Up in the sky, it's a bird, it's a plane, no — it's a UFO! Yes, that's right. More and more people, reliable people, are seeing UFOs than ever before. An epidemic of UFO sightings has broken out across the world over the past couple of years. The UFO Invasion is here and now! And that's why UFO SIGHTINGS is determined to capture the UFO enigma in all its mysterious glory!

Our dedicated staff has been working overtime to sort out all reports of UFO sightings that we have received. It's a hard job, but one which must be done if the public is to be educated as to the fact that we are being visited by beings from other planets! The attention focused on UFOs in recent years seems to be working. You no longer find as many people scoffing at reports of UFOs as you once did. Even scientists are beginning to take the UFO phenomenon seriously. These are all steps in the right direction.

And it can only be hoped that a magazine such as UFO SIGHTINGS also educates the public in the area of UFO awareness. All one has to do is to look inside this issue to see how real UFOs are and how foolish we have been for not delving into the matter with more concern. This time around, we'll explore such diverse topics as a report on UFO landing bases in the desert, the secret force propelling UFOs, the origin of UFOs, UFOs and their aquatic connection and eyewitness reports concerning close encounters with UFOs! No other UFO magazine gives you more for your money than UFO SIGHTINGS.

Remember, keep believing! One day, all UFO believers will be proved right, while those non-believers will be laughed at! UFOs exist, and that's all there is to it. The millions who have seen them will attest to that fact. UFO SIGHTINGS will continue to carry on the fight to awaken the mass public as to what is really going on concerning UFOs and aliens. You can do your part by telling every one you know to pick up a copy of our magazine and become educated. The struggle continues. In the end, UFOlogists will have won the day. Let's just hope that when that day comes, the human race won't find itself screaming, "The sky is falling! The sky is falling!" Untill next time, dwell on that thought — and keep on watching the skies above!

Sincerely,
Russell Wiener

EXPOSED: UFOs IN THE DESERT

We have uncovered the fact that there are several UFO landing bases spread across this nation's deserts. Here is a report of where to find these bases and what to do to prevent them from spreading.

We have uncovered the fact that UFOs are using desert areas like this one as landing bases.

Dateline—Clovis, New Mexico.

After an exhaustive study, UFO SIGHTINGS has uncovered a pattern of UFO landing bases in desert areas. The culmination of our study was finding the source of their operations in the Clovis, New Mexico desert. This base was the apparent headquarters from which other landings were directed. Our researchers have found clear tracks to indicate where several UFOs have landed. In addition to the tracks, some metallic pieces of unknown substance have also been found, leading to the belief that these are fragments of crashed UFOs.

In addition to the large Clovis, New Mexico base, our staff has found landing bases in several other desert locations. We were first alerted to the possible fact that UFOs were landing in the desert when there seemed to be an unusually high amount of sightings over desert areas during the course of the past three to four months. Our worst fears were more than realized. It is even con-

Scientists searching in the desert for clues came up with this skeleton of a head. They believe it to be an alien's brain, since it definitely isn't that of a human's skull!

ceivable that aliens are planning to launch an all-out attack from one of these desert bases.

In addition to the aforementioned Clovis, New Mexico base, we have uncovered landing bases in Reno, Nevada; in several isolated desert areas throughout California; in Butte, Montana and in Bismark, North Dakota.

All the landing bases mentioned above have visible traces of UFOs having been there. We are presently tracking down leads as to other desert locations of these UFOs. If any of you have seen any unidentified flying objects in the desert, immediately contact your local sheriff and let us know, too. We are working with local law enforcement offices throughout the country to uncover the alien menace in our midst.

Beware of driving through the desert. You never know when you might be overcome by aliens. If they are going to mount an attack against earth, we don't have much time to track down all the alien bases and fight back. We are doing our best. UFOs are here and now—in our deserts!

UFOs Upclose: Flying Objects Over England

These are some of the so-called "flying crosses" seen over England in the past by reliable witnesses.

Beginning with this issue, UFO SIGHTINGS introduces a new feature, "UFOs Upclose." This feature will examine UFO sightings around the world. This month we stop in England to take a look at an incredible case which happened some time ago, yet is still one of the most remarkable sightings on record!

Why don't the blamed things hang around long enough for you to get a good look at 'em?"

Probably every person involved in the 25 or more years of serious research into UFOs has said something like that. Because one of the biggest reasons the study of UFOs has made so little progress in a quarter century is the desperate lack of dependable, detailed information about what thousands of people have seen. With all due respect to those who have tried so hard for so long, most reports of UFO sightings are just about worthless.

They may express the witness's honest personal reaction to his shocking experience. They may make it clear that what was seen was definitely not anything ordinary or familiar. They may include all the information the astonished observer could be expected to record. But they don't give the curious scientist very much to go on. And without cold, hard facts, there isn't much that can be done with the reports except to file them away in hopes that someday they may become useful.

It usually isn't the fault of the witness. He did the very best he could in a very difficult situation. He wasn't the least bit prepared for what happened. And the UFO probably came and went so fast that he just stood there with his mouth open. That's not the way to do scientific research, but most of the people who have seen UFOs were not scientists.

Even after it happens, the witness often doesn't know quite what to do about it. Calls to the local police or the town newspaper or maybe to a radio station bring little satisfaction. Curiosity, perhaps, but the person who does any interviewing of the witness soon after the sighting is usually looking for "human interest" more than scientific truth. And if the report ever gets to someone of scientific background, it is probably too late to get the facts clear. Again, an opportunity is lost.

An eyewitness points to the sky after seeing several UFOs over London in broad daylight.

If the passengers on this doubledecker bus look somewhat bewildered, that's because they all saw a fleet of flying saucers over London while travelling.

But not always.

Every once in a while, someone with the proper know-how and experience gets to the scene quickly and finds a witness who got a good, long look at the UFO and is able to describe it in great detail. That's a time to celebrate! A time to hoist a pint of the very best ale the pub has to offer... at least when it all happens in the rolling, green countryside of rural southeast England on a clear, cool autumn day. Like, for instance, Thursday, October 26, 1967.

There are but two main characters. One is Julian Henessey, a young, bearded Scot who served most ably as the main British investigator for the National Investigations Committee for Aerial Phenomena. The other is Angus Brooks, a retired Flight Administrative Officer for what was then the British Overseas Airways Corp.; prior to that, he had been a sergeant in an RAF Photographic Interpretation Unit, and, even earlier, an art school student.

The scene of the action was the Moigne Downs in South Dorset. Brooks and his two dogs were taking their usual walk about a mile or so north of the Channel coast and a few miles northeast of Weymouth. It was about 11:25 in the morning. Here's the way Angus Brooks described it to Henessey:

"Walking the dogs across the Downs, I decided to shelter from the high wind by lying flat on my back in a shallow indentation on a hill at the side of the valley. I was dressed in a green waterproof anorak (parka) and trousers. The dogs (a Dalmatian and an Alsatian bitch, 12 years old) were roaming around, searching for game.

"Almost immediately I observed a fine 'con-trail' or what could have been the reflection of a 'craft' high in the sky over the Portland area (about 10 miles to the southwest). This disappeared and into my view, descending at lightening speed, came the craft, which decelerated with what appeared to be immensely powerful reverse thrust, to level out at approximately 1/4 mile to the south of my position and at approximately 200-300 feet high.

"The shape of the craft prior to leveling out to the hover position was of a central circular chamber with a leading fuselage in the front, and three separate fuselages at the rear. On slowing to the hover position, the two outer fuselages at the rear moved to positions at the sides of the craft to form four fuselages at equidistant positions around the center chamber. There were no visible power units and no noise of applied power for reverse thrust, movement of fuselages or for hovering. On attaining 'hover,' the craft rotated 90 degrees clockwise and then remained motionless, unaffected durin a flurry of sightings over there.

by the very strong wind.

"The craft remained in this position for the next 22 minutes and I remained, rather apprehensive, in my position. There was no noise that I could hear, but my Alsatian returned to my side and appeared very distraught... she would take no notice of orders to 'sit' or 'down' and pestered me to move on. There could have been a VHF (very high frequency) sound which she was picking up enough to pain her. On four subsequent visits to the area, she has (with witnesses) been very distressed on each occasion.

"From my horizontal position, the craft's construction was of a translucent material — the color of the craft took on the color of the sky above it and changed with clouds passing over it. There could have been a clear material at the top of the fuselages and the center chamber. There were dark center shadows along the bases of the fuselages and center chamber. No movement was observed, at any time, of the operators — no portholes or crew-viewing windscreens at the noses of the fuselages. The nose cones of the fuselages were the reverse of our conventional types. The groove fins along the bases of the fuselages did not open or close. The possibility of power passing through the construction material could be considered.

"The hover position was equidistant between Winfreth Atomic Station and the Portland Underwater Defense Station, and about a mile inland from the U.S. Air Force Communications Unit at Ringstead Bay. When approached, the Commanding Officer confirmed that nothing unusual had been reported.

"At 11:47 a.m., two of the fuselages moved around to line up with a center third, and the craft climbed with speed increasing to light standard, ENE over Winfreth. The 'lead' fuselage on departure was different from the arrival 'lead.'

"Dimensions (approximate): Center Chamber — diameter, 25 ft.; height 12 ft.; Fuselages — length, 75 ft., height 7 ft.; width, 8 ft."

So there it is! But what is it? For that matter, is it anything beyond the witness's imagination? It may be one of the most detailed descriptions of a UFO on record, but can anything be learned from it?

The first issue to be settled, and the one that controls everything else that may be said or done, is the reliability of the witness. Did Angus Brooks actually see approximately what his report describes? Or did he, for whatever reasons, exaggerate or even invent some or all of the report?

This photo shows several spots along the Thames River where UFOs were supposed to have hovered over at various times.

English folklore has it that a sword once owned by King James was used on an alien during a landing. The sword is now one of many enclosed in a museum.

There is no way to answer these questions with absolute certainty. But a careful review of the case and of Brooks' subsequent behavior should be able to point us in the right direction. And all that has been learned about him has pointed to a competent, sincere, honest individual. His descriptions of the experience showed no significant variation over the months during which he was publicly involved. Moreover, he at no time showed any signs of trying to gain attention, publicity or money via this report. Not a single meaningful item has come to light which would suggest that his motives were other than the highest.

It would have been preferable to have had other witnesses with Brooks at the time of the sighting, but such was not the case, and the lack of others in such a remote area is perfectly understandable. And while it was hardly possible to consider the dogs as witnesses, the reaction of one of them is certainly interesting, especially as it was observed by others on different occasions at the scene.

Lacking any negative information, it is therefore reasonable to consider Angus Brooks's testimony to be probably genuine, and to proceed from there. The most interesting aspect of the report is its detail, and the most interesting aspect of the UFO was its shape. Thanks to Brooks's extensive background in art, photo interpretation and aviation, he was in a rare position to detect and record the specifics of this most unusual case.

The shape of the UFO is without exact precedent. A fairly large disc with four great, moveable arms is unique in the history of UFOs, though "flying crosses" have been and still are being reported. They may be identical or at least similar objects, but the usual lack of date prevents direct comparisons.

It was extremely fortunate that such a competent witness was able to watch this peculiar UFO for more than 20 minutes, and thus get as good a look at it as anyone has of any UFO. As a result, Brooks reported numerous novel characteristics of the object and its behavior, which we will consider individually:

1. The basic shape of the object. In great contrast to most UFOs, it was not a simple geometric form (disc, oval, sphere, cylinder, etc.). The four large arms, at least three of which were moveable, have not been reported by anyone else, to this writer's knowledge.

In this breathtaking photograph, we see an amazing UFO phenomenon taking place in the London sky. Those who witnessed this event were dumbfounded!

2. Construction details. The ribbing on the underside of the arms or fuselages — one thick rib flanked by thin ribs — is certainly unique, as are the concave ends of the fuselages. Just as interesting as the translucency of the entire object, as evidenced by the change of color according to the background.

3. Motions of the object. Nothing in any of the files with which this writer is familiar (and that includes Project Blue Book and NICAP) is at all similar to the changing of positions of the fuselages. Equally unprecedented was the 90-degree turn of the object and its departure with a different fuselage pointing forward.

4. Flight pattern. A very familiar aspect of the Brooks sighting was the arrival, violent stop, extended hovering and rapid departure. This is probably the most common feature of clearly seen UFO incidents. The unusual part is a result of Brooks's careful noting of the duration (22 min.) and of the strength of the wind (on his NICAP report form, he stated the wind was SSW at Force, 8, equivalent to 39-46 mph.) Had the UFO been floating like a free balloon, rather than under control and power, it should have drifted 14-17 miles to the NNE during the observation, yet Brooks made it clear that the object remained stationary during the entire 22 minutes.

Recently there have been a couple of European sightings that could have some relation to the "flying cross" that Angus Brooks saw in 1967. The source of the two reports is Ernst Berger, a science student who serves as the Austrian representative of the Mutual UFO Network. The witness at both incidents was artist (painter) Josef Pritz.

The first sighting was on Jan. 9, 1975, at about 8 p.m., at Wachtstein, Austria, Pritz described the object as a round body with a cornflower-blue rim melting into a yellow center. Around the center were five projections like clock hands, each with blue, yellow and bluish-yellow-grey sections. The hands were several times as long as the diameter of the center portion. Three hands pointed up, two pointed down, and there were thin lines between the hands. After 50 minutes, the object zoomed down and disappeared.

