THE MISSING LINK

Number 128

Volume 12

December 1992

$$$ FUNDS ARE ESSENTIAL $$$

We of Operation Right to Know have made much initial progress so far. On April 28, 1992, we organized the first UFO demonstration in history in front of the White House. We have lobbied Congress. We are building a national organization through our bulletin, The Right to Know Forum. We have been written about in the press, including the MUFON Journal, UFO, and Omni.

All funds until now have come from the personal incomes of the organizers. If we are to turn a small ripple into a mighty wave, we must obtain adequate financing. If you agree with our program, we ask for your financial support. Make your checks payable to:

Operation Right to Know
P.O. Box 2911
Hyattsville, MD 20784

Donors of $15 or more will receive a year's subscription to The Right to Know Forum. We estimate $5,000 as the cost of organizing the Second National March on Washington in July 5, 1993, and local actions elsewhere. For those who would greatly facilitate this effort by making a large financial contribution, please contact Mike Jamieson, Napa, Calif. 707-257-2102.

UFO

JASON HOOTEN

Several years ago, Jason Hooten started as Assistant Director with an organization for young person's interested in the UFO phenomenon, called IUIAP.

As a result of his involvement with this group, Jason started a Contact Center in his home town of Ft. Madison, Iowa. As such, he is the youngest Associate Director of the UFOCCI.

Jason has drawn several scenes that involve his memories of contact experiences. Perhaps directly attributable to this, he is Majoring in Art at Southeastern Community College.

We at the UFOCCI are proud of Jason and his accomplishments. We all know how hard it is to take on responsibilities that involve other people, and to STAND UP for what one believes in. Given time, Jason Hooten may become one of the most outstanding leaders in the field of UFOlogy. We are happy that he is with us for the time being.

Dear Aileen:

DEAR AILEEN:

I believe that the UFO phenomena communicates its messages through symbology and theatrics. Humans respond to a play or skit differently than they would to a direct vocalized conversation. For example, if I were to say to you "the Native Indians are suffering" it might mean very little to you.

However, if I gave you clothing to wear in the style of their culture and subjected you to derision, ridicule and deprivation you may experience a deeper sense of empathy and understanding. It is quite possible that the abduction phenomenon is one aspect of this very identical approach to our species.

There are thousands of fetuses which are aborted every day on this planet. Many of the tissues are retrieved by the scientific communities for the purpose of various medical experimentations. What if the intelligences behind the UFO phenomena were concerned about our apparent lack of respect for the sanctity of life? How would THEY best relay this to us? I submit that it is a possibility that some of the so called "abductees" are participating in a theatrical production where the VISITORS are playing the doctors, by control manifesting in the form of fetuses, and we are in effect the object of experimentation. In other words, the whole scenario is reversed. Only then could we truly sense, feel and understand what we are doing to an unborn child. All sorts of other things could be interjected into this "presentation". They may wish to portray to us various future possible repercussions of our own genetic tampering of the human species by doing a sample of it to "US". If we are forced to look in a mirror to see our faults, then perhaps we will change. The transformation that many abductees undergo may be indicative of the Visitors' wish for our whole species to metamorphosis. Perhaps only through these modifications of attitude, behavior and actions can we really hope to evolve.

Lorne Goldfader, Director, UFORIC, Vancouver, B.C., Canada

Dear Aileen:

It's good news hearing that you're continuing with the UFOCCI. Aileen, you've done a remarkable job creating and sustaining such a large organization. Many people don't know the effort and devotion you've given to furthering knowledge and cooperation in a generally maligned field. Let me state here that despite criticism, and lack of encouragement or help from others, you still have done wonders.

Both you, and the publication of The Missing Link, are greatly appreciated. Few seem to have said so publicly. So please let me now acknowledge you this way. You're GREAT! For so many years you were a direct intermediary for all of us space beings connected with Earth. (Are not we humans on Earth, also "in" space?)

TRO (Tetrov) stated in TML that he is a traveler from far beyond our solar system. There were detractors who doubted his validity. Now what opinions do they have of themselves?

In contrast, TRO accepted a courteous challenge to answer some worthwhile questions. And the answers give knowledge that no human being on Earth possessed. And now, with proper instruments, we can prove explicitly the validity of the answers, and implicitly the one giving them, by direct observation. (See June, 1992 The Missing Link, and Letter 6 High Over S. Florida, September 1, 1992.)

Therefore, I would like to publicly again acknowledge TRO:

Dear TRO:

Please accept my most sincere, profound, and effusive thanks for the planetary data. I'm thrilled beyond wordment. I assure you TRO, that wherever I have influence, in scientific circles and public media, you will receive credit for your disclosure.

In proper hands, your data will advance Earth's astronomy and space exploration. They are two "giant steps" (the presently unknown planets) far beyond what Neil Armstrong alluded to on Earth's nearest moon, Luna. These data will help complete the basis for understanding the local Sun "system" in which Earth humans live.

Humbly, Donald Nelson

P.S. Finished research pronunciation/spelling of American English. Devised nice-easy learn-usable forty-two letter phonetic alphabet ready for wholEarth dissemination. Is enough time left?

Dear Aileen :

Keith Powell's artistic impression, featured on the March, 1992 cover issue of TML, is definitely worthy of praise. He portrays his character, a wise old man, rejoicing in the birth of an alien child and enjoying an audience with two other neighborly alien humanoids. Observe how blessed they all look sitting Buddha-style with wide open, outstretched arms with palms turned upward facing the night sky, accepting the beam of light bestowed upon them; and observe, too, our little alien friends, one quietly caught up in the rapture of the magical moment, and the other with his index finger pointed straight up toward the mystical sky. A revealing gesture signifying the arrival of another newborn alien child, something for all of us to be blessed about. Mr. Powell clearly demonstrates through his artistic impressions, that our Love and Light (a treasured saying of yours, Aileen) is inseparable from theirs, because, after all, isn't it really all "One Love" and "One Light" under "One Universal Family"? For that, we thank him. A true visionary artist.

Speaking of TML covers, and giving praise, someone sure thinks highly of our alien comrades, so much so that s/he picture one amongst our statue presidents on the cover of TML May, 1992 issue. July's cover is definitely making a statement also. This alien is busting through the White House with half-moonlit eyes, shattering its governmental age-old conspiracy cover-up of the UFO-ET phenomenon. On both covers, the artistic impressions state a clear common message - no matter who sits at the helm, or what political bodies control the power, no man or authority can keep the reality of their existence hidden from the masses or from themselves, for there exists no armor capable of shielding the truth. Compliments to the designers of these covers, and to all the contributors not mentioned here, for their manifestations are equally significant.

What! about that article, "Deliberate Deceptions: The Big Sur UFO Filming," contributed by Bob Jacobs, PhD, in the April, 1992 issue of TML? He does an excellent job recounting his participation in an "official U.S. Government-ordered UFO cover-up" He says he was an officer in the United States Air Force (USAF) at the time in question (1964). He premises his story by reminding us how vicious and devastating the so-called "Press" is in reporting and misreporting information concerning UFO activity. That's a given by now. A lengthy discussion is then had describing the various devices used (with the Boston University telescope being the most important piece of machinery worthy of mention here); informing us that in September, 1964 he was responsible for "establishing a long range tracking site at Big Sur, California", providing Aerospace Division engineers and other personnel missile launch photograph to their needs, while also enlightening us of the following: 1) that there was "a total of 11 launches" from the Vandenberg Air Force Base in California "during a 30-day test run in September of 1/1964"; 2) that he believes one of those 9/64 launches was of an Atlas-F missile, equipped with an "American dummy atomic warhead," which was attacked and shot down with laser beam by an UFO, an attack which forms the basis of the USAF "governmental-ordered UFO cover-up;" and 3) that this whole program was some type of "Nike-Zeus (?)" test to "develop an anti-missile missile" for an underlying mission to establish an "enemy radar-defeating system."

Lt. Bob Jacobs says that this, almost third decade cover-up, transpired the following day subsequent to the filming when he was ordered to view the Kinescope recording at the Vandenberg base by Major Mansmann. When asked, "...what the Hell was that?", Lt. Jacobs said "It looks to me like we got a UFO." Major Mansmann, according to the article, then said, "Well, let's just say it never happened... this footage... never took place." Here lies the challenge folks - who can come up with that footage...?

Bob Jacobs also drew six (6) conclusions, which you will find on page 10. His first four (4) are fair statements in light of his article, but check out numbers 5 and 6. Aren't they interesting statements? There's no evidence to support his conclusions that the attack alluded to was "prearranged" by "someone in our government;" or that extraterrestrials gave us such a "demonstration.. for our benefit for some reason." According to the article, the event just happened. There is nothing to suggest that it was prearranged by anyone. Nor within three decades has there been any evidence shown to even suggest that communication from an alien has been received to confirm the conclusion that the event was a benefit demonstration. Yet, however, circumstantial evidence does suggest that conclusion number 6 may, in fact, have a scintilla of credibility to it since there exists record and testimonial evidence showing that such launches were, indeed, made during that September 1964 period. The actual footage will dispel doubts and further lend support to the multiple accounts attesting to the firm belief that such events are deliberate acts performed by aliens appointing themselves as guardians of our future world-wide survival.

Obtaining this footage appears to be a lost cause as Mr. Jacobs points out. He says folks (when, I do not know) like Eric Mishara, T. Scott Crain, Jr. and others have failed to do so. He also says that, although he has been asked to make a FOIA (Freedom of Information Act) request for the Kinescope recording footage in question, he refuses to make such a request himself and further believes that no one can succeed in obtaining the film. Well, it seems to me that this is opposite to the position being assumed, and that is that his "research interest" in the (UFO - E.T.) field continues to the present. Furthermore, it doesn't seem to help one's position to trash "The Press" and self-styled UFO debunkers for not giving the full and true coverage to this area of our lives it deserves, while simultaneously refusing to do the one thing necessary to champion that position, and that is, of course, to obtain the film itself, or, at least, to make a concentrated effort to do so. Not doing so frustrates the effort to add concrete substance to an event firmly believed transpiring nearly three decades ago.

On a different note, we all know Lozanna Elwood, right? In our Nov. 1991 copy of TML, she asked, "Will there be peace on Earth?" An age old question, right? Since the publication of her posed question, TML has not published any response(s) or answer(s) from any of us, although she concluded her article with a challenging question, "What will you have to say?" Her presentation is sound enough - save our planet; save our species. Erase "national boundaries" from "our minds and actions." Do not only say positive things, but THINK them also, for, as she correctly points out, power does emanate from our minds. So, we can be as powerful as we want to be in our search for the truth, as well as in our struggle for true freedom and peace on our planet, this earth. Let us conduct our activities in accord with that belief, the foundation of personal power. Let us stop the violence, the drugs, the hatred, all the selfishness and ugliness surrounding our daily lives. But, and here's the big BUT, we won't achieve this utopian goal, this fantastic ideal, this much sought after reality, if we do not change our approach in the way we interact with one another or if we don't readopt one very basic emotion we're all gifted with whether we choose to exercise and express it or not. Yup! You've guessed it - it is L.O.V.E. That profound emotion responsible for the most powerful acts we, as individuals, can personally perform. But, and here's another big BUT, the old cliché that, "You'll lose it if you don't use it," most certainly rings true and will so hold unless each and every one of us dons the mask of all masks, the Mask of Love. Maybe then, Ms. Elwood, there can be peace on earth, which we can take with us to share no matter where we travel throughout the "multiverse."

Sunshine to all of you, Danny Diaz

Dear Aileen:

I thought you might be interested in glancing at the enclosed article from Science magazine, because of its implication that if our science were to advance for another few thousand years or so, we would be able to fully understand how it is possible for a person to be whisked out of her bedroom right through a wall or closed window and into a hovering UFO. Physicists have known for quite some time that this sort of phenomenon is possible in the laboratory on the smallest of scales for the smallest particles. It's called quantum-mechanical "tunneling." Now, for the first time, some are learning that it is possible for this to occur within the macroscopic world (large scale, human-sized objects). As you see from the article, they call it macroscopic quantum tunneling (MQT). In order to be at all possible, the object being tunneled has to somehow be decoupled from its environment. We're just at the earliest stages of this -- learning that it should be theoretically possible without yet knowing how to do it outside of magnetic crystals no larger than about 2 millionths of a centimeter in diameter and at very low temperatures. No doubt a breakthrough in psychic understanding and abilities is also required before we'll make much more progress.

