PRESIDENT CARTER SPEAKS OUT

President Jimmy Carter

President Carter's interest and concern
with the universe,
and it's phenomena, stems from the time he saw a UFO when he was Governor of Georgia

BY RAMONA CORTEZ

On September 5, 1977, when the spacecraft Voyager I was launched, its destination was the far reaches of the galaxy, its mission was to explore three planets. Fifteen days later, Voyager 2 was launched on the same mission—to fly by the galaxies outer planets, encountering Saturn in 1981 and Uranus in 1986.

On March 13, it was announced that the planet Jupiter, the first of the three to be probed, was encountered on schedule.

Discovered were the first active volcanoes (outside the earth's) in the solar system, on Io, one of Jupiter's major moons; its highly sensitive and ultra-sophisticated equipment disclosed that volcanic ash and dust are shooting out of Io's six active volcanoes at speeds more than 1,000 miles per hour.

The knowledge being gleaned by the spacecraft probes as they conduct a scientifically detailed investigation of our neighboring planets, will be of enormous significance.

This thought was prominent in the minds of scientists and world leaders everywhere as news of the probe reached home.

One of the messages placed on board both spacecraft as they left earth veering into the unknown nearly two years ago, was one by President Jimmy Carter, himself interested in the enigma of outer space:

"This is a present from a small distant world. A token of our sounds, our science, our images, our music our thoughts and our feeling. We are attempting to survive our time so that we may live in yours. We hope, someday, having solved the problems we face, to join a community of galactic civilization, and; we send our good will to a vast and awesome universe..."

Carter's interest and concern with outer space and the phenomena it presents stems from the time he was Governor of his home state of Georgia, when he saw a UFO.

His sighting took place in October, 1969. A member of the Lion's Club, Mr. Carter had been waiting with others outside the club's headquarters for their 7:30 meeting to begin.

Describing the UFO, Jimmy Carter added that it appeared "blueish at first—then reddish—but not solid."

At the time, he told the International UFO Bureau in Oklahoma City that the UFO "came close, moved away, came close again, and then moved away. It appeared as bright as the moon."

The UFO was visible for an estimated ten to twelve minutes during which time it changed shape and color. The UFO made no sound and was sharply outlined. The press, in publicizing the incident, said it was "a big, shining light in the shape of a flying saucer hovering overhead."

The incident was mentioned on the Paul Harvey national radio program, and newspapers across the southern portion of the United States headlined it as one of the biggest UFO sightings in history. The object was estimated to be "maybe 300 to 1000 yards away."

Towards the end of 1978, President Carter had asked NASA to take a bigger interest in UFO while they probe the unknown universe. □

Dear Editor:

"The Force" has chosen you as a light in the vastness of intellectual darkness. Your 4th Hypothesis by Bill Breuer has caused me to rethink all my old concepts. His level of science writing is great.

Please keep up this fabulous quality.

Sincerely
J. W. Klien

Dear Editor:

I recently read with interest your interview, UFO Update Confronts James Oberg, a writer for Omni magazine.

I liked the interview since I feel you asked the right questions and Oberg seemed to answer with a Ray Palmer style. I would like to say that I liked, and supported Ray Palmer for many years.

I would appreciate it if you can furnish me with Mister Oberg's address. My interest is UFOs, and like Oberg, I like to see both sides of the coin.

Sincerely,
Robert Mruz

—Editor's Note:

Your name and address has been forwarded to Mr. Oberg.

Dear Editor:

Today's ufology has become a difficult field of research for anyone to become involved in. With the garbage being published today concerning the UFO phenomenon, the general public is being clouded with false and ridiculous stories. It's nice to see that one publication still deals with factual material, and I hope that UFO Update keeps this policy. There's enough good and factual UFO material available for publication—it just takes the right publications to seek it.

I would like to caution your readers concerning any new UFO organizations, especially the ones that have started within the last year. Don't be fooled by their fancy wording and gimmicks. Any organization that offers you the moon and has plans of spreading across the nation should be checked out.

There are many organizations that have just recently started and their only interest in UFOs is your money.

If the Ohio Investigators League (OUFOIL) can be of service to you or your readers, please let us know. Our organization has been around since 1973 and we are respected among ufologists.

We at OUFOIL enjoy your publication very much—keep up the good reporting. You can be proud of what you are doing to keep the public well informed on the UFO phenomenon.

Sincerely,
Charles J. Wilhelm

—Editor's Note:

It's nice to know that there are people out there who enjoy reading the truth. Although the sensationalistic mags, with their put-on journalism, are enjoying a healthy sales, we will stick to reporting the facts.

On some occasions, some material that is doubtful manages to get by us. It's very difficult to check out everything that is reported. For the most part, just about everything we do report is checked out with the various news services such as UPI and Associated Press.

Dear Editor:

I liked your article Beyond Planet Earth by Dr. Rhehl very much. I have been certain for a long time that life exists on other planets in the universe—now I am certain of it after reading that article.

Hope you have more articles of this type in the future.

Truly Yours,
Florence Baldwin

Dear Editor:

Have you had an experience, psychic or physical, or perhaps both, which you feel was connected to tunnels, UFOs, strange encounters on your local transportation system, visions of electronic equipment, land vehicles which are not of this planet, visions or dreams of large buildings, underground installations, control rooms, etc?

If so, you can help our research by sending for our fascinating questionnaire, free, and confidential. Terrextra believes you.

Dear Editor:

Congratulations on your article Earthman, Go Home, The Fourth Hypothesis.

As a student of anatomy, I find it to be extremely valid as it explains many of the inconsistencies found in the human body and its operation.

This may be an old science fiction idea, but the author of this article has given the theory its first real credibility.

UFO Update should be proud for bringing this information to the public through the writer's sound thinking, research, and ability.

I hope the future brings more articles by this writer and his further expansion of his ideas.

The evidence is here.

*Sincerely,
Mike Collard

—Editor's Note:

We thought it was a good article too, a bit short, but it got the message across. We encourage the author, as well as others, who feel that they may have open-minded material, to forward it to our office for possible publication.

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter concerning a story in your magazine by John R Frick.

I was really let down when I read the story. He is supposed to have examined the Politan film. What makes me mad is the fact that he has determined, somehow which is beyond me— that the craft in said photos has an "electronic ray gun."

I think that his story is purely science fiction, and I have written him a letter telling him so. I will not buy your magazine again, not as long as you publish science fiction such as this.

*W.K. Woodward
Hamilton, Ohio*

—Editor's Note:

To many persons, especially those who look down on ufology, UFOs in general are considered science fiction. As I mentioned in a previous reply, we publish what we feel is interesting and true— though it's possible we've made a mistake. We try not to.

As for the "ray gun," this too could be the only way one can explain objects dotting the surface of these crafts. They associate the object with the first thing that comes to mind. One example is the American Indian and his "thunder bird" which is the only way they could describe a noisy UFO.

Dear Editor:

Where do these UFOs come from? No one really knows. But have any scientists or professors ever thought that they may indeed coming from our own future?

In our distant future our descendants may be technically, and mentally advanced enough to have vanquished the problems that plague our present day society.

These descendants of ours perhaps have broken the time barrier and from time to time come to visit us. As you know this is the century in which the greatest technical achievements were made. Because of the great mental powers these beings are said to have I believe they come from the very distant future, perhaps over 100,000 years. In fact, some scientists believe that evolution, in the next 100,000 years, humans will have large pear-shaped heads and long necks. They will also have the power of ESP.

*Ufologically yours,
Robert LeDent

Dear Editor:

There's something weird going on in Nelagoney, and I for one would like to know what it is!

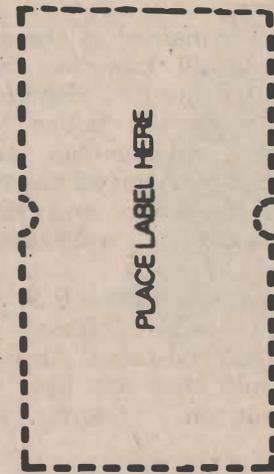

It seems that for months, residents of this community snuggled obscurely in the Osage Hills are being bombarded by eerie pulsating lights, flying boomerangs spewing colored sparks and the spitting image of a bouncing headlight on a stick.

It began, from all outward appearances back in August, 1978, when Billy Mitchell, Osage County Sheriff's deputy called the Daily Oklahoma in Oklahoma City, to report what he termed, "a core of white, pulsating light with red,

—RICHLAND COUNTY, OHIO

Butler Township residents congregated in the center of town for over an hour to watch the movements of a bright yellow object which appeared to hover in the air above a farm.

The light remained in the sky for close to 30 minutes, they informed the sheriff's deputies, before disappearing below the skyline. Several moments later they reportedly observed the object rising back up and then dimming as though it were taking off.

Deputies contacted the U.S. Air Force, and weather officials at nearby Mansfield-Lahm Airport. Neither could shed any light on the phenomenon.

—ORD, NEVADA

A gray, metallic, saucer-shaped object hovering 200-300 feet off the ground was reported by a Quiz, Nevada high school student last October.

The incident, witnessed by Deanne Kearns, occurred some two miles north of the River Bridge. She described it as having an observation window, or portholes, and red and green flashing lights.

The object, she said, remained off the ground for approximately 10 minutes, during which time two "things" about five to six feet tall came out of the saucer, looked around, took some samples of shrubs, earth and soul and then went back up inside the saucer on a beam of light.

The two "things" were described as being blackish-brown in color, and having tentacles on their sides. Their heads were blob-like. Afterward, the saucer shot straight up and took off.

—GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Hundreds of calls jammed the telephone lines at the police precinct in Gratton, Michigan.

The calls were in regard to a UFO—in the form of a metallic craft which was flashing around in the skies.

Sgt. Don Anderson was at the desk during this time. He said that the people were really frightened. He also said "The callers didn't want to be contacted further by us. Most people feel so foolish about reporting UFOs they don't want to be contacted." This makes it impossible to conduct a decent investigation.

—LIVINGSTON, N.J.

Seeing four distinct lights, red and white, hovering in the sky for five full minutes, policeman Lee Schroeder stopped his patrol car and radioed for verification.

Joined by fellow officer James Smith on Morningside Drive in the Riker Hill area, the two watched as the lights hovered not far from the WVNJ radio antenna towers before disappearing into the night.

The New Jersey sighting occurred last December 26, coinciding with reports from elsewhere in the world. Most prominent was the account of an Australian pilot who some believe was abducted aboard a UFO.

—ULTENHAGE, S. AFRICA

When businessman Gabriel Demetriades saw the object while driving between Ultenhage and Port Elizabeth, South Africa, he figured it was just another automobile. Then he noticed that it was of a silvery color, gliding across the top of thick brush near the town of Despatch.

He then realized there was no road through that part of the brush. He watched as the object disappeared over a hill.

—NEW YORK, N. Y.

Some four dozen office workers in the Gulf and Western Building on Manhattan's Columbus Circle, reported seeing a silvery circular object hovering over the southern end of Central Park.

The incident was reported last November 2. UFOs have been reported in many areas of New York City as well as upstate.

—COLUMBUS, NEVADA

Three simultaneous flashes in the cloudless sky, followed by what sounded like a sonic boom, sent seven youths scurrying for home. The flashes, from high up, "like lightning flashes, except perfectly straight," left the night sky glowing with three trails of smoke. The incident, as reported in the Columbus Telegram, occurred last November 10, while the teenagers were returning from a local McDonald's restaurant.

They were walking along 23rd Street when they saw the light. They all agreed that the flashes, high in the sky, were traveling too fast to be a conventional airplane or even a jet. They speculated that the lights were either a comet or a UFO.

—KUWAIT

Reports of UFO activity over Iraqi cities have become so numerous that the government of the Republic of Kuwait, a tiny country at the back door of Saudi Arabia, is setting up a committee to investigate the highly-controversial phenomena.

The committee, according to Minister of State Abdul Aziz Hussein, will be composed of scientists, civil aviation officials and several Interior Ministry representatives.

A seven-man repair crew at an oil field near the Iraqi border made what is the most recent report, which occurred on November 10, 1978. The crew spotted "a cylindrical body resembling a Boeing 747 jumbo jet with a red dome" which landed 250 yards from the oil field.

Editor's note: see on-the-spot report in UFO UPDATE, issue #3, Summer, 1979.

—AUSTRALIA

Official reports of UFO sightings last August 30, filed by more than 20 Cape Lambert Australia residents, were supported by a dozen other witnesses.

The reports were filed at the offices of the Royal Australian Air Force in Perth, W.A., Australia, and concerned lights "resembling a red flare," which played aerial tricks over Australian skies.

According to RAF officials, the object could have either been a satellite re-entering the earth's atmosphere or the "real McCoy."

However, the satellite theory does not satisfy Mrs. Vi Garvin, who sighted the object on the night of August 30th.

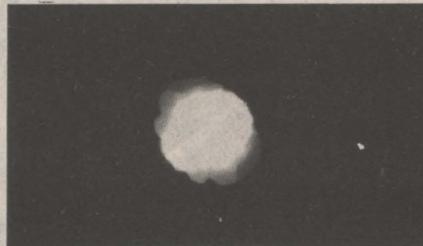

"When I first saw the thing I thought I was seeing the cabin lights of a small aircraft. After moving horizontally for several minutes however, the light then began to descend vertically before going out of sight, making me think I was seeing a helicopter land," she said.

At Albany, Australia, several thousand miles from Cape Lambert, a report came of a perfectly circular, burnt out section of grass, with a diameter of about four meters. Twenty-four hours before the section was found, a 21-year old Albany man said he heard — and saw — an object descend at tremendous speed and explode in the area. Nanarup, Australia officials speculate that the explosion might have been the UFO penetrating the earth's surface to form a stronghold.

—NORTH PLATTE, NEBRASKA

Both, law enforcement officials and area weather forecasters in this central Nebraska city are completely baffled by a strange light ringed with a blue haze and seen briefly above a park at mid-day on June 20, 1978.

While the police officers tried to find a better location from which to view the object, it vanished. The National Weather Service said it had no weather balloons in the area.

According to one witness, a woman, "I have been watching this thing for an hour now, and it's scaring me to death."

—RAWLINS, WYOMING

Residents of a trailer court watched with concerned curiosity as a UFO hovered over the western part of the city for almost one-half hour before it flashed out of sight.

The object, according to Mrs. Bea Bartlett and several of her neighbors, was in the form of a bright yellow object (or light) in the evening skies. Their combined reports indicate that the UFO was surrounded by a bright yellow light and had a flashing red light on top. Projecting downward from the UFO were several silver lines which resembled "some sort of power ray," the group reported.

They also said that at one point during their observation, the object seemed to separate into two distinct parts although the parts continued to move in the same direction.

It was further reported that the object radiated a bright yellow flash before streaking away at a remarkable speed.

The witnesses reported that the UFO was being followed by a weird type of aircraft, but they were unable to identify its origin.

Mrs. Bartlett said: "It stood steady in one spot for at least ten minutes, and it was holding too steady to be either a plane or a helicopter."

—BRADFORD, PENN

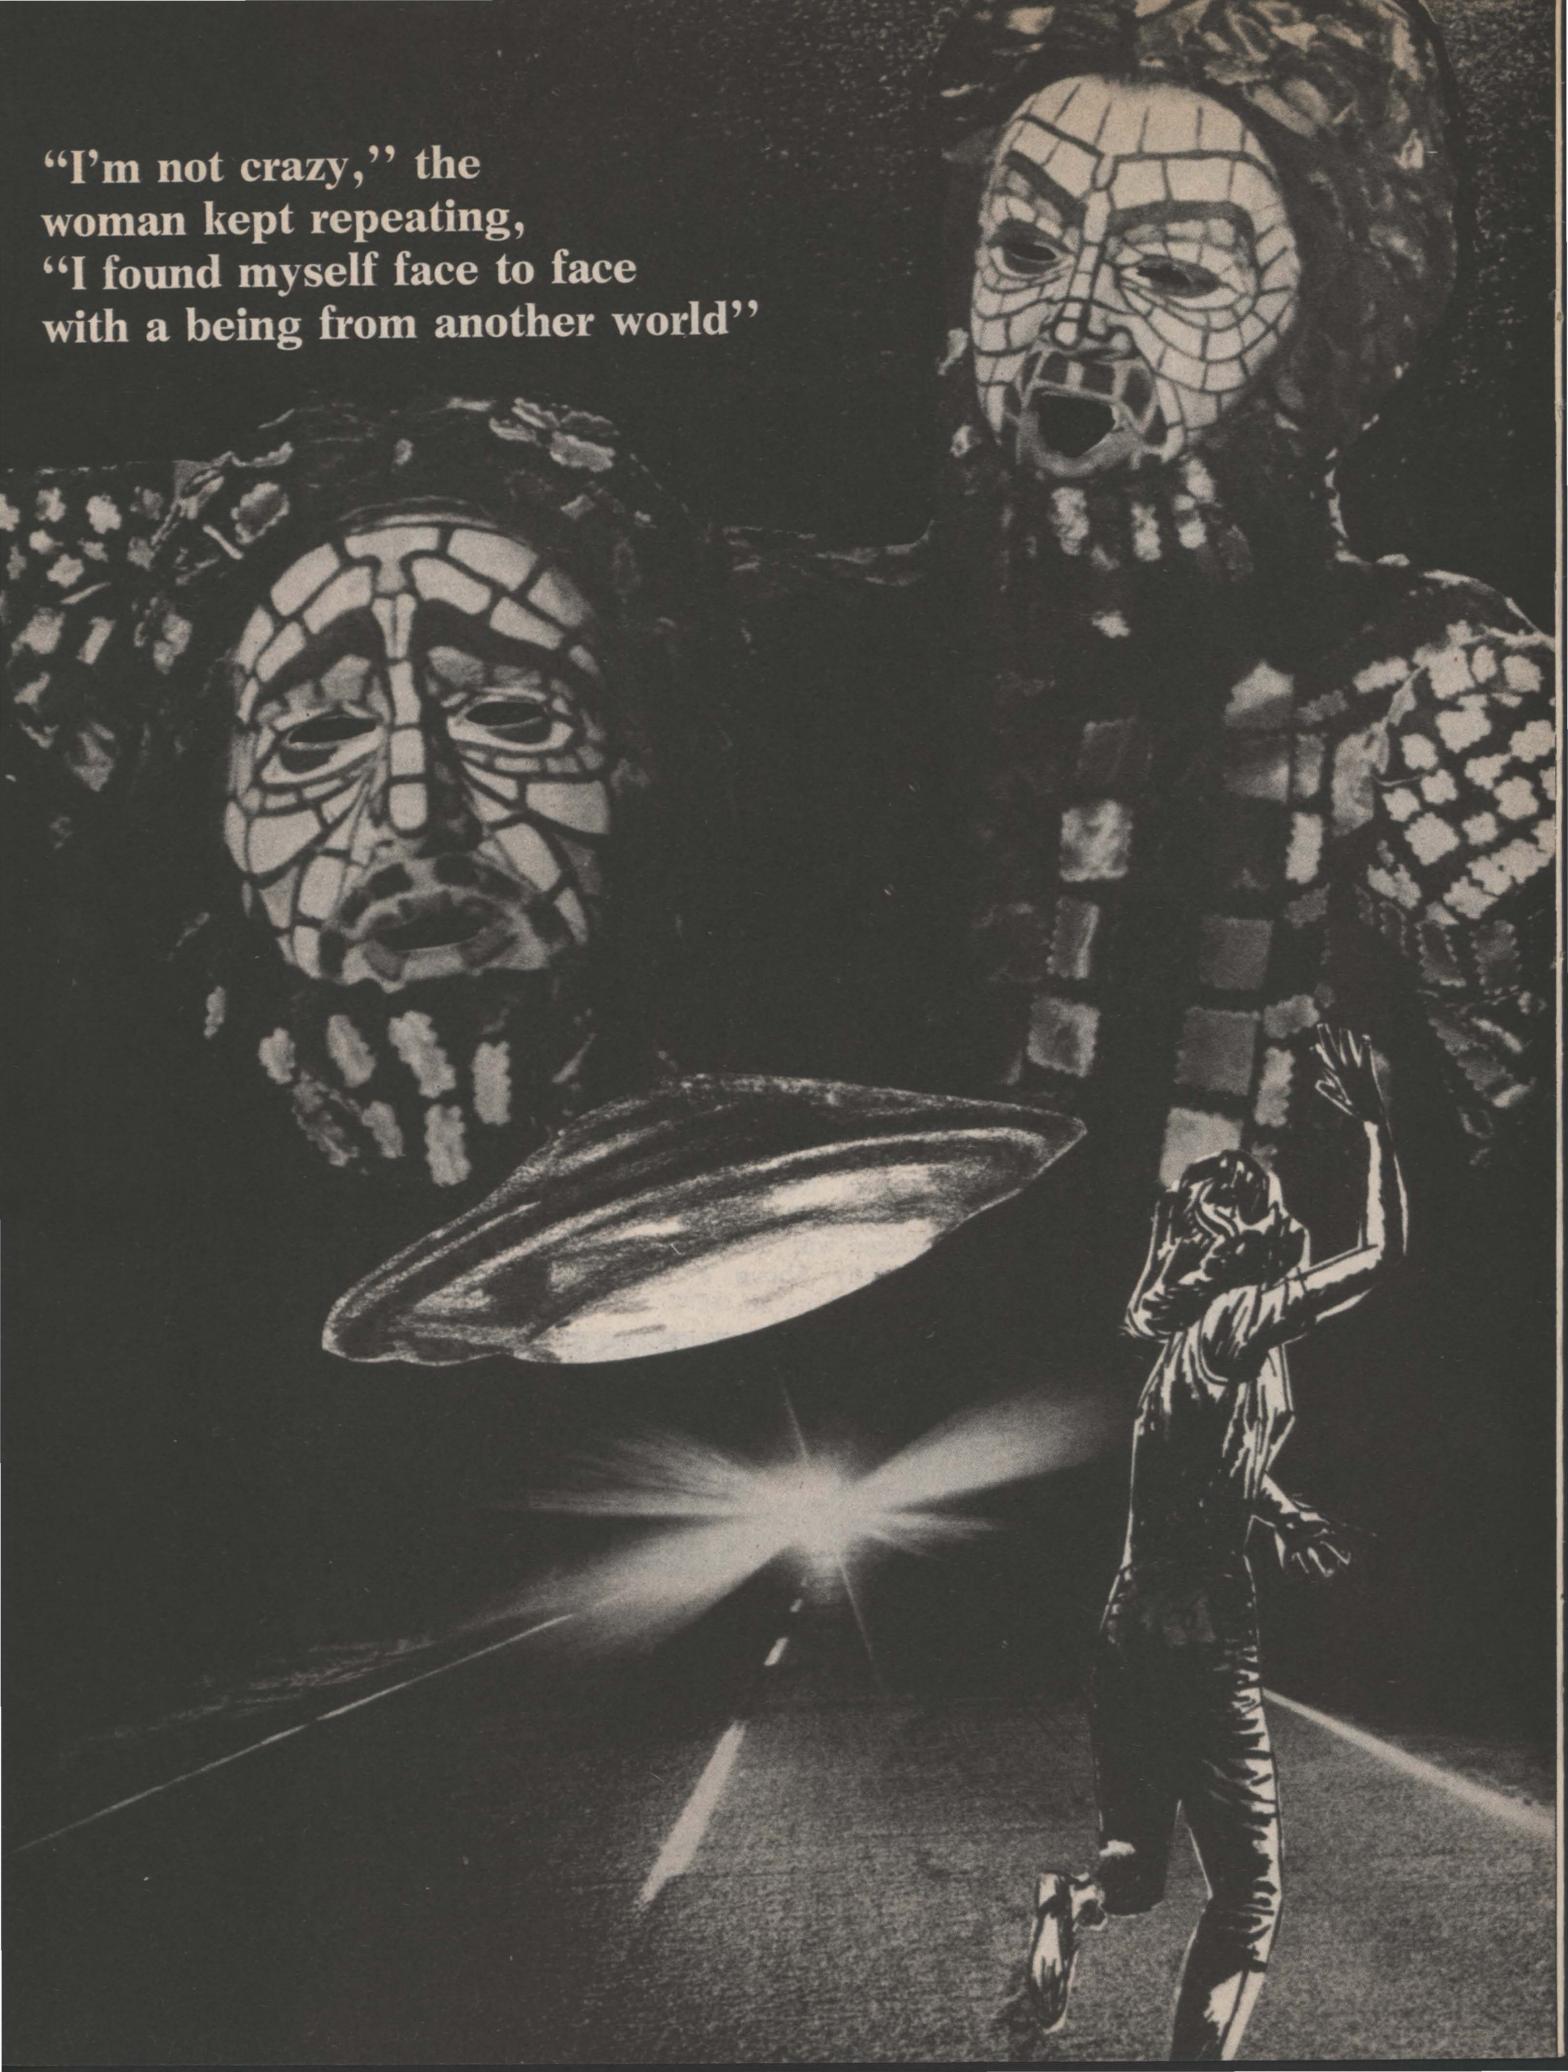

"Something" much brighter than the full moon, and from eight to ten times as large, played in the skies south of Port Allegany on the night of November 13, 1978.