The second sighting was a few days later, on January 13, at 7:40 p.m. Pritz saw a light in the sky which developed two clock-like hands having a blue sparkle and forming a nine o'clock arrangement. The center part was the same as in the first sighting, and there were also two transparent hands pointing down, colored a faint yellow-green. The same thin lines could be seen between the hands. The two main hands (short to left, long upwards) then went into motion, the shorter one switching back and forth from left to right, with both vanishing after a minute. Then something Pritz likened to a cannon or an exhaust release came from the lower right section of the central disc-like part. Long trails of sparks spurted from the "barrel" and caused the witness to hid in fear. This lasted for an estimated 10 minutes and then the whole object was gone, except for a light zig-zagging around the night sky.

Was either of the objects seen in Austria the same as that seen in England, many years before? Had the former been seen in daylight, we might know. But at night a lot of things take on an unusual appearance; a huge aluminum airliner becomes a set of blinking lights, once the sun sets.

Unfortunately, the percentage of UFO sightings that happen at night has been increasing for quite a few years. Only rarely does anyone get a chance to see one clearly enough to permit some details to be detected. But on those rare days, a bit of knowledge may be added to the slowly growing collection of data which may someday lead to a solution. Until then, it will pay to have patience....

THE STRANGE CASE OF THE ALIEN WHO CAME TO DINNER

This is the home of Lucy Middleton, the one where she had an alien guest for dinner.

Dateline—Sioux Falls, Iowa.

■ Guess who's coming to dinner? Well, if you said an alien, you're so right! Sound weird? You had better believe it was even weirder living it! But before I get way ahead of myself, let's go back to the beginning. My name is Lucy Middleton, and I'm a librarian in Sioux Falls, Iowa. I'm not what you would call an adventurous person. All my friends can tell you that I'm a decent, hard-working person not prone to lying. In other words, I don't invent things that are not there!

So when I tell you that an alien came to dinner, you can believe me. It all started on a Friday night. I had left work for the week and was on my way home. I had nothing special planned. I usually have a simple dinner, all by myself. This night would be so very different!

I got into my car to make the drive from the library to my house. The trip usually takes about 20 minutes. I took my usual route. As I was driving along old, deserted Callahan Road, I began to feel so strange. It was as if another presence, or life form if you will, had come over to me. I just couldn't explain it. All I know is that I had never experienced anything like this in my life! Yet I kept on driving.

It seemed as if the sky was getting darker, yet it was a fine summer's day, and there wasn't a cloud in the sky. I looked out my window but could discern nothing unusual except for that mysterious darkness. I figured that we might be due for a summer rainstorm, as often happens in these parts.

I finally arrived home. And that's when all the trouble started. I pulled into the driveway of my modest home, only to behold a stranger in front of my house. I definitely did not know him, for I could immediately recognize any of my neighbors on sight.

I was reluctant to get out of my car. But I'm a naturally friendly person, so I figured if this was a traveller in need, I'd help him.

As I walked toward him, I immediately noticed something strange about him. I couldn't put my finger on what it was, but there seemed something eerie about him. Upon getting a bird's eye view from about two feet away, I was really taken aback! My "visitor" was under five feet tall, with a very pale complexion and light, silvery eyes. He looked quite frail, even to the point of seeming a bit timid. All in all, he gave off the impression of someone bewildered, like a little child.

I asked him if I could be of any assistance, and all he said was, "Hungry." Sensing his famine and always being what some call a Good Samaritan, I invited him inside. I motioned for him to sit down at the kitchen table while I fixed something.

Some people have claimed that many UFOs have hovered over their house, but few have had any over for dinner.

It's not uncommon for flying saucers to buzz the homes of residents. Maybe they all want to drop in for dinner.

He sat there staring at me, not saying a word. I made some vegetable soup and ham sandwiches for him to eat. As I put the food before him, he gazed at it rather hesitatingly. Slowly, he tasted it. At first he ate very slowly, as if testing the food to see if it was safe. But then he began to gobble up the food all at once, gulping it down. It wasn't until he had finished every drop that he spoke up.

My house guest pushed away his food, then said in perfect but halting English, "Thank you. You helped me. Now I can go home. You are kind. Are other earthlings also this kind?"

Upon hearing that last remark of his, I turned paler than he was. I blurted out, "What did you say about earthlings?" To my utter astonishment he answered, "I must go now, go back to my home Planet of Leroux. It is far away from Earth, and I am expected back. Goodbye."

I don't know how I managed not to faint. I was sitting there with my mouth open, half thinking this guy was some kook, half thinking I should run for my life. Then, all of a sudden, before I could even blink an eye, the figure in front of me vanished into thin air. Within the next minute I heard an odd sound. I ran to my window, and sure enough, I saw one of those flying saucers which I always read about, taking off into the wild blue yonder.

As you can well imagine, it took me a long time to calm down. Finally, after I had convinced myself that I wasn't dreaming, but that an alien had actually come to dinner, I decided not to tell anyone. I figured I'd be locked up. But after thinking it over for a while, I've decided to come forward. I just couldn't keep this incredible incident to myself any longer. It's true, so help me. I had an alien as a dinner guest! It may seem humorous now, but at the time, I was scared out of my wits. The next time you have company over, make sure there isn't a flying saucer parked outside!

Ann Fisher has displayed her psychic abilities on many radio and television programs.

... you can stimulate the person's memory process, move his fingers, make him do what you want, repeat the words you want him to say, and do many other things. It does work. No one can resist this command power. See for yourself:

GETS SHY BOYFRIEND TO PROPOSE MARRIAGE—Marilyn K. was in love with Kevin. They had dated for two years and were very much in love, but Kevin was shy and couldn't muster up enough courage to propose. Marilyn then tried my method of contacting Kevin's subconscious mind and suggesting that he propose. Later—out of the blue—Kevin popped the question!

WOMAN GETS PROMOTION AND DOUBLES HER SALARY—Judy K. wanted to be promoted to a new position that was opening up where she worked. She knew she could handle the job, but she needed a chance to prove herself. A few weeks after she used an OMNI-COSMICS technique to tap her boss's mind, she was called into his office and given the job. A year later, she doubled her salary!

What's more, with the Miracle Power of OMNI-COSMICS, you'll be able to know the innermost thoughts of people in the next room or thousands of miles away—or even what a person is thinking when you talk to him on the telephone!

USE OMNI-COSMICS TO PROGRAM A PROTECTIVE FORCE AROUND YOU!

Today we live in an age with many negative influences around us. If you believe that voodoo and psychic assault does not exist in the Twentieth Century, you are incorrect. Negative forces do exist today and they do work.

Now, with OMNI-COSMICS, you can build a protective force around you so that you will have nothing to fear at all. That's just what John and Pamela did—and look at how they were saved...

INVISIBLE FORCE SAVES MAN FROM DROWNING—John K., a fair swimmer, went out too far one day. When he was in the middle of the lake and there was no one in sight, he became very tired and started to sink. Somehow John, a regular user of OMNI-COSMICS, was saved. He didn't know how he got back to shore for he had felt an invisible force carrying him over the top of the water to land safely. OMNI-COSMICS saved him from drowning!

OMNI-COSMICS SAVES LIFE OF YOUNG LADY—Pamela, a young student in one of my classes who habitually uses the protective powers of OMNI-COSMICS, was driving on a city street one day and heard a voice say "Stop or you will be killed." It was lucky she did, for another car went through the intersection at a high rate of speed. She would have been killed or seriously injured if she had not stopped.

You'll also see how, with OMNI-COSMIC protective powers, other people were able to repel a black magic attack... reverse a voodoo curse... travel with safety... get saved from a mugging attempt... and much more. THEY DID IT—AND SO CAN YOU!

SEE HOW TO USE OMNI-COSMIC POWER FOR INSTANT HEALING!

Do you want perfect health! OMNI-COSMIC healing power will respond immediately when you use the right power ritual. After a while, all illness and pain will disappear!

OVERCOMES SERIOUS KIDNEY AILMENT—Terry J., a dear friend of mine, had just found out that he had a very serious kidney ailment. His doctor told him that his condition would shorten his life and that he "needed rest." But two months after he used an OMNI-COSMICS health ritual I showed him, his doctors were amazed to discover that his kidneys were in perfect working condition and that no signs of illness existed.

HEALS ULCER AND IMPROVES BAD HEART CONDITION—Perry had a very bad heart condition and also a serious ulcer. His doctor wanted to remove his ulcer, but was afraid to operate because of the heart condition. But when Perry went back to his doctor after using an OMNI-COSMICS ritual I showed him, his ulcer had healed and his heart condition was greatly improved!

With my PERFECT HEALTH ritual, soon you will feel your body becoming stronger, healthier and more dynamic. I DID IT—SO YOU CAN! Just look...

I was told when I was very ill with asthma, that I would have to use a breathing machine three times a day for the rest of my life. My doctor told me that only one out of a hundred was ever cured of this disease.

But I refused to accept this. By tuning in my OMNI-COSMICS power, I was able to get better and eventually cure the asthma! So why suffer from less-than-perfect health when you can discover how OMNI-COSMICS can be used to overcome nervous stomach, migraine headaches, skin blemishes, and insomnia... lower high blood pressure... and heal ulcers? # The Power Behind The Power: What Drives UFOs?

Scientists have come up with this sketch as being the electromagnetic force which propels UFOs.

It has been greatly speculated as to what mysterious power gives UFOs the force to be propelled across galaxies. Here we delve into the power behind UFOs and come up with some surprising conclusions.

In order to ascertain the true force driving UFOs, UFOlogists are conducting several tests.

Scientists have even managed to simulate the force behind UFOs under sea conditions.

Imagine that you're taking a Sunday drive in the country. You are driving along an isolated back road, enjoying the fresh air, when suddenly your car's engine and radio both go dead. After a few futile attempts to restart the engine, you get out of the car to see what's wrong. In the near distance a large, faintly glowing spheroid, hovering a few meters above the ground, drifts slowly and silently toward you. A tingling, burning sensation sweeps over your body as the strange craft passes over your car. Abruptly it shoots straight up into the sky, makes a tight, right-angle turn at high speed, and disappears over the horizon without creating as much as a whisper of sound. When the UFO is gone, the sound of your car radio brings you back to reality. You restart your car and continue your drive wondering if you should report your sighting of the UFO.

This little scenario is purely imaginary, but the effects that I've described in it are not. They have been observed in association with real UFOs, and they are, in fact, very typical of UFO sightings. What are these effects? Why do they occur? Are they perhaps related to one another? Are they natural consequences of the UFOs' flight machinery? The answer to the last two questions could easily be "yes." The effects that I described above would all be perfectly natural to a UFO if it were indeed an interstellar spaceship employing a magnetic stardrive.

The magnetic stardrive is the means by which an alien starship can achieve superluminal velocity, speed far faster than the speed of light. It is based upon the manipulation of a property of space called magnetic permeability. Magnetic permeability measures the ability of a medium, such as air, to support a magnetic field. In a medium with a high permeability very little electric current is needed to generate a powerful magnetic field. If the permeability of that same medium were smaller, the current would produce a much weaker field. It is for this reason that electromagnets have iron cores and the high permeability of the iron enables the electric current to create a much more powerful field than would be possible if the iron weren't present.

The magnetic permeability of matter is always greater than the permeability of free space, but it is the magnetic permeability of free space that concerns us here. The magnetic stardrive operates by reducing its value drastically.

In 1861 James Clerk Maxwell unified the electric and magnetic field equations and discovered that light is an electromagnetic phenomenon. He also discovered that the magnetic permeability of free space is one of the factors that determine the speed of light. According to his formula, the square of lightspeed is inversely proportional to magnetic permeability. Thus if we could magically reduce the permeability of free space to one quarter of its present value, the speed of light would double; if we could reduce the permeability to one ninth of its original value, lightspeed would triple. And if we could make the magnetic permeability of free space one million times smaller than it is now, then the speed of light would be one thousand times faster than its current speed.

To facilitate further discussion, let's

One noted scientist came up with this rendition of aliens wishing good luck to a UFO leaving for earth as it's propelled by a superhuman force.

consider a specific hypothetical starship which we'll call "Gedanken" (German for "thought"). Gedanken is a spheroid with a mass of one thousand metric tons. Its thermonuclear engines generate one thousand metric tons of thrust, enabling her to accelerate at one Earth gravity — 9.8 meters per second. Gedanken's magnetic stardrive creates a region around the ship in which the magnetic permeability of free space is one million times smaller than normal, giving Gedanken a drivespeed of 299,793,000 kilometers per second, one thousand times the normal speed of light. The drive field acts as a relativistic lubricant, allowing Gedanken to slip through normal space at speeds up to one thousand light-speeds. At drivespeed Gedanken covers 2.74 light years per day of travel, a very adequate speed for interstellar flight. From Earth Gedanken can reach Alpha Centauri in a little over thirty-seven hours. Barnard's Star, the nearest star other than our sun known to have planets, is two days and five hours away and Tau Ceti, the nearest star similar to our sun, is four and a third days away.

The magnetic stardrive has another effect that's important to Gedanken's interstellar flight capability: it decreases the ship's inertia. One of the results of Einstein's theory of special relativity, the mass-energy equivalence equation, explains what happens. When the stardrive is activated the total mass-energy of Gedanken does not change; the law of conservation of energy requires this. The speed of light in the space occupied by Gedanken has increased one thousandfold, the square of lightspeed has increased one millionfold. and, therefore, Gedanken's mass has decreased one millionfold. From her original thousand metric tons, Gedanken has been reduced to one kilogram. It is this tremendous reduction of inertia that allows Gedanaken to make the enormous accelerations that are necessary to interstellar flight and that are typical of UFOs.