It's interesting that spokesmen for science will debunk anything that 20th-Century science can't understand the workings of, even though they should know that if alien intelligence and evolution are involved, what they could do should seem like magic to us. So, whenever science comes up with something "new" like this, they ought to take some notice in regards to the abduction phenomenon, even though it may only mean that instead of being 3,000 years behind certain alien science, we are only 2,995 years behind.

Best regards, Jim Deardorff

Cutting magnets down to quantum-effect size

The rules of quantum mechanics allow the safe passage of a truck through a mountain instead of over it. But for objects larger than an atom, such extraordinary events have an extremely low probability of happening because of the objects' size.

Nonetheless, theorists have suggested that quantum tunneling may occur not only in submicroscopic systems, but also on a macroscopic scale — in tiny magnets made up of several thousand atoms each. Using naturally produced magnets encased in protein molecules, researchers have now obtained a hint that quantum tunneling within a magnet allows a transition from one magnetic field direction to another to occur in large aggregations of atoms or ions.

"Our interest is in testing whether macroscopic quantum phenomena can be directly observed experimentally," says physicist David D. Awschalom of the University of California, Santa Barbara. The idea that quantum tunneling can occur in sufficiently small magnets also has important technological implications as a fundamental barrier to ongoing efforts to pack increasing amounts of information on magnetic tapes or disks.

To search for macroscopic quantum tunneling, Awschalom and his co-workers turned to a protein known as ferritin, which serves as a storehouse for iron in cells. Each protein molecule has a magnetic core containing about 4,500 iron ions. In this particular case, the spins of neighboring ions line up parallel to each other but in opposite directions to create what is known as an antiferromagnet.

"The whole magnet acts like one big quantum particle — one big spin — which could point up or down," Awschalom says.

To measure the exceedingly weak magnetic fields involved, the researchers used advanced superconducting sensors and performed their experiments at temperatures below 1 kelvin. They describe their technique in the Oct. 16 SCIENCE.

The measurements revealed that ferritin molecules strongly absorb electromagnetic radiation at a frequency near 1 megahertz. Awschalom and his colleagues attribute that absorption to quantum tunneling back and forth between two particular magnetic states.

"It's qualitatively consistent with all of the quantum-mechanical predictions in terms of temperature, field, and density — every parameter that we varied," Awschalom says. "Though some of the numbers are not in exact agreement, there is no other self-consistent explanation that anyone's been able to provide."

Other researchers remain skeptical. "I think their technique is very interesting and promising," says Anupam Garg of Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., "but I'm very doubtful that they're seeing macroscopic quantum coherence."

One problem involves uncertainties in the geometry of the magnetic protein cores. "If one were actually capable of making such small particles, one would have to be very careful in how one aligns them, and one would have to expend considerable effort characterizing them," Garg notes.

Similar concerns surround earlier work done by B. Barbara and co-workers at the Louis Néel Laboratory of Magnetism in Grenoble, France. Their findings also revealed an unusual magnetic effect that they attributed to quantum tunneling in ferromagnetic particles somewhat larger than those used by Awschalom's group.

"No one has yet done the conclusive experiment," says Philip C. E. Stamp of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver. "There are hopeful signs, but there is no proof."

Awschalom and his group are now looking for quantum tunneling in precisely manufactured magnetic particles about 100 times larger than the 7.5-nanometer, naturally occurring protein magnets they had previously used. "We've spent a year and half making these particles, which is the hard part," Awschalom says. "We're measuring [their magnetic properties] now." — J. Peterson

Hot Tips

Two of the newest and most interesting things going on right now are the Gordon-Michael Scallion newsletters and the Bio-Magnetic Healing Technique. Scallion, so far, has been incredibly accurate in making future predictions. I believe his accuracy rate is about 86%. The address is Gordon-Michael Scallion, R.R. #1, Box 391, Westmoreland, NH 03467.

Bio-Magnetic healing is, in a very brief nutshell, the touching of one person by another in specific places, in a certain order. This process somehow causes the ill person's body to activate its own abilities to heal itself. The results so far have been extremely encouraging in the healing of many difficult diseases and maladies. No special skill is required to perform Bio-Magnetics, and the technique is so simple it can be done even by children. The Bio-Magnetic Educational Foundation is a non-profit organization located in Mancos, Colorado. For more information on the process or for their schedule of training classes, write them at P.O. Box 510, Mancos, CO 81328.

If you hadn't heard about either of these before this, you will be hearing more soon because they are becoming very well-known around the country.

RUSSIA

AMERICA AND RUSSIA ON THEIR PATHS INTO THE NEW ERA

What Can They Teach Each Other and the Planet?

by Anna Zontova & Vera Sazhina

While travelling in the United States, independently of each other, we witnessed in American people a great interest towards spiritual life in Russia in these days, but also a lack of knowledge about it. Our view of American spiritual life too has changed radically, in spite of the fact that we had previously met many Americans on spiritual paths, were doing holistic workshops with them in Russia, and had read quite a few American books, classical and modern metaphysical. This article offers the American reader some of our perspective of the spiritual paths of the Russian and American nations as compared and correlated to each other with a unifying global perspective of the whole New Age movement.

Let your vision be world embracing rather than confined to your own selves.

-- Baha'u'llah

Earth's entering the New Age is the new synergistic evolution of planetary and human consciousness that embraces all aspects and cultures of humanity. All over the world more and more humans, whom we call the New Age workers, are making efforts to bring new consciousness into all areas of human activity. The fact that they are working on the same common pursuit, globally, and independently of each other, following the demand of our age, is indicative of the universality and inevitability of the planetary transformation process. But individuals, groups, and organizations involved in the New Age movement, and doing the same work, often are not connected with each other and are not well aware of one another's activities. Thus they can be lacking the global perspective of the movement, or an awareness of its whole picture.

This is true especially in regard to the connections between the New Age movement in various countries, primarily between the West and the East, due to certain economic and cultural barriers that are still dividing them. Undoubtedly with the end of the "Cold War" and the fall of the "Berlin Wall," political and social barriers have fallen and new opportunities for communication, exchange and collaboration have opened for the peoples of the East and the West in all areas, including those of culture and spirit. At any rate, we all are aware of the importance of work to create and develop the planetary Light Network in the New Age movement.

The USA and Russia, which are the focus of this essay, appear to be leading today in the global transformation process. The souls of both nations, along with that of Holland, are governed by the sign Aquarius, according to the teachings of Alice A. Bailey on esoteric astrology. However, there are considerable gaps in mutual knowledge and understanding of the people of the two countries, including those interested in obtaining spiritual consciousness.

Most Americans continue to consider Russia to be an atheistic country where spiritual activities have been forbidden and repressed for a long time. If Russian people know anything about the spiritual aspect of America, they may be aware of the many different organized religions and churches or about the hippie-movement of the 60's. Some of that information they have gotten from the Scientific Atheism class of the graduate school program or from American fiction and rock music. Both nations have little idea of the modern spiritual life of the other, formed and evolving at increasing rate.

COMING TO AWARENESS OF THE HIGHER PLANES - EXPERIENCE VERSUS EDUCATION

The information the two nations have about each other's spirituality is partly true for the present times. If the modern American New Age movement grew partly out of the progressive movement of the 60's and organized religions which did not satisfy many American truth-seekers, then the Russian New Age movement, though it sounds paradoxical, grew mostly out of atheistic upbringing; though attempts to form a new consciousness were undertaken in Russia at the turn of the century by Russian religious philosophers (Berdayev, Rozanov, Bulgakov, Solovyov and others) and, before that, by Theosophists led by Helena Blavatsky, who was of Russian origin, as well as Gurdjieff and Ouspensky. In many ways Blavatsky's ideas later inspired Alice A. Bailey, whose books were among those that created a foundation for the American New Age movement.

In the USSR religion was not overtly forbidden, but most of the Russian people were raised as atheists. Thus many Russian truth-seekers were walking their path alone, led in their search mostly by intuition or inner guidance. On the path many spiritual truths (such as that of higher meaning in everything and interconnectedness of all) were revealed to them through personal experiences, to which the intuitive and emotional nature of many Russians had been open to large extent. Some Russians would also start awakening under the impact of sudden new extrasensory perceptions and abilities, or of that psychic unfoldment in the masses, which according to Alice Bailey "parallels the spiritual unfoldment of advanced humanity." Afterwards many would look for intellectual knowledge and self-growth systems of practice.

Most American seekers were first introduced to spiritual ideas by means of their religious upbringing and education. Later, they would experience a need to expand or change spiritual concepts that seemed to be too narrow and limiting. A lot of the spiritual knowledge, including practices, would come to Americans through education and intellect, the mental gate, due to abounding information on spirituality in the USA.

For American seekers the challenge consequently might often be that of making a choice amongst numerous sources of information suggesting many different paths to spiritual growth. For the Russians it could be a choice between different callings of their hearts and inner guidance.

Certainly there were also Russians who stepped on the path of spiritual development under the impact of some awakening information which they were guided to read, study and then practice. That has been happening at an increasing rate recently with the legalization and resultant growing amount of all kinds of spiritual information in the country. And there are Americans who stepped on the path due to certain experiences in their lives that caused them to revise their agnosticism or skepticism. That has been happening especially during recent times, too, as the transformation process is being speeded up.

Comparing these patterns of path makes us realize the importance of integrating spiritual knowledge in both our hearts and minds. For those who gain insight of the existence of the God Force experientially, the next step can be adopting a consistent and all-embracing concept about that, to get confirmation of their views, understanding and awareness of the whole picture, and additional guidance. That would strengthen their faith on a more conscious level. Those who come to the realization of God intellectually would then need to know Him with their hearts, too, to confirm and rediscover that knowledge through their personal experience. In other words, to bring in harmony the knowledge of their higher self with that of their lower nature, so that the knowledge would not remain to them abstract. That could be an essential step towards the balance between peoples' minds and hearts that will accelerate our spiritual development.

EVOLUTION OF THE NEW AGE MOVEMENT IN BOTH COUNTRIES

For a few decades before Perestroika, the New Age movement in Russia, though not having been identified by that name, was developing "underground" by way of individuals and small groups. The emphasis among them was on personal spiritual growth and enlightenment and on "saving" other people. Apparently the philosophy of those seekers was in a way in opposition to official ideology with its impersonal collective social orientation. Perestroika (Reconstruction) and Glasnost (Openness), beginning in 1985-86, were gradually bringing a green light to open spiritual activities, to which the Russian people had been awakening more and more.

Perestroika started political and social transformation which proceeded along with the spiritual one, both caused by the global transformation process that has been embracing all aspects of human consciousness.

Russian Light workers started coming to the surface and getting organized in numerous centers and associations as well as reaching for an increasing number of the general public. With the implosion of metaphysical information into Russia in recent years, including from the American New Age teachings, they are becoming more aware of the principle idea of the New Age as humanity's collective stepping into a new stage of evolution. A lot of work to create the Russian Light Network has been done and its perspective seems to be very positive in the country, for Russians have been brought up in a collective spirit that makes it easier for those interested in obtaining spiritual consciousness to get united in striving for the New Era.

American New Age workers have been aware of the importance of group work for a much longer period of time than the Russians. They have done a lot of team work, including educating the people of America and other countries about the New Age and creating a vast Light Network in the US and all over the world. However, there also seems to be a tendency of individualization in the modern New Age movement in the USA, possibly due to some individualistic orientation of the American culture and a certain pressure on its people in their everyday lives.

LESSONS OF THE TWO COUNTRIES - OPPORTUNITIES VERSUS CHALLENGES

Generally speaking, each nation seems to have its specific collective path guiding it to spiritual consciousness. Each country seems to offer different lessons to its people, providing them with opportunities to develop different attributes in specific ways.

The United States has been teaching its people throughout its history to use its opportunities of freedoms and independence. Thus the American culture has been stimulating in that nation the aspects of will, personal initiative and responsibility, capability of making decisions and choices.

Russia has been known as the country where peoples' opportunities have been considered suppressed because of its totalitarian nature. If America has been called the country of opportunities, then Russia can be called the country of challenges that have been teaching its people for the most part through tests and difficulties. Thus the Russian culture has been teaching its nation the qualities of patience, humility, compromise and adaptability to circumstances and others' will. The old religious beliefs of Russia have also contributed to shaping a national character that tended to rely more on the outside forces that affect life than on one's own control over it.