Within minutes it descended, hovering just above the ground in the woods near the home of a Marshburg woman.

The object, large, round and very bright, was investigated by

“The Night I Will Never Forget: TELEPORTED ABOARD AN ALIEN SPACECRAFT

BY NICK G. ALCALI

I was on my way out of the office when I received a telephone call. The call was from Ms. Gail Morrison, a Rock Springs, Wyoming field investigator. Excitedly, Gail related a very unusual UFO story. It seems that she was able to interview three witnesses who claim to have been abducted by a UFO. Two of them have disappeared since she spoke with them, but the third, a woman, is hospitalized, suffering severe burns from her experience and under mild sedation. Gail asked if I were interested.

If there's one thing about me, it's that I'm a good reporter. That is, I have what newsmen call a "story sense"—I can smell a good story the way a shark can smell a drop of blood in the ocean miles away.

Therefore, I lost no time in getting out to the airport where Gail met me. We went into the airport lounge and discussed the story over a few drinks. Gail related that she had come across the fact that two men and a woman, totally unknown to each other, were suddenly, and separately, engulfed in a maze of weird smoke. When the smoke cleared they found themselves in a strange room, not knowing either where they were or how they got there. Yet they had an idea they had been transported onto some kind of spacecraft.

The three individuals, Gail said, had never set eyes on one another before. They had nothing in common. Although they were all from Wyoming, they were from different parts of the state. One of the men said he was from Cheyenne; the other said he was from Casper, and the woman is from Rock Springs.

One of the men, I was told, had just left a movie theater, the other had been on the verge of stepping off a bus, and the woman—her name is Ms. June Murphy—had just left the supermarket, when all three, simultaneously were flashed aboard this craft.

I put my drink down and looked at Gail for a long moment. I'd always known Gail as level-headed and quite realistic. She was a good reporter; hardly a candidate for a "Yellow Journalism" award.

We left the bar and hailed a cab. Gail had the name of the hospital where June was in her handbag and the driver took off. It took approximately ten minutes to reach the hospital.

We were ushered immediately to the room where the woman was being treated for second degree burns on her hands and arms. She was excitable, highly nervous, and obviously scared. The first thing she told us, repeating it over and over again, was—"Believe me, I'm not crazy. What happened—happened. I do not know why it happened, or how, but it did. Believe me, I'm not crazy!"

There have been several psychiatrists in this woman's room, questioning her over and over. She laughed when the psychiatrists said she had been seeing things. "An hallucination," they called it. She reached for her handbag with her bandaged arms and hands, and produced several news clippings, one with the headline, "Highway Patrolman Claims 'Close Encounters'." "See," she said, "even the police have seen a UFO."

The clipping told of a Wyoming Highway Patrolman, Eugene Mallory, who had been a skeptic as far as UFOs were concerned, until he himself had seen one, blinking red, green and white in the night sky.

The police officer received the UFO report via teletype from Utah State Troopers. It warned that celestial objects were flying North toward the Montpillar, Woodruff and Randolph areas of their state.

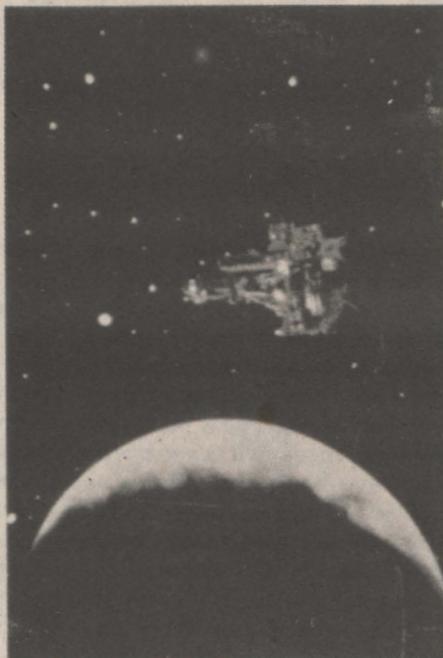

Driving out of town to investigate the report the police officer and other law enforcement officials looked up and saw for themselves. At first, Mallory said he thought what he saw were lights from the city. But as they traveled the unlighted road one of the objects traveled along with them, going in the same direction as the patrol car, and staying above the mountains just ahead of them. Via police radio the officers called the Highway Patrol who in turn reported the phenomenon to Utah authorities. The officers said that while several of the objects flew over their heads, one hovered, still blinking its multi-colored lights and rotating.

According to Mallory, the officers at first thought the lights might be stars, but stars don't vanish into the west. What's more, when the objects were beyond the mountains, they were traveling very fast.

Ms. Murphy said that she had been abducted on board one of the same crafts—that had been reported by Mallory and the other law enforcement officials.

Once on board the strange craft, she conversed with her two male companions who were just as bewildered and frightened as she was.

Suddenly, she told Gail Morrison and I, she was escorted, mostly in one direction through Suddenly, the machine stopped vibrating and moved towards the ceiling of the spaceship, disappearing into the crevice of the bulkhead as though it was designed to do just that the semi-darkness, while the two men were taken to another part of the craft, not to be seen by her again.

She described the aliens as being big and very bulky—with appendages resembling arms and legs—much like humans.

She admitted being frightened, explaining that their skin "was a cross between an elephant, crocodile and rhinoceros." She further described their appearance: "As for their faces, their ears would start at the top of their head and run all the way down the whole side of their faces, and they had an extra layer of what seemed to be hide covering them from approximately just below the chest area to just beneath their knees." Ms. Murphy also said her abductors had an odor which reminded her of dirty socks.

In vivid and frightening detail she recounted how her hands and feet were placed up against one of the ship's walls. Spread-eagled, she found it impossible to move. "In front of me was this box-like contraption. One of the creatures standing next to me made a couple of gestures with his hand and this machine immediately began to vibrate. It began moving up, starting from my feet, and continued to the top of my head, photographing my insides much like an x-ray machine in a hospital or doctor's office." A being, smaller and almost totally human in appearance, seemed to be standing off to one side, as though supervising the entire examination.

"Suddenly the machine stopped vibrating and moved toward the ceiling of the ship, disappearing into the crevice of the bulkhead, as though it was designed to do just that."

At that point, tears flooding her eyes, Ms. Murphy told us how she had been released, as though some invisible restraining straps that had tied her down were suddenly taken away. She was then able to move once again.

SOVIETS SAY IT'S A CRASHED SAUCER

BY JAMES SCOTT

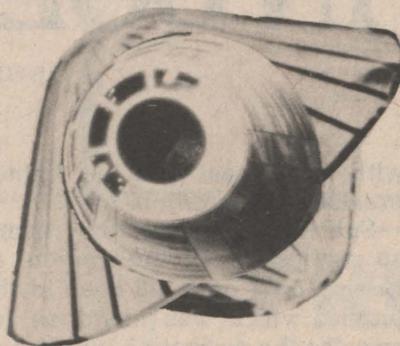

Late on the night of June 30, 1908, a violent explosion rocketed across a large remote forest region in central Siberia. Trees over a 1,250 square mile area were leveled. Great fires were started. Buildings were gutted as the flames spread menacingly across the frozen tundra, touching off more explosions. There was also intense radiation.

Hundreds of lives were lost that night, and the cost in destroyed livestock, crops, vegetation and personal property was enormous.

For more than 70 years the explosion's origin remained a jigsaw puzzle stumping the best scientific minds. Countless theories were brought up and discarded by the dozen. They included the crashing to earth of a meteorite, and the earth-ward plummeting of a comet.

Only recently, a Soviet scientist, astronomer Felix Zigel of the Moscow Aviation Institute, has proposed that the answer to the enigma which has come to be known as the "Tunguska Mystery" lies in the explosion of a large flying saucer which had been in the vicinity of earth, over Siberia, for an "extraterrestrial probe."

At an interview with the Soviet news agency Tass, Zigel said he based his theory on several facts. First, scientists have determined that the object, before crashing, did not fly haphazardly, but in an "enormous loop," from northward to westward—in that order, which is a trajectory that apparently cannot be explained by natural phenomena.

Also, Zigel said that a high quantity of zinc, bromine, sodium, iron, and lead was deposited by the explosion as well as other elements that are completely typical of comet nuclei but are quite possible for artificial structures."

According to Tass, even more evidence disclaiming the "natural phenomena" idea came only last summer when the most recent Tunguska expedition visited the area and turned up more evidence lending credence to Zigel's theory. According to the expedition's leading researcher, Alexi Zolotov of Kalinin, insect and plant mutations were found, as well as a number of other effects pointing to an artificial "residual biophysical field."

Zigel also brought out that "further research may shed light on the design of the apparatus that crashed to earth and possibly on the cause of the explosion itself, perhaps a mechanical malfunction of an interstellar craft."

It is no secret that the Soviet Union during the past several years was the scene of more than 300 UFO sightings, some of which are given in a report purportedly based on a lecture given by Zigel last year.

One incident described a UFO that reportedly hovered over the

EXTRATERRESTRIALS HAVE LANDED IN BOLIVIA

BY LEON. P. CARTER

For centuries the deep, dark Bolivian jungle, with almost impenetrable rain forests, drained by the rivers of the Amazon basin, wind-swept plateaus and lush, tropical vegetation, has been a source of mystery and intrigue to man—challenged frequently although always remaining undefeated.

The whole of the South American continent, in fact, all of its tropical 6,580 square miles from Brazil to Chile, and from Peru and Uruguay to the colonies of Dutch Guinea—all skirting the massive Andes mountain range—blends into an unconquerable puzzle, one that defies solving even in this so-called enlightened age.

However, with a sudden violent explosion that rocked Bolivia's vast southern zone on the early morning of Saturday, May 6, 1978, the phenomena which is South America once again is being tackled by the scientific — and ufological—communities.

Ufological, because many living in the district of Tarija, 150 kilometers from the Argentine border, said they saw a strange elongated object, some 15 feet in diameter, zoom over their heads with the impact of a jet fighter breaking the sound barrier.

Split seconds later, they heard an explosion in the region of Cervo Toire, on a hill deep in the jungle, which was heard as far away as the Argentine districts of Oran, Tartagal, Aguas Blancas, and Colonia Santa Rosa.

According to informed sources, the explosion started a wave of panic among the Indians who for centuries inhabited that portion of Bolivia.

Scientists and engineers, as well as a team of geologists from the U.S. National Aeronautical Space Authority (NASA) are arriving in the country in droves, making preparations to track the jungles to investigate the phenomena.

Geologists Eugene Springmar and Roger P. Penn said that if the object had fallen—and exploded—in a populated area, the consequences might have been extremely hazardous.

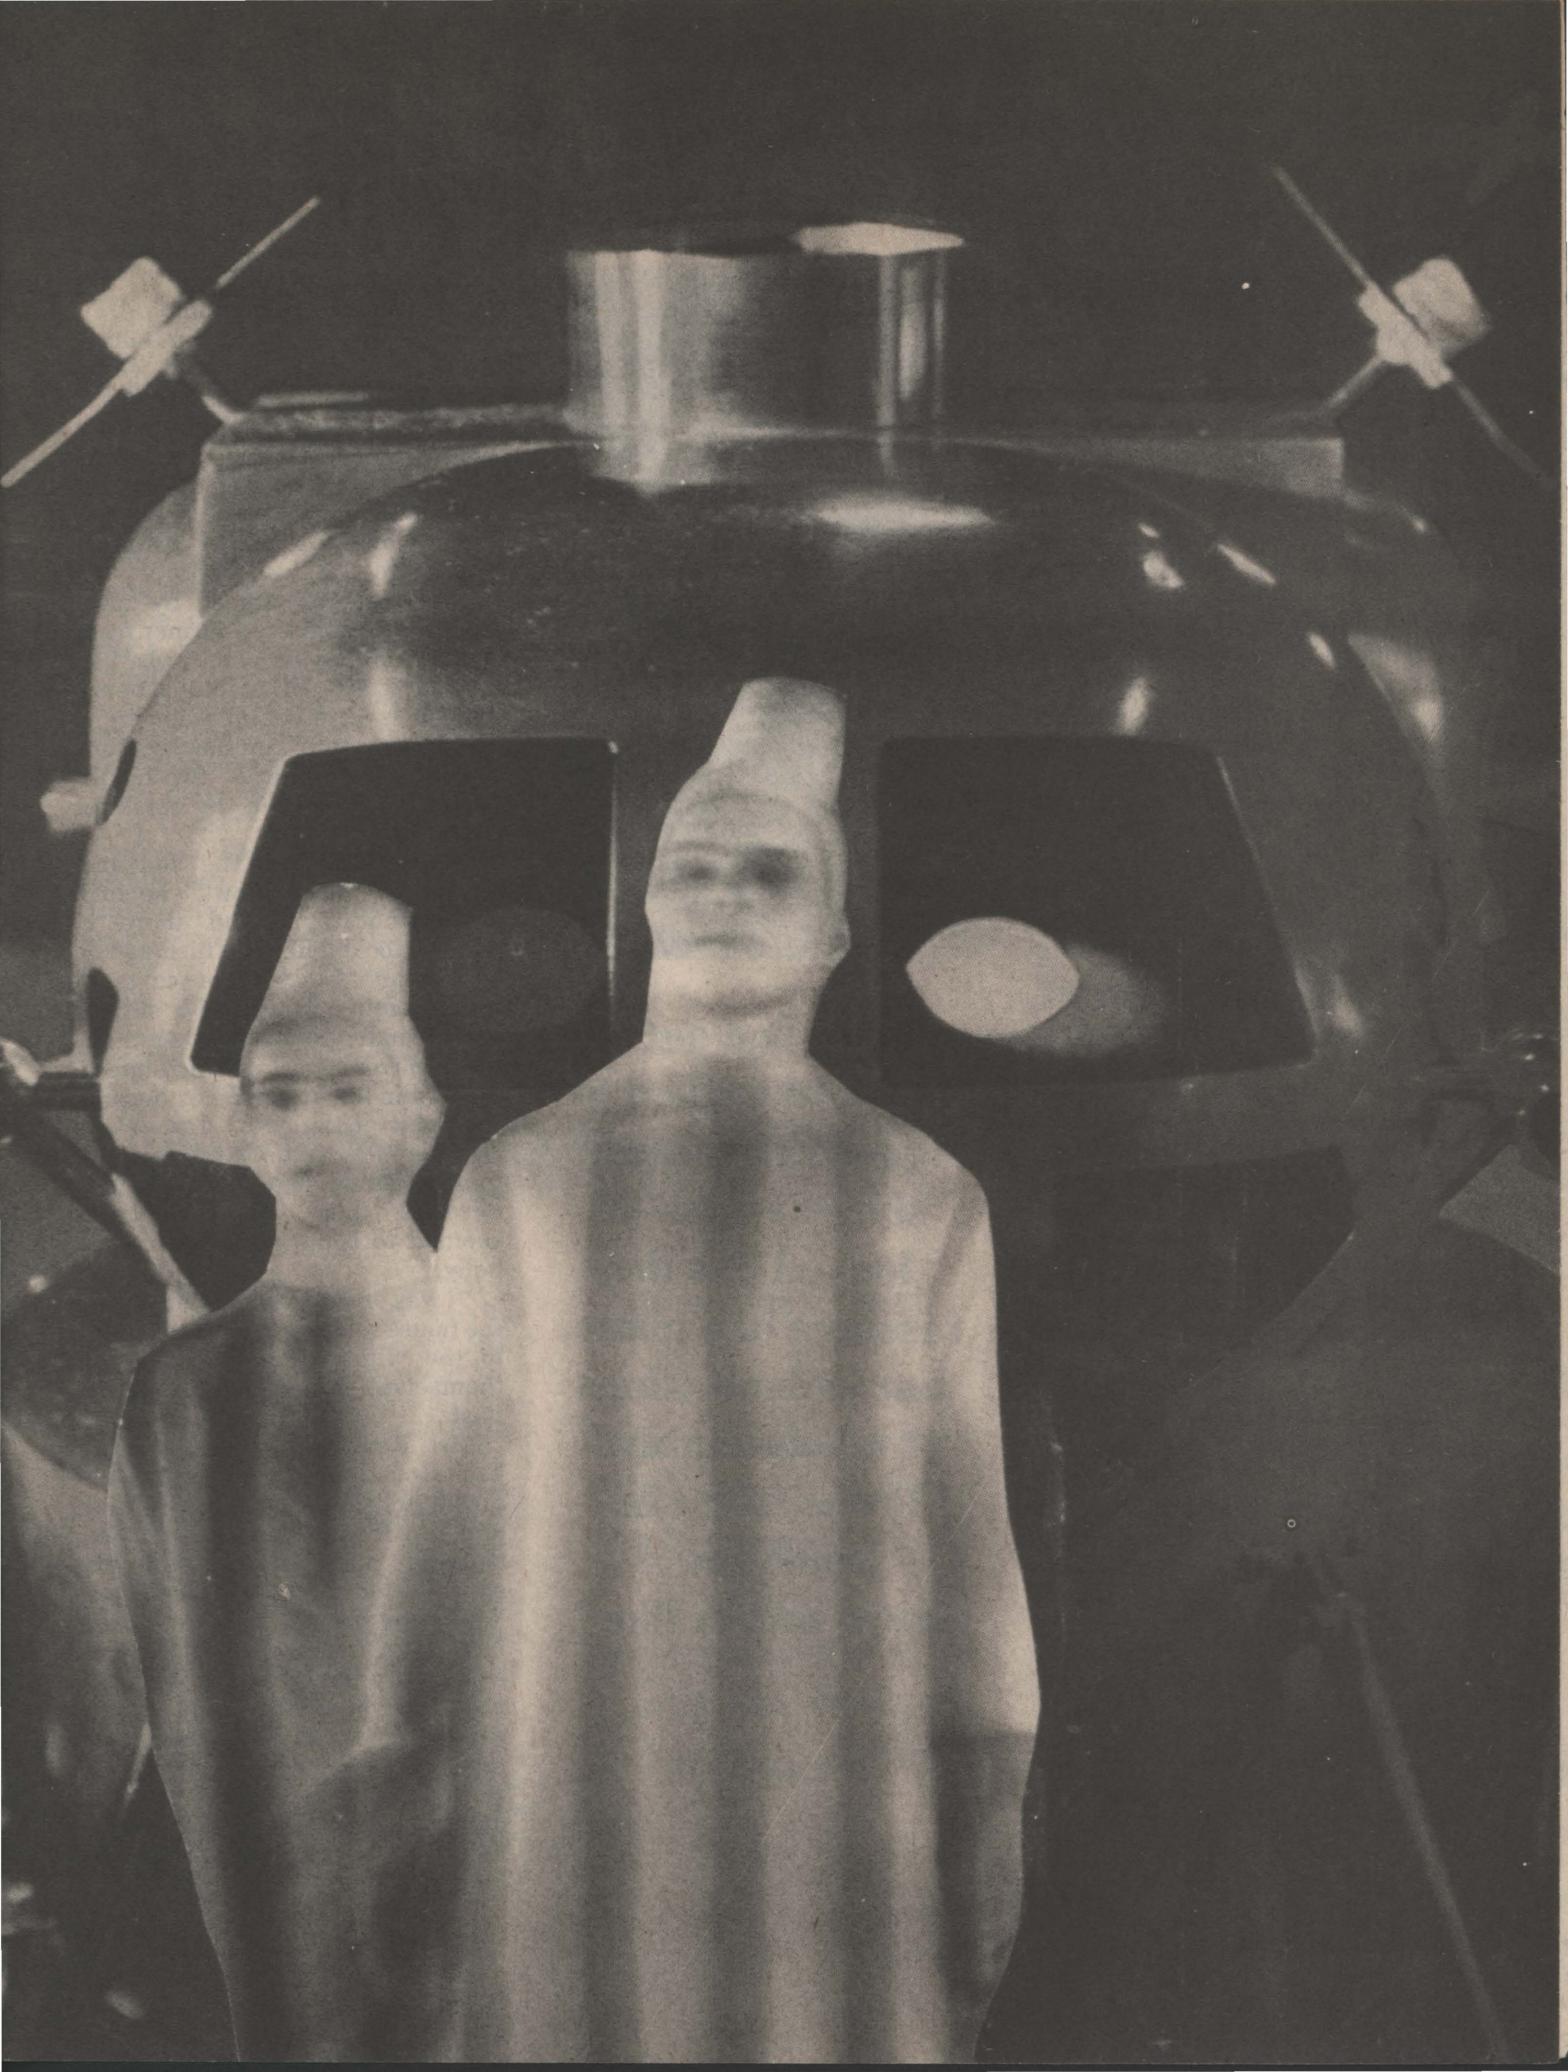

Springmar, attached to the Banco Minero Boliviano, along with Penn and other geologist companions, were prospecting when the object flew over their heads "with a clap of thunder and a streak of lightning." The pair, speaking for their geological party, said, would themselves have investigated the source of the loud explosion, but the heavy thickets surrounding their camp were just too dense to penetrate on foot and without the proper equipment. Said Penn, "You need a helicopter to fly over and let you down. And you need a chopper to get you out again. It's just about the only way to gain access in and out of the jungles here."

