greed can swallow us. Developers will not leave a square foot of nature for our children to enjoy. Fossil fuel can be burned as such an exponential rate that the heat will have nowhere to go. Nuclear fuel rods can proliferate (con't) to the point of being a living Frankenstein.

There are those who do not believe, no matter what they see. They want exact personages, or idols, at an exact time and place in history. The children of Israel followed a pillar of fire by night, and a cloud by day. They were fed each morning by manna which fell from the sky. [And what do you suppose they were following...and who was feeding them?/] If a very advanced entity in the universe wanted to reveal himself to man, knowing man's simplicity, how would he do it? Perhaps, with his advanced knowledge of genetics, he could impregnate some ideal virgin from a disciplined race of people he had earlier created. This "messiah" would possess the nature of his father who is unseen! One who could raise the dead and cause the blind to see! Best of all, to cause those that love him to have bountiful lives, regardless of adversity, and have the will to preserve the beautiful planet his father created. Is this possibility a reality — or just another fiction?

"I do not wish to alarm anyone, but..."

by Gordon-Michael Scallion

If you're a listener of the Art Bell radio program on Sunday nights (see info on Meeting page), you're familiar with Mr. Scallion, editor of Earth Changes Report. Here, he provides a summary of his track record to date, and offers some sobering warnings for the near future. he believes severe earthquake activity is imminent for the west coast of the US. Draw your own conclusions.

On December 3, 1995, Japan's Kuril Islands were hit with a magnitude 8.0 earthquake. This quake was predicted to occur in December (see Earth Changes Report, November, 1995) and is the first of four events I have predicted for the time frame beginning December 1995. Each of four predicted events may occur, within weeks rather than months of each other, beginning from the December 3, 1995, 8.0 earthquake in Japan.

The complete prediction as published in Earth Changes Report (ECR) is as follows:

In 1995 a pattern of four earthquakes shall occur three times. Each time, quakes will occur first in Japan, followed by the South Pacific or Indian Ocean, then South America, and lastly, the West Coast of America.

- The average magnitude of cycle one shall be 6.5.
- The average magnitude of cycle two shall be 7.0.
- The average magnitude of cycle three shall be 8.0.

Cycle one begins in January/February 1995. Cycle two begins in May/June 1995. Cycle three begins in December/January 1995/1996.

Quakes in each cycle will occur within weeks, rather than months, of each other.

First 4-Quake Scenario

On January 17, 1995 a magnitude 7.2 quake hit Kobe, Japan. A few weeks later on February 5, a 7.5 quake hit New Zealand. A few days later on February 8, a 6.5 quake hit Colombia, South America, and eleven days later, on February 19, a 6.7 quake hit Northern California.

Second Quake Scenario

On May 27, 1995, a magnitude 7.6 quake hit Japan. On July 3, a 7.1 quake hit the South Pacific, and on July 30, an 8.1 quake hit Chile. Six weeks later, on September 14, a 7.5 quake hit the West Coast of Mexico.

I do not wish to alarm anyone, but I sense we are very close to major geological events to occur in the US and elsewhere. As a futurist, I see myself as a type of weather person. If I see the potential of a disaster occurring, I look for early warning signs, much as a weather person might look to barometric readings as a signal of an impending storm. My early warning signs are visions received months or years in advance, that show patterns, i.e., if this occurs and this occurs, then the potential is high that this will occur. Both early cycles of my predicted Four-Quake Scenarios have occurred, both as to time, location and magnitude range. I do not know what the statistical odds are of all these elements occurring, but I sense it is high enough to warrant careful consideration of the next cycle's possible occurrence.

In the October issue of ECR I added a new element to the third

Four-Quake Scenario prediction. If the second event in this final cycle should occur in the Indian Ocean rather than in the South Pacific, then the fourth quake in the cycle will hit somewhere in the West Coast of the United States. I have been predicting that the next significant quake in the West Coast US would be within a 50-mile radius of Palm Springs. However, my visions also indicate that no less than three separate cities shall be hit by 1997, in domino fashion, by quakes greater than 8.0: Sand Diego, Los Angeles, and San Francisco. Epicenters within 50 - 100 miles of the cities.