The starship's thermonuclear engines are not affected by the stardrive because the forces involved in generating thrust are all electric. Since the stardrive only affects magnetic forces, Gedanken's thousand metric tons of thrust are fully available even when she's under drive. Furthermore, because the forces that hold matter together are predominantly electric, the ability of Gedanken and her crew to withstand the engines' thrusting is not affected by the stardrive. When the engines are pushing Gedanken at maximum thrust, everything inside the ship will have its full, normal weight and the crew will feel no discomfort. But the effect on Gedanken's acceleration will be fantastic: under maximum thrust with a millionth of her normal inertia, the starship will accelerate one million times faster than normal. From a standing start, Gedanken will reach the speed of light in thirty seconds! She'll reach drivespeed a little over eight hours later.

Perhaps we'll never know what drives UFOs such as these. That would be a shame.

Such acceleration is not restricted to maneuvering in interstellar space. It's ideal for exploring a planet's surface at high speed. Even when travelling at thousands of miles per hour, Gedanken can literally stop on a dime and then, just as quickly, dart off in another direction at high speed. This is just the kind of behavior that has been reported in many UFO sightings: lightning starts and stops and high speed, right-angle turns. All of these require high acceleration.

The reduction of inertia by the magnetic stardrive has another consequence that's useful in planetary exploration; the starship becomes so light that it can literally float on air. Gedanken's original thousand metric tons of mass have been reduced to one kilogram. On Earth she would weigh a little over two pounds. But her size has not changed; she'll still displace over one ton of air. Thus, under full drive, Gedanken has positive buoyancy. She will bob to the top of Earth's atmosphere and stay there until her pilot increases her weight by reducing the strength of the drive field. If he adjusts it properly, Gedanken can float in the sky just like a blimp. Again, this sort of behavior has been attributed to UFOs; they float effortlessly on air just like clouds.

The cloud simile is appropriate in one other respect; like the clouds, UFOs can be completely silent. Even when they perform maneuvers at what is later determined to be supersonic speed, they are silent. That's especially strange because we would expect at the least to hear a sonic boom caused when the craft rudely shoves air out of its path. This, too, is an effect caused by the magnetic stardrive.

The speed of sound in a gas is partly determined by the mass of the molecules composing that gas. All other things being equal, the speed of sound increases as the mass of the molecules decreases. Reducing the masses of air molecules one million times would increase the speed of sound in the air near Gedanken's hull one thousand times. Under normal atmospheric conditions near sea level the speed of sound in Gedanken's drive field would then be 340 kilometers per second, or 765,000 miles per hour. This is the speed that Gedanken must exceed before she can generate a sonic boom. Thus, even if she were to travel fast enough to leave Earth forever, 25,000 miles per hour, Gedanken would create no more of a sonic boom than the Goodyear Blimp does.

This increased speed of sound has a side effect that's very useful to any craft traveling at high speed through an atmosphere. The starship becomes immune to the heating that we associate with supersonic flight and atmospheric entry. When a spacecraft, such as the Apollo command module, strikes the atmosphere, it is the shock wave caused by the vehicle's supersonic speed that generates most of the heat encountered. The air ahead of the craft is heated by sudden compression until it forms a glowing, superhot mass that would quickly destroy the capsule if it were not for the presence of a special fiberglass heat shield. A starship like Gedanken would have to travel almost a million miles per hour before it ran into any such heating problem. At lower speeds the supersonic shock wave simply would not form. This may explain how UFOs seem to "keep their cool" while darting about inside our atmosphere at thousands of miles per hour.

These, then, are the flight characteristics of spaceships using magnetic stardrive: the ability to accelerate quickly to superluminal speed, the ability to enter into and to fly in a planetary atmosphere without creating noise or heat, and the ability to float on air. All of these abilities are the result of the ship's ability to reduce the magnetic permeability of space near its hull. And all of these abilities have been seen in the flight behavior of UFOs. But there are more effects to consider — environmental ones. A starship will exert several influences can be anything from annoying to downright dangerous. A starship with its drive field turned on is to be approached with caution, if at all.

I've mentioned one environmental effect already — the failure of automobile engines and radios. This effect is caused directly by the reduced ability of space near a starship to support a magnetic field. As the starship approaches an automobile, the magnetic field in the car's generator weakens. Since the voltage produced by the generator is proportional to the strength of the magnetic field, that voltage will weaken in proportion to the weakening of the generator's field. The generator quickly becomes unable to produce the sparks necessary to keep the engine running and the engine dies. The effect is not permanent, though. Once the starship leaves, the engine can be restarted.

At first it doesn't seem possible that a reduction in magnetic permeability would affect radio reception. Electromagnetic waves will still propagate through the drive field albeit a bit faster than normal. The problem lies not so much in the radio's ability to receive signals as it does in the ability to convert those signals into sound. The radio's receiving frequency will change because of changes in the magnetic component, the choke, that helps to determine that frequency. But that's just a problem in tuning; the radio will still receive the signals when it has been reset. It won't convert them into audible sound, though. The loudspeaker is activated by an electromagnet which converts electrical signals into sound by interacting with a permanent magnet. When a starship's drive field weakens the magnetic permeability one million times, the forces that activate the loudspeaker will be weakened one trillion times. This won't turn the radio off completely, but you won't be hearing that much until the starship leaves.

These are the only direct magnetic effects that a starship will exert on its environment. Human metabolism doesn't involve magnetism so the stardrive won't directly harm anybody. However, one of the consequences of the ship's reduced mass can have a very deadly effect.

Every object has a characteristic spectrum of vibration frequencies; when it is struck it produces a characteristic sound. The clang of a hatch cover and the thumping of machinery are sound that are characteristic of ships. When the mass of the particles composing these things is reduced with no reduction in the forces holding them together, the characteristic frequencies all increase and in the case of a starship that increase can be catastrophic. A hatch that normally clangs shut will emit an ultrasonic chirp when closed. The thumping of machinery will be transformed into an ultrasonic whine. Even banging on the ship's hull will generate ultrasound.

In small doses ultrasound is harmless, even beneficial. When ultrasound enters the body it generates heat. We all know that a little deep heat can relieve sore and cramped muscles, but when the heat becomes too intense serious burns can result. One commonly reported consequence of a close encounter with a UFO is a burn or a rash on some part of the observer's body. Other effects, such as blistering of paint, have led investigators to conclude that UFOs emit ultrasound, exactly what we would expect if they were spaceships using magnetic stardrive.

One last effect remains to be discussed — the colorful glow that seems to envelope most UFOs. The reduction of a starship's atomic masses won't affect only sonic frequencies. Electromagnetic emissions will be similarly affected. Specifically, the frequencies of the heat radiation emitted by a starship will be increased to those of visible light. Every object, by virtue of its temperature, emits a certain amount of heat radiation and the hull of a starship, serving as the ship's radiator, is no exception. Normally we can't see the radiated heat of an object unless its temperature is several hundred degrees above room temperature. It must be very hot before it will glow. But because the vibration frequencies of the ship's atoms have increased, even a starship that is cool to the touch will seem to glow with red heat. It won't be bright; very little energy is involved. During the day it would be barely noticeable, but at night it would be spectacular.

All of these effects that I've described are consistent, natural consequences of the use of magnetic stardrive. The fact that these same effects are typically associated with UFO sightings strengthens the widely held belief that UFOs are indeed interstellar spaceships. But, while these observations may be of help to UFO observers, they don't bring us any closer to understanding how such a thing can be accomplished.

The magnetic permeability of free space is what is called a fundamental constant of nature. It is viewed by modern science as unchangeable. Thus the magnetic stardrive involves an area of knowledge that is not yet available to Earth science — the alteration of the basic properties of space.

In the more than three centuries since Francis Bacon described the scientific method we have only learned to alter the properties of matter to serve our needs. Space has always been the unalterable stage upon which matter puts on a show. Only recently have physicists begun to suspect that space might also be an actor in the cosmic play and that its properties might be accessible to us for alteration. Perhaps someday soon we will be able to build our own starships and to solve once and for all the mysteries of the UFOs.

UFO SIGHTINGS has uncovered a startling top secret scientific report which indicates that a large fleet of UFOs is heading straight for earth! Our whole planet is in danger if these objects crash into the earth! For the full report, read on and get ready for the shock of your life.

If UFOs such as this one do come in close contact with earth, we may all be in trouble.

Dateline: New York—UFO SIGHTINGS has learned exclusively of a new scientific study predicting that a fleet of UFOs is on a collision course with earth! This startling news has to be the most shocking revelation concerning UFOs in the history of mankind! If it is true, and there is a very good chance that it is, then all of earth is in dire peril! The scientists who conducted the study are currently working on a defense plan to save our planet!

This unbelievable news first came to our attention by accident. One of our reporters was at a UFO conference attended by the nation's leading UFOlogists and scientists. He was walking past a

Timothy Green Beckley, widely known as "Mr. UFO" has personally investigated hundreds of authentic UFO landings and contacts, and is keenly interested in the many beneficial aspects of communicating with the occupants of these technologically advanced craft that continue to come into our atmosphere on a daily basis.

DON'T BELIEVE THE LIES YOU ARE BEING TOLD

There has not been a decrease in the number of reports. Sightings continue to be made somewhere in the world every 24-hours. But there is an attempt being made to keep this vital information out of your hands!

His 15 years of researching the UFO phenomenon has convinced Tim Beckley that a lot can be learned by carefully studying the seemingly strange behavior patterns of these glowing objects that can out pace our fastest military jets and "disappear" in the twinkling of an eye.

Many of the best UFO related incidents have been kept from the public because the "powers that be" realize drastic changes will take place in society once we've "linked up" with the cosmos. Once open contact has been established, civilization as we know it will collapse and there will be a "New Age" on earth. All the contacts made by the "Space Brothers" with earthlings point to this startling conclusion.

Yes! The aliens have arrived, but before we can meet with them face-to-face certain changes will have to take place. Now, "Mr. UFO" invites you to help in the investigation of the greatest mystery of all time.

ings right away. It's up to him as to what course of action to take. After all, our whole country—the entire planet, in fact—faces its greatest peril ever!”

With those words, apparently someone noticed that the door was somewhat opened, and it was quickly slammed shut. But the damage had already been done! You know how naturally curious reporters are. Well, our man was no different. He knew he was on the trail of something big—really big—and he was going to dig deeper until he had unearthed the truth!

Our intrepid reporter waited until some of the scientists exited the closed room before making his move. Then he cornered the most innocuous-looking doctor and went to work on his prey. Our scribe told the Ufologist, "I couldn't help but overhear your conversation. I know something is wrong. I want to know the full story. If you refuse to cooperate, I will enlist the help of my fellow journalists. We'll blow the lid off this whole thing. It won't look too good if this is made into a cover-up. The public will find out the truth sooner or later. You might as well tell me all about it now and save yourself and your fellow scientists a lot of grief in the end."

Before you know it, little men may be walking around on earth, — like something out of a science fiction movie.

This picture of a UFO landing may seem farfetched now, but watch out if the fleet of UFOs come here.

That gentle warning seemed to Scientists have managed to photograph this space cyclone out of which they suspect the fleet of UFOs to appear out of.

Ufologists believe that the UFOs come from a planet with a surface similar to our moon's, which might explain why they're heading towards earth.

UFOs such as these are heading for earth, so scientists warn all inhabitants of our planet to be careful.

have turned the trick. The good doctor decided to tell the full story. When he was finished, even our reporter, who was usually indifferent due to having seen and heard everything you could possibly think of, was horrified at what he was told!

The scientist told our staffer, "I will tell you everything I know, although you will find it hard to believe. My colleagues and I have discovered that a large fleet of unidentified flying objects is hurtling through space, on a direct collision course with earth! It seems as if these flying objects are either massing for one all-out assault on earth, or else they're a lost fleet, out of control, who are plummeting to earth without being able to stop! That's all I can tell you because that's all I know."

Well, that's not all we know. After learning those astonishing facts, we dug and dug until we came up with the whole truth.

After talking to several UFO experts and scientists involved in the case, we have managed to piece together some semblance of this latest UFO threat to mankind.

It appears as if there definitely is a fleet of UFOs headed our way. Scientists, viewing the phenomenon through their high-intensity telescopes, claim that about 25 objects are hurtling through space. These objects are moving through our solar system at a rapidly increasing speed. It will only be a matter of months before they enter earth's atmosphere.

As to their origin and purpose of being, scientists theorize that the UFOs are from another galaxy because of the length of time it is taking them to travel across outer space. The toughest part of all concerning this enigma is why? Yes, why are these UFOs on a seeming collision course with our planet?

The closest that scientists can come to an explanation concerning this mystery is that these UFOs are a lost tribe, so to speak. Perhaps separated from their "people," they are now searching for a new home. It seems that they have picked earth for that home. Yet at the speed they are now travelling and with the force they are utilizing, chances are they will plow into earth's atmosphere at a haphazard speed of entry, causing great destruction! Add to that dire peril the fact that they may contain some unknown substance capable of destruction many times that of a nuclear holocaust, and the impending danger to earth becomes clear!

With time running out, the scientists have been trying their best to come up with a plan to counter the possible collision of the objects with earth. So far, they have failed to come up with any concrete system to battle this alien menace. But rest assured, the scientists are working around the clock to try and effect a plan to save the earth!

There is even talk about exploding a nuclear bomb in space as the UFOs draw near, to destroy them. But because of the imposing danger to earthmen, this plan is under close scrutiny. In the meantime, other contingency plans are being sought.