Springmar said that his group traversed the jungle trails carved out centuries ago by the Indians, but to investigate the explosion would mean they'd have to penetrate miles through the thickets where no trails had ever been carved.

The spot where the object is said to have landed has been declared "off limits" to newspapers and tourists, and the Bolivian government has placed the vicinity of the explosion under tight military security.

According to a military spokesman, Bolivian Air Force General Ricardo Alvarez Sanchez, "We are calling for helicopters to penetrate the thick terrain in order to investigate and get to the bottom of the missile and the explosion that recently rocked the area."

NASA engineer Richard Carter told this publication, "If the exploded object proves to be an artificial satellite it might contain dangerous radioactive elements."

Many of the scientists now in Bolivia agree with Carter, and further maintain they feel positive the object is not man-made, but is part of the UFO enigma which for close to three years has been plaguing residents of the country. Tarija, near where the object is said to have fallen, is only one "target area" where UFO activity is said to be centered.

In San Juan Province, six soldiers attached to the local garrison have reported to the newspaper Diario de Cuyo that they saw two groups of what appeared to be flying saucers pass over their barracks early on the morning before the explosion at Cerro Toire.

Also, in the village of Villa Mercedes, approximately 250 kilometers south of Buenos Aires, Argentina, at least 50 UFOs flying in perfect formation, made eight to ten passes directly overhead. The sighting was reported by a number of eye-witnesses.

Residents of the section of Villa Cassada in Las Mirandes, reported that greenish-blue UFOs appeared in the skies shortly after 10AM, executed a series of perfectly flawless aerial maneuvers, broke into two formations, rejoined, and finally disappeared shortly before midnight on May 8th.

What's more, a Chilean radio station reported that UFOs were spotted over the country approximately 15 minutes after they vanished from the skies over Villa Mercedes. "That's a distance of quite a few air miles," said Lt. Col. Enrique Perugar of the Chilean Air Force. "If they were the same objects," he laughs, "first seen over Bolivia, and then only minutes later, over Chile—

"I climbed out of bed and walked to the window—and there it was—it looked like the fuselage of a plane, but without wings or tail assembly. It was silver in color and almost mirror like"

that's quite a remarkable feat to accomplish within only one quarter hour."

About the same time, UFO activity was reported on Sucre, Bolivia's capital, and two weeks later, on the night of March 1, residents of La Paz, the country's political, financial and commercial center, told of seeing a wave of elongated (cigar shaped) objects directly over the tops of the city's buildings.

One report, made by Mr. Roberto Rodriguez, a farmer from Potasi, visiting his sister in La Paz on August 15, 1978, told of being shaken from a sound sleep by a "buzzing sound" emanating from outside his sister's two-family house in Chacez, on the outskirts of the city.

"I climbed from the bed and walked to the window," he told this publication. And there it was—it looked like the fuselage of an airplane, but without wings or tail assembly. It was of a silvery color—and spotlessly clean, almost mirror-like. I saw no sign of life within the lit portholes dotting the sides of the craft. The entire craft gave off sort of a green light that pulsated, and it was just hovering there, and the light seemed to come from its underbelly.

"I was about to wake the rest of the household, to have them come to the window, to see this for themselves, but it was gone in a flash..."

Mr. Rodriguez said he went back to bed after calming himself down, (which took quite an effort) and made no mention of the sighting, since he was sure his story would not have been believed anyway. He said he would have kept his silence but for a small story he spotted in his local newspaper, which told of a woman living in Villa Mercado, reporting she had witnessed the very same phenomenon on the night of August 14, the very night before his own remarkable experience.

The sighting of Rodriguez is only one among a great number being reported from South America.

Why is it that so much UFO activity over the years centered about this great continent? According to ufologist Dr. Jose J. Garcia, the dense rain forests and thick tropical jungles make for excellent cover, where entire armies throughout the centuries have been known to penetrate—without detection for long periods of time.

If whole armies could go unseen it stands to reason that UFOs from alien planets, piloted by a higher intelligence, could quite easily penetrate our most highly sensitive barriers.

Garcia, who heads up the South American Phenomenon Bureau, further brought out, "Geographically, the whole of South America, with the Andes range of mountains paralleled by the Pacific Coast and the gigantic river systems emptying into the Atlantic, would be a rich source of both energy and camouflage for entire interstellar groups who might wish to utilize the region for a base of operations—where their ships—much more sophisticated than anything we might have—could embark and return completely undetected, save for a sighting or two over some city."

As for the explosions in the dense area of Cerro Toire, Garcia remained mute, but did say that his agency is presently in the area gathering material, and specified a public announcement will be forthcoming in the near future.

He added that government sanction must accompany any scientific find. However, since the Bolivian army has of late been caught up in a political coup, this may take some months. The Bolivian army toppled the four-month old government of General Juan Pereira last November and promised to return to the people their rights and liberties. It had been the fifth political coup in the country over the past 14 years. "It may take some months to return the country to normal."

However, Garcia did specify that the country was "getting back on its political feet," but that right now the regime presently in power has "more to cope with than UFOs."

In any event, South America seems to be far from the only area to experience the phenomenon of crashing and exploding UFOs.

According to a report in the New Zealand Herald a cigar-shaped unidentified flying object crashed and exploded in the marketplace of Fort Dauphin, Madagascar last July 21, just after dark.

Said Radio Madagascar, the UFO lit up the whole town before plunging to the ground and added that local people rushed from their beds to quench the flames. No casualties were reported.

Similar explosions have been reported in Greenland; Cape Breton, Canada; Balearics, Spain; Bali, Indonesia, Borneo, and Malaysia.

On Monday, August 14, 1978, when a cigar-shaped object was spotted flying over Kuala Lumpur, the capital of Malaysia, a 128,430 square mile country occupying the southern part of the Malay Peninsula in Southeast Asia, it emitted a heavy metallic type of sound which was heard along the country's mountainous region of Sarawak (formerly British North Borneo).

Within less than three minutes after it was spotted by handfulls of farmers just after dawn, it gave off a tremendous explosion which reportedly cracked shop windows in Sabah, a province some 86 miles away.

According to witnesses, fires erupted in the mountains where it exploded, but no injuries were reported.

A similar occurrence, on January 15, 1979, shook the residents of Mt. Trident, Alaska. It began at 5:42 PM when an object, which was said to be elongated for some 12 feet in length, was spotted flying over Martin, Alaska towards Douglas. It passed over these regions and descended over Mt. Trident, constantly losing altitude. It dropped in Alaska's Valley of 10,000 Smokes, the lowest of Mt. Trident's three volcanic peaks. When it exploded, the eruptions were heard 50 miles away.

However, an investigation conducted by scientists, staff members of the University of Alaska in Fairbanks, who rushed to Mt. Trident, reported that there had been no evidence of radioactive activity. Be that as it may, the explosion caused a 17-foot square depression in the ground where it fell.

According to U.A. physicist Dr. Elmer R. Coop, "Usually, an explosion of this magnitude—even in a mountainous region—would cause fires and the scattering of debris for miles. But there just weren't any. Not even a rock out of place. It was as though some object made a clean penetration into the earth—and simply disappeared, or perhaps disintegrated."

Unofficially, Coop told this publication that he and his scientific companions personally feel the explosion was caused by the breaking apart of a piece of mechanical craft.

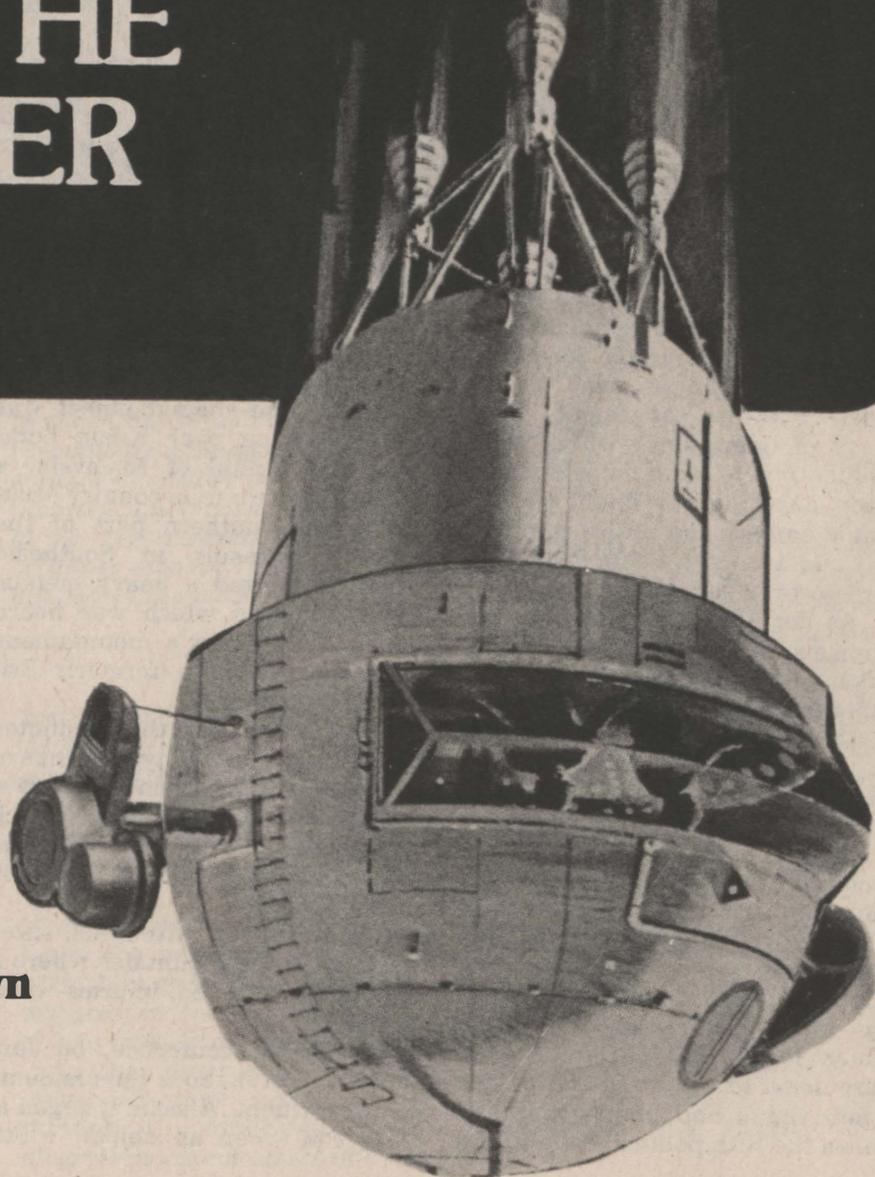

"We think it wasn't an interstellar craft itself that disintegrated but rather a portion of it—that portion which carried the unidentified flying object into our atmosphere from beyond space... "It exploded and disintegrated because that is what it was designed to do," he said, "after infiltrating our planet."

Coop brought out that his thinking goes as far as possible to the point that many outer space vehicles have already come to earth, housed unsuspectingly in remote parts of the world—just watching and waiting.

He refused to specify what they are waiting for... □

THE LIGHTS AT THE BOTTOM OF THE RIVER

“We found nothing, it was fruitless—no debris, not even an oil slick—something went down there— but what?”

A massive search of the Hudson River between the Tappan Zee Bridge and Dobbs Ferry was reluctantly called off early last November when exhausted fire department divers failed to find any trace of a light aircraft said to have crashed near Indian Point.

After more than twelve hours of painstakingly combing miles of river bottom, Coast Guard helicopters, police of several counties and civilian volunteers sadly shrugged, shivered against the chill evident in the air, packed their diving gear, spotlights and other equipment, and went home.

Before officially abandoning the area, Piermont Fire Chief Al Lynch remarked, "We found nothing, it was futile and fruitless. No debris—not even an oil slick. Nothing! Who knows what happened!"

Earlier, a Piermont man's boat was damaged by a floating object shortly after the search began, and air bubbles were sighted several hundred yards off Dobbs Ferry in the same general area. But crews returning to buoys marking the spot were unable to find anything.

The boat, belonging to Richard and Bruce Kracky who were among the first local residents to start searching after initial reports of the crash, struck something in the water which damaged their rudder.

"It was like a piece of white steel tubing about two feet long," Bruce Kracky said. "When I hit I lost my steering."

Kracky added that a "bunch of papers" was also in the water in the same vicinity. It was assumed neither the length of steel tubing, the sheaf of papers nor the air bubbles, had anything to do with a recently downed aircraft.

The search was initiated when residents of a Riverside apartment house frantically summoned Irvington police. A plane, they said, had crashed into the waters of the Hudson River at precisely 7:30 PM. Numerous other telephone calls followed, all specifying that some kind of aircraft, one with lights, hit the water, and the lights were suddenly extinguished, evidently when it went under.

The only plane known to be missing at the time was a Cessna 310 light aircraft carrying a pilot and two passengers which left the Sikorsky Memorial Airport in Stratford bound for Albany. "It is highly improbable," Lynch said, "that this is what we are looking for. "The Cessna took off from the Sikorsky landing strip which is in Connecticut, and was on a direct route to Albany. I don't think it would have come this far off course."

Fourteen-year old John Pink of Irvington was one of those who reported the crash to local authorities. The boy said what he saw was not smoking or on fire. "It just hit the water, and that was the last I saw of it."

Lynch and Federal Aviation Administration Inspector Tom Slocum at Teterboro Airport in New Jersey, said they suspected the reports of a crash stemmed from a seaplane operating in the same area a short time earlier.

"It was probably landing on the water and mistaken for a crash," Slocum said. "We have no reports—absolutely none—of any missing aircraft."

The Westchester, Ramapo Valley and Teterboro airports each reported no planes missing and no aircraft sighted below 1,000 feet on the day or night in question, and neither the day or night before.

In the light of the aforementioned facts, comes another—one so startling in its proportions that it staggers the imagination by asking the question: Was it a UFO that went down in the Hudson River that evening?

One resident of the Riverside apartment complex, 50-year-old John Lee Phillips, said he had been watching TV on the evening of the 6th of November, 1978.

"Suddenly," he told this reporter, "I heard a commotion and stepped out onto my terrace.

There, on the terrace above, my upstairs neighbors were becoming hysterical as they pointed out over the Hudson River. "There's an airplane in trouble," they screamed, "and its crashing into the icy water."

"I immediately got my field glasses and scanned the horizon. I think it's important to mention at this point that during the Korean War, I was a navy airplane spotter on a carrier. I know airplanes, and believe me, what I saw hitting the drink through those glasses was no ordinary airplane!"

Phillips said what he did see was a UFO!

"It was multi-colored and glowing—much like a huge ball—round. Part of the craft—I'd say where the fuselage was—gave off a weird pulsating golden yellow light. There was absolutely no sound."

Another eye-witness, Stephen Graymer, a Bardonia, New York attorney, was driving on the Palisades Parkway that evening when he saw a strangely lit object hovering just over Indian Point, site of the six-year old Nuclear Power Plant, one of the largest in the world. The time of Phillips' sighting, and that of Graymer, corresponded exactly, seven-thirty in the evening.

"It was glowing and round," said lawyer Graymer—"like a big round ball. But it seemed to be a craft of some sort. From what I could make out, it was losing altitude steadily as though it had been out of control and tilting crazily. I saw it dive right into the Hudson. It didn't make a sound."

Corresponding with the reports made by both Phillips and Graymer, John Elone, a private pilot, was flying from Teterboro Airport to JFK when he saw just below him what he reported to be a round ball hovering just over the water in the vicinity of the Nuclear Power Station at Indian Point.

"I don't know what it was," Elone told this publication, "or for that matter what to think. I heard about such things—flying saucers—and read about them, in magazines. I just didn't know."

"Whatever it was, however, I was sure it wasn't any conventional type aircraft. I saw it hover there, then sort of tilt a full 90 degrees before it hit the water. It's funny though, it didn't exactly hit the water as though it had been crashing, but it seemed to dive into the water, as if it were directed, like a submarine when it dives, all the while propelling itself or being propelled by engines.

"I did a right bank (turn) and I watched as the object flashed under me, all the while not making a sound. It gave off a bright glow which almost blinded me, and as it vanished below the water, the glow sort of shut off when it hit the water." He then made a report of a UFO sighting. The time of his entry corresponded exactly with those of the other two witnesses: 7:30 PM. Exactly.

In all, 17 eye-witnesses, from strollers to those driving in automobiles, to Consolidated

Edison personnel employed at the Indian Point facility came forward to testify that what they had seen early on the evening of November 6, had not been an airplane, but a distinct unidentified flying object.

Three basic questions remain at this time unanswered.

(1) Where did the craft come from?

(2) Are there any others in the vicinity?

(3) Why wasn't any trace found when the general area of the crash site was originally combed?

Ufologists presently engaged in trying to solve the enigma are adding a fourth and fifth question to the still perplexing three: Did the UFO—if indeed that is what it was, actually crash, or did it merely submerge (as some witnesses speculate) as though under its own power, seeking perhaps a momentary refuge on an alien planet, in this case, beneath the icy, swift-moving and ever-changing currents of the Hudson River?

It is a geographical fact that the Hudson River's source is at Henderson Lake, Essex County, New York and its outflow is in Upper New York Bay. The Hudson, 306 miles long, is linked to the Great Lakes, Lake Champlain and the St. Lawrence river, by the New York State Barge Canal. In short, if the UFO dove beneath the waves, acting as an "interplanetary submarine," it can at this moment be anywhere at all.

It should be remembered that in Mr. Graybar's professional observation (being a pilot, observing is second nature) the "glow" on the light the UFO emitted, seemed to be "turned off" when it submerged. He didn't say the light was knocked out. This would lend credence to the theory that the object dove into the Hudson, not fell in, as though an intelligent life force was responsible and in full control. Also, that it "tilted crazily" might have been its own angle of elevation prior to its submergence, a procedure perhaps relative to that particular type of craft.

The next question, and according to scientists the most important—what was a UFO doing so near to one of our country's nuclear power plants in the first place?

It must be noted here for the record that similar UFOs—"multi-colored and glowing balls of light" have been seen over the Indian Point installation on July 13-14, 1977, just before, during, and for three-quarters of an hour after the blackout which plunged New York City into darkness for several hours.

George Lynch, a Manhattan travel agent, was one who witnessed a UFO phenomena on the night of July 13th.

"I was on the Henry Hudson Parkway," he told this writer, "making the final approach to the George Washington Bridge when suddenly everything went dark. I had my car radio on and was listening to the news of the blackout.

"When I looked out of my car's window, I swear I saw two UFOs hovering over the water. Another, which joined them came from directly over the nuclear station at Indian Point. All at once, all three UFOs dove into the water of the Hudson. I say dove, as though with a mass of power and energy behind them, under full control, much like a submarine dives beneath the waters of an ocean."

Although many of the sightings depicted in this account have been made from a distance, one in particular, a close encounter, was described by a 23-year old man who was night fishing along the banks of the Hudson River on the evening of August 14, 1978.

Barry Ryan cast his line into the cold water and sat along the rocky embankment waiting for a bite. What he got was not exactly what he had in mind.

It was dark that night and the only lights were coming from the Indian Point plant just across the water and from occasional autos passing on the parkway behind him. It was close to 11PM.

Ryan, a Los Angeles insurance salesman who was visiting friends in Rockland County, usually fished in the same spot about three nights each week.

As was his practice, he arrived at 10:20 and cast his line approximately 15 minutes later. And then he just waited for the first nibble.

At precisely 10:55, the line began to tug. He rose from his sitting position on the embankment and pulled the now taut line. Something was holding it. Most likely, he figured, he had cast onto a log, or entangled the nylon line beneath a big rock. It was neither of these things.

"A light shone from beneath the surface just below me. It was faint at first, but brighter as it broke the water. At first I thought it was some kind of boat that went aground, its portable battery light somehow still working.

"I climbed down some of the rocks which formed four steps and strained my neck to get a better look. The thing was round, a bright metallic silver color, and it looked almost mirror-like. It rose to the surface and for a couple of seconds just sat there, perfectly still, not even bobbing on the waves.

"My God, it was enormous, hovering over me like some gigantic Sherman tank. I'll tell you this: two hitches as a sergeant in a rifle company in Viet Nam has made me immune to most of the fears many people have, but I'd been hearing about the UFOs hovering around the Indian Point Nuclear Power Station, and I guess that got to me.

"I dropped the rod and I guess my mouth gaped open, for what I saw next made the hackles stand up around the back of my neck.

"All of a sudden, this turret type thing on the top of the object started to turn, and as it turned it lifted, then swung back, much like the turret on a tank."

"I heard a slight humming sound as something started to revolve on the bottom of the craft which was now completely out of the water, being supported by some sort of pressure, much like on a hovercraft I saw being used by the navy in Viet Nam.

"Just then I saw two hands— or what were supposed to be hands—grasp the sides of the turret opening. The torso whose arms it supported was covered with some sort of alligator hide. The creature wore no space suit, and when he climbed from the craft, his movements were grotesque. He was small—about four feet, and his face resembled something that was half-man and half fish, covered with ugly scales that opened and closed as he breathed.

"He signalled inside the fully opened portal and climbed down as one and then another of the creatures climbed through the big hatch, sliding down the side of the ship to the ground.

They seemed to look around cautiously and nodded their heads to one another, which I guess was their way of speaking or communicating.

Suddenly, an auto passed by overhead and its headlights caught me in a momentary bright glare. That glare was enough. They saw me, and just stared for a long moment; then moved towards me.

"I was petrified at this point. I don't know how I did it, but I quickly managed to climb the embankment and ran onto the road about 50 yards away. I didn't look back once.

"I waved down the first car that came along and pleaded with the driver to get the hell out of there fast. I didn't say anything to the guy who picked me up, and I guess he thought I was crazy, because he stopped his car half-a mile up the road at the side of a State Trooper's vehicle.

"Looking at me like he figured me for a triple murderer, he quickly got out of his side of the car and ran over to the troopers, who walked with him back to his car, opened the door on my side and ushered me out. The guy sped away. You know, I don't blame him.

"I told my story to the police officers who drove back to the spot I directed them to. Evidently, they must have believed some of my story, because they told me to wait in the car while they investigated the scene. They slowly withdrew their revolvers as they walked to the embankment.

