"THE REVEALING SCIENCE OF UFOLOGY"

An Anatomy of Abduction Correlations
by Forest Crawford

"To stretch your paradigm, first you must understand how to walk," said the seminar instructor.

"I need a volunteer. Who thinks they know how to walk?"

I automatically raised my hand and thought, "Everyone in this room knows how to walk; what does this have to do with being a better businessman?" One person was quickly chosen and brought to the front center row.

"Now, would everyone sitting in an aisle seat down the center here, lay something down on the floor. Paper, pencil, anything."

The floor down the center aisle began to get cluttered with contributions at the instructor's request.

Into the silent maze of sleep
Come thund'ring kings of nightly quest.
Conquering the slumbering thought
Helpless in its weary nest.

Flitting forms of phantom visions
Dance the dance of faery wind.
Starlight fancy, noble princes
Briefly spent and gone again.

Nocturnal visits unannounced
Plundering the fruitful host.
Reaping children of the future
Leaving only memory's ghost.

Darkness passes at days dawning.
World awakens with the sun.
Mystery spirits have departed
Satisfied, their work is done.

A SALUTE AND FAREWELL

CORRECTIONS

by J. L. Palermo, Assistant State
Director of Investigations, MO. MUFON

ST. LOUIS, MO. It is with great regret that the UFO Study Group of Greater St. Louis Board of Directors received the letter dated May 30, 1991 from fellow Board Member Ken Hanke. The letter is tendering his resignation from the Board.

Effective June 30, 1991, Hanke is officially taking his Ufological interests with him when he and his wife Helen move to Charlotte, North Carolina. Though his occupational move has been known to the Board for some time, we still feel the loss when the actual time of departure is at hand.

Both Ken and his wife Helen have performed as "a backbone" for the UFO Study Group. Over the years, Ken and Helen have worked exhaustively for such events as the 1985 Mutual UFO Network Symposium held here in St. Louis, both the 1989 and 1990 "SHOW ME" UFO Conferences, and publishers of the UFO Cook Book, and not to mention as Editor and Assistant Editor for The UFO ENIGMA. Their efforts are the only thing that kept this publication going at times.

Ken has served as field investigator for Missouri MUFON and will be leaving his post as Assistant State Director of Missouri MUFON. I hope that the Hankes will be able to attend the UFO Study Group picnic and allow those of us in attendance the opportunity to express our thanks for their work and dedication. We salute you, Ken and Helen Hanke, for the work you've done for us, the work you've done in the name of Ufology and the work you will continue in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Abduction Correlations

"OK, I would like you to walk down the center aisle as fast you can safely go without stepping on anything."

The volunteer carefully started to the back of the room. His eyes darted about surveying the path as his arms bobbed up and down to maintain balance. He looked like a sea-bird stepping from rock to rock as everyone laughed.

"I need another volunteer." As the instructor positioned a young woman with her back to the center aisle he produced a blind fold and tied it securely over her eyes. Turning her around to face down the aisle he said, "The rules are the same; walk to the back of the room without stepping on anything and take as much time as you need."

"I can't! I can't see!" she said.

"Have you seen blind people walking down the sidewalk?" he asked.

"Yes," she said.

"Then use your feet to feel your way like a blind person uses their cane," he said.

The woman reluctantly started her way down the aisle. She stumbled a few times, stepped on a few things along the way and took ten times as long as the first volunteer to reach the back.

The instructor pointed out that even a person who can only perceive what is directly under their feet can get to the end of their journey. However, it will most certainly take them longer and they will miss details along the way. On the other hand, the person with the insight and foresight to look all around will ultimately finish the journey faster and with more awareness of the things they encountered.

The walk of a scientist is often a strange and wonderful trip. As one learns to walk in science, he/she is required to always keep one foot planted firmly on solid ground while reaching out to test new ground with the other. Only after the new ground is thoroughly and convincingly tested may the scientist shift his/her weight forward, much like the blinded volunteer probing her way down the aisle.

It's funny how scientists are expected to discover and understand the universe around them, yet they are generally not allowed the creativity to develop their own insight. The real inventors, researchers and discoverers are those that can see the path ahead with all of its gifts and pitfalls. The Einsteins, Salks, Faradays, Teslas, Pasteurs, Edisons, Galileos and Divenchys are the world changers.

Ufology, a science in its infancy, is affected by lack of insight and foresight possibly worst of all. If asked to compare it to other sciences it would be considered more like archaeology than a purer science such as physics and chemistry. This is due largely to the fact that we are always investigating events that have already happened. At best a UFO investigator will arrive on the scene within hours. Very rarely will the investigator be present for the UFO event. If they are, they will rarely admit to it for fear of losing their reputation.

Why has Ufology ended up this way? Is it because we spend too much time arguing amongst ourselves over trivial things?