But in the final analysis, it is up to the president to decide what has to be done. He has been informed of the danger which earth might possibly face and has already informed leaders of other countries as to the crisis. A decision by all concerned will soon be made. It will, in all probability, decide the fate of the entire human race!

Unless a miracle occurs, it certainly seems as if a fleet of UFOs will collide with our planet in the near future. The damage which could happen is mind-boggling, to say the least. At least we all know the truth. Now the problem is how to cope with the oncoming alien invasion. Earth's future lies in the balance. Let us all hope that earth can be saved from a collision with a fleet of UFOs! We shall soon know the outcome—if anyone is still around to care!

Scientists expect our planet to become very cloudy and bad weather to set in as the UFOs near earth.

Our most talented scientists are working overtime to develop this sponge-like substance to absorb the impact if UFOs crash into earth.

This challenging book, the first of its kind, presents questions that must be answered by every government throughout the world to its citizens. The contents should not be suppressed any longer as it affects all mankind.

WHAT IS THE RESULT...A NEW RACE OF HUMANOIDS?

DOCUMENTED CASES

● A Canadian woman is found wandering nude in a park and claims she was abducted by space beings and taken to the back of the moon where she was "implanted with outer-space semen."

● Mrs. V., from Somerset, England, finds herself on an examination table. Robots stand nearby as a humanoid entity drains blood from her arm into a plastic bottle. Colored cubes seem to monitor her vital functions. Before being returned to her stalled auto she has relations with one of the outer space beings.

● A New York woman awakens one night and finds an entity standing at her bedside. He is adorned in a navy blue uniform sashed with a gold belt. He wears short black boots with pants tucked inside. During the ceremony that takes place the woman feels a white fluid being passed into her

SECRET PLAN

First-hand investigation by the author of this book, noted UFOlogist Timothy Green Beckley, indicates that the UFO occupants have a secret plan of operation that they are carrying out — one that not only involves interbreeding between interplanetary species, but another, intimating that a much larger purpose is behind these cosmic implantations.

POWERS SO GREAT AS TO BE DENIED

Science refuses to accept the reality of UFOs because these objects do not fit in with the physical laws that they had adopted. This book will reveal many of the fantastic things that have happened to ordinary people from all walks of life, but are being hushed up not only by the academic community but by so-called serious UFO researchers who don't wish to acknowledge what really is going on. UFOs could either save or destroy the world — yet few will harken to that which is transpiring before our very eyes.

The ten chapters in STRANGE ENCOUNTERS will go a long way in explaining the mystery of the flying saucers.

PSYCHIC OR PHYSICAL?

Not all UFOs are physical, nuts-and-bolts craft. A San Diego woman tells in intimate detail of her unbelievable night of terror. It all began with a group of lights that formed themselves into earthly trucks and went on to include a dog-like creature with blazing red eyes; bizarre tinkerbell lights that touched them in the darkness; a "little boy" that materialized, and the weird beings who emerged from a landed space ship and walked across the highway carrying tube-like devices.

WE ARE NOT ALONE!

UFOS DIRECT MANY LIVES OFFER SUPERNATURAL GIFTS

In another documented case, Lorie Roberts tells what happened to her at the age of six, a bizarre experience that makes her believe she is "not one of us." More and more we cannot deny the evidence that Earthlings are being endowed with supernatural powers due to a special "link" with a race of unknown visitors from the stars.

FLYING DISCS & GLOWING HAIR

A Philadelphia man reports that on his daughter's birthday gleaming silver objects appear in the sky over their home traveling at great speed. As if to celebrate their appearance the little girl's hair will glow a peculiar color. Strange are their powers, indeed!

PHOTOGRAPHIC EVIDENCE

Amazing photos prove that at least one man is in direct contact with these beings. Sees objects so close up that it's impossible to deny they were made on another planet. Portholes and landing gear are clearly visible.

ALIENS ARE IN OUR MIDST

It's said they "walk among us" and a Pittsburgh musician has the frightening proof of this. Read of his incredible encounter with a "stranger" who always dressed in black, had peculiar features apparent in his anatomy and appears and vanishes at will much to the amazement and disbelief of those directly involved.

FACT NOT FICTION!

Every story in this volume is the absolute truth: You can't afford to miss out on this opportunity to take a spellbinding look at what's happening to an ever-increasing number of people.

The author sincerely feels that there will be increased activity in the number of contacts, encounters and physical abductions. He believes that YOU could be next. Only by reading about what has happened to others can you prepare yourself for the changes that will come about after you have been touched by this UNKNOWN FORCE.

Top Secret Account: 'A UFO TRANSPORTED ME TO ANOTHER GALAXY!

This is Sandra Cashel, who was taken to another galaxy by aliens.

Sandra claims this is the ship which whisked her away!

UFO SIGHTINGS has managed to persuade an earthling taken aboard a flying saucer to tell her story for all the world to know. It's incredible, but our source claims to have been taken to another world by a UFO!

As a UFO researcher, I hear many strange tales, but none compares with the story told me by Sandra Cashel, of a small West Virginia mountain town, whose sincerity I am totally convinced of, and whose experience is backed by the expert testimony of others. I first became acquainted with Sandra in the spring of this year, and what she had to tell me has remained etched in my mind ever since.

Seated across from me, this woman in her mid-thirties began a fascinating narrative, which I taped and have since locked away in a safe-deposit box for future reference and so that those who would cannot confiscate the evidence.

Until I encountered a UFO on the evening of February 3, 1979, I considered myself to be an ordinary person, not given to flights of fancy.

moon. I'd never believed in anything like flying saucers before, and God knows I never expected to encounter one in the hills of West Virginia.

Suddenly, a bright orange ball of light drifted down out of the heavens and shot in front of the vehicle I was driving. In my rather dazed and shaken condition, I nearly drove off the road and over a sharp incline. My heart pounded violently in my chest as it dawned on me that I was being confronted by an alien device.

My first reaction was to get out of there, and fast. Forget about what I'd just seen. Maybe it was only a meteorite — maybe there was a logical explanation. I knew my eyes weren't deceiving me. But no matter how hard I wanted to leave, I couldn't. My limbs, my arms and legs, were frozen stiff like they had been immersed in

I've never had what you might consider to be an overactive imagination. I was a typical housewife with three children. But following my encounter with a race of interdimensional beings and a trip on board what is commonly referred to as a "flying saucer," my life has changed radically. No longer am I content to live a mundane existence. My whole outlook on the world and everything in it has been radically altered. I now see things from a cosmic point of view. No longer am I tied down to planet Earth. There's no doubt in my mind that I'm a child of the universe. For the first time, I have a goal — a mission — that must be fulfilled.

Sandra drew this sketch of an alien being given his daily examination.

But let me tell you what happened to change things for me.

It was an extremely cold evening. In fact, it was probably one of the coldest nights on record, with the temperature down around five degrees. Normally, I would never have dreamed of leaving the confines of my gas-heated living room, had it not been for the fact that my youngest daughter, Debbie, aged four, had come down with a bad fever. The nearest drug store was many miles away, and that meant taking the car out of the garage and driving a distance of 15 miles over ice-covered mountain roads.

Light snow was falling as I drove off in the family station wagon. Feeling lonely, I turned on the car radio to the local talk station. The discussion was about area politics, and while it was boring, at least it gave me something to listen to while the miles ticked away.

The heater in the station wagon was on full blast, and yet it still felt cold — raw. The wind whipped all around me as I drove through the night; the only thought on my mind was getting medication from the drug store and getting back home as soon as possible. The drive should have taken me approximately an hour and a half, both ways. As it turned out I was gone (if you can simply refer to it in such mundane terms) for more than three hours. Exactly where I was, I may never know, but one thing I am certain — it wasn't anywhere on this physical planet.

As I shifted into first gear going up a particularly steep mountain, the radio started getting staticky and, glancing out the window to my left, I thought I saw something glistening in the sky. I told myself it was probably only the drying cement. My joints were locked solid. In more precise terms, I was paralyzed!

Looking straight ahead, I saw it. That glowing ball of light which had floated across the star-studded sky had now turned into an object — what appeared to be a physical craft. There it stood in front of me, a dome-shaped craft with a row of brightly lit portholes or windows, and resting on a tripod landing gear. It was a huge metallic ship, something that might be right out of the pages of a science fiction novel.

Despite the harsh weather, I began to sweat. There was absolutely nothing I could do to escape the predicament I was in. There was no getting away; fate would have to play itself out. At the time, I thought whoever was piloting this sleek celestial ship must be more advanced than even the most brilliant scientists on our planet. After all, the craft — this highly polished visitor — was a work of art. It was breath-taking to behold. Even though I'd never thought of myself as a particularly well educated woman, instinctively something told me that whoever was behind its construction was more powerful and smart than I could ever hope to be.

Suddenly, the air was filled with a strange high-pitched hum. I felt the station wagon begin to vibrate like I was caught in the middle of an earthquake. Then — wham! — before I knew what hit me, the vehicle I was in actually lifted off the roadway. It had been levitated, apparently by a powerful beam of white light which shot out of the bottom of this UFO. Wobbling from side to side, my seat-belt still tightly around my waist, the station wagon, with me inside, floated through a hatch located on the side of the disc, and then there was darkness.

I must have been unconscious for a while, for when I came to and cleared my head, I realized some time had passed and that I was not alone. And while it took several minutes to fully revive myself, I could plainly tell that my surroundings were not at all familiar ones. I was having a hard time breathing, and there was little doubt left in my mind that I had been abducted — actually kidnapped! — and taken aboard a flying saucer. Of course, I'd never taken such stories seriously before, but this was happening to me now, and I knew it wasn't a hallucination or a dream, although I wished it were!

No longer was I inside the family station wagon. I seemed to be lying on a table, but it was so dark all around that I couldn't be absolutely certain of anything. All at once a brilliant blue light filled the compartment I later found I was being held in. The light was so powerful that it blinded me temporarily. To say the least, I was scared to death. I longed to be back home with my husband and kids, but there was no way I was going to get out of there unless someone let me go voluntarily.

I tried to move my arms and legs, but I couldn't budge them. though I was no longer paralyzed my limbs were bound so that I couldn't struggle. I sensed that I had also been drugged, as I felt somewhat drowsy.

All at once, I saw movement around me. A figure stepped out of the shadows. I was horrified, expecting to see some sort of monster with two heads and half a dozen eyes. To my amazement, the being who stood in front of me was very human in appearance. The only difference I could see between him and any Earth person was the fact that he had a slightly higher forehead and his ears stuck up a bit further out of the side of his face. He wasn't exactly a Mr. Spock, but he was close to it. Nor was his dress unusual. He wore a tight-fitting, one-piece jump suit similar to those that are worn by rock musicians on stage.

He smiled a warm smile that momentarily put me at ease. He seemed to be looking right through me, and I knew he wanted to talk to me and I was waiting for him to speak. However, he never did talk, at least not verbally, for he was able to communicate with me through the exchange of thoughts — ESP, telepathy — call it what you will.

The being identified himself simply as the "Leader," and explained that he was from the same place where I lived but that normally he couldn't be seen, since the chemistry of his body was such that it functioned on a totally different vibratory level. He informed me that the residents of this "other dimension" lived for almost a thousand earth years. He said that for the most part, their world was free of sickness, pollution, wars and other killers of man. However, he added that he was worried over our continued use of nuclear power for other than peaceful purposes, explaining, "Whatever happens to you (meaning our planet) will affect us as well. We do not want to see you blow yourself up, for it would endanger our existence too."

I looked him squarely in the eye, and saw that he was indeed a peace-loving individual. And while he was understandably concerned with the world in which he lives, he honestly did not want us to annihilate ourselves.

"We have been watching over you always," he insisted. "During the history of your people, we have intervened when it was necessary to save lives. We even parted the sea when Moses tried to escape with the Jews. Our intentions are peaceful, and we would like to help, if only you would listen."

The Leader said he was particularly disturbed over the fact that no country on Earth would officially acknowledge the existence of his realm. Though they have met secretly with government leaders in the United States, Canada, England, Russia and India, no nation is willing to take the risk of being the first to openly admit that they have been contacted by beings in flying saucers.

I asked the Leader why I had been selected for a contact, and he informed me that they had been keeping an eye on me ever since I was a little girl; that, though I might not be a big believer in such things as UFOs or know anything about their existence, that I was humble and open-minded enough to treat my experience with a certain amount of respect. In the past, the Leader stated, they had introduced themselves to certain individuals who tried to profit from what had transpired, and in the process had misused the information given them.

Of course, I wanted to know if I would be returned to my family, and I was told that though it seemed like hours had passed, in actuality, when I was returned to our "time zone" no more than 45 minutes would have elapsed. I found this difficult to accept, but I did not make an issue of it. I couldn't! My arms and feet were still held down.

When I inquired if I could get up, the Leader simply waved his hands over my prone body and the braces holding me down disappeared back into the table. As I sat up, the Leader came over to me and placed his hand on my right shoulder. He told me from this day forth that I would never be sick and that I would live on forever. Of course I was skeptical, but I saw no reason to voice my thought. After all, I was a guest, and a captive one at that. I was completely at his mercy, and I didn't see any reason to jeopardize my chances of being returned to my family.

Though my extremities felt like jelly, due to the fact that I had been strapped down and also that I was nervous as the devil, I was soon able to stand on my own two feet. About this time, as my uneasiness subsided little by little, I began to get curious. Exactly what did his world look like, and what kind of people inhabited it?