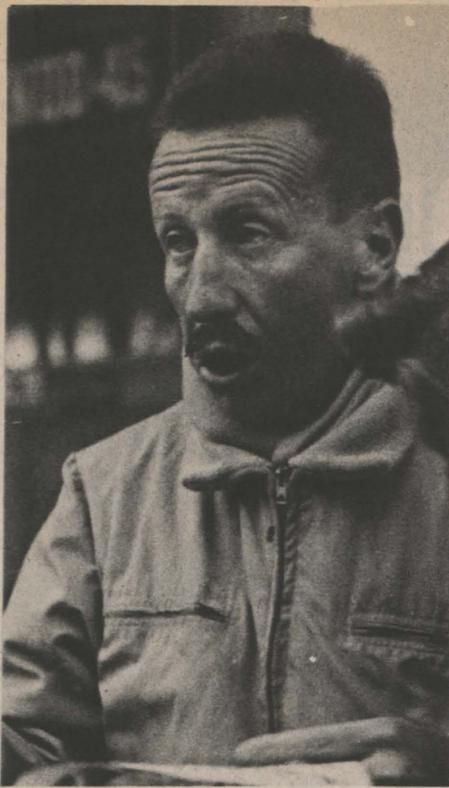

"They told me to get out and I walked with them to the spot where I had been fishing. There was nothing there, and so they took my name and the address of my aunt and uncle where I'd been staying, and drove me the short distance to my relatives' home.

"All this happened months ago. I tell it to people and they assure me I must have fallen asleep there by the side of the embankment where I used to fish. I say used because I won't go near the place anymore. I am thoroughly convinced, beyond any shadow of doubt, no matter what the 'learned' skeptics say, that alien interstellar vehicles manned by extraterrestrial creatures from other galaxies far off in space, are here among us.

Although they now creep in the shadows, there will come a time when they will show themselves fully."

To date, nothing was found in the river, yet, many sober witnesses claim that something did go down—something big.

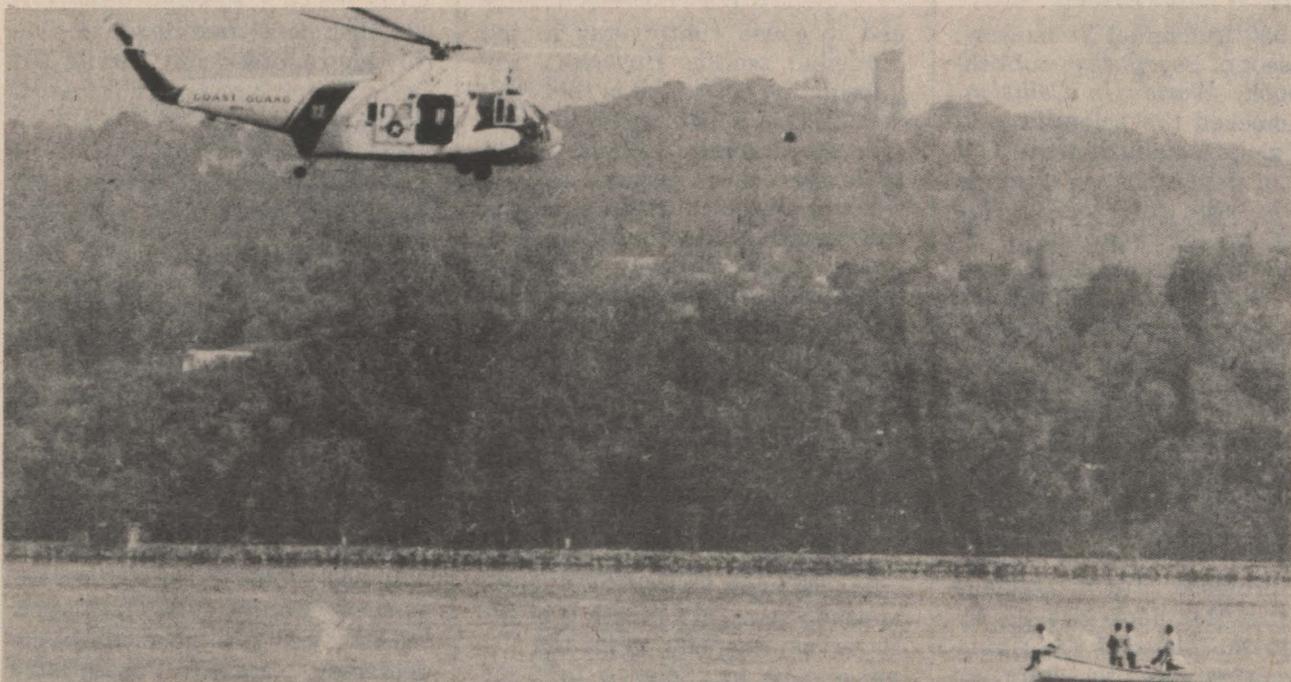

It is the belief of many UFO researchers that an extraterrestrial craft has indeed gone beneath the surface of the river. They feel that too much UFO activity in this area has been ignored too long. □

Divers from the Piermont Fire Department in Rockland County were among those who rushed to the scene on hearing that a small plane or "something" crashed into the Hudson River.

Barry Ryan claims he encountered a UFO while fishing in the Hudson River. He described it as being a bright metallic silver, very quiet and "as big as a Sherman tank."

Coast Guard helicopters and rescue crews arrived at the scene in a matter of minutes. Although they made a complete search of the area, including diving into the murky waters of the Hudson, they failed to find any sign of the object which was reported as "the glow under the water."

Researchers claim that

ANCIENT ASTRONAUTS ROAMED OUR SOLAR SYSTEM

Velikovsky became interested in writing his theories of worlds in collision when he noticed, to his amazement, that ancient literature from Greece and Egypt, described cataclysms which destroyed our planet's surface

BY MICHAEL COHEN

In 1950 Immanuel Velikovsky, a professor of Psychiatry, published a book, Worlds In Collision, which shocked the scientific and the religious establishments and started a revolution in thought which is still felt today. The contents of this book were so incredible that the academic community and leading churchmen tried to have its publication stopped. The book company in question, Macmillan, was forced to give another book company the publishing rights when the professors and churchmen threatened to boycott all of Macmillan and Company's books. In Europe the reaction was just as violent: British professor J.B.S. Haldane stated that this book was "...fitting into the plans of the American warmongers to start an atomic war."

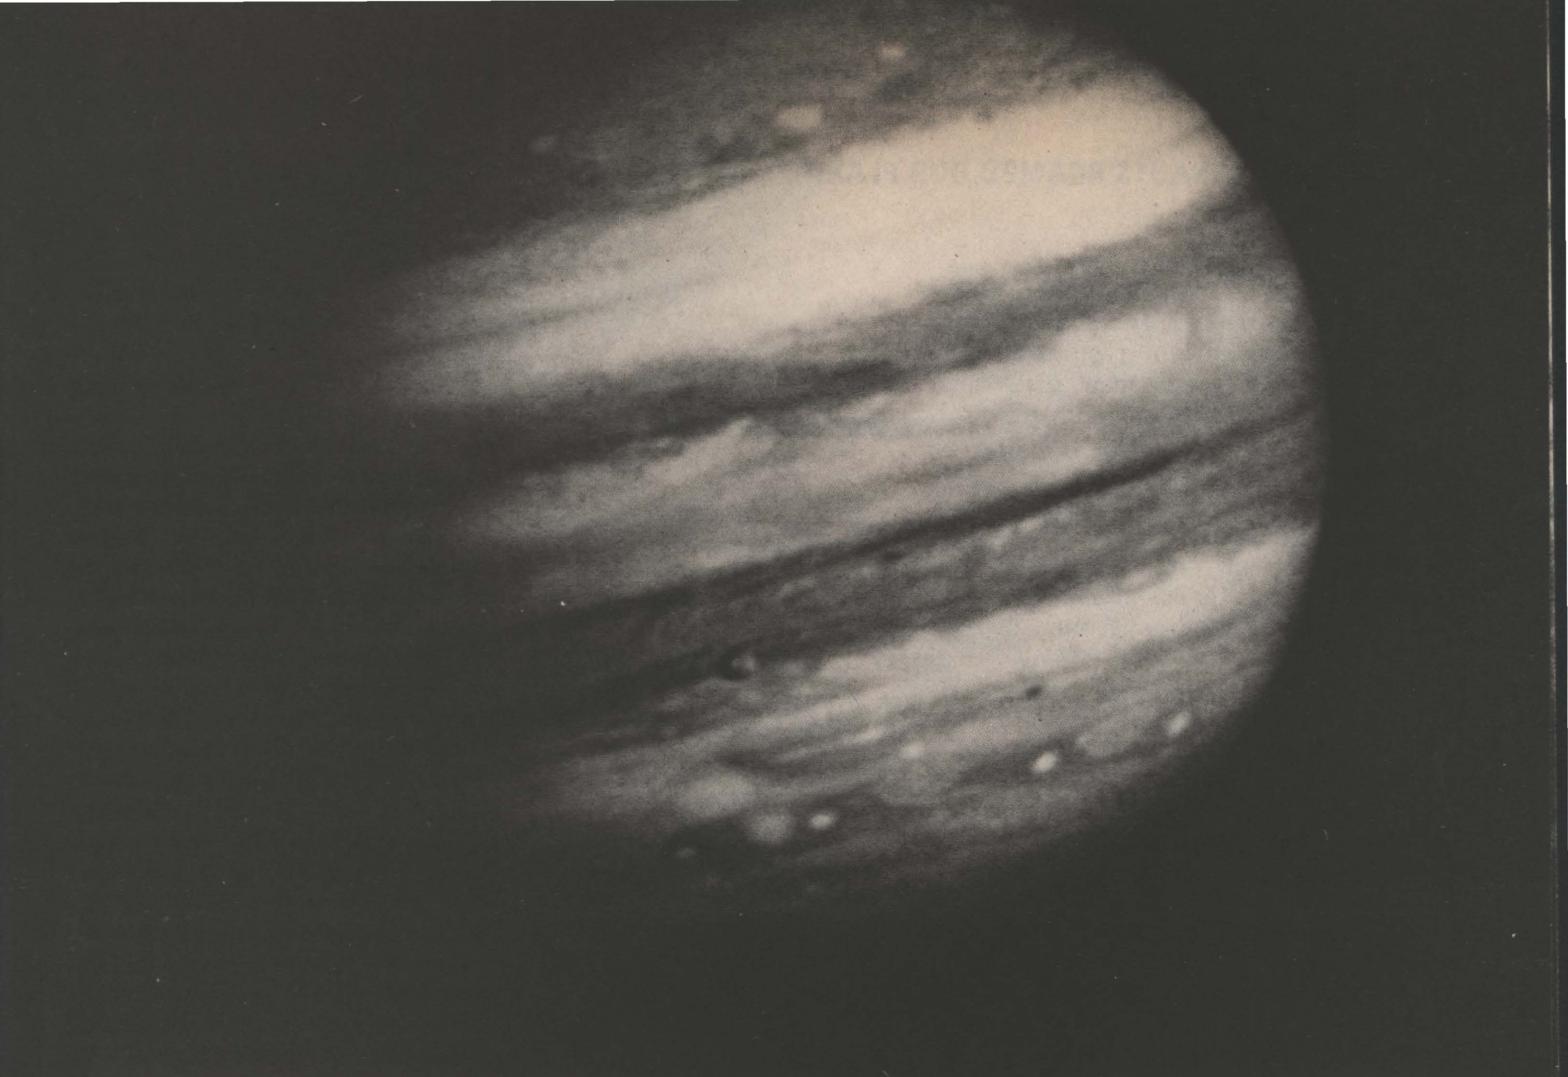

For the past 28 years Dr. Velikovsky's theories have continued to cause controversy in the academic world. However, the information contained in this 1950 book proved in later years to be so accurate that many scientists and professors now support him in spite of the fact that he is still considered a madman and a greedy opportunist by the academic establishment. Dr. Velikovsky has published many books in the past three decades and in his latest, Velikovsky and Establishment Science, he and many of his supporters attacked Doctor Carl Sagan and other critics who are still out to defame him.

After many years of abuse, Velikovsky was finally rewarded when he was invited as a guest speaker at a 1974 meeting of the American Association for the Advancement for Science in California. Although it is an honor to be invited to speak before such a prestigious body, the academic establishment tried again to destroy his reputation by having Dr. Carl Sagan present dozens of arguments against Worlds In Collision. Dr. Carl Sagan is the Cornell astronomer who has accused the 30 million Americans who have seen UFOs of suffering from hallucinations and who charges that Eric von Daniken is a liar. Apparently, Sagan's arguments had little effect because the hundreds of scientists at the meeting gave Dr. Velikovsky a standing ovation.

This great scientist became interested in writing Worlds In Collision back in the '40s when he noticed, to his horror, that the ancient literature from Egypt, Greece and other civilizations described ancient cataclysms which destroyed the surface of the earth. Historians have always considered such stories to be myths that could not have any basis in fact. Being one of the world's top psychiatrists, Dr. Velikovsky is an expert on the workings of the human mind and he realized that these "myths" were written by people who were completely sane and rational, and they represented actual descriptions of events which took place on this planet and in the solar system thousands of years ago.

In making this conclusion, he violated two important rules of the academic establishment: first, he was researching an area of knowledge which was not in his field, and secondly, he dared to state that our ancestors were not a bunch of hyped-up wild freaks. Eric von Daniken has also violated these rules. That is why he also has been viciously attacked by many professors.

In reading this ancient literature, Dr. Velikovsky saw that 3400 years ago a piece of the planet Jupiter broke off and became the planet Venus. This new planet or comet was hot and it came very close to earth several times which resulted in tremendous destruction to the land areas. Eight hundred years later, Venus smashed into Mars and this planet also came close to earth a number of times, which again caused great destruction. The ancient writers and scientists saw these incredible events and carefully recorded them in their literature.

The accuracy of Dr. Velikovsky's interpretation of these ancient records were vindicated by the advent of the space program. When he wrote his book in 1950, it was assumed that Venus had a temperature of about 50 degrees F. In 1962, the first U.S. space probe to that planet showed a temperature of 800 degrees. He said that Venus was hot and the scientists today still cannot explain how a planet would burn at such a hot temperature.

One of the major arguments the scientific establishment has tried to use against Velikovsky's Worlds In Collision is that it is almost statistically impossible for planets to move out of their orbits and accidentally collide. In order to prove their case against him, the scientists have used the famous Titus-Bode Law, which concerns the distances of the planets from the sun. Astronomers discovered 200 years ago that there was something quite unusual about the planets' orbits. J.D. Titus, in 1766, and J.E. Bode, in 1772, found that the planets' distance from the sun followed a definite arithmetic series. To obtain this unusual series, take the progression 0,3,6,12,24,48,96,192--and add 4 to each number. Divide this figure by 10 and the resulting series represents the solar distance of each planet out to Uranus, in astronomical units (A.U.) or the distance of our planet to the sun, which is over one million miles away.

Using this law, the scientists claim that the odds are billions to one that the planets have moved out of their orbits in the recent past. Excluding Neptune and Pluto, the planets are conforming to this law and apparently have remained stationary for many millions of years. A good many scientists, however, have made a serious mistake by using the Titus-Bode Law against Velikovsky. They have opened a can of worms that is very hard to close.

For 200 years, the astronomers have not been able to give a "natural" explanation to account for this incredible progression. Even with the most advanced computers, the professors still cannot explain how the planets arrived at their present orbits.

Dr. Michael Nieto, a scientist, wrote an article entitled "Titus-Bode Law and the Possibility of Recent Large Scale Evolution in the Solar System." In it, he reviews the problems associated with the Titus-Bode Law. Dr. Nieto wrote this article while he was working at the 'Los Alamos Scientific Nuclear Laboratories in New Mexico. His work was performed under the auspices of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. Why was the A.C.E. interested in the Titus-Bode Law? Probably because if there is no natural cause for the progression of the planets' orbits, then the only other plausible explanation is that artificial or intelligent forces were at work. If Eric von Daniken's ancient astronauts had the ability to move between the planets like ping-pong balls, they must have also had control of some incredible form of energy. Nuclear power could be the key to the mysteries found in Worlds In Collision and in the Titus-Bode Law.

For years the scientific literature has been filled with reports that atomic energy could be used to change the orbits of planets when we begin to colonize the solar system. The scientists would like to move certain planets such as Neptune and Pluto closer to the sun in order to warm them up for colonization. There are also plans to activate dead suns in other solar systems with H-Bombs in order to make these systems habitable. There have already been rumors that the earth's orbit has been changed by underground nuclear explosions and this could be the cause of the changes in the weather. At any rate, the Titus-Bode Law definitely indicated that the ancient astronauts played with the planets' orbits thousands of years ago.

Besides playing with the planets' orbits, the aliens also had the ability to destroy certain planets. Dr. Velikovsky's description of the destruction of the Earth, Mars, and Venus could have been a small act in a gigantic space war which encompassed the entire galaxy. The evidence for this ancient war can be found in most scientific literature--depending on how one interprets it.

When the astronomers start to discuss the Titus-Bode Law, they run into another incredible mystery other than the unnatural orbital progression. Between Mars and Jupiter there is the Asteroid Belt, a chain of space dust and rocks existing in the same orbit where a gigantic planet should be today. American and Western scientists such as Dr. Nieto agree that this planet should be there today, however it was probably disrupted or destroyed. Yet, they cannot give a natural explanation of how a planet exploded all by itself. Russian scientists have stated that this planet must have been destroyed by nuclear weapons. In his article, Dr. Nieto does mention the possibility of nuclear destruction of this planet by natural fission or fusion, but quickly dismisses this explanation as impossible because it violates all scientific laws. The type of nuclear weapons employed by the ancient astronauts must have been very powerful indeed in order to destroy a planet which has been estimated to be 90 times the mass and weight of the earth.

Today, all that is left of that planet are asteroids which have only one tenth the weight of the earth. The rest of the planet must have been vaporized into gasses and dust. The scientists get very nervous when they discuss how such a massive planet could be vaporized in such a manner and Dr. Nieto's article reviews the frightening facts.

Other evidence which indicates that this space war took place are found in the unusual orbits of Neptune and Pluto. Dr. Willey Ley states in his 1969 book, Gas Giants, The Largest Planets, that the orbits of these large planets do not conform to the Titus-Bode Law. However, Doctor Ley did not admit that this event was a space war — but it could well have been.

The fact that the moon, Mars and Mercury are covered with hundreds of thousands of craters also indicates that the ancient astronauts used large scale nuclear weapons. The pattern of these craters are not in an accidental or random order which would have been the case if a natural catastrophe destroyed the surface of these bodies. European astronomers such as Dr. Gilbert Fielder have shown, by using statistical analysis of crater distribution and frequency on the moon's surface, that mother nature could not have produced these craters. Such in-

I Came Face To Face With:

BEINGS FROM ANOTHER WORLD

BY RICHARD STEVENS

When Mr. Charles Stanley called our offices, he seemed quite nervous and upset. But who wouldn't be nervous and upset if what he told me was true. I managed to quiet him down somewhat and asked that he come over the next morning.

Stanley, a graphic designer for an ad agency is a man in his mid-thirties. He has a family and is an officer in the U.S. Army Reserve. He is a sober, responsible, and very sensitive person. He has no reason in the world, as far as I can see, to have fabricated the account, which in his own words, follows:

I was spending the last few days of my vacation just relaxing in my upstate summer home. It was the day before I had to be back on the job when it happened. My wife and kids left two days before because Marvin and Sidney, my two sons, had to return to school.

I was sitting out on the front portico which faces the lake on our property when I suddenly noticed a small flash in the sky. As I watched, it grew larger, and brighter. I couldn't believe my eyes. The strange object that I was viewing was something out of a science fiction thriller.

Believe it or not, it was shaped much like a stop sign, and it hovered out there in the dark about 50 yards over the lake. It had lights around its rim, sort of bluish, with a big red light on top. As I watched, completely dumbfounded, the thing seemed to lower, slowly, and when it was about five or six feet over the lake, it simply stopped in mid-air. A round door in the underside suddenly opened, revealing a brilliant light beam which was very clear and opaque.

At this point I became frightened, especially when I saw something come from the ship and attach itself to the beam of light. It was a being, sort of shaped like a man, which floated down the beam, gliding over the water until it reached the beach.

I quickly rushed into the house for my rifle—which I always keep loaded. Fetching it, I walked slowly outside again, looking toward the beach. The creature—for that is exactly what it was—was now standing on the beach, looking directly at me.

To describe the creature would take a science fiction writer of the first caliber. But I'll do my best.

“It” was about five feet tall, with wrinkled skin. The head was large with slant-type eyes. The arms were very long, and the skin looked sort of blue, but this could have been the hue from the lights which ringed the weird aircraft hovering just above him.

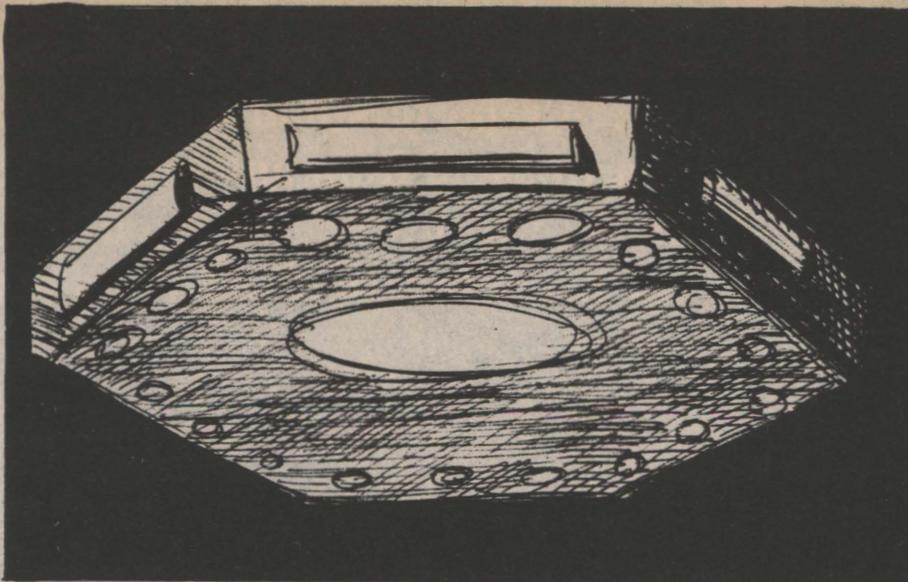

As I said before, it happened so fast that the whole thing, even while it was occurring, seemed like a dream—a nightmare—to be sure.

I then pointed my rifle at the creature standing there, and figured that action would frighten it away.