America has been encouraging people to use their opportunities individually, relying on themselves, and to put their personal interests in first place. The hardships of Russia had a tendency to bring people together, for it is easier to survive hardship with mutual support (physical and emotional) than relying only on individual resources. Hardships also have a tendency to stimulate the opening of our hearts, putting us in touch with our emotions. Hardship has stimulated in many Russians a vitality and joy of life, causing them to appreciate and rejoice in what they have gotten the hard way. In a way, that nation seems to have chosen to experience fully the spontaneous and uncontrolled forces of life with its contrasts and ups and downs.

The Americans have been encouraged to keep their lives under the control of their minds and thus the nation typically approaches life more rationally, through reason, common sense and logic. They have been encouraged to be practical and organized in using concrete opportunities, to be outgoing and extroverted. Thus Americans tend to be more externally oriented, a people of action, for whom it is the result that matters.

The oppressive system of Soviet Russia has stimulated, in many people, independent and creative thinking and other inward-oriented activities, such as reading, creative imagination and intuitive perception. The limitations that the system put on peoples' freedoms and outward activities, many Russians tended to compensate through their inner freedoms of spirit and inner experiences and activities, which ultimately no system is able to control. Thus the Russians tend to be more adept to their inner reality, a people of ideas, who stop to smell the flowers.

But it seems there are fewer Russians than Americans who were able to accept the lessons of their country. For it is much easier for people to accept lessons that come in a direct way, through opportunities, rather than through challenges. Few have been able to see the opportunities in those challenges, or "the gifts" of the problems, as Richard Bach called them. Many Russians have slowly obtained some of those attributes, but for the most part they were not consciously accepted. They were learning in an unconscious, "obligatory," or passive way, through resistance and suffering, and the learning process remained incomplete, because "the students" did not realize nor acknowledge their lessons. Learning through challenges often requires more independent thinking than learning through opportunities.

It is a major challenge to preserve a positive focus concerning changes happening in Russia at this time. Those who accept the challenge and act with faith following spiritual principles have a chance to apply these principles to difficult situations, to live and integrate through the practice (reality), so that these do not remain theoretic beliefs, but become practical knowledge and wisdom. In other words, the hard school of Russia has been providing its people with the opportunity for quickly increased awareness and spiritual growth.

THE NEW AGE MOVEMENT AT PRESENT IN THE TWO COUNTRIES

New Age teachings in the USA have been based mostly on developing further the attributes taught by the American culture; for example, instructing people how to attract and manifest wished for situations by using creative visualization, to create one's reality and act on certain spiritual principles, to rationally deal with difficult emotional and other issues, etc. As a result, American New Age workers have been able to bring into popular and comprehensive form various world spiritual teachings and to pass them on to the general public, to do a lot of networking and other work.

Many American people have been coming to Russia during the course of the last several years to share with the Russian people their spiritual knowledge. They discovered that many Russians were extremely open to new teachings of all kinds, from metaphysics to the various organized religions. This was probably because the Russians have not been limited from childhood by any rigid religious or other spiritual concepts and because of the receptive and impressionable, almost child-like, nature of many Russians. Those who came to God through their hearts proved to be open-minded, quick learners, accepting whole heartedly a variety of new teachings, and committed to integrating them with their experience. It was easy for Russians to grasp the central teaching of the American New Age movement of opening the heart center and of group support and love. They just had to get in touch with something that had already been developed fairly much, but not consciously realized, and then to openly express it. Thus they would often assimilate some of those teachings better than their teachers.

The quest for truth and the meaning of life has been always in focus for many Russian people. That was why many who had not heard of the New Age movement before were readily accepting of its ideas as an extension of their own philosophies.

The developed intuition and emotions of many were growing into new psychic abilities. Thus many Russian healers tend to do their work without using any special techniques, but by "making miracles."

There is an increasing commitment in the modern Russian New Age movement towards communication and synthesis of groups of Light-workers, as well as of diverse spiritual teachings and trends, including the world religions, and differing walks of life. Scientists, parapsychologists and naturopathic and bio-energy healers, environmentalists, ufologists, architects, and artists of various kinds are looking for new ways of joint research and experimentation.

NEW OPPORTUNITIES FOR BALANCE

Today, as time is rapidly changing, new opportunities for balancing attributes are opening to both nations. The new Russia is teaching its people qualities that have been mastered by the Western nations, those of will and rational mind, personal initiative and responsibility, business-like qualities, better communications and organization. The Russians are learning to use their new independence and freedoms and to become more a people of action by putting their creativity into practice. At this point, however, they still have more ideas, e.g., about combining scientific and metaphysical research, but are lacking the technologies to put them into practice.

The challenge for them now is combining these newly learned qualities with their experience of sharing and collective support. Hopefully, they will be able to create a community that will work for the benefit of the whole by considering personality, benefits and responsibilities of each individual.

Russian New Age workers are consequently having now more opportunities for externalizing or taking more concrete action in the world, getting their ideas and teachings out for educating and healing the general public and strengthening the Russian and planetary Light Network. They are learning to manifest their spiritual reality by balancing their emotions and thoughts, and using creative visualization to take control over their circumstances and integrate spiritual principles with material reality, for creating a new, more harmonious, Russia.

Likewise, the American New Age workers, realizing the importance of balancing attributes, are presently working on developing love and care for others, acceptance, patience and humility; developing intuition, emotions, creativity, inner contemplation and other inward-directed activities, for the purpose of bringing increased harmony into their lives. They are learning to be adept to both their inner and outer reality.

RUSSIA AND AMERICA - A DICHOTOMY WITH PROMISE

It is obvious that these two cultures, including the New Age cultures within them, have much to offer each other. The experience of each country seems complementary in many ways and the two appear to be like reverse images. Learning about each other on a deeper level, and an exchange of experience, can help the people of both nations obtain a more global consciousness and result in more balance on individual, national and planetary levels.

When Russians and Americans interested in spiritual development and open to each other's cultures meet and communicate on the personal level, an important exchange of energies and knowledge happens between them. Americans can get more in touch with their emotions and innermost feelings and get excited about the emotional and intellectual depth that such conversation usually takes. Russians look with rapture at Americans' knowledgeability, capacity of reasoning, and technologies, or the elaborated techniques of meditations, transpersonal psychology, past life regressions, healing of the inner child, etc. Both get inspired and often feel an instantaneous attraction and even a bond on a deeper level.

The New Age workers of Russia and America could share with each other both their achievements and errors so that one nation would learn from the positive and not repeat "the negative" experiences of the other.

For example, sometimes there is not enough clear understanding of spiritual development among some individuals in Russia. They can be too occupied with the development of their psychic abilities and other tools, like various techniques of magic, thinking that this is the way to spiritual growth. At the same time, some of them have a tendency to escape reality. It is important for them to realize that spiritual development takes not only mastering certain practices, but also a lot of learning, experiences, tests and difficulties, positive thinking and action; that it requires obtaining spiritual attributes and actual changes in personal consciousness and life, attained by hard work and service to humanity.

The challenges of the American New Age movement seem to be commercialism and individualism which is quite understandable in a country based on a competitive monetary system. Similar challenges lie ahead of persons working on the new holistic culture in Russia. Hopefully they will be able to take into consideration the experience of their brothers and sisters in the USA.

TOWARD A NEW ERA - UNITING EFFORTS ON A GLOBAL SCALE

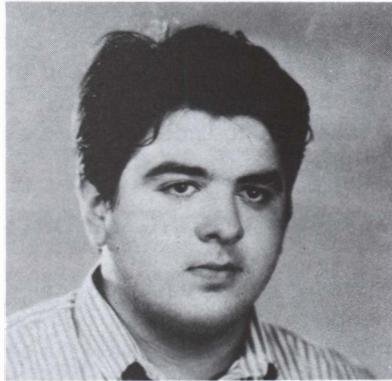

At this point there is an increasing opportunity and necessity for Light workers of various paths on Earth to get united on their spiritual journey into the New Era both inside their countries and all over the planet. The more we communicate, share our experiences, and understand each other, the more global perspective we gain. This, in turn, enables us to work in better coordination with each other. As we constantly strive on a personal level towards balance, alignment and harmony between differing planes of consciousness, similarly we need also to work on planetary balance, alignment and harmony between the diverse cultures of Earth through communication and cooperation.

Though propaganda that separated the peoples of the West and the East for several decades has been overcome, there is still a lot to do for mutual understanding on a deeper level. Filling the gap in that understanding and convergence of the cultures of America and Russia can be a gift to one another and to the whole world. It can facilitate our common work on our own spiritual development, and help humanity to go through the planetary transformation by healing the differences between various aspects.

Every month the UFOCCI receives letters from around the world. Many of these we cannot read because we have no one to interpret. The following are some that we hope someone will interpret and send back in. I hope they are all nice!

Dear Ms. Aileen G.!

Many thanks for letter, which was received in December. I was excited by your attention. The letter impressed me much, but at the same time I couldn't write you because of serious political developments which was going on in that period in Georgia.

I want to renew the contact with you. I'm interested in UFO. There were many interesting cases in Georgia connected with UFO.

Two years ago an object was seen over St. David's mountain in Tbilisi during a year. Many citizens watched it gathering on the square the same time in the evening. The newspapers published articles about young man David, who was in contact with creatures from that object on the same spot of the mountain. He couldn't completely describe his conditions in details because he couldn't understand himself. The creatures treated him from illness. I can describe you other events if it is interesting for you. Now, I'm finishing the letter.

P.S. The bulletin sent by you have been published here in our press. Please send me some information from you.

With respect, George Chihladze, Ninoshvili St. 11, Tbilisi, Georgia 380002.

მარმა მხარემ იფიქრა, რომ ეს მტრის ახალი იარაღი იყო.

ექსპერიმენტების შემდეგობი ბევრი უცხო პლანეტელის არსებობა დაფიქსირდა. მათ შორის არიან ადამიანები, მწერები და ცხოველები. მსგავსი არსებანი ზოგიერთი მათგანი ჩვენს მორისც კი ცხოვრობს. ისინი პერიოდულად ემუდბიან დედაშიწაზე და რამდენიმე ხანს ატარებენ აქ სურათს. მეტად დაინტერესებულნი არიან დედამიწით, მისი ფლორითა და ფაუნით. ყურადღებით აკვირდებიან ჩვენს შესაძლებლობებსა და თანდათანობით განვითარებას.

ამ არსებებს გააჩნიათ ადამიანებისათვის დამახასიათებელი ზოგი თვისება: სიყვარული, სიკეთე, მტყნინებებისაკენ ღრმადი, ხანდახან მაქინაციებზეც არ გამოიხივს ურს ჩვენ შევისწავლეთ სხვა სამყაროები, ვალკატრები, ციცილიზაციები თავიანთი საკუთარი მშობლებით.

许昌机场不明飞行物目击记

今年7月23日,我们部队按正常计划实施夜间飞行训练。夜航使用两条跑道,一条电灯跑道,一条马灯跑道。我是塔台无线电值班员,今晚在马灯跑道值班。晚上20点左右,天已经黑了。今天晚上能见度很好,星星很亮,南风3~4级,天气很适合飞行。

飞行准时开始,我在塔台车上开机值班,飞机陆续起飞。过了一会儿,飞行指挥员在指挥车上说:“塔台,无线电有些不好,飞行中的说话声有些断续,但还可以用,接收还可以。”我急忙起来检查机器,各种表指示都正常,我就对飞行指挥员说“没问题”,就又回到塔台车上,过了十几分钟,忽然听见飞行指挥员大声说“那是什么东西?”我赶忙跑到指挥车上,见指挥员正用手指着右前方,顺着指挥员指的方向,见西方仰角25°的天空中有一个很亮的亮点。我不以为然地说:“一颗星星。”指挥员说:“看,还动着呢。”我仔细一看,果然还动着呢,就急忙跑下指挥车,细心地观察起来,并马上喊飞行计时员:“计时员,几点了?”计时员看了看表说:“20点19分。”他也在看那个不明飞行物。这时下面没飞的飞行员以及保障通讯、场务的都发现了那个很亮会动的亮点,指挥车上计时员旁边的有线对讲机里也传出几十米外的几十个机务人员正在说着:“飞碟,飞碟,快看!”