Reading my mind, the Leader took me by the hand and led me to a large screen on the wall. As he flicked a few switches, the screen lit up and I saw myself looking at what appeared to be a giant metropolis, similar to New York or Chicago. People were walking along the avenues and going about their business apparently without a care in the world.

"All of our kind are taken care of from birth," the Leader emphasized. "No one is poor. There is enough for all. Everyone is provided with a job — a task — from the age of 21. Schooling is free, and, as I mentioned before, there is no sickness or disease, so there is no need for hospitals or doctors. When there is a birth, the child is inoculated with one shot which is all that is ever required to stay in good health." The Leader also explained that his people were exclusively vegetarians; they did not eat meat and did not kill animals either for food or furs. "The supreme power that rules over us all created us equal, and to kill the creatures of the sea and sky would be a misdeed!"

When I inquired as to whether it would be possible for our dimension to contact his, the Leader told me that it is not only possible, but that many people have entered his world and chosen not to leave. He said there were "windows," such as in the Bermuda Triangle and in a certain town in England, where planes, ships and people vanish because of some sort of natural magnetic flux which "zips" them away. The Leader stated that within the next five years, if our planet survives, we will develop the scientific knowhow necessary to travel to other dimensions. However, he warned that in addition to the "zone" in which he resides, there are other places populated by evil beings, what we refer to as "devils" or "demons," who actually crave human flesh. He said that if we by error enter these worlds, it is next to impossible to escape.

Still standing in front of this giant, wall-sized screen, he flicked another set of switches and I got a glimpse of the horrible creatures he spoke so fearfully of. "We are even afraid of them," he declared, "and try to stay out of their lanes of travel whenever possible. And while we do not believe in killing, our scientists have had to invent special, 'Stunners' in order to keep such creatures at bay."

At this point, I asked the Leader if he had a family, or was he single? He told me that early in life a "perfect mate" is found by computer for all males and females. As far as religion is concerned, they do believe in a "supreme power," an "energy source at the core of the galaxie" is the exact way he referred to it. However, the Leader did say that they do not have churches as such, and that praying, as we think of it, is something that is done privately with the "inner mind."

Before ending our conversation, he explained that his people will continue to monitor our comings and goings, and he hoped that in the not-so-distant future, the two worlds would join as one. "For after all," he philosophized, "we are but part of the whole."

True to his word, I was released unharmed. He told me that before I could be "sent back" they would put me to sleep because "crossing the barrier," as it's called, took a great deal of energy and it would be easier on my system if I were relaxed; in fact, I had been given a mild sedative upon first being teleported aboard his craft, so that I could not harm myself or anyone else. He wished me well, and said that sometime later "in the course of time," he would return to contact me. He said that I would have a job to do; that I should go out and try and convince as many people as possible that my experience had been a legitimate one, and that his race wanted very much to co-exist in peace with the material world we identify as Earth. He said that doubtlessly in the beginning few would believe me, but that as the months and years rolled by, those who sought the truth would know the truth. The Leader also stated that it would be foolish for me to try and report my experience to the daily press, because even if I was able to get on radio and television, news commentators would only try to poke holes in my story and make fun of me. He suggested that I contact one of the larger UFO organizations, and that they would do their best to see that my story got exposure, and so that is why I have come to you.

I shut off my tape recorder, not knowing what to make of what I'd just heard. The story as related by Sandra Casnel (not her real name, for reason of anonymity) is probably the most bizarre I have ever encountered in the years of being a full-time UFO investigator. If I hadn't heard her account first-hand, there is no doubt that I would think this pure hokum. The very idea that a woman could be teleported into a parallel dimension and be told that she would live forever, sounded like fantasy all the way. Yet, there was something about the way Sandra told her story — the sincerity of her tone of voice perhaps, or the way she seemed to be pleading for understanding with her eyes — which led me to believe there was at least a thread of truth in what she was saying, no matter how fantastic it might seem. Of course, others like Betty and Barney Hill have claimed contact with the occupants of flying saucers, and there is no doubt that they were on the level. So far what I'd seen and heard during my UFO activities, the least I could do was listen with an open mind.

The big blockbuster came when I asked Sandra if she actually believed that she would never have to face death. Sandra told me that this was one of the few things which she found exceptionally difficult to believe. She had been raised a Catholic since childhood and had always believed in a heaven and a hell, and that we go there when we die. She said that she was led to believe that what the Leader actually meant was that when her life was about to come to a close here, through some process — like being picked up by a flying saucer — she would be teleported back to this other dimension for good.

However, one of the things she had begun to notice was that she now seemed immune to any kind of illness. Before her trip aboard a UFO, Sandra had been receiving treatment for a scarred kidney. When she went to her doctor in mid-April for a regular checkup, the doctor was completely baffled. Her physician seemed puzzled over the fact that her kidney was strong and healthy, and that all the scarred tissue had somehow healed.

"Also," she went on with her intriguing tale, "since that day back in February, I seem to be leading a charmed life. On one occasion several months ago, I was crossing the street in my home town and was struck by an automobile, a hit-and-run driver, and yet, although the car was traveling at a speed of around 40 miles an hour and I was tossed into the air with considerable force, I had no broken bones, no bruises, and I walked away from the accident without a scratch. In fact, since there was no one around at the time, I've only told the members of my immediate family about what happened, as no one else could possibly believe me."

Sandra also claims that she cut herself very badly one afternoon when a glass jar she was canning vegetables in (since her UFO experience she gave up eating meat) cracked and cut through the flesh of her hand severely. However, she didn't bleed an ounce of blood. In fact, inside of two minutes there was no trace of the wound, although the cut was bad enough that under normal circumstances it would have required several stitches.

At this point I didn't know what to believe. It all sounded so far-fetched, so "way-out," yet similar stories have surfaced in the past which could be checked and verified.

For example, on October 25, 1974, a Wyoming hunter, 41-year-old Carl Higdon, had an experience which he — like Sandra — will never forget. On the day in question, he had wandered over a grassy knoll near Rawlins, Wyoming. Rifle in hand, he caught sight of a herd of wild elk about 200 yards distance. As he raised his magnum, he caught a healthy male in his sights and pulled the trigger. But instead of the bullet projecting forward with the power and speed only a rifle of this caliber can produce, according to Carl Higdon, according to Carl Higdon, the bullet "floated like a butterfly" and actually landed on the ground only a few feet away from where he stood.

An eerie silence penetrated the air and Higdon then heard a sharp cracking sound as someone — or something — approached him out of the woods. Looking up, the hunter was alarmed to see a being dressed in a tight-fitting, one-piece outfit similar to a wet-suit scuba divers wear. The being, who had two slits where eyes should have been, stubble for hair and antennas protruding from his head, walked to within a short distance and proceeded to "float" over to Higdon a packet of pills which the hunter was told he should swallow. Moments later he found himself "shrunk down" and seated inside a box-shaped UFO, with the elk he had been shooting at in cages behind him and paralyzed so they couldn't move around.

But what is generally not known is that on his return, Higdon was taken immediately to the hospital, where he was found to be suffering from shock and burns on the face and in the eyes. After x-rays were taken by technicians at the Carbon County Memorial Hospital, it was found that though Carl Higdon had had trouble with kidney stones before, now there were none. Also, the father of three and a veteran oil driller with the same company for over 20 years, he no longer showed signs of TB, which he had been treated for previous to his UFO experience. "He's now in A-1 condition," attending physician Dr. R.C. Tongo, who treated Higdon, declared. It was as if there had never been anything wrong with him.

The files of UFO researchers are full of cases of what are termed "miraculous remission" or "spontaneous healing." Noted UFOlogist Timothy Green Beckley, author of such books as UFOs Around the World and The Boys From Topside, has kept careful track of episodes involving such unexplainable phenomena:

- Calvin Girvin of Hollywood, California, was machine-gunned through the midsection while he served with the 11th Airborne Division in the Philippine Islands during World War II. To all intents and purposes, he should have been killed. His body was nearly split in two. Yet in front of surgeons his wounds healed almost entirely within a quarter hour after they removed the bullets from his body. Years later, while inside a flying saucer which had landed outside Washington, D.C., Girvin was told by the occupants of the ship that they had beamed-down a ray on him and saved his life, that they could heal the sick almost any time.

- Shortly after midnight on September 3, 1965, two deputies from Damon, Texas, encountered a UFO the size of a football field, which hovered over their patrol car. One of the officers, Bob Goode, had been bitten earlier in the day by his son's pet snake. The wound had become infected and required treatment by a physician. The finger had been wrapped in surgical gauze. Later that evening, after returning home and removing the bandages, Goode noticed that the wound had miraculously healed in no time. He recalled that the UFO, which had remained stationary above the patrol car he was driving, had shot a ray of light out of a port, and the ray had struck his hand, which had been resting outside the window of the vehicle. "After my encounter with the disc, or whatever it was," Goode noted, "the pain and swelling was gone from my finger, and the bleeding that had been so intense earlier and would start up again from time to time had stopped completely."

- A peasant in a small town in Brazil

had wandered out into the moonlit night. He was strolling along the beach, when suddenly he saw something "silver and shiny" floating in toward him from over the water. The UFO came to within 50 feet of him, and his body was covered by the shadow cast by the body of the craft. The gentleman, who was well into his seventies and had lost all his teeth years before, started growing in a third set shortly after the above incident took place. While hard to believe, this case is fully documented in Ralph Blum's UFOs From Beyond Earth.

- Leo Barch, who lives in Coos Bay, Oregon, was crippled with baffling numbness in his left arm, which doctors said was likely to be permanent. Then, one evening in September of 1959, a UFO passed over his home. "The UFO definitely changed my life," Barch has gone on record as saying. "If it weren't for a visit from a craft of unknown origin, my arm might still be crippled!"

Taking all the evidence into consideration, it is quite possible that Sandra Cashel was actually teleported into "another dimension," and that she was told that she will live forever. Who's to say, maybe she will. If not in this world, perhaps in some other! •

SPECIAL REPORT: UFOs AND THEIR ORIGINS

In this never-before-released photograph, we find a UFO which has crashed into our planet. Scientists have been studying it to see if they can determine its origin.

■ What is the actual origin of the strange aerial visitors who continue to show an intense interest in our planet? Do they call another planet or planets somewhere in the vast cosmos beyond us their home? Or do they exist in another space-time continuum or unseen parallel reality and pass through into our environment when they so choose? This vital question has ufologists choosing up sides for a number of years now. The believers in the more conservative planetary origin are many but it may surprise you to learn that a number of outstanding researchers, some with academic backgrounds, have embraced the fantastic dimensional concept to explain the origin of UFOs.

Let us first examine the thinking and theories behind this hypothesis. Following this I'll discuss the errors in the dimensional belief and bring out the logical correctness of the extraterrestrial hypothesis. If one is to believe John Keel, the sometimes egotistical chief proponent of the dimensionalists, all the vastness beyond our little planet is empty of any living intelligence of our nature. Everything is concentrated here, and it's not solid matter but controlled forms of energy. Masses of this energy have the ability to change their vibratory frequency and become visible to us in our narrow band of the electromagnetic spectrum.

By manipulating its mass or somehow altering time and space it can take any form it desires. It can be a domed disc or a little silver suited creature. All this is illusionary and none of it is real. UFO phenomena and related manifestations are a cunning trick played on poor confused earthlings. A colossal joke skillfully staged by invisible entities who for eons have always delighted in scaring the wits out of, and misleading the aboriginal inhabitants of our disappearance or appearance, and division. Their occupants often seem to have the same uncanny ghostly qualities. But do these well documented facts prove that these air and ground anomalies originate in another dimension? It does not! It more reasonably indicates that galactic intelligence, perhaps several millions of years our technological superiors, long ago developed the means to travel in space. This method would be well beyond our comprehension and seems like the magic we now behold in our skies.

These distant worlds would be composed of the same material as Earth. Flesh and blood could exist there, true master minds in the universe. Since they possessed bodies that could not travel the vast stellar reaches of space, they created biological humanoids and fantastic space craft that can traverse quickly and easily the limitless light years of space. Unbelievable creatures and aerobe done. The man is demented!" — I'll remind you again that I am talking about a technology possibly several million years older than ours. The limbo of an unimaginable space-time condition would not be their home. They would only transit this in a changed form of matter.

Let's look at some of the facts in the enigma that indicates that the dimensionalists are mistaken. In the summer and fall of 1954 extraordinary events began to occur over the skies of France. In the wee hours of the night, witnesses in the little town of Vernon watched a gigantic silent cigar shaped mass suspended in the sky. As they watched, a total of five luminous discs came out of the mass at intervals and flew off. In the ensuing months of the French wave hundreds of persons in the countryside watched as this same scene was repeated.

The Vernon cloud "cigar" was not the first in history by any troubled little planet. The fore-going has been in essence the origin and explanation of the UFO mystery as seen by the dimensionalists.

Certainly a percentage of all UFO sightings involve objects that exhibit paranormal abilities such as slowly fading in or out, instant forms possessing exactly the same attributes that convince dimensionalists that they come from another dimension. They would arrive here in another dimension and they again become solid constructions just as they were at their place of origin. If you are now muttering to yourself — "It cannot means. Others have occurred, a notable one being the gigantic form seen ejecting five small objects over the Gulf of Mexico in December 1952. It was seen by the crew of a B-29. As recently as the 1978 fall wave, huge aerial constructions were seen preceding or during UFO activity. Over Ft.

Scientists have tried to develop a theory of UFO origins dating back to Greek mythology. Creatures such as this one were supposedly aliens who came out of flaming ships.