Mr. X - "There were five dead aliens at the Roswell crash!"

Mr. Y - "No, you are wrong there were four dead and one alive."

Mr. X - "You are wrong and I'm right."

Mr. Y - "Well oh ya!"

Has a want or need for money and attention hindered our growth?

These things have certainly contributed some to Ufology's state of affairs but there are several other major problems faced by our science:

1) The evidence seems to tell us that we are dealing with a phenomenon that is controlled by something more intelligent than we are. Imagine a chimpanzee lumbering out onto a runway with a club in hand trying to figure out a fighter jet. Could that chimp even carry on a simple conversation with the pilot and would the pilot care?

2) A more serious problem is the lack of conclusive, or even substantial, evidence. The only conclusive evidence would be a whole or crashed craft or an alien live, dead or in part. All other forms of evidence, landing traces, photographs, scars, testimony and even most artifacts are only circumstantial. Our evidence must prove beyond a shadow of a doubt strangeness exceeding all known human technology. This is an extremely tall order.

There is another less scientific form of evidence that I feel warrants including; I call it "Personal Evidence." Personal evidence is synchronicities or coincidences that may not make sense or have significance to anyone but the experiencee. Personal evidence is usually hard to prove, a hunch or premonition perhaps. It seems to be a part of our creative intuitive selves that we are generally unaware of.

I would like to share a few examples. One late night after a long interview with an abductee I was driving home in a thick fog. The witness and I had just been discussing that she thought the aliens were around and paying attention to more people than we realized. I had the radio on and the disk jockey was playing a series of clips of famous quotes from movies. I craned my neck to look up and out the front window into the fog. Thinking out loud I said to the mist, "It is too easy for you to hide in the fog. If you are really up there paying attention it would be nice if you let us know once in a while." At the very instant I finished saying that a quote from a "Three Stooges" movie played and it said, "Look Moe, there is a flying saucer up there!"

Another incident happened after an interview with a contactee. He had just been telling me that more UFO activity was going to happen and that more and more races of beings would be paying attention to Earth. On the way home I stopped at a quick shop to call home and tell my wife I was running late. I pulled my van up next to the pay phone and turned to get out. There on the wall outside the quick shop was a Camel cigarette poster. The poster was a picture of a well dressed camel standing against a night sky. A beam of blue and red light from a silver flying saucer shined on him from above. The words, "THEY'RE COMING," in big letters was all it said.

It is nice to know that they have a sense of humor. Of course there is no proof that this means anything, but I got a kick out of it. You just had to be there.

There is another very important aspect that has held Ufology back; ignoring evidence. If a pharmaceutical company wanted to sell a new drug to the public they would have to thoroughly analyze it to determine its contents. If upon analysis they found a compound that they could not identify, would they be able to sell the product? Of course not. They could not take the risk of people becoming ill or dying from something the company could not explain. The truth is, no scientist worth his weight in salt could ignore data and be considered a real scientist. If other scientists can not ignore data then how can we get away with it? In fact we have not gotten away with it but we keep trying. Remember there was a time when we ignored crash retrieval because it was too controversial. Now there is a crash reported on "Unsolved Mysteries" several times a year. Ufologists have done the same thing with the abduction phenomenon and it has become our main focus of attention lately. We are still doing it with mental transmission and contactee cases. This may be a mistake we will regret later.

If small gray aliens wake you in the middle of the night, paralyze you with their stare, beam you through the wall on board their ship, examine you in a rather unfriendly way, maybe even reproduce hybrid children with you, blank or mask your memory and return you to bed, that is acceptable. But, if they just want to teach you things, answer questions or help you develop personally, then that is too hard to believe and God forbid if they look human. If this comparison sounds ludicrous, it is. We must keep an open mind unless we really like eating crow.

Let's start our journey along the road of "Informational Correlations" in the small Illinois farm town of Bernedotte. On October 4, 1989 in the mid-afternoon a MUFON field investigator named Poe Clark observed a strange object in the sky. It did not match anything he was familiar with, it was a UFO. He promptly called Paul Russell, a State Section Director for Illinois MUFON. Paul immediately came down from the Peoria area. Through binoculars Paul and Poe observed a number of strange objects until several hours after dark. The scope of this article is not to comprehensively report on the Bernedotte case but, approximately one hundred unknown objects were observed that night.

Over the next eight months, in excess of 410 UFOs were reported by 13 independent witnesses. Another phenomenon that occurred in conjunction with several sightings was the fall of "Angel Hair." Samples were collected by the investigators as it fell from the sky, in some cases. The samples were put in air tight containers, kept in the dark and frozen to preserve them. The samples remain well preserved even today.