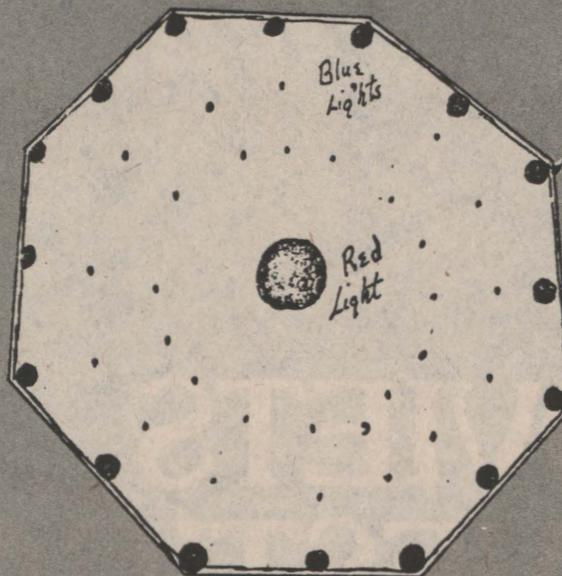

It didn't.

Instead, (I guess he knew what a rifle was and knew its intended purpose) the creature pointed a weapon of his own at me. It was a round object, somewhat bigger than a .45, if you can picture that. Suddenly a bluish beam came from the object and headed in the direction of my rifle, and when it reached my weapon, the rifle suddenly became so hot that I dropped it. It was as though I suddenly had a white-hot poker in my hand. I didn't look down to see where it fell. I just turned, quickly hopped over the rails on the porch and ran like hell. I must have run about a mile up the darkened road when I stopped to catch my breath.

It was then the road around me lit up. I looked back, and there it was, the original craft that I'd seen before, rising straight up in the air, very slowly. When it reached—I'd say 2,000 feet—it shot off towards the southwest like a lightning bolt. The area slowly returned to its natural darkened state.

There were no surrounding homes that I could have gone to, because the occupants were all

SOVIETS INVESTIGATE THEORIES ON TIME AND SPACE

BY ELI J. KANE

What is the nature of the universe? What is time? How did life begin on earth? Since UFOs were first seen in large numbers in the 1940's, the need to answer these questions have become very important to people living on this planet. Soviet scientists have tried to answer these critical questions, publishing a number of articles in their scientific journals. Sputnik, the Soviet science magazine, has published many of these articles.

The Pendulum of the Universe by Albert Valentinov was published in June 1978 and the ideas of Dr. Kozyrev are so incredible that they could easily be interpreted as science fiction. If his theories that time is the basis of the universe are correct, then the entire basis of western scientific thought will have to be revised.

"Quasars Enigma of the Universe" by Oleg Borisov appeared in the July 1977 issue of Sputnik. It probes the existence of energies which exist at the end of our known universe.

"Space Sowing" was published in September 1975. It reviews some of the arguments concerning the possibility that life on earth was brought here by advanced civilizations from other parts of the galaxy. Although this article tries to attack this theory, it is a fact well known Soviet scientists believe: that life on this planet was deliberately brought here from other Planets. Dr. Felix Zigel, a Soviet aerospace expert, has stated many times to western reporters that he believes life on earth came from the planet Phaeton, which was destroyed in a nuclear war thousands of years ago. Phaeton, which was named by Soviet scientists, once existed between Mars and Jupiter, today there exists only the asteroid belt. It seems that there is conflict among the Soviet scientists concerning this important issue just as there is conflict among American scientists when this issue is discussed.

"Tunnel Leading to the Universe" by Boris Konovalov appeared in December 1976 and it shows that scientists do not understand how the sun generates its power. Since the scientists do not understand how the sun works, there is a possibility that it could be artificial and that millions of years ago, beings from an advanced civilization could have ignited it. It seems that the Soviets are determined to find out the truth in this manner.

Here is the actual text of these controversial articles:

Professor Kozyrev has been tackling the problem of time for more than 20 years. All those years he has been staunchly enduring open negation and camouflaged skepticism. Of course, this upsets him, but he firmly believes that he will prove his case, as he did with the moon...

The moon had always been believed to be a dead body whose evolution was complete. Suddenly, Kozyrev declared that volcanic activity was possible on the moon. He had to put up with a great deal of ridicule at the time. However, the professor remained glued to the telescope, watching the sky night after night, until he finally spotted a volcanic eruption in the lunar crater Alphonsus in 1958.

Dr. Kozyrev demonstrated an amazing experiment to me. He suspended a top which was turning clockwise to one end of a scale. At the other end two little weights offset it. When the needle settled at zero, the scientist switched on an electric vibrator which was attached to the base of the scales. Everything was calculated in such a way so as to ensure that the vibration was absorbed by the rotation of the top.

The needle did not flicker. I gave the professor a disappointed look. With a faint smile, he removed the top, wound in the opposite direction—counter-clockwise and again suspended it. The needle moved to the right, showing that the top, which weighed 90 grams, was now four milligrams lighter—a tiny but tangible value.

"None of the physical laws we know accounts for this phenomenon," Dr. Kozyrev observed.

"What is your explanation?"

"In the second case the top rotates counter-clockwise, in other words, in the direction opposite to the course of time on earth. So, earthly time resists the course which is not inherent in it and exercises an effect on the top. Extra forces come into being. They can be measured."

Since they can be measured they exist. It follows that time is not just an interval between one event and another which is measured in hours, but a physical factor whose properties enable it to take an active part in all natural processes. This is very difficult to recognize. Not only because this phenomenon has no counterparts in everyday life. The main "obstacle" to perception is the inertness of human thinking. This is why all speculative attempts at fathoming the essence of time from ancient time to our day have been fruitless.

Dr. Kozyrev insists that time is an indispensable integral part of all processes which take place in the universe, consequently, on our planet as well. All natural processes are accompanied either by a release or by absorption of time.

Next to the scales, Dr. Kozyrev now placed an ordinary thermos flask with hot water. There was a hole in the cork, into which the professor inserted a thin pipe.

"Now watch," he said, proceeding to add cold water to the thermos flask through the pipe. It would seem that the thermos flask could not exercise any effect on the scales at a distance. However, the balance needle shifted by two notches. Hence, such an influence did exist.

"Let's have some tea," the professor distracted my thoughts concerning the paradoxical phenomenon.

Dr. Kozyrev poured me a glass of strong tea. He did the same for himself and dropped two lumps of sugar into his glass... Then the professor removed the flask and put his glass in its place. The needle jerked.

"Your tea is also hot, only you have not yet added sugar. Put the glass next to the scales."

"I wouldn't tell you this if I hadn't seen it—and I believe what I saw"

Both glasses were exactly alike. But mine didn't affect the needle.

"No processes are taking place in your glass except the natural release of heat into the environment," explained Dr. Kozyrev. "Nor did anything take place in the flask with hot water. But the moment I added some cold water to the flask or dropped sugar into the glass, the system's equilibrium was upset. And until the system recovers its balance, for instance, until an equal temperature is established in the whole volume of water in the flask, or until the sugar is completely dissolved in the glass, the system releases, or rather thickens, time, which exercises an 'added' effect. on the top. This is confirmed by other facts."

These facts are as follows. If time acts on a system with a cause-and-effect relationship, other physical properties of matter, not weight alone, should change. This was found to be so. Extremely fine experiments confirmed that in the vicinity of a thermos flask in which cold and hot water are becoming mixed, or a retort in which dissolution is proceeding, the frequency of oscillation of quartz plates changes and the electric conductivity and volume of some substances diminish.

The scientist draws the conclusion that the release of time accompanies only "irreversible" processes, in other words, those in which the system has not yet regained its balance. But how can this be demonstrated?

It is known that we see stars not where they are located at present, but where they were located decades or even hundreds of years ago, precisely as long as it takes light to reach our planet from the nearest stars. But with time itself things stand differently. Since it does not spread all over the universe like light, but appears in it at once, its impact on processes and material bodies is instantaneous.

To put it simpler, using the properties of time, one can obtain instant information from any spot in the universe or transmit it to any spot. Only then is there no conflict with the special relativity principle. If one were to calculate the location of a star at a given moment and direct a telescope at that part of the sky, which is blank as far as the eye is concerned, the hypothesis of change in the top's weight would be proved. That was how the actual position of Procyon was determined.

Dr. Kozyrev's experiments were checked in Moscow. The results coincided. However, some scientists reasonably object that while gone and I was about the last to close up for the summer. Somehow I felt—rather sensed—that whatever had happened was all over. I simply followed the path made by the moon and found my way back to the cottage.

I kept my mouth shut all this time because I have a responsible position in the business world and didn't want to be scoffed at. But when I read the somewhat similar account in the Watford Guide, Watford City, N.D., dated November 10, 1978, I just had to let people know that Barb and Kent, two witnesses to the same phenomenon—aren't alone in what they saw in the sky just several months after my own experience.

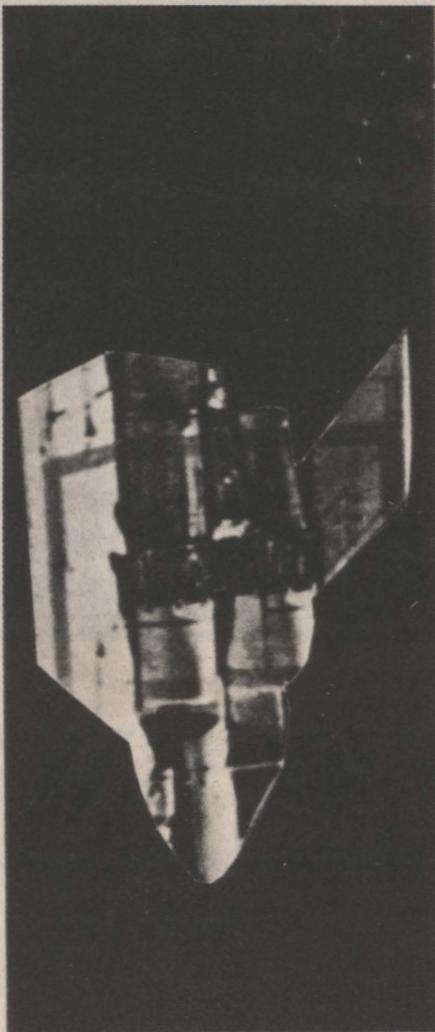

The story in the newspaper related that Mrs. Orville (Barb) Johnsrud told editor Del Shipman that she and her young son, Kent, observed "this strange thing" shaped like a stop sign about 7:00 PM.

Editor Shipman wrote that "Mrs. Johnsrud is a very sincere person, who said, 'I wouldn't tell you this if I hadn't seen it and I believe what I saw'".

Originally, she told the editor she had seen a strange object in the sky with all kinds of lights, big as a house. It made a noise like a storm, nearly scared her to death and then moved out as swiftly as it came.

The newspaper account stated that editor Shipman telephoned Minot Air Base and asked the security people there if anything strange appeared on their radar scope on the night in question or if they had any aircraft, or if any other base had any aircraft, which would have been flying over the Watford City area. Their reply was in the negative.

It seemed that what Barb and Kent saw was also witnessed by four other Watford City people traveling on highway 85 and 200 that night, but they just passed the whole thing off as some lights in the sky.

Following is Mrs. Johnsrud's account: "I was conversing with a friend of mine on the telephone Thursday evening and our son Kent, who was outside, doing chores around 7 PM or so, came into the house and told me to come outside quickly. He wanted me to see something. I told him I was on the telephone, and he said, 'hurry, it's in the sky.' So I told my friend to hang on and went out and looked.

"I saw a quite large light which appeared to be separated. It looked like an extra large star with a small divider which made it look like two lights beaming as you'd look at a light through a window. It appeared to be stationary and was about the same height as the evening star.

"So I ran back in the house and told my friend I'd call her back and picked up my glasses and ran back out. It was still there. Kent said he was observing it for about two minutes before he called me. Then all of a sudden that thing came down so quick it sounded like a storm coming and I was so scared I ran to the edge of the house at about 20 feet and looked and there it was going over us quite slowly. I'd say about 25 mph and was only about 50-60 ft. high. It was about 40 ft. in diameter and looked like a huge stop sign with many, many blue lights and an extra large red light in the middle. Neither Kent nor I could see a tail or a nose or propellers or anything other than lights, except for a metal bar which seemed to be full of holes or perforated.

"It took off just as fast as it came down in a northeasterly direction. After it was all over, Kent said, 'Mom, for a little while, I thought a little green man would come out of there.'

"I gave Kent a piece of paper and said let's draw what we saw. It was almost identical with the same lighting. There were no flashing lights and the two big clear lights were like headlights."

Our stories are quite similar, except for the fact that I saw this creature. Perhaps from what Kent had said to his mother, about thinking a little green man would come out of the object, maybe he did see a creature that has escaped the vision of his mother.

STRANGE FLYING OBJECTS

Kentucky has what it calls its "Bluegrass Triangle." Located between Lexington and Irvine, the Triangle is an area where a baffling series of UFO encounters have taken place—encounters that have Kentuckians believing that they are being besieged by flying saucers.

The latest sighting, by a Kentucky State Trooper, has strengthened that belief.

Trooper James Whitaker was on patrol near Irvine on the night of February 19, 1978, when his eyes were attracted to a bright light in the sky.

"I'm one hundred per-cent certain that what I saw was a UFO," Whitaker said. "It was rectangular and glowing red, white, blue and green. It was about the size of a medium-sized car, and it emitted no noise."

Whitaker, a veteran with more than 1600 flying hours in a Navy helicopter, said that the craft he saw was definitely not a chopper. Neither was it any kind of conventional airplane. He said when he first spotted it, the craft had been hovering over a field.

Whitaker stated that he started toward the weird object, but when he did so, it moved away, "as if it were trying to get away from me."

For more than two hours, the officer followed the object, being sure to keep it in sight. "It was pulsating," Whitaker said, "and as it pulsated it changed color." When an aircraft would approach it, according to Whitaker, the intensity of its lights would die down and, once the aircraft was clear, it would light up again. However, in a few minutes, the weird craft was gone from sight, taking off as though flying straight up and out of his field of vision.

Whitaker said that Estill County, which encompasses Lexington and Irvine, seems to be the target of a UFO blitz. "The number of encounters go on without end."

Whitaker was referring to the following sightings in the Bluegrass Triangle area:

In nearby Richmond, Kentucky, firemen called out to fight a grass fire were shocked to find that it

“It was on a Sunday night and we were on our way to evening services. As we turned a curve in the road, this thing which was as big as a building and had lights all over the bottom, came right over us” was the glow of a UFO, which they chased for over an hour, to no avail.

PLAYED HAVOC IN KENTUCKY

Said fireman Bob Murphy, “At different times we’d spot it and then it would disappear. Then it would reappear again, as though it were playing a game of cat and mouse with us. We’d chase it, and at times, it would move a two hour distance in a couple of seconds.”

Murphy added that the UFO, approximately 50 feet long, was shaped like a classic flying saucer—a dinner plate with a bulge on the bottom.

On another occasion, 74-year old Elmer Hardy, pastor of the Bybee United Methodist Church near Irvine, said he and his wife encountered a gigantic, dazzling UFO on their way to church.

“It was on a Sunday night and we were on our way to evening services. As we turned a curve in the road, right up over us, this thing was coming.”

He said it was about 10 stories high and 20 stories wide, with thousands of lights on it. I never saw anything like it in my entire life.”

According to Irvine Police Chief Marcus Cole, “many eye-witnesses have reported seeing UFOs in the area. The sightings have been, and are being, reported regularly.

Added Guy Hatfield, publisher of Irvine’s Citizen Voice, “These were all solid citizens with no reason to say anything unless they saw one.

We get it all the time at the paper. It’s like a real life version of Close Encounters.”

The UFOs have taken various forms—from flying balls of multi-colored lights streaking low across the skies at night, to red and white luminescent rods playing over the rooftops of houses and office buildings. Even “flying boomerangs” and bouncing headlights on a stick as well as spewing red, green orange, blue and purple “spots” which reportedly have been following motorists and night strollers, have been reported.

Victims maintain that they have been harassed by these lights “which seem to come from nowhere, remain for a while and then

LANDING SITES FOR EXTRATERRESTRIALS

We've provided them places to alight.

Three sites of artificial construction now exist in the United States, designed specifically to receive alien flight crafts. These UFO landing zones, laid out in remote sectors of the West, East and Southwest, signify a practical turn in dealing with an exotic dilemma, viz, how mankind can best welcome extraterrestrial visitors.

All three locales have been fashioned in the last half-decade and constitute a serious move by those involved to actively seek out contact with other intelligence. Right now, on the soil of this planet, human beings are encouraging non-Earthian voyagers to set down.

Nineteen Seventy-Eight saw the emergence of the newest landing area. During the summer, Wayne Aho, president of the New Age Foundation, revealed that his UFO sect was establishing a "neutral zone" in the lower regions of Mount Rainier, Washington to entice aliens from space to land.

New Age decided to employ a 14-acre tract of their land as a saucer-port because of the drastic rise in UFO reports over recent years. Mr. Aho attributes this high-volume sighting cavalcade directly to the development of nuclear weapons.

"It's no accident that we began seeing many UFOs shortly after the United States dropped atomic bombs on Japan," he said in a tabloid story. "The fact that people on this planet were using atomic bombs shocked the whole universe."

The Foundation leader has disclosed that he is requesting the nation's armed forces to recognize and respect the neutrality of the New Age Zone. If our defense network agrees and maintains a hands-off truce on the landing base, Aho feels that ET entities, interlocked with Earth's communications channels, will sense it is safe to come down there.

Washington State historically has been live-wired in terms of UFO activity. It qualifies as a choice spot to build a saucer landing strip.

A second UFO zone sprung, strangely enough, from the United States Bicentennial. Prompted by several sightings over their small community, the 2,200 citizens of Lake City, Pennsylvania amassed $6,000 in pledges to erect a flying disc terminal in time for our country's birthday in 1976. "We might as well give them a place to land," stated project chief James Meeder, president of the local Chamber of Commerce. And so his workers swung into action. They fabricated a flat, seeded pad of earth, 100 feet in diameter mounted five feet above the surrounding terrain on an out-of-the-way one acre plot in the town's park just off Lake Erie. Three concentric rings of colored lights—red, white, blue—encircled the landing-way. A communication center was added for chance radio messages between aliens and humans. Total cost of the UFO haven came out to $2,600.

The site has not yet lured any extraterrestrial flying mechanisms to set down. It did elicit unexpected public response as crowds converged to view the strange piece of landscaping.

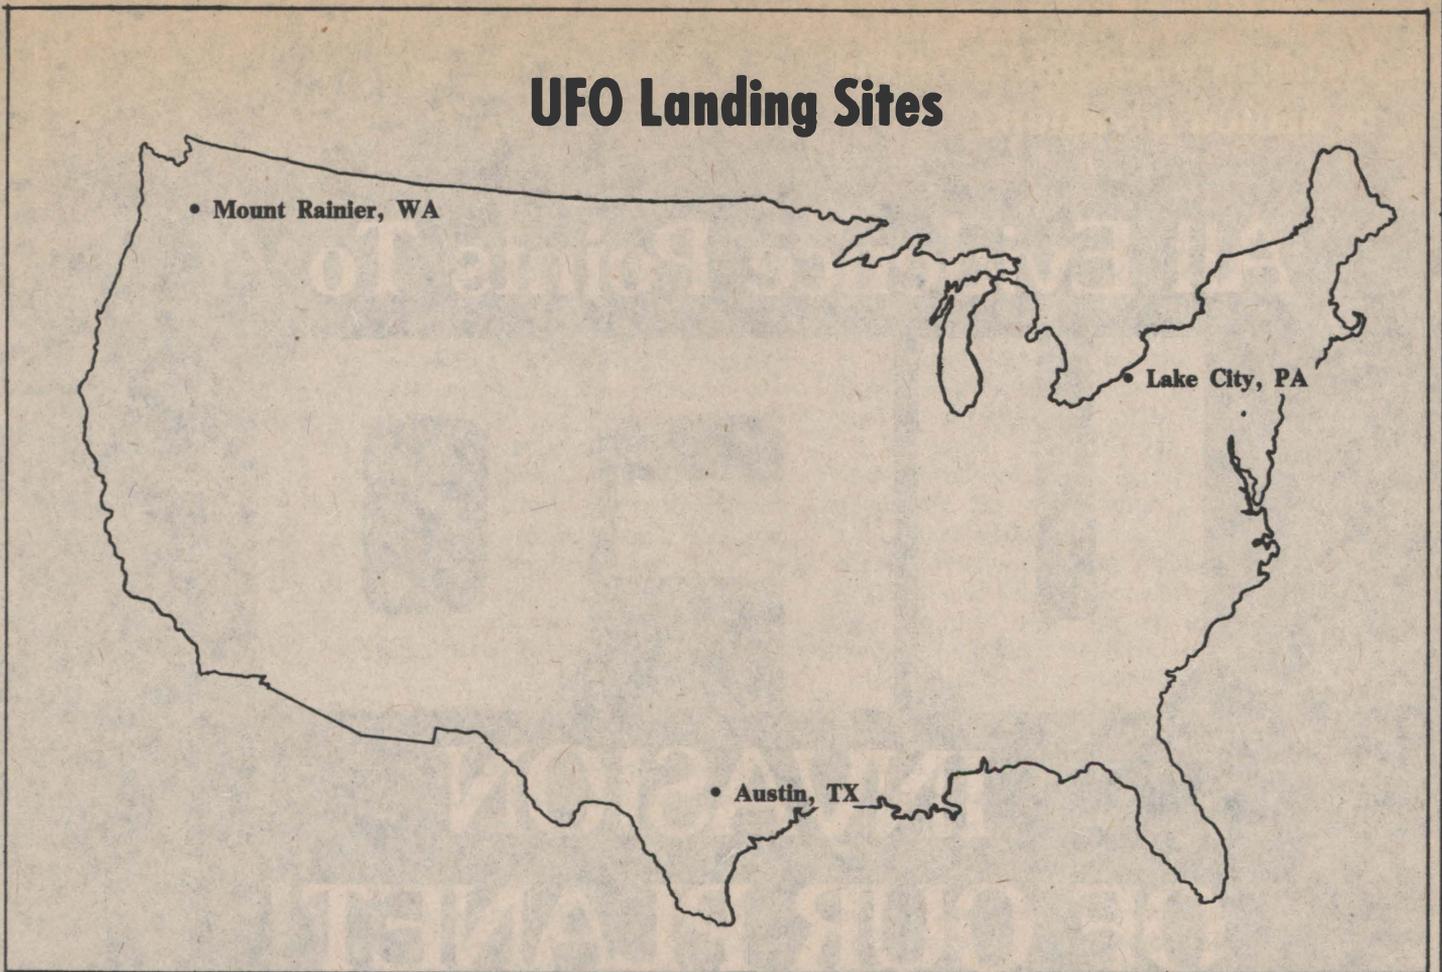

"I am sure we benefited from an economic standpoint," Meeder commented, "but I think we benefited more from the way the UFO project brought people together."

Most elaborate and instrument arrayed of the landing zones in the U.S. can be found in the quarantined hilly environs northwest of Austin, Texas. This UFO base is owned and operated by Project Starlight (PSI) a research offshoot of the Association for the Understanding of Man. Thirty-nine year old Ray Sanford directs.