Wayne, Indiana an object resembling a huge ocean liner with five rows of throbbing yellow lights on its sides was seen. Five smaller discs accompanied a great glowing orange cigar craft over Middletown, Ohio. Sightings of large mother ships occurred elsewhere in the southeast and eastern USA. The actual moment of arrival of these big alien carriers in our atmosphere is a stunning sight.

In October of 1966 a large portion of the sky east of Rushville, Indiana was suddenly filled with a sunset like glow. Soon a bright white area began to form at the outer edges of this and as the red glow decreased the white increased, and became a haze obscuring the moon and stars. In the center of this section of sky a great cigarshaped cloud appeared. Two pairs of light points flew up out of this huge object, joined one already hovering above, and flew off into the haze. Don't these cloud cigar facts: "ve mentioned seem to you like our visitors arrive from some great external distance? Giant carriers would not be needed to pop in on us from some adjacent dimension. The dimensionalists ignore such problems or postulate that it's all an illusion.

Another documented UFO characteristic that supports the planetary theory is the arrival of our visitors in periodic waves on various parts of our earth. These developing waves with their cloud-cigars spell extraterrestrial to me. The constant theorizing about magnetic or agonic lines and window areas in an attempt to make the dimensional view seem logical appears futile to me. I will explain why.

In 1967 APRO sent me to look into reports covering the abandoned strip mines area of south-central Indiana. The area was a hotbed of activity with many sightings, auto pacings, burned circles in farmers' soy bean fields, plus a night chase by six National Guard jets after a glowing object that often hovered over farmer Pratt's land, etc. Until I wrote these lines, not a word of all this has ever seen the light of public print. The strip mines area is but one example of the many thousands of areas covering our planet where we don't know what has happened.

Efficient reporting nets and in-depth investigation are nearly nonexistent in our world. Actually we have learned about only an infinitesimally small percentage of total UFO activity. Without this knowledge, or at least a true representative sample of it, who can say that UFOs appear on magnetic fault lines, or that they are seen mostly on Wednesday or any of the other statistics that are so often bandied about. I'm afraid much of this is no better than pure guesswork.

The world of ghosts and poltergeists, called psychic phenomena, has been probed by curious laymen for centuries. It is here where the dimensionalists seem to run afoul of classification confusion between UFO phenomena and psychic phenomena. I readily admit that the UFO enigma has its transparent, disappearing occupants and smaller monitor type UFOs. However, the apparently separate category of psychic phenomena also has its see-through apparitions, ghost lights, etc.

Since I am a field reporter I am well acquainted in these areas and realize that there is probably a certain amount of misidentification of source. I will explain how this can occur. In August 1968 an area adjacent to the Mary Grey Bird Sanctuary, just five miles from my home, was twice visited by low flying UFOs that turned the woods and fields as bright as day with sweeping light beams. Witnesses in the area often reported a glowing volleyball sized UFO. Campers in the sanctuary watched a white tent like thing dissolve before their eyes. Two daylight fishermen saw a six-foot cloudy white object float along a creek bank, then disappear. Anyone having the usual superficial knowledge of these events would conclude that the bird sanctuary had some very weird birds. They might even decide this must have been one of those UFO window areas. Actually an in-depth three year investigation revealed that it was not this way at all, if we exclude the beam projecting UFOs. All the other things were manifestations from the same eerie realm that harbors ghosts, etc. Within this area 17 persons have had 42 experiences with a very weird light. It has been there since 1966 and probably much longer. Some usually invisible ghost lights date back to pioneer days in the areas they inhabit. What is a ghost light? Well, the close observers of the Waimeria lights that float over the site of the old Parker Ranch on Hawaii claim that they can hear music coming from their misty cores. In other words, they are probably an elementary form of earthbound deceased human intelligence, and have no connection at all with conventional UFOs.

My local spirit light seems lonely and has followed people. It met and sometimes paced one witness over a dozen times in a three year period. Once it sped ahead of her on the dark country road and waited for her over her driveway. During a four year period in this area six persons viewed in utter amazement a floating form within a white glow that consisted of a plaid skirt, a white blouse, and either hair or a scarf above these. My nephew and I also viewed this apparition in a partial washed out by moonlight condition in September of 1969. A sight like this forever changes one's ideas about the final big event we call death. Due to the plaid skirt I was able to identify and learn all about the person who formerly wore this clothing when she was alive in the valley. She is certainly the source of the apparition and I suspect the ghost light also.

I have mentioned all this to help you understand that the dividing line between some types of UFOs and psychic phenomena is a very thin one, and can lead some investigators to wrong conclusions. In their books, Ivan Sanderson and John Keel mention occasions when they watched many glowing orbs in the tropics or the hills of West Virginia. Certainly these objects are from another dimension. But what are they? They may not have been remotely associated with extraterrestrial UFOs.

It is believed that clues to the origins of UFOs are held in the ancient Egyptian tombs.

Of course, we know that it is possible that we are the focal point of visitation from diverse sources in the universe. A variety of craft and occupants in various states of advanced development would cause the present confusion we now have. I would not be surprised if some types of extraterrestrials have taken up invisible residence on our earth long ago. If any have, the class of entities called the Gentry of Ireland, or Trolls of Scandinavia, would be my choice. These little folks seem to be able to appear even in our present time. After one of my lectures an innocent little school girl told me how one such creature had appeared briefly in her front room. In another extensive haunting case a Mrs. Adams chased a little over-alled, white haired, troll that appeared near her home. In a current case involving auto levitation and probably loss of memory contact, the little ones have shown up often. The witness is always either asleep or in an altered conscious state.

But let us continue on to the major elements of the UFO mystery that the believers in plasmatic distortions of reality cannot possibly explain away.

The supposedly non-solid illusions of the dimensionalists have left hundreds of impressions and artifacts upon our earth. They have been touched often. They have been shot and hit at least 50 times. Autos have hit a UFO and an occupant. Let's look at some of these cases and try to suppress any desire to laugh at the non-physical believers. In May 1968 Caetano dos Santos of Caconde, Brazil arrived home to find a seven-inch grey metal cylinder with transparent ends containing dials lying in his yard. First, he pried, scratched and dashed it on the ground and then he took it in the house and set it on a bathroom shelf. Later in the night a loud increasing hum was heard. A strange blue light emanated from the object and a terrifying heat filled the home causing the family to flee in panic. With a noise like a clap of thunder the object crashed through the ceiling and was gone. Here we have a solid object that was not only touched but left behind lasting physical and psychological impressions.

I believe the latest foolish attempt to gun down a UFO occurred on March 20, 1979 at Boshkung Lake, Canada where 50 witnesses watched as six snowmobiles approached a UFO on the lake ice. Shots were fired and the sound of their impact on metal was heard.

A car hit a UFO in 1967 near Toledo, Ohio. Robert Richardson and Jerry Quay rounded a bend near Whitehorse Quarry and were blinded by a brilliant blue light covering the road. Richardson applied his brakes but they felt a distinct bump. The road ahead was clear when they recovered full vision. It is believed the object was hit as it took off. The car received a dent in the hood plus the loss of a strip off the bumper. A fiber like substance was found in the road. Incidentally the spectre of men in black and their threats reared its ugly head in this case.

A small orange glowing occupant was run down by an auto driven by David Morris of Monroe Falls, Ohio in 1967. He noticed what he thought must be a fire in a field near the road as he drove home in the fog at 4:00 A.M. The odor of hot brass was in the air, and the fire resolved itself into a 12 by 25 foot cone shaped object. He turned his eyes back to the road and was surprised to see four or five small figures crossing the road in front of him. He hit the brakes but it was too late. He heard a thud and saw a hand fly up. He looked in the rear view mirror and saw the other little glowing men gathered around their fallen comrade. He did not linger at the scene.

On November 1964 an important even occurred near New Berlin, N.Y. that provides vital insight into the nature of some of our visitors. A humming UFO landed below the crest of a hill about 1:00 A.M. Mrs. Mary Merryweather and her mother-in-law observed the following through binoculars. Due to light underneath it could be seen that the object was sitting on three legs with space underneath sufficient for a man to sit upright. Five or six man like figures in tight suits carried several boxes around the curved vehicle. They took out what seemed to be tools, began to work on the underside of the craft, and soon gently lowered a cumbersome object to the ground. Another UFO arrived and landed nearby. Four or five men from this object joined the others working on the first craft. On several occasions some of the men could be seen cutting a long cable in lengths farther down the hill. Finally at 4:30 working as a team of three men around the device and with six men in line holding something, they began to attempt to fit the thing back into the center of the bottom of the craft. The men hurried as they struggled with the object, inching it up, turning it, and then backing it off in apparent failure. At 5:06 on their fourth try they finally succeeded and quickly gathered up their things. One after the other the craft shot straight up and disappeared almost instantly. Two sets of cone shaped impressions 14 inches wide and 18 inches deep were found at the site. Down the hill where the cable was cut, a three inch tubular shaped piece was found. The cover was a dark brown paper like material. The inside of the artifact appeared to be packed with finely shredded aluminum strips.

During 1966-68 when UFOs were haunting my area here I picked up these same strips in a circular area around three shallow ground impressions at the Bentonville site. I also noticed bits of brown paperlike material and wondered if someone had been smoking or had a fire. Chopped off compacted bundles of the strips were present at the Rush County site, but I did not see any other material.

I have described only a few incidents indicating that the aliens do become solidified material while in our environment. The dimensionalists hide their heads in the sand when confronted with these facts. John Keel would have you believe that the New Berlin case was another cunning trick performed by non-physical energy forms just to fool earthlings. A little act for your benefit — four hours long! Can you really believe this?

We are faced with a vast complex enigma. An ultimate aim lies behind much of what happens. It is beyond our understanding. It is the awesome meeting of humanity and the extraterrestrials. Have you acquired an object that might be another small clue in the UFO riddle? ●

UFOS HAVE LANDED!
Despite governmental denials, the startling truth is that alien operated vehicles from other worlds have been landing on Earth for decades.

From the far corners of the globe come absolutely amazing accounts of face-to-face encounters with a seemingly strange variety of beings and creatures whose existence can no longer be denied.

In most instances the aliens have selected ordinary people from all walks of life for these encounters. They aren't interested in speaking with government or military officials, but with the "man in the street." Their program of awareness is being carried out on a "grass roots" level, for it is by communicating with "everyday folks" that they believe our society will be changed for the better.

ARE YOU AMONG
"THE CHOSEN"?

However, as noted UFO authority Timothy Green Beckley (author of six books on the subject as well as publisher UFO REVIEW, the world's only flying saucer newspaper) points out, there do seem to be several "common factors" which make certain individuals more prone to be contacted.

Now you can find out if you are likely to be selected to experience a close encounter of the third kind. All you need do is take a few minutes from what you are doing and take this CONTACTEE POTENTIAL TEST which will show you if you possess the special "TRAITS" the space aliens look for in communication with humans. STRANGE CREATURES WALK OUR PLANET IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT...
DO YOU DARE LOOK OUT YOUR WINDOW THIS EVENING?

This year will definitely go down in history as the year of the humanoids. There have been more reports of strange creatures being observed around our planet than ever before. UFO-nauts come in all shapes and sizes and John Brent Musgrave of Canada has been tracking them down partly with a large grant given to him by an agency of the Canadian government.

Now you can learn of his startling findings and receive a personal analysis of the above test which will give you the exact percentage of your chance of making contact with aliens. The CONTACTEE POTENTIAL TEST will be evaluated free of charge when you order John Musgrave's UFO OCCUPANTS & CRITTERS.

Make no mistake about it. John Musgrave is no flying saucer "kook," but instead he is a highly trained astronomer who knows the difference between conventional objects that are often mistaken for authentic UFOs, and actual craft from other realms. What he has discovered during his research is absolutely amazing. He has weeded out those cases which can't be rationally explained and has come up with some utterly thrilling conclusions.

UFO OCCUPANTS & CRITTERS details more than 90 close encounters most of which have never been published before this book was issued. You will read such startling cases as:

* David Sewall's report that he was followed home by a UFO. Later he had a nightmare and afterward became convinced that in fact he had been abducted into the saucer. David remembers being bathed in an orange ray of light and undressed by critters who had rough brown skin like a crocodile.

* Three men fishing at a lake south of Edmonton, claim to have witnessed an octopus-like creature associated with a light that landed around midnight. Allegedly at one point the critter wrapped one of its tentacles around one of the witnesses and tried to drag him into the craft.

* A Mrs. Couturier glanced out her window and noticed a patch of bluish light south of her house. She and her adult son went to investigate and found a "small person" lying on the ground with its face lifted so she could see the eyes but not the lower part of the face.

This volume comes complete with illustrations showing the various types of UFO-nauts that have been observed, and answers the nagging question: What is behind the behavior and origins of the flying saucer crew members?

■ Water covers three times more of the Earth's surface than does land. Does it contain three times as many mysteries?

Carefully kept records show that the ubiquitous UFO has been seen over Earth's water areas — lakes, rivers, reservoirs, bays, oceans and seas — as often as they have been seen over land. Noiselessly — and sometimes not so noiselessly — they have plunged into the waters at speeds that would shatter an ordinary plane or rocket. They seem as much at home underwater as they do in the atmosphere. Are these objects based in outer space, or in Earth's "inner" space — its oceans? Are they related to the "Catherine Wheels" of the Indian Ocean? To the underwater cigar shaped objects that have allegedly been clocked at 150 knots at depths of 20,000 feet?