我站在指挥车旁,正面对着大熊座的北斗七星,不明飞行物就在北斗七星的右下方,向左缓缓移动

着,那东西比星星要大一些,更亮一些,做匀速直线运动,没有发现闪光或别的什么现象。我是一个热衷于飞碟的发热友,这时并没有激动,而是一面观察,一面对飞行指挥员说:“指挥员,能不能目测一下那个飞碟有多高?”指挥员看了看说:“至少在一万五千米以上。”我旁边一个老飞行员也说:“大概有二万米。”过了约1分钟,不明飞行物进入一块很薄的云,亮点周围出现光晕,光晕比乒乓球大一些,光点仍看得很清楚。这时通过光晕发现它有极缓慢的逆时针转动,而且不再作匀速直线运动,方向还是没变,路线有些歪歪斜斜,这样又走了约1分钟。不明飞行物已由北斗星右下方移到了左下方。突然,不明飞行物转了个弯,与原来路线延长线约30°夹角,成弧形向下开始运动,这样成弧形歪歪斜斜又运动了2分钟,这时中间光点有些模糊,光晕有些增大,我忽然想到它快要消失了,应该把它的位置画下来。想完转身就往塔台车上跑,打开抽屉,拿出纸笔就往下跑,总共用了约10秒钟,下来却找不着那个不明飞行物。我向旁边的飞行员:“那东西怎么不见了。”他也在找说:“看着看着就模糊不见了。”我急忙喊:“计时员,几点了?”他看了看表说:“20点23分。”

飞行结束后,遇到我们另一条电灯跑道的值班员,他们也发现了不明飞行物,而且无线电也有些不正常。

与仙人脱骨，地也十分稀薄，但之无法解释。据书曰：“然地石中之数，人耶？神耶，固不可得而知也。”又说：“人耶？神耶？胡能空响，百数而语，通者之仙。”

为了让人对此事有一详细了解，马场把发现经过及详细情况作了记录，并刻石为碑。以后之有见者，皆云：“仙蜕有奇迹，诡秘难晓。”为明时代，以此为憾，因此碑亦竟失无存。又有碑文保存于清乾隆小编事的《海城县志》内。

1976年，仙蜕被毁，令人痛心。这保存了近千年的珍贵化石，在引起现代科学界重视前完全失踪。次年，有人去那重新开穴，已无化石留存。1978年，考古工作者再次前往调查，均未有所获。后闻山王村中老人云：仙蜕埋入神像之下。1983年，文物工作者去挖掘，却在神像下掘出一些石块，分析良久，亦未能断定是否“仙蜕”。

1985年，笔者因工作关系至海城进行文物调查，闻听此事，翻阅了县志，并去庙内进行观察。庙址尚散布有碑石数块，其中一明碑上也记有“仙蜕”语，证明县志记载是可信的。庙址北侧及东西两侧均为石灰岩质陡崖，多为水平层理。地质上属侏罗纪沉积，岩层年龄已有4亿年左右。

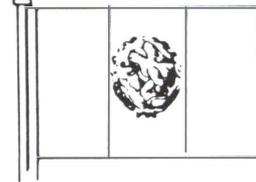

这层历史久远的地层中，其中更有人类骨骼，真是难以置信。（附：金尧山《灵应观仙蜕碑》）（灵应观仙蜕碑）

皇统己巳秋（公元1119年），因增修灵应夫人殿，忽其旧基乾塌（西北角）为巨石所局，不能甚大其势，乃命工凿其东西之余，南北倍之，其高二寻，自七月庚寅朔，众工始兴，均以二旬为期，即刻石至甲元日，自南而北已及之余，上下亦及倍寻矣，俄于坚石中有小空隙，罗蔓根株，非草非木，石缝网然，萦缠笼络中得

枯骸一躯，印于石内，头颈、臂腿、肢体成具，石骨相附，几若一体，中间小节，若微有朽化者一二矣。俯仰审视，其石之脉理与崖壁之四旁，上下皆漠然黝黑，方凝结实，略无凿刻之迹，亦无断折之痕，特异乎非常之石，可考诸刊碑，谁能破碎者，群工与众投者杂然惊异，观者乃置其骨于西麓之壤，欲遂葬之，异日，扬风而往，物色所薄之崖壁，洞穿其巨石之理脉与从南（纵横），余石犹山崩裂缺，散乱于地，尚可吻合，与所说不诬，乃令石工复即旧基，稍升于层岩之上，比初穴高丈余，以避殿之口也，别凿新穴，为小柏庭，故方石以复之。题其壁曰“仙蜕”。德理后之人得以识其异事。……然则石中之骸，人耶，神耶，固不可得而知矣。……

秋夜星空

● [美] 弗朗西斯·雷迪 ○ 徐钢 译

秋夜的星空，群星璀璨，仰望苍穹，当夏日之星开始向西下降时，冬日明亮的星体就动身进入东方的天空。这时，有3个明亮的夏星仍在西方高空上闪耀，它们是天鹅座、天琴座和天鹰座。

最亮的飞马座构成一个巨大的四方框，在它的上方是仙女座，在神话传说中，不幸的仙女被当作妖怪在岩石上献给可怕的脚角。鲸鱼座座下处在东南方偏下处，仙女座的母亲仙后座座在北方高处呈W形，挂在东北方向的英仙座上空有2个冬日星座——御夫座和金牛座，倘若你想认识这些星座，就从这颗星座开始吧。

再来看看我们的那颗星，水星难得一见，但在11月中旬，在太阳下山以后半个小时，你可在细长的月牙下寻找水星。之后，水星将迅速消失在暮色的光辉之中，但水星还会在12月的早晨继续出现。

金星在秋夜的早晨出现，灿烂的金星在9月或10月位于东方高空，到了11月则靠近早晨的地平线，寻找金星要在太阳升起前的45分钟至1小时向东眺望，你将会感到金星是最亮之“星”。

火星出现在9月早晨的天空上，这个红色星球不很亮，最简单的寻找它的办法是用金星做向导，9月早晨太阳升起前的15分钟飞行，在最明亮的金星和地平线中间偏下处可看到一个暗淡的红色星球。火星在天空上逐渐升高，在10月的第一个星期通过金星，从那时起，火星不断地上升，到11月中旬，其高度已在金星之上了。

在秋天观察的行星中，木星最容易看到，你不必观察金星和火星那样在太阳出来之前，也不必在阴暗的夜空上搜寻，木星在秋夜南方的高空出现并且比其他星星都要亮。

土星是9月10月份的最后用肉眼看到的最近远的行星，在11月太阳照耀下，土星就看不见了。那之前，在日落之时，你可以从西南偏低处找到土星，在那一区域，它将是明亮之“星”，在地球通过彗星多生的轨道之时，地球炸碎了部分土星，并在大气层中燃烧这些尘埃，从而引出一条快速运动的光线——流星。

Por lo cual por medio de la presente, me gustaria abrieramos el insio de una larga y fructifera colaboracion que no se limite unicamente a recortes periodisticos, sino que se ampliara a un intere mbio de fotos, revistas, libros, cintas magneticas y de video etc.

Espero su atencion y su pronto respuesta, quedo a sus ordenes y listo a cualquier peticion y a un futuro envio de material importante.

OVNI (Objeto Volador No Identificado). La mayoría de los seres humanos que hablamos el planeta Tierra alguna vez nos hemos preguntado si en realidad existen los llamados "OVNIS" o los Extraterrestres, pero, hasta la fecha, no hemos tenido noticias de una investigación que logre confirmar y convencernos de la veracidad de ese fenómeno.

¿No estamos solos en el Universo? ¿Los OVNIS son una realidad de nuestro tiempo? Miles de personas de todas partes del mundo aseguran haber visto OVNI, desde el pasado mes de marzo. ¿Por qué se están delirando ver más que antes? ¿Nos están preparando para un posible cataclito?

Desde hace varios meses se han publicado en nuestra sección una serie de artículos acerca de una extraña luz que giran lentamente en el cielo nocturno sobre la ciudad de Atlixco, Puebla. Recordamos que un OVNI perteneciente a esa familia, pero no le damos mucha importancia.

Después de eso, nuestro corresponsal en Cuernavaca, Morelia, nos comentó que varias personas le aseguran haber visto un "Platillo Volador" en las inmediaciones del lugar conocido como "Tres Marias". Posteriormente, en un viaje que hice por Tlaxcala, me enteré de que varias personas habían presenciado un fenómeno similar, ocurrido esta vez entre los volcanes Popocatepetl e Ixtaccihuatl. A principios de septiembre pasado, una nueva familia del estado de Puebla, asegura haber visto aquella extraña luz en los límites de Atlixco. Fue entonces que decidimos investigar un poco más sobre dicho fenómeno.

De acuerdo a los trabajos realizados por investigadores, en 20 años se han reportado algo así como 40 mil casos de OVNI en nuestro país. Pero, algo que tiene desconcertados a esos investigadores de OVNI, es por qué de unos 7 meses a la fecha el número de avistamientos de esas "naves" se ha incrementado considerablemente, pese a que aseguran tener pruebas de fotografías y videoscintas.

Por ALEJANDRO MORALES DE LA ROSA

En México, el fenómeno se repite cuando menos a 20 veces al mes en el poblado de Atlixco, perteneciente a Puebla.

Pero esas apariciones no sólo han ocurrido en territorio mexicano, sino en varias partes del mundo, por ejemplo, hace un par de meses se asegura haber visto varios OVNI descomponer en rápidas ocasiones en el Amazonas, Brasil, igualmente un enorme OVNI fue visto el pasado 8 de agosto en la frontera entre Perú y Bolivia; el 30 de septiembre del presente año, la agencia española EFE, manejó una nota en la que se aseguraba que una familia en Hungría, cerca de la frontera con Checoslovaquia, fue visitada por un OVNI en esta misma fecha; la agencia de noticias AFP, confirma la noticia de varios OVNI avistados recientemente en la provincia de Entre Ríos, sobre todo en Victoria, territorio perteneciente a Buenos Aires, Argentina. Agregó la nota que "La NASA, estudiosos mexicanos y japoneses, y al mismo rey de España, Juan Carlos I de Borbón, estarían interesados en los fenómenos luminosos en el oscuro cielo de Victoria", en Bélgica, recientemente hubo una serie de avistamientos en Bélgica, de los cuales se dice hay filmaciones de su presencia durante varios meses, avistamientos masivos también los ha habido en fechas recientes en Puerto Rico, Canadá, Eslovenia, Unión Soviética, Rusia y China.

LOS OVNIS EN MEXICO

Claro es que en nuestro país existe en muy poca información y sus constantes visitas al planeta Tierra. Sin embargo, los investigadores se empeñan en hallar datos sobre la materia que aún son desconocidos y se ayudan a saber qué está ocurriendo en realidad con el fenómeno OVNI.

Entre las personas que han dedicado gran parte de su vida a realizar dichas investigaciones está el señor Pedro Ferriz, quien desde hace varios años trata el tema de "Un Mundo no Vigila". También tenemos al periodista Jaime Maussán, quien cuenta con un sinnúmero de fotografías y videoscintas en donde se muestran esos enormes platos voladores que despiden luces de colores bastante luminosas, los cuales lo han querido suspenderlo durante varios segundos en el aire. Otro de los que podemos incluir en esta lista, sería Nino Canul, quien recientemente dedicó más de once horas al tema "OVNI" en su programa televisivo "Usad qué opiné". Aunado a todo eso, tenemos el ambicioso proyecto que actualmente realiza la empresa privada Telaviva, con varios investigadores espera saber más sobre este inquietante fenómeno, en donde se han invertido muchos millones de pesos.

Pero aquí no para la cosa, otra persona que desde hace varios años se interesa en dicho fenómeno es Enrique Avila Aranda, uno de los integrantes del famoso grupo "Los Babas", quien posee la "Súper" se supone es una de las bibliotecas más grandes de esta especialidad, con 600 libros, miles de revistas y miles de películas, y muchas cosas más. El llamado músico comenzó a interesarse en el tema, desde hace más de 20 años, cuando en una playa de Mérida, Yucatán, miró surgir de entre el Océano a uno de esos luminosos platos.

LOS OVNIS EN PUEBLA Y MORELOS

Según el reporte que llegó a nuestra redacción, la extraña luz de gran tamaño observada en los alrededores de Atlixco, Puebla, ha sido vista por centenares de personas.

Atlixco es un característico

¿Quién no recuerda aquella frase que hiciera fama al señor Pedro Ferriz: "Un Mundo no Vigila"? ¿Llegaremos algún día a conocer la realidad sobre el Universo al que pertenecemos?