I pray the visions I am seeing are wrong...

I feel it is important to watch the Indian Ocean region very closely from this time forward. Should a quake greater than 8.0 occur, then within weeks rather than months, a magnitude 8.0+ quake will hit South America, and then the US within weeks of that event. Unlike earlier Four-Quake Scenarios, the current cycle may proceed much quicker, occurring within days of events in some cases. Any activity in the Indian Ocean from this point forward should be considered a potential precursor to activity 50 miles either side of a line drawn from Vancouver, British Columbia to Eureka, California, to Palm Springs, to San Diego, to the California Baja.

I pray the visions I am seeing are wrong and if it should turn out to be so, those who are within those areas will be better prepared when it does occur. The scientific community and I are no longer so far apart in our predictions. The only difference between us is the time frame and extent of damage. ☺

White Sands Missile Range — 50th Reunion

The following talk is of interest because it indicates that most members of a good-sized group of technical/military type personnel are interested and receptive to information regarding the UFO phenomenon. (JFD, 12-21-95)

On July 6th, I was the keynote banquet speaker at the 50th reunion of the White Sands Missile Range Pioneer Group. About 200 people were in attendance, all with military affiliation (of course, spouses were there too) of some kind.

The attendees included those "pioneers" who founded America's missile and rocketry program out of White Sands., representatives of the Department of Defense, Army, Air Force, Navy, people connected with Los Alamos, Sandia Labs, Lockheed Martin, NASA, private space program development, etc. — including Werner Von Braun's brother and the discoverer of Pluto. I was asked to come to speak to this group about the Roswell Incident, UFOs and ETs. I spoke for a little over one hour and showed many video clips (as well as slides). I stated that my talk was a plea to "open a door" to a new policy on this subject, a more open policy that would leave the days of cover-up behind — and I spent some time establishing the nature of the cover-up.

After disarming the audience with the observation that perhaps I should be tarred and feathered as the Hollywood producer who took the story of New Mexico's most famous UFO incident and filmed it in Arizona, I delicately compared the impasse in the way UFOs are regarded to other crises and “blind spots” toward scientific data, from Galileo, Darwin and Tesla to Velikovsky.

Reaction to the speech was interesting. There was an immediate rush of congratulation, of heartfelt thanks...

Then we jumped in to some powerful Roswell testimony, seen on video — statements of Jess Marcel (“it was not made on this earth”), Barry Goldwater on how Curtis LeMay thwarted his efforts to get to the bottom of the UFO and crashed spaceship controversy, and widows of Roswell servicemen who repeated deathbed statements of their military husbands about the Roswell crash having been of something otherworldly, with alien bodies. I showed Michael Lindemann’s recounting of Victor Marchetti’s words in CIA and the Cult of Intelligence about the reasons for the cover-up, plus stunning footage of Area 51 that showed a craft in a “falling leaf” descent pattern, which has been described for flying saucers since about 1947.

Banquet attendees also were shown excerpts of Disney’s recent documentary that was introduced by CEO Michael Eisner, called “Alien Encounters.” That documentary was hard-hitting and basically said “they’re here, some in authority have known it for a fact for 50 years, and get ready for the floodgates of information to open in the foreseeable future as policy changes are around the corner.” The audience also was shown excerpts of Reagan’s comments about the effect on the world if we discovered aliens from space, made at the UN.

Other evidentiary excerpts were shown, too. I ended the presentation with an unusual choice — an excerpt from the great classic film “Inherit the Wind” starring Spencer Tracy and Fredric March — about the famous Scopes trial, concerning the banning of teaching of evolution in the schools in Tennessee. A key scene in which Spencer Tracy (playing a role based on Clarence Darrow) declares that the trial is about the right of a man to “think” — and that all he cares about is “Truth” — and “Truth” may be a lot closer to Darwin than the 6-day creation scenario of Genesis. I drew the analogy starkly — we’re at another watershed moment in history. similar to the impact that the theory of evolution had on society. When the ET, UFO, extraterrestrial artifact information begins to see the light of day, by way of leaks extending to declassification and open acknowledgment — at that moment we enter a new intellectual era. My implication was that it may be soon upon us.