On the balmy afternoon of June 3, 1961, Giacomo Barra of Savona, Italy, was enjoying a boating trip on the Gulf of Genoa with three friends. Suddenly, he and his companions were jolted from their reverie by an object that rose from the sea. Barra later told reporters: "When we were quite a good distance from shore, we shut off the engine and sat there, chatting and enjoying the morning breeze...."

"Suddenly the rocking motion of the waves increased, and the boat began to roll badly... At a distance of slightly more than half a mile from us, the surface of the sea was bulging... A strange contraption rose up...."

UFOs IN THE SEA: UNDERWATER MYSTERY SURFACES

"The lower part of it looked like a plate upside down and the upper part ended in a cone. While it was emerging from the sea, the water was thrust away all around it, as by a cushion of air....

"It stopped still for a few seconds, at a height of 30 feet or so, and then rocked slightly a few times. Then a halo formed around the base of it, and the thing shot away very fast across the sea and vanished toward the northwest.

The Japanese fishing boat, Kitsukawara Maru was sailing south of Yokahama with its five man crew on April 19, 1957. All hands saw the sudden appearance of two silver saucer shaped metal craft plunge into the water nearby. Immediately afterward, the sea where they fell became furiously disturbed, boiling and churning violently. The crewmen searched for wreckage, but found nothing.

During his classic 1947 raft voyage across the Pacific, Thor Heyerdahl said he "saw the sea boil and bubble while something like a big wheel came up and rotated in the air." He also recorded seeing balls of light, about three feet in diameter, flashing irregularly under the surface.

The publication, Saucer Scoop, edited by Joan Whritenour, began to receive reports from commercial fisherman in December of 1967. They told of "holes" in the Gulf of Mexico and places where the water "boils in

Do UFOs come from the sea? Do they ever crash into the sea? Is there any connection with UFOs and the lost continent of Atlantis? Let's examine the situation and see how UFOs are linked to the sea?

Even if they don't actually come from the sea, in many cases UFOs have been linked to the sea in various ways.

Volunteers clean up oceanfront after a mysterious object descended from the bottom of the sea, creating havoc for miles around on an Australian beach.

circles." This was where UFOs were seen to dive into and emerge from the gulf waters. All of which causes us to wonder what kind of underwater source could generate sufficient power to turn the tepid waters of the Gulf of Mexico into a turbulent, bubbling maelstrom.

The number of UFOs seen to rise from large bodies of water points to the probability of underwater UFO bases. In well recorded cases, water — of the salt or fresh variety — acts very strangely when in contact with the UFO's surface as it emerges from the water. Could this be the crux of the mystery? Is water ever in direct contact with the UFO — or its occupants?

In 1953, Senor Salvador Villanueva encountered UFO occupants in Ciudad Valleys, Mexico. He walked across a swampy area with them, toward their vehicle. He noticed that, although he sank deep into the muddy water, the feet and legs of the UFO beings remained clean. "When their feet touched the muddy pools," Villanueva said, "their belts glowed, and the mud sprang away as if repelled by some invisible force."

In this work, Water Symbolism In UFO Encounters, D.G. Butcher told of another contact case involving an apparent shielding from water. It concerned a boy, Oscar Iriart, who was told by UFO entities to dip an envelope into a small pool. He did so, plunging both of his hands into the water. When he withdrew them, to his astonishment, they — and the envelope as well — were completely dry.

Some well directed force controlled by UFO intelligences can apparently change the fundamental characteristics of water as we know it.

In the presence of the UFO, water develops holes, gurgling sounds, swirling whirlpools; it becomes "humped" or "mounded," changes color, roars, bulges, bubbles and belches. Witnesses to these strange thrashings from the deep were close to the places where UFOs emerged from the water. Some were on the nearby shore. Others were at the edges of reservoirs, lakes, rivers and ponds. And some were alone at sea.

The E-M (Electro-Magnetic) — or whatever source — effect cannot be taken lightly by near observers. While many have seen UFOs at close range, and even touched some of them without apparent ill effects, there are enough validated experiences on hand to show that possible side effects must be regarded seriously. E-M effects have stopped auto engines and blacked out commercial, ham and CB radios. They have similarly affected motorboat engines, shipboard lights and ship-to-shore radio-telephones. Some persons have reported watering eyes and skin burns after close encounters with glowing UFOs.

At 2:30 on the afternoon of October 31, 1963, on the tropical banks of the Peropava River in Sao Paulo Province, Brazil, several persons heard a loud roar overhead. They looked up. A "shiny disc shaped object" flew overhead very low — so low that it struck a glancing blow to a palm tree beside Senora Elidia Alves de Souza's house. Her nine year old daughter, Ruth, was nearest the object as it passed directly over the girl's head.

Although the disc collided with the soft, bushy top of the palm, it was enough to drastically alter its flight. Immediately, it began a quick series of erratic, wobbling motions. It seemed to develop serious control trouble and, unable to regain altitude, plunged into the river near the shore opposite the de Souza house. The river depth there is 12 feet, with 15 feet of mud and clay at the bottom.

All the witnesses reported the strange action that immediately followed its plunge. Where the crippled disc penetrated the surface and vanished, it was as though a hot iron had fallen into cold water. The water began to bubble and surge furiously, then "became exceedingly muddy and continued to boil."

On the other bank, a Japanese, Tetsuo Ioshigawa, and several local fishermen saw the entire event. From the witnesses, police concluded that the disc, which was described as resembling an "aluminum basin," was about 25 feet in diameter and three feet thick. All agreed it was extremely bright ("almost luminous") and traveled at a slow speed.

Several attempts were made to recover the sunken UFO but all failed. Rumors circulated that the craft had been removed at night. But by whom? Knowing the slippery nature of the beast, it is more likely the UFO soon removed itself under cover of darkness.

Among the best documented accounts of underwater UFOs were three sightings on the Baltic coast and the Mazurian Lakes district of Poland.

In early June of 1957, there were strong rumors from Soviet occupied Poland of mysterious sightings at Koszalin, a coastal town. Two strange objects were allegedly seen emerging from the depths offshore. They climbed into the sky at high speed and vanished.

Then, two years later, came a more detailed report of a sighting at Kolobrzeg, just before Easter. Antoni W. Szachnowski, chairman of the Anglo-Polish UFO Research Club, made this report:

"The attention of coastguards and civilians was drawn to a spot where the sea became suddenly agitated. Then the waves in that stretch of water swelled, and above the surface shot a triangular object of from 13 to 17 feet in size. It rose up and swiftly encircled the nearest locality. Then it flew higher and finally rushed upwards, disappearing into space. Army units arrived to make an exhaustive search throughout the brushwood on the seashore. The next day a team of divers did the same in the water. What, if any, was the result, we do not know."

Almost 80 miles to the east is the fishing harbor and resort of Leba, located on the open sea with several coastal lakes nearby. On a Sunday, September 24, 1961, Czeslaw Kawecki, a 28 year old textile technician, was enjoying the last evening hours of his summer vacation. In the morning, he would take the train home to Lodz. Kawecki wanted to have a final, leisurely look at the sea, so he decided on a night stroll back to his hotel. He removed his shoes and socks and, holding them with one hand, walked slowly through the sand dunes that separated the sea from Lake Lebsko. Occasionally he lingered on the shore to gaze at the shimmering waters lighted by a full moon. He glanced at his watch, saw that it was 11:35, and turned to walk toward Leba. Then, suddenly, he was almost startled out of his wits. Later, he told Szachnowski: "A sudden noise of rushing waters made me turn toward the sea again. And right in front of me, about 1000 feet from the shore, the surface was rising in one spot. It looked like a round hill — pushed up from beneath. Then, splashes of water gushed from the top and, like fountain jets, fell around the 'hole' in the waves. From this opening in the water emerged an object which at first I thought to be an elongated triangle...."

Kawecki admitted mixed feelings of excitement and uneasiness at this point, but he resolved to hold his ground and watch further developments.

"The object rose a few yards," Kawecki continued, "and hovered above this same spot. But there was now a whirlpool of water rushing inward with a loud sucking and gurgling noise. The object itself was black and silent.

"Suddenly there appeared a belt of steady white light (1) segmented by a number of convex dark streaks. This light made glowing reflections on the lower rim of the object. It also lighted considerably the upper rim and all the rest. Now it became apparent that 'the thing' had the shape of a huge inverted funnel with two rims, separated by a belt of segmented light. About halfway up the upper part was a thin strip of something whiter than the rest, on a rather dark body. The slim end of this 'funnel' had a rounded top, from which protruded a stump thinning upward, and bent in the middle on one side.

"The stillness of the object lasted about a minute, then there appeared the glow of a second light under the object. It was also a white one, but much stronger and sharper, than that emitted by the segmented belt. Almost immediately the 'funnel' tilted slowly northwards — revealing the bottom. After remaining in this position for about half a minute without changing, it glided about 50 yards eastward, stopped, but soon glided back and stopped again. All this time the bottom of the object was visible to me."

Kawecki took sharp notice of the unusual underside of the hovering body. He described its perimeter as dark and circular, like the wide rim of a funnel. Toward the center of the underside was a wide ring of strong white light with many hook-shaped streaks upon it. Next was a dark ring with three evenly spaced triangular spikes. They extended over more than half the width of the lighted, streaked ring. Finally, in the very center was a disc that appeared to be made of highly polished silver or crystal. It reflected the light brilliantly.

Kawecki felt certain there was some rotation involved with the underside. He could not be sure whether the spikes were moving or the dark streaks turned under them, but one or the other rotated.

"Next, the light became bluish and more intense. Then the object moved toward the North and upward at about a 45 degree angle, at a speed not any faster than a jet airplane. It became a diminishing spot of light until it finally disappeared. There was no sound at all, and my entire observation lasted not more than four or five minutes.

"I estimated the width of the object at about 16 feet and its length, without the antenna, at about 20 feet.

"When the object disappeared, I realized that a young couple was standing a few paces from me, gasping in amazement. They, too, were returning to their hotel. As I talked with them, two men in their 50s came up, to us from opposite directions. They were local people — probably fishermen — and rather shaken by the sighting: They went to inform the coast guard."

Among the most convincing eyewitness reports of strange surface and subsurface goings-on are those reported by experienced pilots whose vantage point thousands of feet overhead has the unquestionable advantage of taking in the entire phenomenon at a glance. One such sighting occurred on April 11th, 1963, from the cabin of a Boeing 707 on a routine passenger flight from San Juan, Puerto Rico to New York City. The sighting was over one of the Atlantic's deepest canyons, the Puerto Rico Trench, north of Puerto Rico and east of the Dominican Republic. Here the sea reaches a depth of five and a half miles. The coordinates recorded by the crew were 19° 54' north latitude; 66° 47' west longitude.

These gargantuan sharks were found washed up on a beach, with no plausible reason for their condition. Some researchers believe it was the work of aliens.

The co-pilot was the first to see the underwater disturbance. It was 1:30 p.m., about 20 minutes after takeoff, when the jet was at its cruising altitude of 31,000 feet. The co-pilot saw, approximately five miles to the right, a portion of the ocean's surface rising in what appeared to be a great round mound. He described it as "a big cauliflower" in the water, like an undersea atomic explosion that was about to burst through the surface.

But nothing broke the surface. He called the captain's and engineer's attention to it, and they observed it for about half a minute under the clear sky. Both men unfastened their seat belts to move over to the right side for an unobstructed view.

The three crewmen agreed the great amount of water was between half a mile and a mile in diameter and had risen from the surrounding ocean level to at least half its width. The captain, adhering to the policy of maintaining the flight schedule, did not circle back for another look. As they left the area of the great boiling mound of water, they noticed it was beginning to subside. Later, the co-pilot made inquiries at several government agencies, as well as with a seismic specialist, but none had reports of tidal waves, earthquakes or waterspouts in that area.

Strange, indeed! What kind of force could cause hundreds of tons of churning water to rise from 1300 to 2600 feet above the surface of the ocean? And be so contained and controlled that it would not break free and cause a monstrous tidal wave in all directions? Whatever became of the physics law that says water seeks its own level? Clearly, this strange power is not a part of man's modern scientific inventory.

Five years earlier, a similar air-to-surface sighting took place in another part of the North Atlantic. On July 4th, 1958, Captain Raymond B. Foppe, a transatlantic pilot for Pan American Airways was making a cargo flight from Prestwick, Scotland to New York City. About 600 miles due west of the northern tip of Ireland, he sighted a strange — and very large — submerged object. He radioed: "Large green object sighted underwater off coast of Ireland. Position 52° north. The entire object submerged."

Prestwick Oceanic Control also heard Foppe add that it was (or appeared to be) "...an iceberg, about five square miles in area." The British Admiralty warned ships clear of the area, but Coastal Command at Plymouth refused to act. They said it wasn't possible for an iceberg to exist in the Gulf Stream. Nevertheless, a search plane took off from Londonderry R.A.F. station to pinpoint it. After it searched for several hours without success, officials at Mount Batten, in Plymouth, were thoroughly puzzled. What had the American transport pilot seen that was so large, submerged and of a different color than the ocean water? What could cover an area of five square miles, then vanish so quickly? Was it merely sunlight reflected on the sea? Or a large school of fish?

Almost a year later, a similar sighting was made in the same general area, but nearer to Ireland. Captain H. Macfarland, piloting a jet airliner between New York and Paris, reported another large green patch, or stain, on the surface of the water 200 miles west of Ireland. Puzzled, he asked for permission to descend to 1000 feet. For fully 20 minutes, he circled the green mass, examining the odd phenomenon at close range. He said he clearly saw bubbles rise and burst at the surface and steam rising from the stain. His conclusion was that some manner of volcanic disturbance was taking place on the ocean floor.