El periodista e investigador Jaime Maussán, ha logrado recibir bastante material sobre OVNI y actualmente trabaja en un ambicioso proyecto con la ayuda de un importante empresario mexicano.

poblado de la provincia mexicana, situado a unos 30 minutos de la ciudad de Puebla (por carretera). Varios municipios que circundan a Atlixco están siendo muy visitados a últimas fechas a causa del fenómeno OVNI que allí se está presentando desde hace 6 meses, aproximadamente.

Pasando por los poblados de Mexicop, San Baltazar y San Pedro Atlixco, se recorren veredas bastante similares respecto a la extraña luz que velan salir del carrolanillo "El Tetzitoyotl" que en náhuatl significa "Corazón de Piedra". Esta es la vereda: "Es una bola luminosa fluorescente muy intensa que no emite zumbidos y aparece entre las 10, 11, 12 de la noche y, hasta las 3 de la mañana del siguiente día. Cuando aparece pormenora flotando en el aire un "buen rato".

Se asegura que la misteriosa luz, sale del citado carro, viene a gran velocidad en dirección a la iglesia de San Pedro y vuelve a regresar al carro a una velocidad increíble.

La iglesia de San Pedro se encuentra situada en la punta de un cerro, su sitio está rodeado de un pantano. Si buce uno a lo alto del templo se alcanza a distinguir, como a un 10 metros una semibrillante cuya pared semeja una serie de piedras sobrecalculadas. Lugar que es conocido con el nombre de "El Pedreguero". Desde la iglesia también se aprecia el cerro del Tetzitoyotl que, según los pobladores del lugar tiene una impresionante forma de pirámide egipcia, muy erizada que termina en punta. Y es precisamente de ahí del Pedreguero, exactamente donde está el Tetzitoyotl, de donde sale la enorme luz.

Es importante mencionar que algunos pobladores de San Pedro, aseguran que cuando la misteriosa luz se detiene a un costado del templo, arriba del cementerio, lanza una potente luz que ilumina activamente hacia una tumba. Otros aseguran haber visto otra de esas "naves" poseer sobre el panteón del pueblo de San Baltazar, sumando una de las luminosas. (Los avistamientos se hacen a las 11 de la noche y hasta las 12 de la mañana).

Además de los comentarios sobre esa luz intensa vista en el lugar conocido como "Tres Marias", otro fenómeno ocurrió recientemente en Morelia, para ser más exactos, el estado 11 de mayo a eso de las 23:30 horas. Un objeto que medía como tres metros de altura y podría pesar como un tonelado cayó del cielo en el estado de Morelia. Se le vio pasar por varios pueblos como Jiquila, Puente de Ixtla, Tequesquite y otros. Aseguran los habitantes, era sólido y emitía una luz muy intensa, su velocidad era enorme y a escasos segundos de verlo, se escuchó un estruendo que ocasionó un ligero temblor. Al día siguiente llegaron investigadores y dijeron que se trataba de un meteorito, pero le gente piensa que esas piedras no ocasionarían un temblor y como ya han visto en otras ocasiones esas luces flotando sobre algunas de Tequesquite, por Zecacoatlán.

También se asegura que los OVNI que podrían tener su base en Atlixco, Puebla, podrían ser los mismos visto en Morelos, Tlaxcala, Hidalgo y otros estados de la República.

Le dudas que, al igual que los investigadores en la materia, tenemos a J.P. Qué se ha oído ver recientemente a últimos fechas? ¿Cuál es su opinión? ¿Qué mensaje insertaríamos?

Se ha dicho que esas enormes naves luminosas se esconden entre deshabitados y enormes cerros y en lagos y ejemplar. ¿Qué relación habrá?

¿Han ocurrido hechos preses y a poco a poco? Si no, ¿será de otros mundos, qué son? ¿Entonces verán a ese Adán? ¿En qué país y ciudad Tierra? ¿Han sucedido ser humano? ¿Son como los de la película? ¿Seguirán investigando informando a nuestros lectores? ¿Se sabe a qué rodeo en conclusión?

THE STAR OF BELEN

By Willie Durand Urbina

The star of Belen was the star that guided the Three Magician Kings in their journey to Belen. Upon posing itself at the place where the child Jesus was, this star preceded the Three Magician Kings.

Those who seek an explanation for this phenomenon, partially natural, would think that the same is a triple conjunction of the planets of Jupiter and Saturn which occurred on October 1, Year 7 B.C. Others think that this incident occurred because of the comet Halley, which was last seen at the end of the month of August, twelve years before Jesus Christ was born. Others prefer to talk about a star that shined exclusively in that period of time to only disappear afterwards and, finally, others prefer to say that such phenomenon occurred for the benefit of the Three Magician Kings and could only be seen exclusively by them.

The Bible states that these Three Magician Kings were experts in these matters. Also it has to be mentioned that the old world was totally fascinated with the idea of the expectation of the "Messiah" and that a "light" shining way up in the sky would be the signal of His arrival to the earth to save all people from sin and destruction. But, there is an important detail stated in the Bible. The same says: "And the star posed in the place where the child Jesus was". Could it be possible that such star was a flying object commanded by superior intelligence? The search for a theory that can explain the journey of the "star" constitutes the most important challenging for all of us... for all of those who are thinking souls. Which possibly could have been the size of that "star" that moved with its own intelligence and that also knew before hand where exactly to pose?

All these questions and theories go towards one direction: the "star" was a flying object guided by superior race to indicate the Three Magician Kings that a much more higher "extraterrestrial" would soon be born. This extraterrestrial is Christ whom came to earth to give us light and knowledge!!

THEY CALL IT EARTH

by Richard Price, Sr.

*Our star may not soon give its light,
Its warmth and brightness dimming fast.
We must find a world that holds our needs,
that gives us hope and place to mast.*

*With signals I have just received, from far away they call it earth.
I guess we're not the only place, that's been given cosmic birth.*

*I wonder if they're going to like,
the way we go to meet our brother.
We consumed all our world could give,
we have no choice - there is no other.*

*If they will not accept our need,
will they destroy us without shame..
For by the looks of their world too,
they must also share the blame.*

*Their star above so bright and warm,
Its solar heat warms winters cold.
Light radiates from its burning core, outshines our star once bright and bold.*

It's the story that won't die. A legion of UFO buffs is convinced that Wright-Patterson Air Force Base is hiding...

Aliens in the Basement

The official fact sheet on Project Blue Book, the Air Force program that investigated 12,000-plus unidentified flying object sightings from 1947 to 1969, reads like your standard military briefing paper—until the very end. Then it drops this incredible disclaimer: "There are not now, nor have there ever been, any extraterrestrial visitors or equipment on Wright-Patterson Air Force Base."

Little alien corpses kept frozen and hidden away on an Ohio military base may sound like sci-fi lunacy to the uninitiated. But for 45 years, this is one UFO story that's refused to go away. And for that the military has mostly itself to blame. It was, after all, Roswell Army Air Field in New Mexico that started the whole business in the summer of 1947 by announcing that it had recovered a crashed "flying disc."

Never mind that they were quick to say, No, wait, make that a weather balloon. Over the last decade in particular, a small army of authors, researchers, and TV hucksters has done a highly imaginative job of filling in the details of the "Roswell Incident," as it's come to be known. Unlike most UFO yarns, their stories are based on enough interviews, photographs, and other evidence to seem...well, not impossible.

Ultimately all the stories lead to Wright-Patterson, the headquarters of Project Blue Book and the site where the wreckage of the spaceship and the bodies of its crew were allegedly taken for analysis. Then they come to an abrupt halt. "We know the material was taken to Wright-Pat," Mark Rodeghier of the J. Allen Hynek Center for UFO Studies says. "But that's where the trail grows very cold; we don't have any sources there."

That's enough to get the gears of any red-blooded space writer racing. What if I could spend some time poking around the labs at Wright-Patterson? There's no telling what I might find. Admittedly, the odds of actually coming back with the goods are slim. But as longtime UFO investigator Don Berliner points out, "It's potentially the biggest story ever."

My first contact with the base public relations staff makes me think I might be on to something. "The little green men story? I get three calls a week about it," says Major Aurelia Blake. She assures me there's no crashed saucer or alien corpses under wraps, but says I'm welcome to tour the base. A few hours later, however, she calls back. "Why don't you think about doing something else?" she asks. "We've got some great wind tunnels here."

The Roswell Incident dovetails with the birth of the modern era of flying saucers, so named in June 1947 when a private pilot reported seeing nine disc-shaped objects flying over Washington's Mt. Rainier "like saucers skipping on water." That sighting triggered a nationwide wave of UFO reports that made headlines for months afterwards.

Far and away the wildest headlines came out of Roswell, where two weeks after the Mt. Rainier sighting a sheep farmer named Mac Brazel clumped into the sheriff's office to report something he couldn't identify cluttering one of his fields—something, he said, that had fallen out of the sky and broken into shiny pieces.

Brazel's ranch lay some 75 miles northwest of Roswell near a tiny town called Corona, in a stretch of scrub desert neatly triangulated by what were then arguably the three most security-sensitive military installations in the world: the Roswell Army Air Field, home of the 509th Bomb Group, the world's only atomic bomb squadron; Los Alamos, where the bomb had been developed and was still being refined; and the White Sands Missile Range. Not surprisingly, Sheriff George Wilcox suggested that Brazel report his find to authorities at the nearby Roswell base.

After sending two officers out to reconnoiter the crash site and retrieve some samples, the 509th brass went ballistic, mounting a full-scale recovery effort and firing off its "flying disc" press release. On Tuesday, July 8, newspapers across the country carried headlines announcing that Roswell Army Air Field had captured a flying saucer.

The next day, though, many carried a follow-up story explaining that the wreckage wasn't a flying saucer after all. After being flown to Fort Worth Army Air Field, it was identified as the remains of a weather balloon. An Associated Press wire story that ran in a number of papers on July 9 described the wreckage as "consisting of large numbers of pieces of paper covered with a foil-like substance, and pieced together with small sticks, much like a kite. Scattered with the materials over an area about 200 yards across were pieces of gray rubber."

Before my trip to Wright-Patterson, I tracked down Walter Haut, the retired base public information officer who wrote the infamous press release, and asked him if he ever actually saw the wreckage. "No, and I feel like an idiot every time somebody asks me that," he said ruefully. "I got a call from the base commander, who basically dictated what was in the press release."