Reaction to the speech (which was professionally videotaped, and which I hope to make available in the coming two months or so) was interesting. There was an immediate rush of congratulations, of heartfelt thanks — of requests to take my picture standing next to the US flag, etc. The next day it became clear there were some frowning naysayers in the group. There were objections from some skeptics and from those subscribing to the “But we know none of this is real” school of thought.

Regardless, I seemed to make many new friends, and a nice follow-up to the talk was the following morning when we trekked out to White Sands Missile Range from the Hilton Hotel where we had gathered to see the launch of the Delta clipper-X. Pete Conrad gave a public debriefing on the launch afterwards. There was a fair amount of press coverage on the whole conference/reunion (which included many military panels discussing contemporary military issues — especially those relating to funding cut-backs and their effects — and reminiscences of early days at White Sands). [There was] also some TV coverage.

How did I get to be the keynote banquet speaker?

Good question. Seems that one of the organizers from White Sands was married to a lady whose photo appears in a group shot in the book UFO Crash at Roswell. His wife was a neighbor of rancher Mac Brazel, where the controversial debris was gathered.

He inquired at the two UFO museums in Roswell as to who they should get to be a speaker on the subject, and both museums recommended me. Other inquiries about me were made — and it led to the remarkable “encounter” I’ve described above. Hopefully, the “walls” came down a little more for all concerned, as the day when we all have more “hard data” on UFOs and what the phenomenon really means draws closer at hand.

In the near future, I intend to put the White Sands speech, along with highlights of the White Sands event, onto a video to make available to interested parties. If anyone would like to be on a list for notification when the tape is ready, please contact me c/o Cover-up Video.

“It’s Time To Remember,” Oregon Woman Advised During Encounter. Housewife, college graduate, Joy Gilbert used to think contactees were “nutty.” That was before, however, the bright, articulate 46-year-old was clandestinely swept away herself, and then given the message that has now inverted her world. On the night of January 31, 1993 at a Sisters, Oregon rustic lodge, Gilbert had retired about 10:30 PM just after noticing a “billiant, blue-white light” outside. She assumed it to be out-building security floodlights. Upon entering the alpha wave stage of sleep, she was disturbed by four “beings” that seemed to materialize — emerging through the sliding glass door. As her husband slept peacefully, Gilbert was levitated by the beings to a “silvery-looking corridor with rounded walls,” then to an examining platform. She was operated upon, sans anesthetic, but without terrible pain. Gilbert says the “doctor” extracted an alloy object from deep inside her body. The object allegedly consisted of two triangles [fused together? Ed] that were four inches in breadth, metallic yet pliable. The alien surgeon held the object so that she might examine it, and he gave her an odd message. “It’s time to remember,” he said — and she’s been doing so ever since! She admits that the beings bore a resemblance to “angels” but is hesitant to use that term. She feels that they have definitely been watching over her much of her life, helping her, even as a child. Gilbert’s episode ended by being escorted back to bed where the clock read 4:30 am. Her husband was still sound asleep. Everything was normal, but she was “missing” six hours! She was confused, disoriented, and wondered what had happened to her. At first, she felt she had been “raped” but then was filled with feelings of “warmth, joy and love.” After much soul searching, discussions with immediate family, Gilbert put aside memory of invasive surgical procedures, and went public with the “high-tech reality” she says to have personally experienced. If you have a hankering to share experiences, thoughts about aliens, etc., you can write to Joy Gilbert at 1020 Green Acres Rd, Eugene, OR!

Cabbies UFO Shocker

Two British taxi drivers watched open-mouthed as a mysterious glowing ball of light with a long tail sped across the sky about Southampton.

Michael McMahon and Mike Swatridge were on the late shift for Streamline Taxis when they spotted the low-flying UFO. Mr. McMahon said, “It was fantastic! I’ve never seen anything like it before. It was a shining ball of light, almost as big as the moon, moving horizontally across the sky. It was shifting so fast! It was unbelievable.”