The seas around Australia and New Zealand were the site of a "mystery sub," fleetingly seen during the second half of 1958 by ship and aircraft commanders. Officers of the coastal packet Pakura, of New Zealand, saw a fast moving "submarine" break surface 40 miles off the entrance to Cook's Strait on July 23. It quickly submerged and, despite efforts of the Royal Navy submarine Telemarchus to make contact, it vanished without a trace. In early October, it — or others like it — was seen five times within eight days by ships and planes off the Victoria coast. Specially-equipped antisubmarine planes were unable to get a fix on the elusive vessel. Then, a month later, another mystery sub was detected and tracked off Sydney Harbor.

An object sighted by an Air Force plane far at sea in the Pacific sent the U.S. Navy into a classified alert during the first week of October, 1960. The Pacific Antisubmarine Force sent four destroyers and the carrier Kearsarge on an immediate search from Long Beach, California. The force commander, Vice-Admiral J.S. Thash, said the unidentified object "was a long way from known submarine bases." Two days later, on October 18th, it was announced that the force was "still making contact with a mysterious underwater object in international waters." No more reports followed and the results of the search and "contacts" were never revealed.

On October 20th, the Japanese Maritime Safety Board revealed that between September 26th and October 15th, 17 ships had reported strange underwater blasts at the mouth of Tokyo Bay. They captain of the Hojo Maru described one explosion he saw — from two miles away — as resembling the blast from a depth charge.

Pilots have a distinct advantage over land observers in noticing strange objects in shallow water. On March 10th, 1965, a pilot for Quebecair, Captain Claude Laurin, with his copilot, kept a clearly outlined "submarine" in sight for almost five minutes as they flew over the St. Lawrence River.

"Impossible," said a Royal Canadian Navy spokesman in Halifax, responding to the report. Yet there it was, according to the airline pilots — 65 miles northeast of Quebec City — in an area where a submarine could not operate.

Early in July of 1965, marine scientists of the "man-in-ocean-space" program headquartered at Fort Pierce, Florida, detected a fast moving object deep in the nearby warm water Gulf Stream.

Dr. Dmitri Rebikoff was conducting submarine operations for ten days at 90 to 100 foot depths in preparation for Dr. Jacques Piccard's projected cruise under the Gulf Stream. Rebikoff reported this unexpected observation to the project coordinator:

"Under the various schools of fish moving about the same speed as the stream — 3.5 knots — there loomed a pear shaped object. At first, from its size, we thought it to be some form of shark; however, its direction and speed were too constant. It may have been running on a robot pilot. We received no signal from it and therefore do not know what it was."

"It all sounds so crazy," James Harkins told reporters at Cape Canaveral in June of 1966. "I didn't want to make a big deal about it." The day before, his two sons, ages six and seven and their friend, eight, raced to him, pale, breathless and thoroughly terrified.

The three boys were playing behind their apartment about 7:30 p.m. when they saw a "rocket or jet" zip across the sky and disappear behind the building, apparently dropping into the water. They ran to the beach and saw, about 30 yards ahead, two men, talking, with their backs to them. The boys said the two men wore "glass helmets and gray suits with smething that looked like scuba tanks on their backs." One of the youngsters was so surprised that he made a sound, startling the men. They scrambled quickly aboard a "round white thing" which sped to a strange floating device about 300 feet offshore.

There were windows in the floating object, they said, and they could see people moving inside. On one side, there was a gray star with some type of identifying letters.

The boys ran back at the same time the men raced for the object, and when they paused to look back, they were expecting the craft to take to the air. Instead, it submerged and vanished.

"All three mentioned the same details when I questioned them separately," Harkins reported. "I don't think they made the story up — they're not the type."

Who were the two men? What was the underwater object — a UFO or a submarine? Or both?

A reddish-orange fireball, a row of blinking lights that plunged soundlessly into deep water and a large patch of bubbling water, yellow with foam, marked the underwater UFO of Nova Scotia's Shag Harbor. A dozen persons saw the dimly outlined object slip under the water, but no trace of it was ever found on the surface or on the bottom.

That night of October 4th, 1967, David Kendricks, 18, was driving from Cape Island to Shag Harbor with his friend, Norm Smith. Kendricks told reporters later: "When we got to Bear Point, we saw a bright light in the sky, sort of reddish-orange. then two more lights came on, all in a row, on a right decline of about 45 degrees. They flashed on in sequence, the lowest one first. They were pinpoints of light, not like flares, and we judged they were about two or three miles to the southwest." As the boys drove into a cove of trees the lights passed from their sight.

But not for Laurie Wiggins, 19, and four friends who were also watching the display from a closer point at Shag Harbor. They saw the lights tilt at 45 degrees and begin to descend toward the water in a gradual glide. The lights, Wiggins said later, blinked on and off in routine order before the object reached the water. About 500 yards offshore it made silent contact with the surface, then vanished under the water. Some witnesses claimed the object was at least 60 feet long.

As the boys stopped their car, they noticed a single white light — like a surface marker — bobbing offshore. Wiggins immediately notified the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and within 20 minutes, Constable Ron O'Brien of Barrington was on the scene in a boat with two other officers. They set out for the bobbling light, but it disappeared before they could reach it. With all planes in the area accounted for, and no radar reports of any aerial object, within an hour the Canadian Coast Guard was on the scene with eight local fishing boats to assist. All they found was a large bubbling patch of water with a streak of yellow foam 80 feet wide.

By noon of the 6th, four divers in scuba gear were searching the 30 to 65 foot depths. They were joined by three more divers. On the 8th, the Navy said the team was being withdrawn, having found "absolutely no clues, no trace of anything."

To be alone in a sailing yawl on the Gulf Stream at night and be awakened by a rush of sea water pouring into the cockpit is a nerve-bending experience even for an experienced seaman. But to peer dead ahead through the gloom at a rising plateau of water whose boiling sides have stopped you dead in the water — that would be burned into the mind forever. Certainly Neil Deane thinks so, for the picture of what rose out of that plateau more than 22 years ago still remains vivid.

Deane related his story to writer George Earley as follows: in late September of 1954, he contracted to deliver a small sailing yawl, alone, from Nassau in the Bahamas to Marblehead, Massachusetts. He cleared the Paradise Island channel late one evening after a week of shakedown cruising. On the forward deck was a great coil of 5/8 inch nylon anchor cable. One end was spliced to the anchor ring; the other to the mooring bit.

Deane slept at night after he secured the rudder on the course and set the sails for the best draw. His berth was below decks, but only a few steps from the cockpit where, with a moment's warning, he could have manual control of the yawl, if necessary. These were Deane's sailing conditions one dark, chilly hour before dawn, skirting the edge of the Gulf Stream off the Georgia coast.

He was roughly awakened, aware that his forward motion had stopped. The boat was taking on water, for he could hear great waves sloshing over the forward deck and splashing down the sides of the cockpit. Now awake, he scrambled into the cockpit and found the boat dead on course. But although the sails were filled, the ship was not making any progress through the water. The forward deck was overrun with water and straight ahead there was a great, elevated turmoil in the ocean.

A steady, deep orange glow came from a thrashing disturbance ahead, where the water had formed into a plateau. Deane blinked; it was the edge of this high table of water that pushed against his bow and stopped his forward motion.

Deane's first thought was that he had gone aground, although he had neither heard nor felt the keel grate on solid bottom. He started the auxiliary engine, put it in reverse and quickly backed off. A few yards astern, he discovered he was now in dead clam water!

After taking in the sails, he moved forward toward the plateau of glowing light and water. In a few seconds, he was shaken by what he thought was another boat — a 65 foot sailing craft — bearing down on him. He looked again. Was it approaching or moving away? No ship, he knew, had running lights visible all around the horizon. This one did. Immediately the lone sailor put his craft into reverse again

Factory owners kept their employees in dreaded sweatshops, because these masters knew they must not allow their workers to realize that they need not labor their lives away. Witchcraft was suppressed because it works! Not because of any "evil" in it. If it hadn't worked, no one would have worried about it. If you want to gain power, all you need is this amazing Witch Book!

By using these Witchcraft secrets, you too can change your life and gain health, wealth, someone to love—or anything else—surely, swiftly and automatically!

and backed off about 300 feet from the disturbance. He realized the object was not a vessel, but something else. Then the thrashing of the watery plateau stopped and "the thing" rose completely out of the water. The orange glow around it weakened markedly — so much so, in fact, that in contrast its "running lights were now brightly visible.

In the darkness, Deane couldn't discern the object's exact shape — only that there was something solid between the lights. He knew this because, as the object rose, the horizon, now dimly visible because of the distant lights from the coast, could not be seen between its lights.

And now the object, estimated at 60 to 70 feet in length (or width), headed for the barely visible continent of North America in a long, upward 45 degree slant and at great speed. In a few seconds, Deane saw it fade rapidly from sight over the land.

After calming his nerves, Deane estimated the whole event had covered about 15 minutes. He also realized the object had emitted no sound during the entire time he had it in view. He made a full report in the ship's log and then, curious, went back to the edge of the Gulf Stream where the water plateau had risen. He looked for, and found, large patches of foam that had been violently churned.

In due course, Deane delivered the boat to its owner in Massachusetts Bay, who read the log report with astonishment. Then they discovered that the center section of coils in the nylon anchor rope had been melted — fused — into a useless blob.

Deane provided, through a later electronic experiment, an intriguing sequel to his startling encounter in the Gulf Stream. A few years later, he made a test with a T.N.T. oscillator and a pair of large HF-300 vacuum tubes. Operating at 12 megahertz, they produced approximately 2000 watts of power. By using a pair of condenser plates connected to a tank coil in the plate circuit, he could bake a potato in less than four minutes. Experimenting with sections of nylon rope, he discovered the center part would melt, leaving the outside parts unaffected.

Did the UFO use the same — or a similar — force to melt the middle coils of the ship's nylon anchor rope? More importantly, was an electronically generated and controlled field, caused by the UFO, responsible for the strange behavior of the water — the churning and thrashing and the plateau shape?

The reflection of a UFO underwater was snapped by a fisherman, leading authenticity to the belief that UFOs may have underwater bases.

Did this field, this force, push the water away from the submerged UFO's body as it rose out of the water? Did it also put the surrounding sea, at a radius of 300 to 400 feet, into a dead calm? Is it possible that underwater UFOs, while moving submerged, never come into contact with the water surrounding them?

If the UFO phenomenon is related to water that doesn't wet, then it has a direct effect on the water in contact — or nearly in contact — with it. Speculation on one characteristic of the UFO in flight is that the surrounding air moves along with it, accounting for the absence of sonic booms at high speeds and the rushing sound of a slipstream as it passes overhead at low altitudes. It is possible that water behaves similarly as the submerged UFO passes through the liquid medium, and this lack of friction explains why an air/space vehicle can perform equally well as a submarine.

Can this also explain its sudden transition from air to water? The surface of any body of water is the physical boundary between air and water — a boundary not yet mastered by modern technology. And it is fatally hard, as shown by the shattered planes and men that have fallen on its surface from any appreciable height and speed. Although submarines cruise its surface freely, and move easily through its depths, while seaplanes use it as a platform on which to land and take off, we have no flying craft that can dive through the air-water interface, survive the shock, then move equally as freely underwater. When the UFO becomes a USO — Unidentified Submerged Object — it does just that immediately. Effortlessly. And oblivious to the medium through which it moves.

UFO investigators no longer doubt these objects are controlled by technically advanced intelligences. They have apparently mastered the electromagnetic state of Earth's waters with the quality and intensity of their own self-generated control fields. Something about the UFO/USO influences the water around it. Some control source inside the object molds and shapes the water into mounds and water holes.

Here may be the key to the sudden fogs and white mists that have enveloped surface craft. Several such cases have occurred in the "Bermuda Triangle" area of the Atlantic, according to author Charles Berlitz.

Water molecules are made of hydrogen and oxygen atoms held together by a covalent bond because they share a pair of electrons. There are two hydrogen atoms, but only one oxygen atom in the water molecule.

The negative charges of the oxygen atoms and the positive charges of the hydrogen atoms are deployed unevenly, giving the water molecules positive and negative poles such as those found in a soft iron magnet. When enough water molecules line up in the same direction — as when a strong magnetic field is passed over or through them — they become polarized. That is, they take on light reflecting and refracting qualities.

Is this what happens when an undersea UFO comes near the water's surface or shoots up and breaks free, into the atmosphere? Is its powerful magnetic propulsion field polarizing the water vapor on the area's surface, causing it to form a fog or mist? Is this high intensity electro-magnetic force, intelligently aimed and directed at surface craft and airplanes, so strong that it can shape the surface water into mounds resembling boiling water? Does the "boiling" appearance come from high speed changes in the magnetic forces which, in turn, cause high speed changes in the water vapor molecules near the UFO?

Submarines can rise straight up and break the water's surface without "mounding" it. Polaris missiles make no lump in the water when fired from subsurface; no gradual upswelling of water occurs just before it breaks surface. Yet the reports persist: "...the water was thrust away all around it..." There were places where the water "boils in circles." Fishermen report "holes" in the Gulf of Mexico.

It seems the UFO/USO intelligence — when it changes from one fluid density to another (air to water or vice versa) — creates an area around it where gravity and normal magnetic attractions do not function in ways with which we are familiar.

Could there be another answer to the mysteries created by these alien denizens of the waters? ●