"We are trying to gain evidence so that the scientific community will take this thing seriously," he has said of the saucerzone's

UFO Landing Sites

At the time of this writing, there are three locations in the United States where space beings are being encouraged to land their crafts. They are in Texas, Washington and Pennsylvania.

From the air, this is what an alien craft can expect to see at the landing site set up by Project Starlight in Texas.

Are UFOs surveying our planet for a peaceful encounter, or for an armed invasion?

All Evidence Points To A

OF OUR PLANET!

BY DR. FRANKLIN R. RUEHL

Have UFOs come to Earth to assist man in attaining a golden era of intellectual development and technological achievement? Or, are they surveying our planet in preparation for armed invasion and subsequent colonization?

Most military analysts and experts would choose the latter, bellicose premise, asserting dogmatically that UFOs (if they would even dare acknowledge their existence) are paving the way for an interstellar confrontation with the inferior weaponry of terrestrial defenses. The myopic military mind simply cannot conceive of an alien from space as constituting anything but a threat to the survival of mankind, immediately reacting to the idea of an extraterrestrial presence with the typically defensive posture of "shoot it down first, ask questions later."

Oppositely to this theory, or mental stance is the popular stereotypical ufologist's position that alien beings should be of superior intelligence (if for no other reason than that they have achieved the technological feat of interplanetary space travel) and hence, possessed of a magnanimous penchant toward inferior homo sapiens, intending to endow man with a treasury of scientific and medical gems of wisdom.

As a theoretical nuclear physicist who has thoroughly examined the evidence, I am convinced that the UFO phenomenon is a genuine one. No doubt abides, at least in my mind, that the universe is literally teeming with life. A hundred trillion billion stars exist alone in that sector of the universe accessible to terrestrial telescopes, with an additional infinity extant in the limitless cosmic backdrop beyond the known recesses of space. With each star possessing the potential to give vitalization to a planetary family of its own, billions of planets easily exist, and, despite varying atmospheric and chemical compositions, virtually every one harbors some form of life, whether animal, vegetable, or mineral in nature.

Obviously, humanoids will not abound on all planets, but

HOW AGNES C. WON OVER $500,000 WITH THE WORDS FOR WINNING CONTESTS!

Agnes C. was told about enchantments and spells, but insisted that she possessed no psychic powers and never had any psychic experiences. Here's what happened: she kept dreaming of a man in a flowing robe with dollar signs all over it, holding up 7 fingers, saying: "A dollar a day keeps poverty away!" She purchased a one-dollar lottery ticket.

"I simply could not believe it when my number was drawn for the grand prize (7 days later). I still can't believe it," she says. "I won over a half-million dollars." Agnes and her family are now enjoying their new lakefront home with its private boathouse and dock. They have two expensive autos and all the other luxuries money can buy.

The point is: YOU CAN USE THE SAME SECRET! You'll find the very words she used on page 37 of my book, and it won't cost you a single cent to find out what they are, and how they'll work for you.

MAGIC WORDS FOR MIRACLE HEALING!

Before I tell you how YOU may achieve a MIRACLE HEALING, let me tell you how a man was healed of arthritis in FIFTEEN MINUTES! A friend of mine, Louie A., tried the power Ritual for Magnetic Healing on page 146 on his next-door neighbor, Ken, who was confined to a wheelchair with arthritis. In a matter of minutes, the crippled man was WALKING! "I haven't been able to walk for months," he said, "and you got me out of my wheelchair."

Since that day, Louie has been able to heal "incurable" diseases! AND YOU CAN DO THE VERY SAME THING! This is just an average case. With this power, you can command healings like this on almost a daily basis. I'm telling you this power is FANTASTIC!

Look what you can do, with exact words I give you on page

139-140—

- Cure ulcers, nervous headache, and insomnia! Calm the nerves!
- Cure diseases of the liver and spleen—stop bleeding!
- Strengthen the eyes, control epilepsy and disorders of the stomach!

Here is a force so powerful that it almost defies description! It can heal a withered limb or return sight to the blind . . . raise the crippled from their beds! It has brought miracle cures to the suffering and the lame!

● KIDNEYS MIRACULOUSLY HEALED! Evelina's only hope was to find a suitable kidney donor. She was so weak, it took two people to almost carry her to the hospital for her frequent treatments. There seemed to be little hope for her. With this method, she says—

"My whole body began to tingle—I felt like little electric shocks were playing games at the small of my back . . . suddenly . . . I knew I was healed! I leapt from my bed and ran into the living room screaming, 'I'M HEALED, I'M HEALED!' Our house was filled with tears of joy that night."

Today she is so healthy, she can hike and even climb mountains! It happens all the time with PSYCHIC TELEMETRY:

● HOW HARVEY C.'S ASTHMA WAS CURED! Harvey C. suffered asthma all his life. He could never run more than a few steps, without gasping for breath. Doctors were unable to cure it. I was so positive Harvey's asthma could be cured, I merely had him say the words on page 139-140. He never had another asthma attack! Now he can run and even play tennis!

● HAROLD SAW HIS LUNG SPOT VANISH! Harold F. was shocked, when told he had a spot on his lung, and needed an immediate operation. His wife quickly used the amazing healing words on page 145. The day before the operation, when x-rays were taken, the doctor was baffled. "I don't know how to explain this," he said. "Your lungs are perfectly clear."

With only $1, he said the magic words on page 22, turned silently, and headed for the crap table. He threw the dice, and it came up 7. He tried it again and again. A crowd gathered. The dice were changed, but he kept throwing 7's. He walked away with $800!

Anyone can use these magic words. When you use them, what you command does happen! You can count positively on real results. It always works! It is not evil nor is it Black Magic. Like electricity, it is simply a power given by nature to make life easier!

evolutionary forces will have engendered a wide range of life forms apropos to each. Eventually, a certain percentage of these forms will attain the intellectual and technological capability for the investigation of space. Earthlings, who have barely commenced their own conquest of space, should not be in the least skeptical of an alien culture's capacity to propel exploratory craft toward Earth.

Project Bluebook, the Pentagon's official attempt to gloss over all UFO sightings, admitted to 701 undecipherable cases out of 12,618 studied before it was officially terminated in 1968. The project continues, in essence if not in name, as the military still carefully scrutinizes each and every UFO report filed. Of the 701 unknowns, a certain few, at least, could be dismissed as routine phenomena if all of the pertinent data were available, but, contrariwise, some of the supposedly "solved" cases written off by government analysts with transparent explanations must legitimately be relabelled as "unsolved."

While such an imposing repository of unexplained UFO cases lends credence to the notion that alien space vehicles are scanning our troposphere, a challenge has often been levelled at the degree of diversity inherent in UFO sightings, with UFO sizes ranging from a few feet in diameter to several thousand, UFO shapes varying from spherical to prolate spheroidal (sausage-shaped) to oblate spheroidal (saucer-shaped), and UFO pilots including green midgets, six foot tall humanoids, and gargantuan titans.

Is Earth being systematically subjected to reconnaissance and surveillance by beings from a myriad of different planets situated in galaxies astronomical quadrants apart? While this thesis is not wholly untenable, a more logically acceptable explication, the single-planet hypothesis, draws an analogy with our own planet. Homo sapiens, who alone constitute only one out of more than a million different species of fauna (not to mention another million or so more of flora) on Earth, range in diversity from the Equatorial Pygmies to the blond Nordics to the towering Watusis, with skin tones in white, black, brown, yellow, and red. Inductively, should we not expect an analogous multiplicity among the races of other planets?

Assuming that life's existence on Earth was verified by an alien planetary probe, might not representatives from more than one political or ethnic unit be dispatched to engage in an on-going investigation of the "blue" planet? Again, drawing an analogy with Earth, might not we expect an influx of exploratory vehicles, both manned and unmanned, to be directed toward Mars if the U.S. Viking probe should discover any reasonably advanced life forms on the Martian surface?

And, would these craft not vary appreciably in structure and design, as well as function, so as to appear to have originated from different worlds rather than just different nations? Already, severe contrasts have manifested themselves among the American Mariner, Pioneer, and Viking space probes, and these differ yet from the Russian Luna and Venera explorers. The single-planet hypothesis appears adequate to account for a parallel diversity among the spacecraft dispatched from an alien planet toward Earth, being reported here as a multiplicity of incongruous UFO sightings.

But, if aliens are indeed monitoring our planet, why don't they land and identify themselves? Actually, numerous UFO landings have taken place, and attempts at communication with humans have been made, at least according to the many UFO contact narratives reported. But, irrespective of these stories, it must be realized that alien beings might harbor an innate fear of human beings, or conversely, regard us as being loathesome creatures, so inferior as not to merit anything but distant study. Whatever their reasons are, we simply cannot humanize extraterrestrial psyche and expect that they exhibit human behavioral patterns of curiosity and social unity.

Ufologists, who all too frequently impute noble motives to alien astronauts, must be objective in analyzing an alien interest in our planet. Conceivably, the UFOs may pose a lethal threat to the denizens of this planet, and not by the militarist's characteristic armed invasion, but by a far subtler method of annihilation.

Since the mid-1960s, when terrestrial missile technology grew sophisticated enough to reliably target rockets to destinations beyond the shackles of Mother Earth, scientists have had the potential to transform neighboring planets, such as Mars and Venus, into Earthlike satellites through a process termed "terraformation."

With respect to the metamorphosis of Venus, terrestrial guided rockets could seed the luxuriant Venusian cloud cover with megatons of a resistant blue-green strain of algae known as nostoc, which would conduct photosynthesis on a widespread basis, significantly reducing the atmospheric carbon dioxide while simultaneously increasing the oxygen volume. Ultimately, Venus' temperature and pressure would suffer reductions with complementary increases in its oxygen and water content, gradually leading to a composition not unlike Earth's.

In the transformation of Mars, a far more direct approach is at our disposal. As Mars is presently experiencing the effects of an ice

This photo of the Martian surface was taken by Viking Orbiter 1. It shows extremely puzzling features. Some UFO researchers say that NASA did not give us enough information on what they found on the Martian surface. One thing is certain—some water was detected—and water means some sort of life.

“I was doing sixty or sixty-five miles per hour when, from the corner of my eye I saw what appeared to be a large cloud. But when I turned my head for a better view—this thing—bigger than a city block was pacing my truck”

I sat there, tired, toying with the news clipping. A singular piece of paper which I nervously began rubbing between my fingers had brought me over 1,800 from home: From New York City to Florida. While I scanned the headline, John Willinsky was being helped out of a wheelchair by his wife. The banner head on the clipping read: “Truck Attacked By Mysterious Flying Object!”

I stood there for about five minutes, and finally, sauntered over to the couple and introduced myself. “What about this,” I asked, pointing to the news account.

“Willinsky was a big fellow, over six feet, and weighing in at about 210, without shoes. He looked like he could handle himself in any kind of a scrap. Evidently, a brush with a UFO was a little out of his league.

“To begin with, I wasn’t attacked by a UFO,” he answered, somewhat sharply. The sudden retort made me feel that the trip down to Florida was a waste of time. But, undaunted, I pressed on.

“Just what did happen then?” I asked him.

“Well, there was a UFO, but it didn’t attack me.”

At this point, Mrs. Willinsky brought over some coffee for her husband. She extended another cup, but I politely refused.

“There was a UFO,” he said, “but it didn’t attack me.” He paused for a long moment to take a deep breath before going on with his experience.

“It was a clear night, and I was only about two hours away from completing my run. Only minutes before, I stopped at a roadside diner for several bags of potato chips to keep me until I could get some solid food into my stomach.

“I was doing sixty—sixty five miles an hour when, from out of the corner of my eye, I saw what I thought at first to be a large cloud. But when I turned my head for a better look—my gosh—this thing—as big as a city block—was pacing my truck no more than maybe five-hundred yards.

“Well, you could imagine what was going through my mind. I think I turned blue from fright. I just stared at the darn thing trying to figure out what the hell it was.”

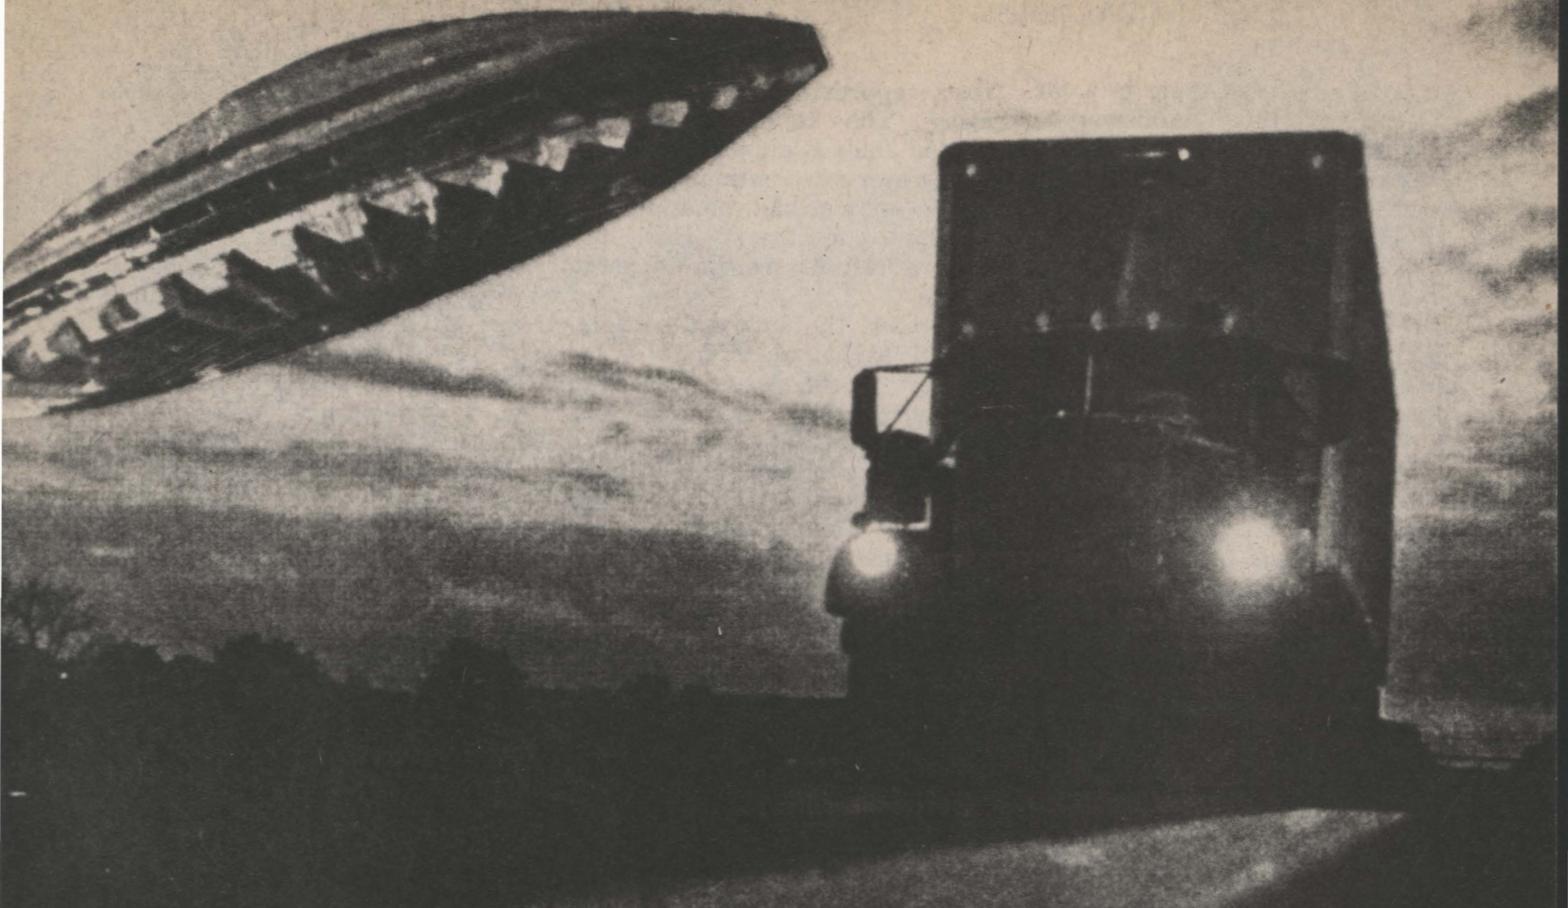

I could see from the way Mr. Willinsky had been describing his weird encounter that he had indeed gone through some sort of ordeal with an unknown force and was not concocting up a yarn for the sake of cheap publicity. Yet, I told myself I was wrong before. “What happened next?” I asked.

“Well, this thing suddenly spins over on its side—I’d say about a 45 degree angle, and I could see these rows of lights on its underbelly, just around the edges. And then, without any warning, a light—as bright as day, maybe brighter—began radiating from its center, all the while the lights from underneath the thing spinning like a top.”

Our conversation was interrupted by the ringing of the telephone. Mrs. Willinsky excused herself from her husband’s side and walked over to the table in a far corner of the room to answer it. From what I could gather, the call was from a local UFO group requesting an interview.

Willinsky turned toward his wife, then looked back at me. "I've been receiving telephone calls from just about everybody, including the military," he said, shaking his head. "What do you make of it?" he asked.

"I'm a believer," I answered. "But UFO sightings, as you probably are already aware of, are hard to pin down. Maybe in time, we'll have some of the answers, enough of the answers anyway to start putting the giant jig-saw puzzle together." I asked him to continue his story.

He coughed, and lit a cigarette, offering me one which I refused. "Well, that was it," he shrugged. "I mean, when those lights went on, it blinded me, and I guess it caused me to lose control of my truck. I slammed into an embankment and flipped over—and here I am in this wheelchair just out of the hospital where I found myself flat on my back when I opened my eyes several hours later."

We continued our conversation for about an hour, touching on what the newspapers reported about sightings in various parts of the world. When I could get no more information, I thanked him and left.

In the street, I stepped into a pay-phone to call my office back in New York to see if there were any new developments that I could check out while in Florida. The news I received was too good to be true.

There were several encounters in Hardee County. One concerned a husband and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jules (and Matilda) Klanger.

The two were frightened half out of their wits while driving along Route 64 in Ona.

As they turned a sharp curve, they were shocked to see a tremendous object "as large as an office building" hovering over the road, approximately 100 yards away. The report I received quoted Jules Klanger as saying:

"I never saw anything like it in my life—it was like something out of 'Close Encounters'—really unbelievable, but nevertheless, there it was."

Further, the information I received said that Klanger's car suddenly went dead—as though drained of all electrical power. The couple sat in the auto paralyzed with fear as they watched the strange craft rise and suddenly vanish in a burst of violent speed. Examination of the area by local police discovered that the vicinity where the UFO was said to have hovered, was littered with small round objects the size of tiny peas. There was a bad odor about the area as well.

It seems that the state of Florida at this time was having an enormous UFO flap. In fact, a report in the Herald Advocate out of Wauchula, (January 4, 1979) was just further indication that UFOs are indeed very real, and very active.

The news story, written by Roger McQuown, revealed that a 40-year old man had called the Hardee County Sheriff's office to report an unidentified flying object hovering over the pasture behind his home.

The report, investigated by police officer Gordon Stephens, specified that details of the sightings made by farmer Joe Guerrero, were forwarded to UFO Headquarters in Seattle, Washington, for further investigation.

The story stated that Mr. Guerrero described the object as being "tremendous in size" and was seen at approximately 1:30 AM about 200 yards north of Route 64 in Ona.

While sitting in his pickup truck, Guerrero heard something that sounded like the rushing of air. He is quoted as saying, "All of a sudden it was just there, at first I thought it was a jet or a helicopter, but when I looked up, it was something I never seen before."

Guerrero said he watched the object for several seconds, then ran out of the truck and over to his house to tell his wife and friends to come and take a look. As he left the truck the object shot straight up until it vanished in the sky.

He said, "It was really going quick!" and added that he was able to see three lights underneath as it speeded out of sight.

The farmer described the UFO as hovering a few hundred feet off the ground when he first spotted it. "It was lower than the clouds, but I'm not a very good judge at distance," he said. He did say that the object was about the size of two city blocks, but later changed the size to a large jumbo jet.

A drawing that Guerrero made for police depicted the bottom of the UFO to be triangular in shape, but later he said it was rounded on one end and pointed on the other. On the pointed end, he said it had one large hole about the size of his trailer. And at the other end, he told officer Stephens, were two other holes of about the same size but closer together.

He said the only sound he heard was the sound he mentioned earlier, of rushing air "similar to the sounds made by jet engines from inside an aircraft", he said there was a reddish blinking light emanating from the holes, as though they were engines of some sort, or propulsion ports.

He described the body of the craft as dark, and sticking out from either side of it were antenna-like structures about the size of "telephone poles," which looked as though they were made of aluminum.

Guerrero feels certain there is a connection between what he had seen that night and what he said some people in the neighborhood had seen two weeks before: a ball of fire in the sky, coming from the north, going south, which suddenly stopped and veered east toward Avon Park.

According to Sgt. Stephens, he has known Gurrero for some time and he is not a crackpot, "The man saw something. He really believes he saw something."

On further checking with the news services, I found another close encounter report in the Dade News Leader, Homestead, Florida and reported by staff writer Tom Baggley.

The item concerned a UFO which was reported to have hovered over a backyard in South Dade last New Year's Eve. The object which was said to have no engines or wings, made no sound and was between 40 and 50 yards in diameter.

The sighting was reported to the U.S. Air Force and to Metro police by 37-year old Mike Betancourt who saw the object for about 30 seconds from a distance of approximately 200 yards before it disappeared toward the sun.

Then again, on January 5th, a CB operator talking to a Good Buddy in Ona, paled as he eyed an object "as big as a 747" slowly come up over the horizon.

Several CBers in the Ona area also spotted the "thing."

"Gads, it was large," said Philips Sheridan. "I couldn't for the life of me understand what was holding it up! I saw no wings, no motor—nothing. It was big, that was for sure, and round. It had a lot of blue lights underneath and a big red dome on top."

When asked what happened to the object, Sheridan replied, "You won't believe me, but—it—well—sort of faded away."

It seems that the UFO mystery refuses to be solved. From data which I have collected over the years, I've found that most reports have a similar ring, although many have been proven to be fabricated. Still, the great majority of reports by reliable people, blue and green lights going around it."

And again, Virginia Craun of Nelagoney, said, "When I first saw it, I thought it was a very large star. I thought maybe that's what it was until it moved."

She described the fact that as she was driving down a back road, (this was in February, 1978, six months before the incident hit the papers) she looked through the windshield and up at the night sky. She saw what was described as a "boomerang-shaped white. It just past quietly overhead, emitting bluish-white sparks."

On its front, Mrs. Craun reports four small lights were flashing on sequence. Then it sped away extremely fast. She also said that the object was not a weather balloon, airplane, helicopter, nor anything else that she had seen before.