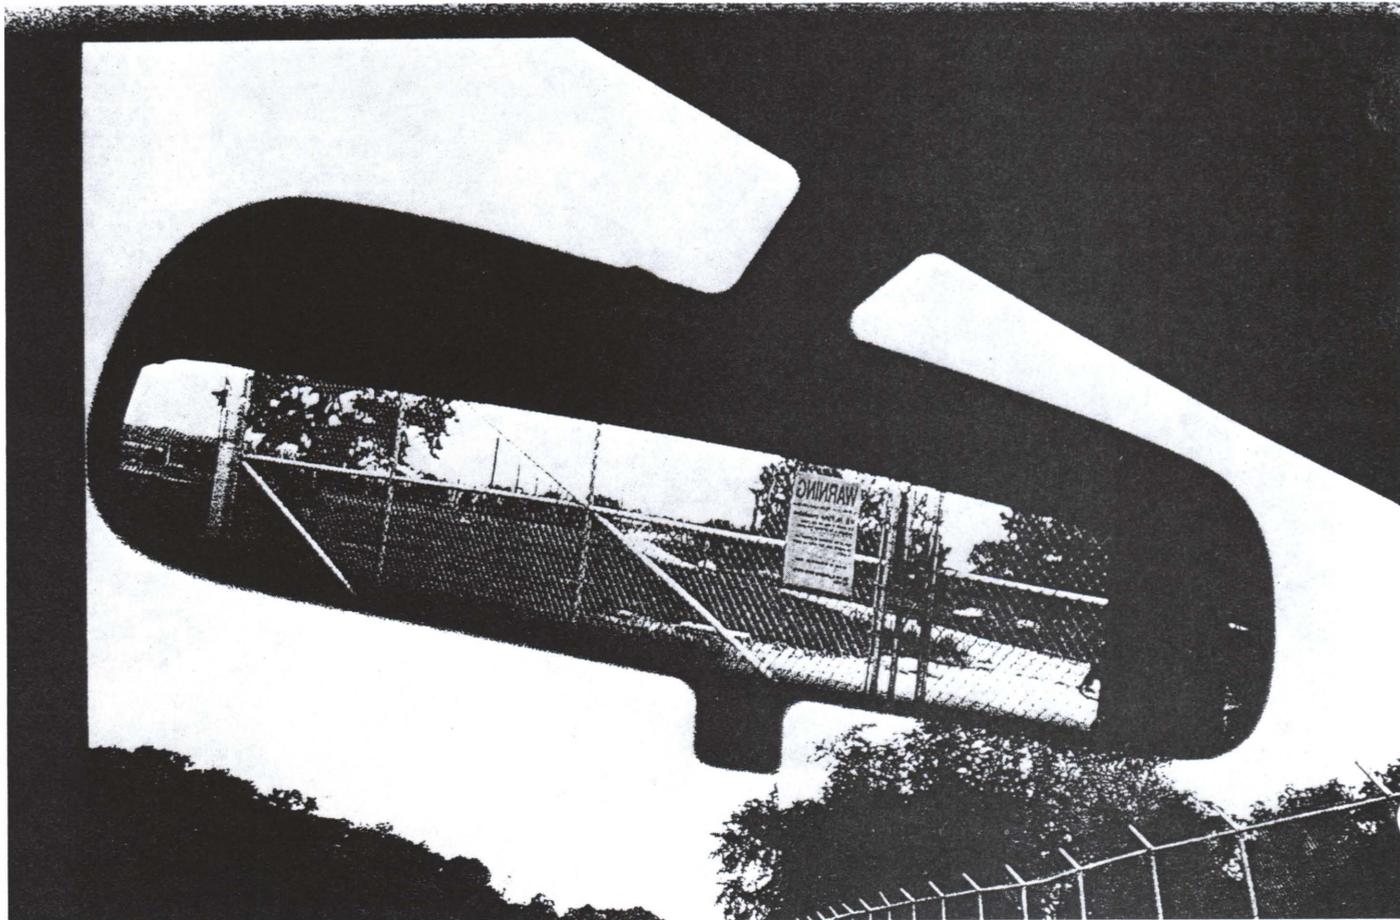

And how did he feel when the bottom dropped out of the story? "I probably wiped the perspiration from my brow and said Thank goodness, we're off the hook now," he said. "Very frankly, I don't think I believed that we had something from outer space. I think most of us felt we were being hoodwinked somewhere down the pike."

This is not, incidentally, what Haut believes today. "I feel there was a crash of an extraterrestrial vehicle near Corona," he says firmly. What happened in the intervening 45 years to change his mind?

For a long time, not much. Nobody questioned the military in 1947, so when the captured disc metamorphosed into a weather balloon, the explanation was accepted and the story largely forgotten. It was a revival of the Roswell story in the '70s that convinced Haut and thousands of others that the Air Force really hadn't been on the up and up. It began inauspiciously in the person of Stanton Friedman, a nuclear physicist and well-traveled UFO lecturer. At his talks, Friedman would occasionally meet people who had been in New Mexico in 1947. Bit by bit, their stories began to form a picture startlingly different from the official version's. Friedman dug further with the help of a friend, William Moore, who in turn enlisted writer Charles Berlitz of Bermuda Triangle fame to turn their findings into a book published in 1980 called The Roswell Incident.

The book blows off the weather balloon explanation as a hastily concocted cover story and argues that the Air Force really did recover a crashed saucer, as well as several alien bodies. The wreckage and bodies were taken to Wright-Patterson for analysis, it said, and everyone involved in collecting, transporting, and studying them became part of a massive conspiracy of silence. There's a lot of chaff in The Roswell Incident, including some blatant hokum about Gemini and Apollo astronauts spotting flying saucers. But the main idea—that the government was sitting on a captured saucer—fell on some fertile ground. Other books followed, including last year's UFO Crash at Roswell. Television found the story irresistible. The series "In Search Of" did an episode on it. A trashy 1988 production called "UFO Coverup? Live" featured two mysterious "intelligence sources" who revealed that the captured aliens like Tibetan music and strawberry ice cream. And in September 1989, "Unsolved Mysteries" featured the story on its season premiere, attracting an impressive 28 million viewers.

The captured saucer idea even took root overseas. "I was visiting Kapustin Yar, a Soviet missile base, two years ago when the head of the base asked me if we had any UFOs," recalls Gregg Herken, chairman of the National Air and Space Museum's department of space history. "I thought he was kidding at first, but he turned out to be quite serious."

It's a good thing the Soviet commander never saw the UFO exhibit in the world-famous United States Air Force Museum adjacent to Wright-Patterson, which the PR staff had encouraged me to check out before coming to the base. It turns out to be a single glass case filled with fake photos and hoax items that wouldn't cut it on the old Flash Gordon serials. A blob of melted plastic, a big hunk of cinder, a crumpled metal ball stuffed with radio tubes, springs, and speedometer cable—this is it? An Air Force museum so comprehensive it has a wall covered with the history of spark plugs, and there's nothing to show for 23 years of UFO investigations but a pile of rusty junk? Very odd.

On to the base itself, a vast tract bigger than half of Dayton's suburbs. An alien rescue team could search the place for six months and not find their friends. But I know where to look. One place is the infamous Hangar 18, where the bodies were allegedly stored in deep freeze. Another is Wright Laboratory, one of our Air Force "superlabs," where nearly $1 billion is spent annually on research in propulsion and power, avionics, materials, electronics, and the like.

If they learned anything from the saucer, there should be signs of it in the labs. I also want to see the Foreign Aerospace Science and Technology Center, the secret facility where the Air Force takes apart foreign aircraft to see what makes them tick.

The first thing I learn is that there is no Hangar 18. There's a Building 18 complex that at one time housed "cold cells," rooms that could be cooled to sub-zero temperatures to test engines under Arctic conditions. In 18A I meet Fred Oliver, a folksy division chief and engineer who's become the base spokesman on the subject of aliens. He commiserates with me in my disappointment at finding generic government offices. "I know," he says, "you picture walking into a building with a big curved top where you go through all these guards, and run your card through a cipher lock, then there's this spaceship going rrrrr, rrrrr that gives off a green glow."

Exactly. How does he know that scene in such detail? Before I can ask, he's deep into a Viewgraph briefing. You can't meet anybody at Wright-Patterson without getting a Viewgraph briefing; it's as automatic as a handshake. It's also a lot like the lessons you used to get in high school on overhead projectors, except that instead of scrawled equations or French verb conjugations you get to look at big bright slides of organization charts and turbine engines. Finally Oliver works his way to the bottom of a six-inch stack of slides and asks, "Any questions?"

"Where are the bodies?"

"There are no bodies," he says kindly, like a dad breaking the bad news about the tooth fairy. But if a saucer did crash-land, wouldn't the remains be at Wright-Patterson? "That's a sensible conclusion," he admits. "Since the beginning of time, this has been the nation's center of aerospace R&D."

I suggest that a good strategy for hiding aliens might be to act like you've got nothing to hide, bring reporters on base, then overwhelm them with Viewgraphs. "And walk them till they drop," Oliver agrees. "I'm going to get in trouble for saying this, but give us some credit—wouldn't you think we'd be smart enough to hide the bodies if they were here? Do you really think you'd get to see them?"

In any case, after a tour of the Building 18 complex, it's clear I'm not going to see them there. The cold cells are long gone, gutted and replaced with recon-camera maintenance and repair shops and testing equipment. The basement of 18A has a huge facility that can pump pressure- and temperature-controlled air to a number of "environmental chambers," but there's nothing resembling a 24-hour cryogenic operation. If the bodies were here, they're gone now.

My next interview is with Keith Richey, chief scientist of Wright Laboratory. The determined set of his face tells me he obviously has better things to do with his time than talk about aliens. "Do you have the Air Force fact sheet on Project Blue Book?" he asks as soon as I broach the subject. "My own personal knowledge corroborates that. So that's where we are on that subject."

Richey has fascinating tales to tell of running a superlab and developing the kind of weaponry we saw in Desert Storm and how we'll be able to launch the next generation of smart bombs from hundreds of miles away instead of just a few and still park them up somebody's keister. Eventually I steer the conversation back to aerodynamics and ask how efficient a saucer shape would be for flying.

"Well, it's not very efficient," Richey says. "What you want is a multiplication factor of 20 times the lift for the amount of drag you generate, and it doesn't generate much lift."

I try a different tack. What if something dropped out of the sky tomorrow and was brought to Wright Laboratory for analysis? Could Richey and his 2,000 scientists and engineers figure out what makes it go?

"We could do it," he says, pride getting the best of his no-nonsense demeanor. "We could take it apart, analyze it, and I don't know how long it would take, but with enough effort we could find out what it would do." So presumably if a saucer had shown up at the base in '47...? Richey doesn't hesitate. "You would have seen it flying. You would probably be buying tickets for it by now."

Before I can weigh the implications of that remark, I'm hustled off to the Flight Dynamics lab for a Viewgraph briefing by Colonel Dick Borowski. A congenial fighter pilot who saw action in Vietnam, Borowski smiles and says, "I know you came looking for little green men," then unleashes a dazzling overview of the new technologies his division is developing. Acoustics testing. Thermo-plastics. Forebody vortex flow control. Flight simulation. By the time he's done, I'm too dazed to ask him where he's hiding the bodies.

My pulse quickens as I'm led down a maze of hallways and through a heavily locked door by Richard Moss, chief of cockpit development. No bodies in the inner sanctum, though—just a series of rooms with liquid crystal display screens in various test stages. The first one shows a simplistic terrain with targets in the air and on the ground, all irritatingly out of focus. "Here, put these on," a technician says, handing me a pair of Captain Video sunglasses with tiny on/off buttons on the frames.

"Are these a souvenir?" I ask her. She laughs. "Those cost $2,000."

I look at the screen, where suddenly everything is not only in focus but in 3D. There's a truck in the forefront, then some mountains, then—wait a minute! A saucer-shaped object is hovering in the sky.

"That's a flying saucer," I tell the tech excitedly.

She squints at the screen. "The red thing? I don't know what that is." She looks at Moss.

"That's a transport aircraft," he says.

There's more rooms and more screens, but I'm too preoccupied to pay attention. When Moss finally escorts me from the building, he gives me a meaningful look and says, "You've only seen the tip of the iceberg."

I start my second day at Wright-Patterson in the museum research library, hoping to find original Roswell documents that will cut through some of the hype. When I tell the librarian what I'm looking for, he gets a pained look and barks, "Every time they run that damned Roswell thing in the tabloids all the crazies come out. The old man

Force's conclusion that UFOs don't merit serious attention. There's a detailed aerodynamic analysis of virtually every shape UFOs have ever taken, pronouncing them all "impracticable." And in year after year of briefing papers, there are remarks like this one: "It is unlikely that positive proof of [flying saucers'] existence will be obtained without examination of the remains of crashed objects."

Exactly.

This afternoon's lab run is through the materials directorate, where after the obligatory Snoozegraph briefing I'm handed off to Lieutenant Colonel James Hansen. He's got a basement full of wild machinery that tests composite metals and ceramics for the National Aerospace Plane, the hypersonic hybrid that will fly into space.

No bodies here either. But watching strips of exotic metals being tortured under incredible heat and pressure, I realize I may be a lot closer to pieces of a crashed saucer than I think. I ask Hansen the same question I asked Richey yesterday about analyzing something that dropped out of the sky—only this time in the past tense.

"If somebody had brought in composite material 20 years ago, we wouldn't have had any idea what it was," he admits. "Now, we could take it apart down to its atoms."

Suddenly it all begins to add up—the glowing spaceship scene Oliver described, Richey's cryptic boast about selling tickets, the saucer on the screen, and now Hansen's admission that we've only recently been able to figure out composites. It's taken nearly 40 years to crack the secrets of the Roswell wreckage.

And today we're developing a freak craft that can take off from a runway and fly into space—just like flying saucers do.

Coincidence? Think about it.