Lab analysis on a mass and a FTIR spectrophotometer placed the substance in a family of compounds known as amide-esters. The most popular explanation for angel hair has been balloon spider webs. So, a comparative analysis of some spider webs was also conducted. The FTIR spectrograph of the two showed remarkable similarities. Both substances were most certainly in the same family, amide-esters.

Another interesting thing was coming to light about the same time as the angel hair work. Several abductee cases from around the country were claiming to be receiving information from their abductors during or between encounters. John Carpenter (State Section Director of Missouri MUFON), Tom Stults (State Director of Illinois MUFON) and myself decided that if the aliens really are talking then this could be important and we should be able to ask them test questions. If the answers correlated then maybe this would substantiate some validity for these communications.

The research philosophy of "Ask the Aliens" was born. We have been observing the phenomenon ourselves and asking the government for answers for some time. We spend a great deal of time and money sifting through what the government tells us trying to find the truth. So, why not get the answers direct from the aliens? Even if they are not telling the whole truth at least the information is not third or fourth person removed.

STUDY GROUP HEARS ROSWELL WITNESSES TESTIMONIES

by Marge Myers,
Recording Secretary, UFOSG

ST. LOUIS, MO: The UFO Study Group of Greater St. Louis met at 2:00 Sunday, May 12, 1991. Due to the celebration of Mother's Day, the meeting was short but of great interest.

Quickly moving past general introductions and committee reports, those attending enjoyed the refreshments available.

When the meeting resumed, UFOSG President John Schroeder introduced the video "Remembrances of Roswell." J. L. Palermo, Editor of The UFO Enigma, handled technical duties.

The video has great importance from several directions. First, the viewer is listening to some of the personnel that were actually involved in the retrieval of the parts of the saucer debris and the removal of the alien bodies. We also see and hear some of the media people who were suppressed and military personnel who know the orders for suppression came from high up. We have friends and relatives sharing information that is confessional in nature from those involved with the Roswell cover-up.

After the video, a reminder of the annual picnic was made and the meeting was adjourned.

JUNE SEMINAR BY GEORGE GREEN

by J. L. Palermo
Editor, The UFO ENIGMA

ST LOUIS, MO. For those in the St. Louis area, the name George Green may be familiar. The George Green you already know is a well know psychic from the St. Charles County area. The other George Green is presenting what promises to be a least a smorgasbord of issues is from Tehachapi, California.

On Sunday, June 15, 1991, Green will be presenting a seminar at the Midway Motor Inn located at Dorsett and I-270 in the Maryland Heights area. Beginning at 1:00 pm, Green intends to deliver his information concerning such topics as Pleiadian communications, a questioning of the concept of a New World Order, an examination of Executive Order #11490 enacted by former President Richard M. Nixon and much more.

Background provided on Green indicates his Air Force days began in 1957 and brought him position as a Radio-Radar Specialist. It was during this time Green states he was shown photographs of two dead aliens. His subsequent questions to his C.O. got him transferred to a base in Japan. Green's biography indicates he has worked as a Financial Securities Consultant, a Registered Financial Principle, Bank Director, Licensed Real Estate Broker and more (though actual names of companies and supervisors or company owners are not divulged).

Seminar entrance cost is $20 which also guarantees you a copy of the book Space Gate: The Veil Removed.

The Opinionated Lucille Ball

Lucille Ball was more than just a dizzy redhead. She was a highly opinionated woman who shared her views with friend Jim Brochu, the author of "Lucy in the Afternoon" (Pocket Books).

■ On Kate Hepburn: "She never talked to anyone directly, she'd address you looking all around you but never at you. She wasn't really standoffish. She ignored everyone equally."

■ On Ronald and Nancy Reagan: "We couldn't eat until (the Reagans) arrived, and they were almost an hour late. They were all out of breath and so excited. They had seen a UFO and stopped to watch it. After he was elected president, I kept thinking about that night and wondered if he'd have still won if he had told everybody that he'd seen a flying saucer."

Board Member, UFOSG

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI: As the season brings warmth and the opportunity for outdoor activity, the UFO Study Group takes its last meeting to Laumeier Park on June 23.

The Study Group will sponsor the hotdogs, park facility and videos while those attending will bring side dishes. We recommend those attending bring some additional beverages to temper the expected hot weather. The videos for viewing will include the recent CBS Special 60 minute program titled "VISITORS FROM THE UNKNOWN," a video from New Yorker Bill Knell that presents an historic overview of ufology and a recent segment from ABC's "Hard Copy" showing new UFO activity and information from the Soviet Union.

Those who have the urge to participate in athletic activity may wish to bring frisbees, a football, bad mitten set.. whatever you would like.

Again, as per the reservation sheet, the picnic is scheduled for June 23, from 12:00 PM to 8:00 PM at the Charles Moss Shelter. We hope the map included in this issue will be helpful and that you will be able to join us.