Other people in this area have also seen some strange things, and I for one would like some sort of explanation as to what they are and what they mean.

—Editor's Note:

Since receiving your letter, we have checked with the newspaper which ran the article on the ghostly disturbances you mention. We have also checked the Nelagoney County Sheriff's Department and have secured permission for one of our researchers to journey to Nelagoney for details. We will make a report on what our writer discovers there.

Dear Editor:

Because of an increasing interest in UFOs and psychic phenomena, I would like to have addresses of several groups designed for the study of these strange phenomena. Could you or anyone you know of, tell me how I could obtain a listing of any groups in New York State, New Jersey, or eastern Pennsylvania?

The State Section Directory for northeastern Pennsylvania for the Mutual UFO Network is planning to present several lectures on these subjects, but he needs locations of already-formed groups before any further work can be done in accomplishing this.

Your aid is greatly appreciated.

Dear Editor:

I remember reading in a local paper a report of a UFO or something, which crashed into the Hudson River. This happened several months ago and to date, nothing else has been written about it. I feel it's important because, although something did crash in the river—nothing was found.

I happen to live in Rockland County, not far from the area.

have some similarities. In each of the cases reported to me, an odor like burning rubber was evident in the area. Several researchers do believe that UFOs can make themselves invisible. It could very well be the case.

For example, why is it that a camera can pick them up, although the photographer does not see any image on his range finder? Also, most photographs of UFOs are never clear or sharp—but always seem to be rather transparent. There have been many theories advanced as to what they could be and their point of origin. Some hold up while others don't.

As to the question of invisibility, Dr. Henry Monteith, an engineering physicist at Sandia Laboratories told a crowd of former military personnel, "there is some indication that extraterrestrials are invisible."

Lecturing before the buffet gathering, Monteith, whose work at Sandia is classified, was the guest speaker at the first meeting of the Albuquerque chapter of the Retired Officer's Association. He said, "Take those mutilated cows for instance. When the picture of those cows are developed, you can see spacecraft, but no one saw any spacecraft when the pictures were being taken."

Referring to the series of bizarre and unexplained animal deaths centered primarily in the northern part of New Mexico as well as Colorado, he said, "There's evidence they (space people) can make themselves invisible. This is why it's so hard to deal with the problem."

He also related that cow mutilations could serve quite a valuable purpose for space people from another world. "They could use them for samples of our kind of environment. They can determine much from the cow's blood and waste materials. Analyzing all that, they can probably get one hell of an idea of our biosphere."

Pertaining to the sightings in and around the Albuquerque area in recent years, he said, "They seem to be unmanned spacecraft sent down to take soil samples."

He also noted that traces of physical evidence along areas of the ground Monteith said, "On some mesas, they seem to jump around, taking up samples of soil, in fact, they seem to hop around on what appears to be pogo sticks."

The physicist, who maintains he saw his first UFO in Pennsylvania more than 20 years ago, claims to have discovered a large pyramid in the Himalayas, deep within Asia, which may provide us with some clue as to the visits of UFO to our planet.

"They are bigger than the pyramids found in Egypt. I don't know what's there, but it appears to have a crystalline substance on the top which keeps it warm."

"If true, and I believe it to be, it's going to stir up the archaeologists and historians who will find it hard to explain how it got up there." He believes that the pyramids are very ancient.

UFO Update, Number 3). I will UFOs in the Florida area, I have found that Florida has had more than it's share of UFO sightings and encounters of various types.

I have made arrangements with several persons who claim to have taken, what they consider, "good UFO photographs" in several locations, including the Naval Base at Ocala where the Navy reported some UFO activity (see UFO Update, Number 3). I will make the photographs available as soon as I receive them.

In the meantime, it certainly seems that Florida, for some reason, is a favorite hangout for not only for those who rush there to worship the sun but for extraterrestrials as well. We'll be keeping an eye on Florida. □

Not many of us know that, last October, a member of the United States Coast Guard recorded about 75 feet of 35mm movies of a UFO. The Coast Guard claims that the film as sent to the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. It never got there!

While some people have forgotten about the film, one individual, Congressman Gup Vander Jagt, is fighting mad at the way it was handled by the Coast Guard.

Vander Jagt called the Coast Guard Station, not once but several times, only to be told that the film was sent out by way of the Postal Service. Chief of Staff of the Ninth

THE LOST UFO FILMS

Coast Guard District informed the congressman that the film, after being processed, was sent to the proper authorities in Washington.

Congressman Jagt is not a man who gives up easily. He then contacted William Bolger, Postmaster General, and requested that they comb the post office in an all-out effort to find the missing film.

At this writing, the film is still missing. We feel that it's kind of weird that such valuable evidence was sent through the mail—especially since the Postal Service is well known for the amount of mail that is lost every year. Then again, was it sent out at all? □ these experiments defy explanation by the known laws of classical mechanics, it does not follow that time is the factor at work. In a laboratory located on earth, it is possible to disclose only individual properties of time-properties whose presence can be assumed proceeding from man's knowledge. But Dr. Kozyrev is positive that time manifests all its properties only in the whole of the universe where it plays a special role.

The German physicist Klausius, formulating the second principle of thermodynamics and extrapolating it to the whole universe, concluded that gradually the stars should disperse their heat in space and become extinct. In other words, that thermal death awaited the universe.

Objections to this conclusion were raised by Timiryazev, Stoletov, Vernadsky and many other scientists. Tsiolkovsky even called Klausius' theory of thermal death anti-scientific. Whether the universe will perish or survive will become clear when it is discovered why the stars shine.

The theory suggesting that the stars are thermonuclear reactors now evokes serious doubts. Experiments and calculations have revealed that the temperature inside the sun is much lower than that which is required for a thermonuclear reaction.

Dr. Kozyrev began to consider clues to the laws of the universe. In 1953 he arrived at the conclusion that the stars have no source of energy of their own, that they simply exist radiating heat and light at the expense of energy coming from without. But where does it come from?

Obviously it comes from the surrounding space. However, space itself cannot be a source inseparable from time...That was what first led Dr. Kozyrev to speculate on what time is.

The first answer to this question came from double stars, stars of different classes related by the law of universal gravitation, but amazingly, while alone the stars of different classes differ from each other, coupled, they acquire startlingly similar features (brightness, spectral type, etc.) This gives the impression that the main star effects its neighbor in space, gradually changing its aspect. However, the "twins" are so far apart that the usual effect, transmitted via fields of strength, are ruled out. Perhaps the solution lies in time. Dr. Kozyrev told himself.

The scientist decided to search for an answer on our own planet. The earth-moon system is in fact a double planet. By itself, the moon could hardly have retained its internal energy: this is proven by mathematical calculations. But what if the earth affects its satellite via time? That is how his hypothesis of lunar volcanic activity arose, which subsequently gained brilliant confirmation by many well known scientists.

He continued to search the universe for evidence that would support his views. His attention was attracted by "black holes," as scientists call super-dense stars with enormous gravitational fields. Whatever approaches such a star disappears without a trace. Even light cannot overcome the attraction of the enormous mass, so there is no way to see what the "black hole" looks like. Nevertheless, its presence is revealed by its powerful X-ray emission.

What are the "black holes" like? Some scientists think that they act as "refuse chutes" of the universe, where waste matter is dumped. Consequently, all matter will cease to exist. Is this any better than thermal death?

Optimists make more encouraging forecasts: sooner or later, the absorption of matter by the "black holes" will cease and the process will be reversed: matter will pour outside. Finally, skeptics offer their own argument: what if "black holes" simply do not exist?

Dr. Kozyrev, however, says that they do. Instruments have shown the unorthodox density of time around the X-ray emission source Cygnus X-1, which astronomers class as "suspicious." Hence, it can be a "black hole." But it is not an abyss into which all matter irretrievably disappears, says the professor. The universe has a more complex structure than man imagines. It has programmed its own eternal life. The "black holes" are something like a regulator, whereby time transmits energy to space, and energy, via time, restores matter to overall circulation. That is how this pendulum functions, ensuring constant renewal of the universe. □

Mrs. Jeffers said that a check with local Air bases as well as the Weather Service revealed the fact that no aircraft or balloons were in that vicinity at the time. The moon, Mrs. Jeffers said, was in the west-southwest horizon and was orange in color.

Mrs. Jeffers said she knows of three persons who saw the object on the skies of Bradford that night between 7:15 and 7:40 PM. Other sightings, on the same night, reportedly were seen from South Avenue and Lewis Run. The original sighting was reported by a Bradford couple on South Avenue and an Emporium family on Route 156. The couple said they saw a bright white light traveling very fast and it was tear-shaped.

—SAN CARLOS, CALIFORNIA

A mysterious object which rocketed earthward crashed into the yard of Dallard Elementary School on the night of November 7, 1978, singing the grass in a three-foot diameter around the point of impact.

The unidentified "thing," the size of a basketball, was seen by a Pershing Junior High School student who held fragments of it in his hand.

The student, Tim Bollinger, who lives adjacent to the school yard where the object fell, said, "It looked like a meteorite."

—CLINTON, UTAH

On November 17, 1978, two Clinton men spotted, what at first looked like, a falling star.

First to see it was Randy Dalton who works at Hill Air Force Base. He immediately pointed it out to a friend, Guy Barrett, also of Clinton. Barrett is a Utah Highway Patrol trooper with whom Dalton was riding with at the time of the sighting. Both agree that the object had a strange shape and emitted a bright gold and yellow light.

When they saw it, the pair were headed north. Randy said it fell for 8 to 10 seconds, then suddenly changed direction and started moving from north to west, then sped south at a very high rate of speed.

Barrett, who was driving at the time of the observation, turned his car east on Riverdale Road after passing Roy Township. They lost track of the object for about ten minutes, but managed to spot it again as it dropped low over Ogden.

Dalton, who said he had worked on lots of aircraft at Hill Air Force Base, had never seen one move as fast as this object. "It moved at an incredible speed," he said.

—CHARLESTON, W. VIRGINIA

This bright, unidentified flying object was photographed over Roane County, West Virginia. Similar UFOs were spotted during October, 1978.

The UFO was investigated by many UFO organizations, as well as the local authorities, Federal authorities have been informed by the local police. The above photo was taken by a Roane County photographer for the state police.

—CORONA, CALIFORNIA

A large orange object resembling a delta wing swooped out of the late afternoon sky last Thanksgiving Day and hovered no more than 150 feet off the ground.

The report was made by Otila Vega and Eda Jones, who told police they were coming into Corona on the freeway from Lake Elsinore when they saw the UFO.

The object, they said, was first spotted near Ontario Avenue, approaching from the Lake Mathews area "at a fairly fast speed." As it came over their auto it stopped and hovered. Afterwards it started moving out across the freeway and then took off at a high rate of speed, heading west toward the Santa Ana Canyon.

—LIVINGSTON, NEW JERSEY

A moving light making a sound much like a loud electric motor played havoc with a West Essex couple before it dimmed, quieted and vanished from the area just outside their kitchen window, where it had hovered for approximately 40 minutes.

It was the second such incident during November of 1978. A week earlier, two police officers heard the sound of "an electric motor running" as they cruised in their patrol car on a West Essex street, more than three miles from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Licari whose kitchen windows was said to be shattered by the experience. It was reported that the rear window of the police cruiser also shattered, as well as the windows of other homes and cars in the area of Livingston.

—JOHNSTOWN, PENN.

When the phone rang at WJNL radio at 6:30 AM last October 25, the woman caller asked news director Jeff Wilkinson about four strange lights streaking across the sky.

She wasn't the only one. Over 50 additional calls came in from people, all describing the four objects as either rectangular or straight-line shapes, red, white and possibly blue in color.

They hovered over the city unlike any airplane ever seen, and were further denoted as having a humming sound.

Wilkinson immediately contacted the Johnstown police who verified the reports. Upon further investigation, Wheeling, West Va., Zanesville, Ohio, Parkersburg, Huntington and Marlinsburg, West Va. all had similar sightings clocked in between 11:30 AM and 12:15 PM, all being reported on the same day.

—SILVERTON, ENGLAND

They are strange balls of light, glowing orange. They make no sound, and move away fast from a hovering position.

The British have come to call them "the mysterious moving lights," which can be seen at night on Criss Coss Hill.

Just what causes them is not known. That they are there is a certainty. What's more, many of those who have seen them agree they are frightening.

The latest sighting occurred on the evening of November 17, 1978, when four members of a soccer team had to stop their car as the lights pulsed overhead.

A week before, a local man and his daughter were driving along the road from Bradnich, which leads into Silverton. Their car was "buzzed" by a rapidly moving ball of light which passed less than 60 yards over them.

A few days before that incident, at 6 PM, just as it was growing dark, Brian Hooper, headmaster of Silverton's primary school, was looking southwest from his office window just before closing the school. "I saw a bright, circular light moving slowly over the fields," he said.

"It was silent and appeared to be lighting up the countryside. It was quite large, about half the size of a half-moon. I didn't know what it was. It didn't appear to be an airplane."

"Suddenly it moved off quickly. It was traveling south away from me, so I couldn't really tell how fast it was moving, but I would say it was moving at great speed."

—GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

A sharply-outlined, although shapeless, object hovering at an altitude of 3,000-4,000 feet above the Diesel parking lot at a GM plant in Lower Michigan had more than two-dozen lunch hour onlookers gasping last November 23.

The UFO, which rocked back and forth "much like a baby's cradle," had no definite features.

"It wasn't round or square," said David VanVelsen of Sparta who put the sighting in its proper perspective when he said, "I know what it wasn't, but I don't know what it was!"

VanVelsen, who drew the accompanying diagram, described the bottom and top as "shiny," "There was no sound, no vapor trail," he said.

Another witness, David Bland, said the object wasn't really round. "To me it looked like a cup, upside down." Bland described the UFO as silver, "with lines running down the sides. There was no sound and it was like nothing I had ever seen before." He specified that he knows it wasn't an airplane or a balloon. "It was the shape of a half-moon."

It was Jack Smith who described the object as rocking back and forth. Smith, a veteran of four years as a U.S. Air Force mechanic and flight crew member who has also taken flying lessons, brought out: "I'm no expert, but I know the various types of aircraft being flown today. This was a flying object I had never seen before."

Smith said the object hovered in the sky for about thirty seconds before vanishing.

—GREENFIELD, INDIANA

When 23-year old Cindy Wilfong came out of her house to get some firewood, she was horror-stricken. A UFO, the size of a large barn, hovered 60 feet over a field within 200 feet of her house, about two miles south of Willow Branch in northeastern Hancock County.

At first, the pretty 23 year old girl thought the object overhead was a plane crashing. But suddenly she realized it emitted no noise.

Immediately, Cindy was joined by her sister Cathy who quickly summoned their mother. Mrs. Wilfong said the object was about 100 feet long hovering near their home.

Mrs. Wilfong said the craft had two white lights and one red light, and made no noise. It hovered over the field for 12 minutes before moving away slowly, according to the bewildered women.

Mrs. Wilfong said it seemed as though she and her daughters were looking at the bottom of the craft, which was divided into three sections, two of which extended lower than the middle section. There appeared to be a circle on the middle section. □ southern Russian city of Nalchik for 36 hours. Another was of an unidentified flying object that followed an airliner, and a third was reported to have caused automobiles to stall at a railroad crossing in Golitsyno, 28 miles west of Moscow.

On the heels of the Zigel report comes the fact that worldwide there have been over the years many sightings of UFOs. In the U.S. alone, at least two sightings a day are reported and filed with the authorities, which eventually come to the attention of UFO investigators.

"Two per day," specified Dr. Richard King, astronomer and UFO researcher, "That comes out to approximately 60 per month, or in round figures, 720 per year."

King maintained that taking the Soviet scientists theory to heart, of the 720 reported UFO sightings as well as countless others which are never reported—"if one, or more, would malfunction over a large industrial city of the U.S. and would crash to earth, the developments would be indeed catastrophic."

"As time passes by we become more sophisticated and more open to the idea that we are not alone in the universe. We must take into account many possibilities, including the one that extraterrestrial visitations are not remote, or the fancy of a fiction writer's imagination."

"Many bizarre and unexplainable incidents throughout the centuries would indicate that we are not alone. One in particular—the dropping of materials and foodstuffs over the earth during the years—would add to the theory that super-sophisticated flying machines (many droppings occurred hundreds of years ago when flying was as yet unheard of) were visiting us. Not only foodstuffs, but oils, sand, slivers of metal and other materials was reported."

Further, many scientists are of the belief that a good number of these craft come from planets that are at war with one another, and are using the skies far above our planet as a battleground.

"One of these days," King said, "I wouldn't be the least bit surprised to look out of my window and be witness to a UFO, shot up and put out of commission by a celestial enemy, crashing to earth, in radioactive flames."

Although the scientist's last comment was spiced with a bit of sardonic humor he added that in our day and age...anything is possible. □

There exists much visual evidence to justify the study of UFOs. Dr. Richard King, a well known astronomer said, "In the United States alone, there are at least two sightings reported every day. That comes out to 60 per month or, in round figures, 720 per year."

TRI-STATE UFO ALERT

BY JACK WARNER

Usually, when members of the academic community spew forth what their long years of experience and research has taught them, many listen in awe and with respect rightfully due to those of high station.

Recently, when several astronomers joined ranks with physicists at Marshall University in Huntington, West Virginia, to say that "certain atmospheric conditions can cause ground lights to reflect in the sky," many individuals in the non-academic community wholeheartedly agreed.

Those that did not, numbered sky watchers in that state, as well as in many parts of Ohio and Pennsylvania. For, what many early risers in these three states sighted on the morning of August 2nd, 1978, made them absolutely certain that the atmosphere couldn't possibly have been responsible for the strange lights hovering over their cities.

The lights, multi-colored and speeding across the skies at a tremendous rate of speed, caused at least several hundred persons to wonder whether we were being invaded, or merely visited by extraterrestrials.

Within the space of 15 minutes, telephones at one radio station buzzed without stopping as at least 50 people responded to the lights—red, white, blue, green, and orange.

Even law enforcement officers in Wood County, West Virginia, stopped their patrol cars to scan the skies, watching as the strange mysterious lights hovered for more than four hours, moving in every direction, seemingly all at once.

At the same time, reports came in from Elk, Monroe, Perry, Cumberland, Lehigh, Montour, and Philadelphia in Pennsylvania.

This strange object was photographed by Gary Randall. Randall is a member of the Coast Guard stationed at Two Rivers, Wisconsin. Besides Randall, several other members of his unit observed the UFO. It was also reported that some members of National Guard glowed and flashed red, blue and green lights. Police officers of Two Rivers who were sent to the scene also verified the object.

age, with its vital water locked up in the Martian polar caps, thermonuclear warheads launched from Earth could be appropriately detonated to effectuate the release of the life blood, water. Moderate temperatures and verdant fields would be the new order of the day on Mars, and earthlings would have a new target for exploration and colonization. If properly engineered, the 1976 Viking probes could have been designed to actuate this alteration of the Martian landscape.

Actually, future concentration will more probably be focused on Mars, as man must move outward rather than inward. In perhaps another billion years, our sun will begin to wax, growing so vast in size as to engulf the orbit of Venus and bring broiling temperatures to Earth. If sufficiently altered, Mars, for a while, at least, could serve as a habitable refuge for man until he is able to colonize the outer planets and ultimately escape to a new stellar system.

However, it must be recognized that Earth is equally susceptible to modifications. Obviously, if terrestrial scientists have unlocked the secret for such a potential after a comparatively short period of space pioneering, might not alien astrobiologists, whose space exploits dwarf our efforts, possess a capability paralleling, or even exceeding, ours?

Actually, man himself has altered Earth in a variety of competing and contradictory ways. With the advent of the Industrial Revolution, factory smokestacks began to assault our atmosphere with the by-products of burned coal and oil, chemicals which foster the build-up of carbon dioxide. The carbon dioxide promotes a greenhouse effect which traps heat radiated from the planetary surface, reflecting it back to raise the Earth's temperature. As industrialization has been especially pronounced in the 20th century, this effect has manifested itself to a measurable extent, with the terrestrial temperature evincing a slight increase since the beginning of the 20th century.

By a similar mode, could not alien UFOs transform our atmosphere by suffusing it with massive doses of carbon dioxide or other chemicals which would enhance the greenhouse effect and ultimately generate baking temperatures on the surface comparable to those prevailing on Venus?

Another by-product of modern industrialization pollution acts through a complicated meteorological concatenation to offset the greenhouse effect and promote a contrary cooling trend. Increasingly, dust and dirt particles spewed into the air form a screen which reflects impingent sunlight back into space, thereby cooling the atmosphere and planetary surface. The 1971 Mariner 9 probe of Mars recorded a planetary temperature decline of several degrees during the great Martian dust storm. Our data-seeking satellite luckily became enveloped in the storm.

When the terrestrial temperature is sufficiently reduced (perhaps by only three degrees) a chain reaction inducing massive glacier formations will be triggered: North Polar winter snow, formed from Arctic Ocean water vapor, will begin to melt only partially each summer, eventually accumulating to form mammoth glaciers which reflect sunlight so efficiently that the Earth is cooled even further, allowing the glaciers to proceed southward, ultimately culminating in a new ice age for our planet.

Could not extraterrestrials thus Martianize Earth by poisoning the atmosphere with pollutants that would encourage the melting of the polar caps, with a consequent degeneration of the prevailing terrestrial temperature structure?

Perhaps as few as 2 or 3 pounds of fluocarbons or bromine compounds could instigate noticeable atmospheric changes. Imagine the damage that UFOs could render our atmosphere over a span of months or even years. Capsules of gas could be released directly into the atmosphere, timed to gradually diffuse on a widespread basis. For sheer destructive potential, nuclear attack would represent a clumsy alternative by comparison.

Thus, when the question arises as to why UFOs don't land, responsible ufologists must seriously consider the unpleasant proposition; alien cosmonauts may at this very moment be scripting mankind's final destiny in the clouds. □

Within ten minutes, telephones at police precincts in Hamilton, Clinton, Geauga and Adams, Ohio didn't stop ringing as callers reported the multi-colored phenomena taking place in their skies.

Although most viewers agreed that there were four lights in all—red and white in a rectangular formation, and blue and green, many claimed they saw more colors—nearly the whole spectrum of the rainbow.

One caller said, "They were much bigger than stars, and just glowing, not flashing." Another who joined dozens of high school students, all looking up, argued that they looked more like balls than rods, while at Davis Creek near Charleston, Jack Anderson insisted that what he and his family saw, looking out of their apartment window, looked like jet planes streaking over their house.

Scores of residents of Adams, Ohio said that the lights "seemed to be putting on a show," while in Clinton, a near-hysterical woman maintained that the lights "just streaked out of the early morning sky and chased her as she disembarked from a bus on her way home from a night-time job.

Earlier in the week, beginning at noon, July 27, UFO sightings had been reported throughout Morgan, and Putnam counties in West Virginia as well as Gallia County in Ohio.