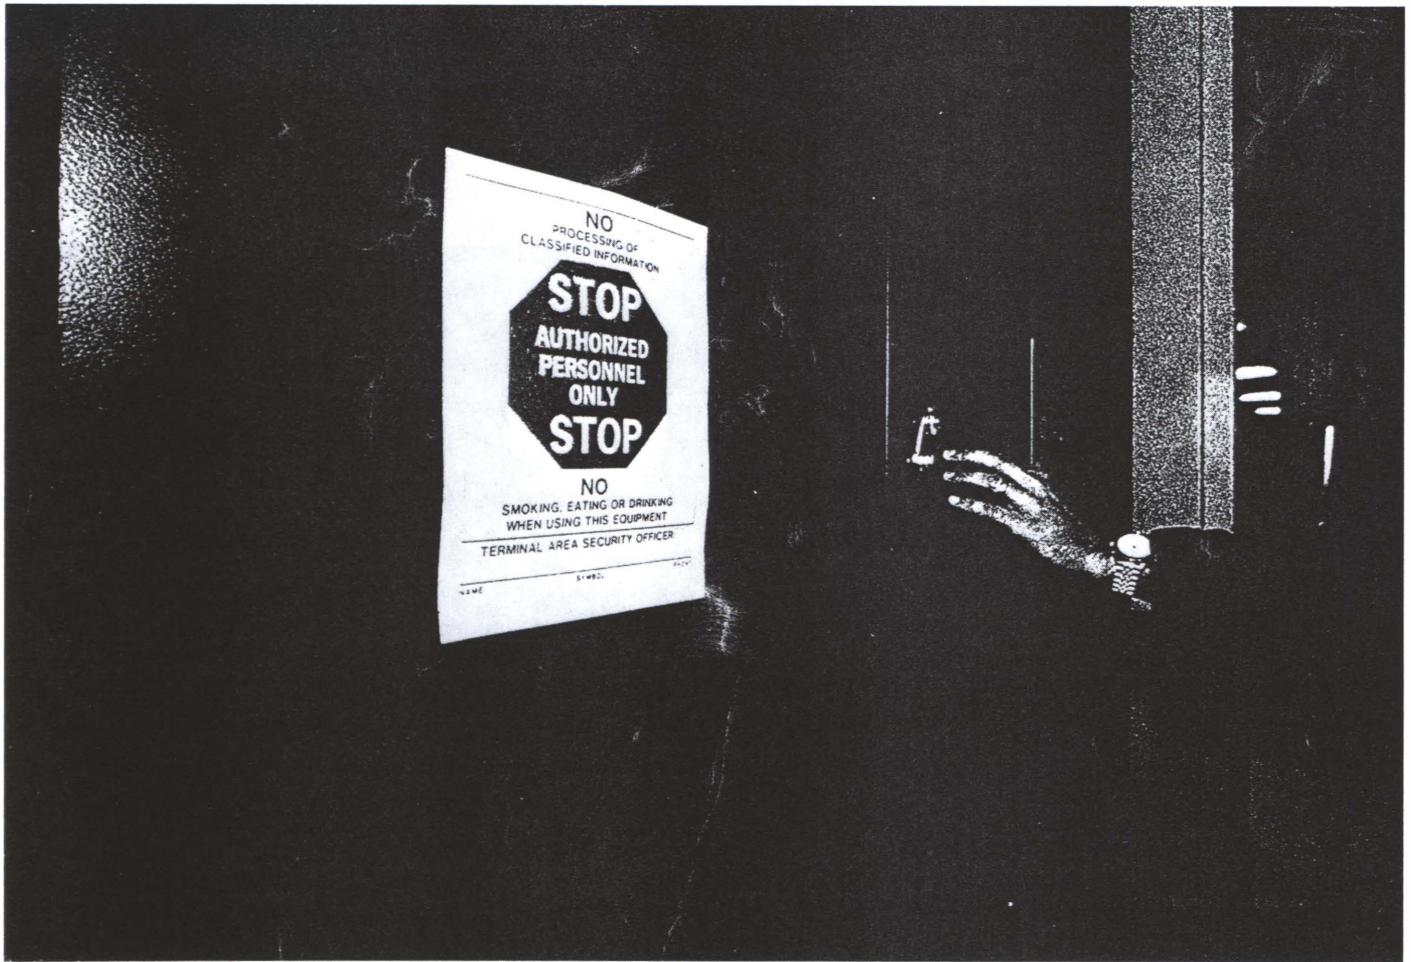

My last shot at finding the bodies is the super-secret Foreign Technology center. It took negotiations on the order of a Middle East peace conference to get an appointment there, and I'm pleased to see that the public information officer waiting for me is a novice filling in for someone who just quit. No telling where she might take me.

[museum director

Richard Uppstrom] says he wishes we had one of the bodies to put downstairs and charge a dollar a pop to see. We'd never have to ask Congress for money again."

Disappointingly, the museum's UFO files are in the same league as its UFO exhibit. There's a ton of Blue Book summary reports, along with University of Colorado and National Academy of Sciences studies agreeing with the Air

We drive around the building first. It's a nondescript red and gray affair, like a warehouse in a suburban industrial park, only a lot bigger. My guide confides that you need top-secret clearance to get almost anywhere inside. "It's basically a huge safe," she says.

We park at the front entrance, greet an officer on the way out, and step into what might be the lobby of Krupp's Widget Works—except for the heavy-duty security desk with the big control panel. I look at my guide and make an expectant move toward the desk. She doesn't budge.

"That's it," she says.

"That's it?"

"That's all you can see."

And that's that.

No flying saucer story would be complete without an anonymous highly placed military source who spills A Big Secret. Mine didn't materialize until I got back to Washington, where I brooded for days over what I had seen—or hadn't seen, actually.

Studying a map of New Mexico got me thinking about all the secret flying and testing that was done at Roswell and Los Alamos and White Sands after the war. If there was ever a place where something the military wanted kept under wraps was likely to fall from the sky, it was central New Mexico in 1947. That thought prompted me to call my source—a retired Air Force officer I met while touring Wright-Patterson who is, alas, still in a position too sensitive to allow his name to be used. He was way ahead of me.

"All these years I've been hearing about this Roswell incident," he said, "and knowing Air Force history like I do, and how hush-hush the 509th was, I just set it in my mind that they must have crashed one with a nuke that came close to going off, or maybe [exploded but with] a low-level yield that we don't know about. I could never prove anything one way or another. But with the 509th that close, and—well, B-29s weren't noted for not crashing, let's put it that way."

It's a nifty theory, but just a theory. Like all good stories, Roswell expands to accommodate whatever you bring to it. That's the nature of myths and legends—they're detailed enough to seem real, yet fuzzy enough to stay always just beyond the reach of objective proof.

In that sense, it was better that I didn't find any bodies. Naturally I'm disappointed at not having broken the biggest story of all time. But I've done my part for the legend. Substantive or not, Roswell grows a little with each retelling. And this one lets you have it both ways. If you prefer a purely rational, scientific world, you can take comfort in the fact that my mission was—just as you knew it would be—doomed to failure.

If you prefer a world filled with mystery and intrigue, well, I haven't disturbed that either. The Air Force is still covering up a big-time screw-up...or just now cracking the secret of interstellar propulsion...or sitting on the biggest cosmic kick in the pants since the Big Bang.

The following was sent in by Ted Loman,
Director of UFOAZ in Tucson, Arizona.

Ted:

After we met I remembered that I had been keeping a journal at the time of the sighting. It was mostly for the model airplanes that I was rather prolific in designing and building but other stuff found its way in too.

Going back to March 3, 1972 I found an entry. There is much more than I remembered of the incident. Here it is. I put in comments to clarify some of the original statements and did some editing to make things clearer to someone besides myself. I tried not to change any content.

I was originally notified of the object at about 7:20 p.m. by John S., who had seen it the previous night. I gathered up the telescope (200 x 3 in reflector), camera and binoculars (8x) and went to the B.'s front yard with Mr. S. (and the rest of my family). (The B.s lived about a quarter mile away to the north. As I remember there were several neighbors there already.) At about 7:30 the first exposure was started. Several of us observed the light through binoculars and the telescope. The object appeared through the telescope to be two large oblong greenish lights. The one on the right oriented vertically, the one on the left horizontally. It was impossible to focus them clearly, although nearby stars were used as a focusing guide. I would guess that the magnitude was about -5 to -3. The intensity was great enough to produce light flairs in the telescope. The only other object to do that has been the moon. It was far brighter than any other object in the sky. Mr. B. said that he had seen a similar light on a few occasions going as far back as fall of the previous year.

At 8:05 pm the first exposure was ended and we and Mr. S. went to our respective homes. I set up the camera in the front yard and started the second exposure at 8:15 pm and we continued to observe the light both with the telescope (now set to 60x) and binoculars. At around 8:20 the S.'s and the G.'s came over to look though the telescope and binoculars. The second exposure was ended at around 8:50 pm and the third started three minutes later. The last exposure finished when the light set at 9:33 p.m.

During this time Mr. S. called Andrews A.F.B. to see if any of their operations would account for the light. They said that there was a NASA blimp operating in the area (!).

The next night (March 4, 1972) we kept an eye out to see if the light would return. This night was partially overcast, which made observation difficult. Between 6:45 and 7:15 pm a light similar to the one of the previous night did appear through the clouds. Observation through the telescope showed that this one lacked the "tail" that the light of the night before had. Thickening clouds obscured the sky after about 8:22 pm, the light was still there at that time.

This about covers the journal entries. I believe Mr. S. also called the FAA Air Route Traffic Control Center where he worked, to see if there was anything happening on the radar, and apparently there was not. In his position I would imagine that he would get straight answers (he, after all, worked there).

As I said when we last met, we lived in a fairly rural area. Most of the families knew and kept in touch with each other. When something interesting was going on (on any subject) the word got out surprisingly fast. Sitting outside in the evenings was popular with just about everyone. There were no street lights so the night sky was easy to see in all its splendor, although it is often hazy. It was normal to get together and watch for satellites or meteors when the weather was nice. (Charlotte and I still go over to Mom's house to sit on the deck and watch stars.)

The people involved are all normal folks and some have an aviation background. John S. was at the time an air traffic controller, and my Dad and I were both pilots (I still am). Tom G. was (and still is) a cinematographer for the National Park Service and Mr. B. was a small businessman (I remember little about him). Not the sort of folks that would misidentify a blimp, or most anything else in the air (or for that matter be fooled by the explanation of a blimp).

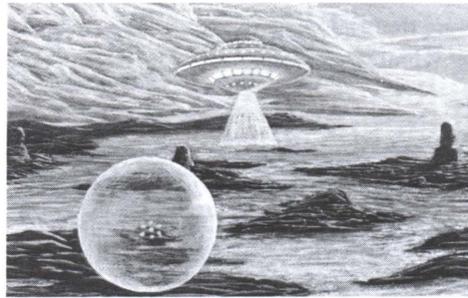

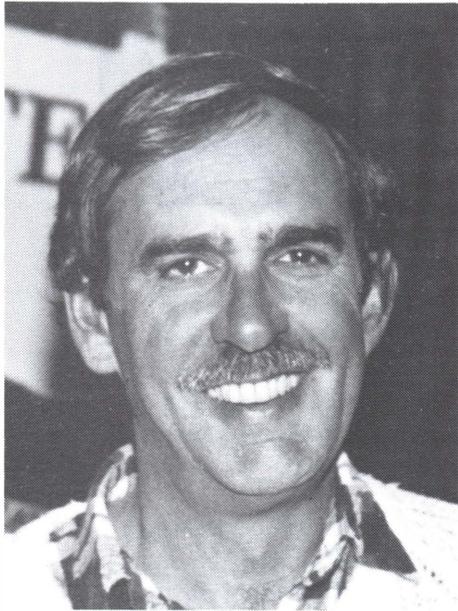

* As we discussed, the feature of the light that attracted so much attention initially was its behavior, more so than its high intensity. It was reported that the light first appeared low in the southern sky and "very rapidly" moved (in a straight line I believe) to a position high in the western sky, where it stopped suddenly. I, unfortunately, did not see this. The first exposure was started probably 10 minutes after the initial appearance.

I don't remember anyone saying that they saw the other very bright lights, mentioned as being seen on other nights, actually arrive, by whatever means.

UFOs, ETs AND YOU

by Tom Dongo

and the Love-and-Light-and-Everything-is-Perfect Crowd. This often involves UFOs and ETs, and I really get annoyed sometimes because both groups want me to be on their side and believe in their philosophy totally. Some of them, God bless 'em, drive me up the wall at times. The Doom-and-Gloom Crowd really get into the emotion, thrill and paranoid excitement of certain up-and-coming disaster. They are always running around with the latest rumors of catastrophe. They never seem to stop at the beginning, count to ten, look at the latest fear rumor and contemplate the idea that it might possibly be another slab of b.s. initiated either by another paranoid mind (physical or nonphysical) or by a recent release from the U.S. Government's General Rumor and Disinformation Agency.