PARAPSYCHOLOGY COMMITTEE REPORT

by John Schroeder
President, UFOSGSSL

ST. LOUIS, MO. During the May meeting of the Parapsychology meeting held at the home of John and Eleanor Schroeder, video played a large part as did certain tabloid stories.

Marjorie Sherrill updated the committee on activity in the isolation room of the Society of Research into Rapport and Telekinesis (SORRAT). Experimenters placed booby trapped materials that can be used as scientific data in the isolation box. Letter writers have questions to be answered along with self addressed stamped envelopes (SASEs) that often disappear only to re-appear in the addressee's mail with someone else's answered questions inside. The experimenters had been able to place their materials along side the letter writers questions without them disappearing.

Sherrill decided to start sending questions again. Reportedly, everything vanished at one time. Sherrill received a box of ESP cards with Dr. Peter Phillip's return address and parapsychologist W. E. Cox's letter with a listing of symbols from ESP cards in one of her SASEs. In another case came a Memorex cassette tape in a Sony box with a letter writer's return address. A third SASE belonging to Sherrill brought a gift-wrapped package with the same letter writer's return address and a sheet of paper with Sherrill's return address. It suggested that she would enjoy hearing Phillip's tape and discussing his recent remarkable findings with him. Another of Cox's letters had a list of symbols from ESP cards alone in yet another of Sherrill's SASEs.

The order of the ESP cards matched the listing on the Cox letter which arrived by itself and the wraps on the Sony tapes which had an introduction by Phillips and came in a Memorex box in the gift wrapped package. Phillips reported that he had taken a tissue and tore off a corner for later identification. He taped the tissue around a new Sony tape in its box and carried it to the isolation room. No evidence of tissue or tape arrived in any of the seven Sherrill SASEs which had been sent to the isolation room and returned in the Sherrill's mail.

Although there was considerable phenomenology the experiment fell into the two-thirds that are unsuccessful.

After some discussion, the Committee adjourned for the evening. See CALENDAR section on last page for next Parapsychology Meeting date.

They will succeed GARY COLLINS and PHYLLIS GEORGE.

Top Dogs Strut Stuff At Purina Invitational

By Robert Kelly Of the Post-Dispatch Staff Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville went to the dogs Tuesday. And some mighty fine dogs they were.

Mystery: Planes Found Off Florida Aren't Lost Squadron

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Five World War II-era Navy planes found off the Florida coast are not the Lost Squadron, baffled explorers announced Tuesday. They said the mix-up would only reinforce the myth of the Bermuda Triangle.

The Navy Avengers were spotted last month by remote camera. But more detailed examination showed they were not the planes of Flight 19, said Graham Hawkes, leader of a team aboard the high-tech treasure hunting ship Deep See.

"The Bermuda Triangle, I'm afraid, if you want to find mystery, is probably even alive and well today than it was before," Hawkes said.

The planes of Flight 19 vanished Dec. 5, 1945, on a training flight that was to have included a bombing run on a deserted Bahaman island. Radio transmissions heard at their base at Fort Lauderdale indicated that the pilots had become disoriented while flying toward the Bahamas and believed they were over the Florida Keys and the Gulf of Mexico.

No trace of planes or pilots was ever found. Their disappearance helped fuel the myth of the Bermuda Triangle, an area bounded by Bermuda, Miami and Puerto Rico where ships and planes supposedly often vanish mysteriously.

The five planes found by the Deep See were in good condition under 550 to 750 feet of water about 10 miles northeast of Fort Lauderdale. All were within 1½ miles of one another, Hawkes said.

Coincidences — including the number 28 on one plane, the same as that of Flight 19's lead plane — contributed to the confusion, he said.

"There's an extreme irony... that the group of aircraft would be Avengers, that the number of that group should be five, and that one of the first numbers you get off of it should be 28," he said.

The coincidence of the plane number could be explained by the Navy's reuse of numbers from lost or destroyed planes, Hawkes said, adding there may have been up to three Avengers 28s over the years.

The strongest evidence was this: The Navy had never lost five Avengers together except for Flight

19. But the team now believes the planes went down in four or five separate incidents over a period of several years. At least some of the planes were early TBF-1 Avengers, not the TBMs used on Flight 19.

The area where they were found was used by the Navy from the naval air base at Fort Lauderdale for practice low-altitude torpedo runs, said Ted Darcy, an archaeologist who examined the data for Scientific Search Project, which owns the Deep See.

John Evans, the air base crash photographer when the planes of Flight 19 disappeared, confirmed the existence of such practice runs just off Fort Lauderdale.

He said he could never accept that the planes could have crashed so close to Fort Lauderdale without anyone hearing their radio transmissions.

With Tuesday's announcement, the remaining leading theory is that the planes went down somewhere off Cape Canaveral; the last radio fix would be rescuers could get on them.