The government must love the Doom Crowd because after their rumor and disinformation mill comes up with another prime piece of side-tracking disinformation, all they have to do is allow it to fall immediately into the hands of a "Doomer," and the document or rumor is off the blocks at a flying start. "It" quickly gets around the country by printed means. (In my earlier researching days I, myself, have acted just the same way and have ended up being embarrassed and humiliated beyond belief when I discovered that I had been caught up in a deliberate and very intentional hoax).

This periodic crying-wolf business is creating a scenario of deadly apathy in those of us who desperately want to know what is really going on. When the genuine news hits, are most of us going to ignore it as just more paranoia and get caught off guard and unprepared?

On the other side of the fence are the Love and Light folks. My criticism of this viewpoint is that many of them, although their prime motive is admirable, willfully close their eyes to anything that is of a negative nature. A good example of this is the Flower Children of the 60s. I know; I was there. The Flower Child's credo was blind love and perfection on any and all levels — no matter what was involved. Wonderful concept, but it didn't work. As a result, most of them were wide open to exploitation by unrestricted sex (free love), drugs and a multitude of other problems.

Both viewpoints are disturbing to me all male, appeared to be of a very great age (like a human in his 90s) with deeply wrinkled skin and sunken eyes. The major difference was that their hair was as fine as cat hair. One of the ETs had a beard and it was also as fine as cat hair. Dilettoso added in his lecture that this may simply be the aliens' natural appearance.

Russia and a few other countries are far more open to this type of thing than most of the rest of the world. That is undoubtedly why the aliens are coming forward more freely in those areas. If this sort of thing took place in the United States, you can be sure someone, or a group, would try to cash in on it or exploit it in some fashion. The whole thing would, no doubt, quickly become a circus and media event — complete with popcorn and raffle tickets!

ETs as Moneymakers

This reminds me of an interesting story. Some 30 years ago, Dr. Frank Stranges claimed to have had direct interaction with extraterrestrial beings. Their leader, he said, was called Val. All sorts of people sought out Dr. Stranges when they heard of his alien contacts. He said that he was flabbergasted because only a few were interested in the incredible fact that Val and the others were aliens from deep space. The rest were businessmen who implored Stranges to talk to the aliens in order to ink a deal for a gold mine on the moon, or whatever. In short, most were interested only in how they could make money on the aliens.

Doom and Gloom — Love and Light

While I am griping, I'm going to take the opportunity to gripe about the following as well. I am constantly caught between the Doom-and-Gloom Crowd

On the 29th of August I was a speaker at the 1992 UFO/ET Conference and Science Expo in Sedona. I always learn something new concerning UFOs or ETs at these conferences. Two definite hot spots lately have been Puerto Rico and the former Soviet Union. Recently (I don't know the exact month this occurred) it seems that extraterrestrials have been teaching classes in biology (the science of life) to residents in Georgia, one of the former Soviet republics.

Another speaker at the Sedona convention, Jim Dilettoso, Ph.D., has a video tape taken in Tbilisi sometime this year. The video was taken in a schoolroom and shows students and teachers, the teachers sitting in chairs lined up along a wall. They were attentively listening and asking questions which were directed toward the front of the classroom. A piece of chalk can be seen moving on the blackboard making diagrams and words, but there is no body there! At least none visible to the camera's eye. The students see the ETs but the camera sees nothing and records nothing of the ETs. This is rather typical, as ET voices and physical forms do not record on video, conventional film or tape recorders unless the ETs want to be recorded.

In one short segment of the Tbilisi video, a ghostly outline of a human form can be seen near the blackboard. The students and teachers said that the ETs actually looked quite human. They were because as a researcher, one must take all aspects of a given situation, look at everything carefully, and then make a rational and balanced decision as to the possible or probable ramifications or outcome of that particular situation or sequence of information. Both viewpoints are a form of narrow-mindedness, in my opinion, and tend to distract from the overall picture. Both viewpoints are eminently valuable — when combined.

As a serious, pragmatic researcher, if I were to be strictly of either philosophy, blind gloom or blind perfection, my credibility would be shot to pieces in a matter of months as a result of a slanted viewpoint. After a while, few would want to read or hear what I had to say because they probably wouldn't believe a word of it. Everything I say or print I can back up with either solid or strong circumstantial evidence often derived from a great many different sources. We all owe it to ourselves to take a careful, balanced, objective, intuitional viewpoint of anything that is of a paranormal nature. If we do that, we all, as individuals, can be in a much more favorable position to weather Earth-changing events which may now be looming on our horizon.

Assorted Bits and Pieces

A few months ago I learned of a UFO incident which occurred in my family 25 years ago in Maine. To me, this incident was rather startling. My aunt, who is in her 80s, had a UFO follow her one night, back in the mid 1960s. Now those of you who haven't spent much time in Maine need to understand that generally, in this area, one doesn't speak of something like UFOs unless it is contained in a joke or some form of ridicule. My aunt was driving home one night when she suddenly realized that her car was being paced by a disc-shaped craft. Evidently, the craft followed her for ten or fifteen miles. Now this sort of incident almost always results in an abduction of the witness or witnesses and there is usually missing time of at least a half hour or more. My aunt reluctantly revealed this episode and asked at the time that it not be repeated outside of the family for fear of ridicule. We all know that some forms of ridicule can be absolutely vicious.

As I've said before, we must get some sort of a grip on very real, ongoing UFO/ET activity that involves each and everyone of us personally, directly and profoundly. We have to, since the government — our government — won't. They know exactly what is going on concerning extraterrestrials. Why won't they tell us?

An example of this (I will go into this in detail next month) is a video taken from the space shuttle Discovery which, in my opinion, clearly shows a shootout between UFOs high over New Zealand. The transmission was recorded by a college in Maryland. It's a long story. Next month's column will be devoted to this incident. Stay tuned!

Sedona is a Hot Spot

There have been so many UFO sightings in the past eight months in the Sedona area that I believe Sedona is now the world's hot spot for UFO activity. I would love to know what is going on. The activity is focused in two areas: the lower end of Verde Valley School Road between Verde Valley School and Red Rock Crossing and in a wide band between Secret Canyon and Loy Butte, an area about six miles long by one mile wide. More on that next month, too.

New Sedona-Area UFO Sightings

As I have mentioned in earlier columns, the past seven months have seen more UFO activity in Sedona than in the past five years combined. Add these following incidents to a long, current list.

Several weeks ago (July 1992) two men witnessed two jet fighters escorting a large disc-shaped, silver object. The fighters and the disc came from the north and flew over the mouth of Secret Canyon. The two men were near Long Canyon. As the three craft neared Capitol Butte (high above it), the fighters peeled off to the right and left. The large silver disc "jumped" straight up and then vanished. About that same time, six to eight jet fighters were circling at very low altitudes over the same area of Long Canyon where the two men had had their sighting.

About ten at night on June 15 or 16, I watched two jet fighters fly high over Capitol Butte going toward Cottonwood. They were leading an odd object that had glowing lights all over it. It was too far away for me to get a good look, but the timing of the two events is an interesting coincidence.

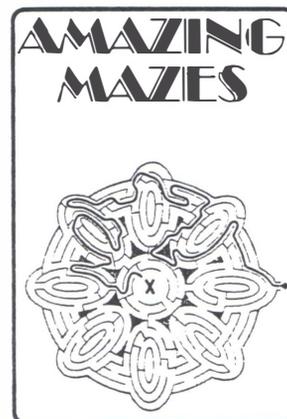

At dusk one evening, in that very same area near Long Canyon, a husband and wife watched as an "airliner-sized," triangular-shaped object flew around Capitol Butte (it must have just flown right over Sedona). They described it as being a strange charcoal grey color and emitting a low, rumbling sound as it passed in front of them. They said it had a red light on one wing tip and a green light on the other. It wavered in flight and was flying at about 30 mph. The craft then continued on in a straight line toward Cottonwood. I have a few comments on what that craft might have been (a Stealth bomber), which I will reserve for later columns. The couple said that the ship had several bump-like protrusions at the rear of both wings.

In the early spring of this year, a woman who lives in her camper was sleeping one night between Red Rock Crossing and Verde Valley School (a rather remote private school). Just before midnight she was abruptly awakened. The metal in her vehicle was making loud crackling and snapping sounds. Then, through the skylight in the roof of her camper, she saw a blazing, clear light. She cautiously went outside and saw that the area was brightly lit, like daylight. She looked up and at a low altitude above her in the night sky was a brilliantly glowing sphere of light about 200 yards across. It flew slowly and silently over her and in minutes was over Verde Valley School. She said the blazing object was larger than the entire school complex. She noticed that the UFO, which had colored lights flashing around its base, stopped and shot down beams of light which probed at various areas around the school buildings. The beams ceased after a short time and the huge craft resumed its casual speed. It then rose over the high mesa behind the school and disappeared.

This object, or ship, is now becoming the most commonly seen UFO in this area. It has been encountered by different people at least a dozen times in different areas around Sedona in the past two or three years. It's anyone's guess who they are — or where they are from. I can tell you it is not one of ours!

The long awaited film, "Fire in the Sky", a dramatization on Travis Walton's encounter in Arizona is finally going to come out. The movie is currently in production and will be released sometime next year. Isn't that great news? Tracy Torme was the original power behind this film coming into being.

ANNOUNCEMENT

FROM: CYNTHIA OZZIMO, ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR, UFOCCI, LAS VEGAS

Just wanted to notify you of a recent sighting I experienced with two other people at Nevada Test Site on the evening of 10-21-92.

We had a very heavy rainstorm that night so you can imagine how much darker the sky appeared, filled with eerie looking black clouds... we first traveled to the "Little A "Le" Inn in Rachel, Nevada and spoke with Pat and Joe Travis about the experiences that are witnessed in that area and shared some exciting stories!!

As we made our approach down the road to the test site at 10:30 p.m., out of nowhere this "HUGE GOLDEN AMBER COLORED" BALL OF LIGHT STARTED RISING FROM THE MOUNTAIN AREA THAT ENCOMPASSES THE TEST SITE... IT BRILLIANTLY LIT UP THE OVERHEAD SKY AND THE GLOWING RAYS WERE TREMENDOUS!!"

Looking through the binoculars, my friend said it looked like "TWO BOOMERANG SHAPED OBJECTS WITH LARGE WHITE LIGHT IN THEIR CENTERS." It happened so quickly we didn't even have time to stop the car. We later parked at the "infamous" "BLACK MAILBOX" where six other people were standing and waiting for "MORE".

Three times there were four flares sent into the sky from the test site to illuminate "whatever they were doing" and two of these times a "golden" object horizontally "peeked-out" and retreated behind the mountain.

Security was parked in the distance down the road making sure no one approached any closer in their truck with the headlights on and I can assure you none of us attempted to "test them"!!

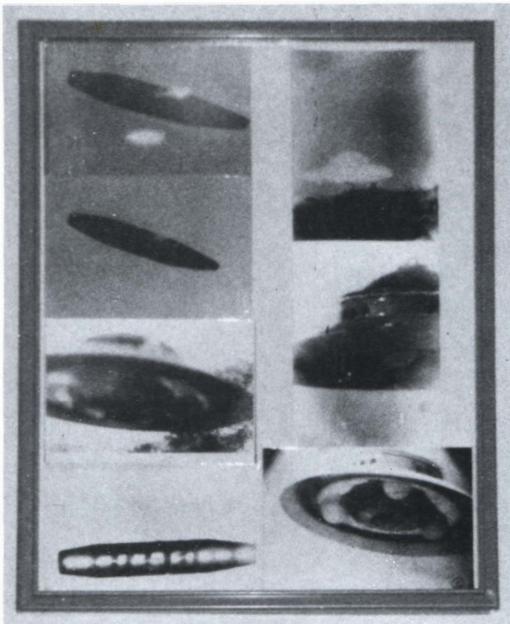

I have repeatedly said in the past that I do not really care to go to this area with large groups as you cannot be responsible for the action of others.. and besides I am not too thrilled watching "our own technology" being tested..I want the real thing.. and I want it now!!!

The picture with me, Pat & Joe Travis.. holding their bottle of wine with the face of an alien at the bottom - they sell at the Inn! (the wine, not the aliens).