An official at West Virginia's Kanawha County Airport, said "On the morning of August 2, between 7 AM and 10 AM, there was absolutely nothing in the air. Yet, our radar scopes were going crazy. Strange blips were seen at every corner of the radar screen.

And, as mysteriously as the strange lights appeared, they simply vanished without a trace and without warning at precisely 3 PM on the afternoon of August 2nd, never to appear again. □

UNCOVERING THE COVERUP

Nearly 1000 pages of documents recently released by the Central Intelligence Agency indicate that UFOs were reported over nuclear installations of the Strategic Air Command in November, 1975.

One "visitor" to our planet was described as a "100 foot-diameter sphere which appeared to have craters around the outside."

Another military base reported it was buzzed by a bright object the size of an automobile at an altitude of 1,000-2,000 feet.

Obtained under a Freedom of Information suit by the Ground Saucer Watch, the documents reveal that one Iranian pilot reported that his plane's electronic equipment stopped working

BY ZACHARY HARRIS

It seems that some UFO organizations are not satisfied with the government's view and are doing something about it when an unidentified object was approached, but resumed operation again when her plane veered away from the trailing UFO. This incident occurred in 1976 and concerned a scramble by two F-4 Phantom Jets who went after a UFO.

Ground Saucer Watch is an organization based in Phoenix, Arizona, which monitors reports of unidentified flying objects.

William H. Spaulding of GSW accused the government of a "coverup," claiming, "We have information to categorically prove the government is lying and that significant findings have been suppressed. We have five ex-intelligence officers who will testify to this cover-up."

intended contribution to the ufo-logical crusade.

PSI has incorporated high-technology sensors and signaling devices at the site. A circular chain of 91 lights describes a ring with a diameter of 100 feet. At its center stands a white-light flasher capable of emitting code pulses. This arrangement is a giant-sized model of a hydrogen atom and can visually formulate the symbol for "pi" (which designates the ratio of the circumference of a circle to its diameter). Stanford: "We've found that UFOs are drawn to new construction, runway lights and electrical works. This symbol is attractive and looks unlike anything else from the air.

"If occupants of UFOs think as we do, they should be able to understand the symbol."

Perhaps the research team's most formidable tool at the Austin complex is a laser video system for possible visual communications with UFOs. The outfit cost $20,000, coming wholly out of the collective PSI pocket. Stanford hopes to use it in generating a "video-of-intent" tape which can help strike up a conversation with UFO pilots. "We may tell them things like how long we've been working on the project and encourage them to land. The encouraging thing is that UFOs reportedly use laser beams and it's a good bet they can decode our signals."

After malfunctions in ground-to-air tests, the equipment passed a shakedown checkout by beaming signals to an earth-based reception station in the summer of 1975.

Nirvana for PSI? In Stanford's words, "If we can get one sighting—just 15 seconds—we'll have more light pulse data and a better magnetic profile than has ever been recorded before."

Since the fall of 1973, when Project Starlight built their post on the stony Texas countryside, at least ten incidents involving some strange aerial objects have been loosed over the premises. The initial event occurred on October 22, 1973. A quick-moving UFO sped across the site, from south to east. Onlookers testified it was a "soundless, bright white oval, blinking at a rate of five times a second."

Another UFO sailed over the PSI range on the night of October 4, 1974. Members of the Starlight squad photographed the craft, but apparently no sensor measurements were taken.

Eight nights later, an additional mysterious object haunted the landing zone. At the same time Charles Hickson, Pascagoula abductee, was visiting the facility. The object had a circular form, was about 30 feet in diameter, and was bright orange in color. An "intense" halo surrounded it.

"We had our best sighting in that location, while Hickson was there," Ray Stanford surmised to Jerome Clark, well known author and UFO investigator, in an interview. Again unfortunately, no data or photos were obtained.

Project Starlight International has, lately, amplified their quest of attracting and monitoring the elusive flying discs. Expansion and newly-acquired sophistication now places a 400-acre experimental district, a computer and radar tracking unit and an optical equipment center at their disposal.

A single, daring, UFO origin: Aliens from another world, somewhere in the universe, could make it all pay off. □ disappear back into nowhere—all with a seeming intelligence all their own.”

Reluctant witnesses of these bizarre happenings don't come right out and say they're being invaded by little green men in flying saucers, but they are quick to admit that “something really strange is happening in their community.”

They say they fully recognize the existence of airplanes, helicopters, balloons, car lights, as well as man-made satellites. They've acknowledged that these weird things causing their nerves to frazzle do not resemble any of these things.

In mid-May, 1978, Osage County sheriff's deputy, Billy Mitchell and four other lawmen sat motionless in their squad car watching a still bright object in the southwest sky for about an hour-and-a-half.

“There was light. I thought it was an airplane at first, but it didn't move. It just hung there motionless. Whatever it was, it looked like a core of white, pulsating light with red, blue and green lights going around it,” Mitchell said.

At the end of February—Virginia Craun of Nelagoney said she was driving down a back road when she saw what she thought was a star. “Suddenly it moved,” she said. “It came down right at me and then it flew backwards, and later right above me.”

She described the object as a boomerang-shaped white light. “It passed silently overhead, emitting bluish-white sparks. On its front, four small lights were flashing in sequence. Then it sped away very quickly,” Mrs. Craun recollected.

Mrs. Craun said, “If it had hovered over me, I'd have been hysterical. It was definitely some sort of aircraft.” But no kind she had ever seen before, she stated.

Mary Powers who lives five miles north of Nelagoney said, during an evening in the first week of June, that she saw “red and blue flashing lights” hovering around her farmhouse.” The object was silent and was definitely not a helicopter or any type of conventional airplane.

Running inside, Mrs. Powers got her husband, Merle, but when the pair rushed outside, the strange object was gone.

Two men who own farms in the area, Harold Danner and Albert Kendrick, claim to have seen a strange ball of light dancing atop the trees, skimming across a plowed field and streaking across the sky.

The people of Nelagoney have been hoping that they'd read a story in the local newspaper, or hear a news report on the radio or on TV that the Air Force, NASA officials or even some eccentric inventor will announce the testing of a new experimental aircraft in the Osage county skies—one that pulsates, spews colored lights, sparks, and is shaped like a boomerang.

But so far, no such announcement has been made, and residents are wondering just what it is they are up against. □

Hank was perpetually broke. One night he got together with some friends, and they decided to cast the MONEY SPELL. The very next day, Hank received in the mail a check for some $250 worth of insurance. (He had never heard of the company that sent the check, he was not insured with them, and had never even made a claim—but he accepted the money.) Another member of the group that used the spell, a 40-year-old secretary, received an automobile as a gift! All the other members of the group received amazing windfalls of money, as well! You'll see how Dexter, a retiree, lives RENT FREE and receives $200 a week at the age of 78, with a secret you'll find in this Witch Book! You'll see how Claudine, a secretary, was able to wear the finest, most expensive furs—FREE—and spend weekends at an expensive ski lodge in the mountains, where she met a wonderful man! Using the same Witchcraft secrets, YOU can achieve peace of mind and freedom from money worries for the rest of your life!

YOU CAN HEAL YOURSELF AS WITCHES DO!

Feeling sick today? Plagued by a lot of troublesome illnesses? Perhaps some relative is sick and constantly demanding your attention? Or perhaps it is even a pet that needs help? With the MAGIC POWER OF WITCHCRAFT, you can cure anything, say authors Gavin and Yvonne Frost: "In our experience . . . we have not found a single incurable disease!"

• ANDY DISSOLVES A GALLSTONE!—Andy M. developed gallstones. When his illness became too troublesome to ignore, he went to a doctor. Urine tests revealed that he was chronically alkaline. His body was badly out of balance. Using this Witchcraft method to restore balance to the mind and body—in a short while, X-rays showed that he had no more gallstones! Andy never again suffered the excruciating pain of passing stones!

In the same way, say Gavin and Yvonne Frost, almost all illness can be prevented. You are actually employing an ancient Witchcraft method to remove diseased tissue! Even if you do not have any belief in the results, the power will work for you!

One woman, who had been in a wheelchair for 26 years, due to polio and arthritis, used the Witchcraft healing method, and reported that she had no pain and could walk and garden again! A man reported that his son's deep 3rd degree burns miraculously healed overnight!

• SO SIMPLE A CHILD USES IT!—A 4-year-old girl asked if she could try to heal a man who was limping—due to a torn ligament—with this simple Witchcraft healing method. In a matter of moments, she started her chant, laying her hands on the weak ankle. The man was miraculously cured! To skeptics, this should be convincing PROOF that anyone can use it!

SPACE PROBE

BY SAUL GOLDSTEIN

The leading edge of the vertical stabilizer on the Space Shuttle Orbiter Columbia is inspected following a test flight of the Orbiter aboard its 747 carrier aircraft. The flight took place on March 9, 1979. A cross country ferry flight of the Orbiter from NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center to the Kennedy Space Center was delayed following the loss of dummy tile which had been applied to the spacecraft to improve its aerodynamics.

NASA's Space Shuttle Columbia is shown here as it made its first flight on board the specially modified 747 carrier aircraft. The short test flight was made in preparation for the ferry flight that would deliver the first Space Shuttle that will actually travel in space to NASA's Kennedy Space Center, Florida, its eventual launch site. The purpose of the flight was to examine the effects of actual flight on the thermal tiles that are located on the shuttle.

This photo was taken by Voyager I during its approach to Ganymede at ranges between 125 and 150 thousand miles. The images show detail on the surface with a great amount of sharpness.

It shows a variety of structures, including both razed and unrazed craters, and the odd, grove-like structures discovered by Voyager in the lighter regions.

The most striking features are the bright ray craters which have a distinctly "bluer" color

The surface is known to contain large amounts of ice and it appears that these relatively young craters have spread bright ice over the surface.

Voyager I acquired this image of Io on March 4, 1979. It was taken about 11 hours before Voyager's closest approach to the Jupiter moon. The distance to Io was about 304,000 miles. An enormous volcanic explosion can be seen against the dark space over Io's bright limb. Volcanic explosions similar to this occur on our planet when magnetic gases expand explosively as material is vented. On earth water is the major gas driving the explosion.

Another view of Jupiter's largest satellite. This photo was taken from a range of 151,800 miles. The picture is centered at about 65 degrees south latitude and 4 degrees longitude and shows the south western limb region of Ganymede. The smallest features visible are about 1.5 miles across. The surface shows numerous impact craters, many of which have extensive bright ray systems. Light bands traversing the surface contain alternating bright and dark lines which probably represent deformation of the icy central material.

HOW COULD A PRIMITIVE AFRICAN TRIBE HAVE KNOWN FOR CENTURIES ABOUT A STAR SYSTEM WHICH IS INVISIBLE TO THE NAKED EYE?

The Dogon tribe in Africa worships beings whom they claim came to Earth from the Sirius star system. Without telescopes, the Dogon priests apparently knew hundreds of years ago—to the decimal—the orbit of a white dwarf star in the remote Sirius system. How? Did beings from the Sirius system visit Earth 5000 years ago?

Robert K.G. Temple, a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society in England, spent years of painstaking research to figure out why and how the Dogon priests could know what they did. His work revealed one of the most amazing and exciting stories in the history of mankind.

Now you can read this incredible story—and feel the thrill of discovery as the Sirius mystery unfolds before you.

The Sirius Mystery is yours FREE when you subscribe for two years to SECOND LOOK, the magazine which brings you exciting new discoveries in each fascinating issue.

Take UFOs for example. Not a day passes without someone, somewhere reporting a UFO...

An overwhelming majority may be easily explained as simple mistakes or even hoaxes...

But they deserve a Second Look...

According to a Rand Corporation study there are as many as 600 million habitable worlds—many technologically more advanced than our own.

If only one reported extraterrestrial contact were genuine, it could be one of the greatest developments in the history of the human race...

What would we do if extraterrestrials suddenly announced themselves? What should we do?

Now, you can explore many of these fascinating questions in an exciting magazine called Second Look. Each month, Second Look will bring you provocative articles by the world's leading authorities on astronomy, ancient history, psychology, philosophy of science and other disciplines.

Second Look brings you articles such as:

* "Impact in Siberia, 1908: Meteor or Spacecraft?" by Bevan M. French, NASA's Director of Extraterrestrial Materials Research.

* "Is It Unwise For Us To Contact Advanced Civilizations?" by Isaac Asimov, author of more than 170 books on the frontiers of science.

* "UFOs As Government Spycraft," by Robert K. G. Temple, Second Look senior editor, fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society and author of The Sirius Mystery.

* "How the CIA Views the UFO Phenomenon," by Victor Marchetti, former agency official and co-author of The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence.

If you possess an inquisitive mind, a rational viewpoint, and intolerance for easy answers, Second Look is for you. It is the only publication of its kind. Scientific journals rarely deal seriously with unexplained phenomena. When they do, it is in incomprehensible jargon. Newspapers report UFO sightings, but never provide insight into these phenomena.

Every month, Second Look will feature analyses of leading UFO reports, prepared by our investigative journalists and distinguished scientific contributors.

Second Look is your watchdog, critically examining all the alternative explanations of UFOs. The result is a fascinating and lively publication.

How could a remote African tribe with no scientific instruments know the movements and characteristics of a totally invisible star? Yet the Dogon tribe does: after eight years of research into astronomy, anthropology and mythology, Robert K. G. Temple, fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, presents his well-documented evidence that the source of civilization in Sumer and ancient Egypt was the visitation before 3,000 B.C. of amphibious beings from the Sirius star system.

Says the Times of London:
"One can only regard with awe."

Says Nature magazine:
"...a fascinating book...to be taken seriously."

She said she didn't know what to make of her weird encounter, but when she climbed from the table she had been put on, she suddenly saw the very packages she had walked out of the supermarket with. As she bent down to examine them, her hands and arms were burned.

She began to look around for her companions, but they were nowhere to be found. Even the creatures that had been with her before were gone.

With that, she heard a soft humming noise, much like a swarm of bees from far off. The sound became louder and louder, until she blacked out.

When she regained consciousness, she said, she was on the sidewalk just outside the supermarket, a crowd around her.

"Someone had called for an ambulance," she said, "and they brought me to this hospital..."

In checking the supermarket where Ms. Murphy did her shopping that day, the manager, who was familiar with her as a steady customer, said indeed she was in his market on the day in question. When she left the checkout counter, he was standing close to her, and the two began talking together.

"While we were talking, it looked for a moment as though her packages were getting a little heavy, and as I helped her to better balance them. I looked at her arms and hands. At no time did I see anything that resembled any burns on them. Somehow, she had burned her hands and arms the short distance from the check-out counter to the street. But that is impossible."

Impossible, indeed. Then how else did it happen. And what became of Ms. Murphy's two earthly companions? Were they transported back to their own cities. With reports of UFO sightings and encounters steadily mounting, numbering among its witnesses individuals of impeccable and sober character and references, we would be foolhardy to assume that UFOs do not exist. That we are being watched by alien "visitors" whose spacecraft are hovering just out of sight and out of range is considered by many already a substantial fact.

"The answer," according to Dr. Stevenson Rinthrop, NASA space scientist and reknowned astronomer, "lies somewhere out there, at a point where the interstellar vehicles that we have come to look upon as UFOs converge and plan their next encounter with the human race on the planet earth."

Who among us will be abducted next?

The 19-ton Soviet orbiting station, Salyut 6, has become a United Nations headquarters in space, with Polish, East German and Czech astronauts coming and going. Now, the three-country representation in space is making ready to welcome a forth—Bulgarian astronaut, Major Georgi Ivanov, a 38-year-old air force pilot.

Soyuz 33, carrying Ivanov and Soviet commander, Nikolai Rukavishnikov, was launched from the Bikonur Space Center at Leninsk, Russia, and was expected to reach the station in two days. Salyut 6 has been orbiting the earth since September 1977.

SOVIET SPACE STATION WELCOMES NEW MEMBERS

The goal of the Soviets, according to Dr. Charles S. Sheldon, 2nd Chief of Science Research at the Library of Congress, may be a six-month flight record. However, speculation from the Soviet Union was that their aim is "continuous space research in earth orbit." The U.S. interpretation of this is a continuously-maned orbiting laboratory.

The Bulgarian mission to the U.N. recently released a pamphlet entitled "Our Road to Baikonur," which maintains that their astronauts would carry out a number of investigations in the field of space technology.

credible formations as crater pairs and crater chains gets these astronomers very upset because they probably know that our planet will look like these bodies after the next nuclear war. The fact that the Apollo astronauts found the surface of the moon covered with small glass particles, the same type of glass found at nuclear test sites, also shows that the ancient astronauts were successful in turning the moon into a dead world.

Here is a possible explanation of what happened in this solar system in the distant past. After the planets were colonized by the ancient astronauts, an invasion took place by aliens from another galaxy. Since our solar system is on the edge of the Milky Way Galaxy, it was one of the first solar systems to be eliminated in this invasion. Each planet was systematically destroyed. The earth was probably not considered an important target at that time because the invaders considered near collisions by Venus and Mars to be sufficient punishment. By using their very advanced technology, it was no problem to break off a piece of Jupiter and hurl it at the Earth. Dr. Velikovsky admitted in Science magazine that "As for the problem of Venus's escape, it didn't explode away...it fissioned." (It is impossible for a planet to fission and break into two pieces through a natural process.) The aliens put this new planet into a new orbit after its near collision with the earth.

After the aliens finished invading our solar system, they headed towards the center of the galaxy where most of the stars are concentrated and continued to destroy solar systems who opposed this invasion. Some of these solar systems were completely obliterated when their suns were turned into exploding novae. We are able to see the light of these tremendous explosions thousands of years later. There is some scientific evidence indicating that novae could be created by artificial means. According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, "Why a star becomes a nova is unknown." The scientists cannot explain how a star explodes all by itself and its luminosity increases one hundred to one million times in a few days. They also cannot explain why most novae are located in the center of the galaxy. Since the scientists seem to agree that mother nature does not have the capability to explode suns and planets, a space war could easily answer their questions.

Erich von Daniken

Erich von Daniken has shown that the ancient myths and legends contain many stories about astronauts and their advanced technology. Doctor Velikovsky has stated that these myths are based on actual events.

Eight hundred years after the first invasion of our solar system, the alien astronauts returned to have some fun with the few surviving earth people. They again took Venus and forced it to smash into Mars, which was knocked out of its regular orbit and came close to earth in another near collision. After the aliens were through with their fun and games they returned both planets to their proper orbits as required by the Titus-Bode Law.

Although the above account may seem like a science fiction fantasy, there is no other explanation which can fit the facts. In Worlds In Collision, Dr. Velikovsky tries to give a natural explanation. In the chapter entitled "What Caused Venus and Mars to Shift Their Orbits?", he stated that a third agent such as a comet could have knocked these planets out of orbit. But then he decided that these planets could have collided without the help of such a third agent, in spite of the fact that the odds are billions to one for such an event to happen accidentally. In the new versions of his book, perhaps he should change the title of this chapter to "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Erich von Daniken has shown that the ancient myths and legends contain many stories about the ancient astronauts and their advanced technology. Dr. Velikovsky has stated that these myths are based on actual events, but he has not accepted the theory of ancient astronauts. Perhaps if these two gentlemen got together and wrote a book based on their research, the truth behind the events which took place in this solar system thousands of years ago could finally be revealed. □

How to make others secretly DO YOUR BIDDING with the astonishing power of AUTOMATIC MIND COMMAND!

Here's how to get started in just 3 minutes . . .

Dear Friend:

New power is about to leap into your life . . . an astonishing way to control the thoughts and actions of others without their knowing it . . . no matter how much they may not want to follow your instructions, they carry them out to a "T" every time!

With "Automatic Mind-Command" you'll be running the show. Make a wish, turn on The Power, and watch those around you drop everything and do what they're told.

And nobody will even have the faintest idea that you're behind it all. That's the beauty of "Automatic Mind-Command"—you are the only one who knows what's going on—you alone decide when things should start . . . stop . . . change around.

CONTROL YOUR FRIENDS OR STRANGERS!

You can use it to control your friends or strangers, one at a time or in large numbers, at any time, and ANY WAY YOU LIKE.

For example: You go into a bank for a loan. The credit man smiles but says "Sorry. You don't qualify for a loan right now: however, if there's anything else I can do for you, I'd be glad to . . ." Then in a flash, his tune changes when you let loose your "Automatic Mind-Command." He continues, "In fact, we'll be glad to give you $1,000 more than you asked for. And any time you want more, just see me personally! Thank you so much for coming by!"

Impossible? You'll be doing things like that every day without even thinking about it. As soon as you need something done, it's done! The people who do these things for you will remember what they did, but not why!

FUN POWER—TOO!

You can have a lot of fun with this power, too. Look how Evelyn C. used it at work . . . One day, while sorting papers, her boss angrily inquired why she had to make so much noise—and scolded her in front of everybody. Evelyn said nothing, but smiled to herself—for she had just turned on the "Automatic Mind-Command . . ." Suddenly the boss apologized for being a scoundrel. "Please . . . I'm sorry," he said, in front of everybody. "I'd like to make it up to you!" And he told her what a wonderful person she was! When Evelyn turned the power off, the boss just stood there with an open mouth, wondering what made him say all those things.

Think what this power can mean in your life. You need money . . . and it's there! You want some affection . . . you'll be smothered! You want peace and quiet . . . the world stands still!

NO MORE SECRETS WILL BE KEPT FROM YOU!

People who think they can hold back the facts will meet their master in you! You just fire a little "Automatic Mind-Command" at them, and they'll sing like meadowlarks . . . Nona J. was at her hwt's end when she tried to find the money she'd put aside to pay the rent—it was gone. A frantic search through the house turned up nothing. There was only one possibility left . . . she asked Billy. A look of surprise crossed his face. No—he hadn't seen any money. But Nona didn't believe him, and started using "Automatic Mind-Command" to find out if he was telling the truth. Suddenly Billy reached into his pocket and took out a roll of money. After giving her the money, he acted as if nothing had happened!

Think how many secrets must be hidden all around you! Things your spouse won't tell . . .

Several witnesses, including a Wisconsin National Guard sergeant, claim they spotted "something not quite right" in the skies over Two Rivers, Wisconsin.

Sergeant Tom Gordon, 34, out fishing on the night of July 28, 1978, at the East Side Pier near the Coast Guard Station, said that at 11:45PM, he saw several colors of lights in the sky—red, blue and green. The object from which the lights came was round in shape, and after a while, turned sideways and then upside down.

The following morning, Gordon said that the lights went back and forth three times, and seemed about 600 yards northwest of the tail of the Little Dipper. He estimated that the object was some eight miles away.

"I kind of believed these UFOs were out there before, from as much as I've read on them, but, after last night, now I am sure." He added that he thoroughly believes they really exist.

Calling upon his eight years in the Air Force, Gordon said he'd seen all kinds of aircraft, but "I have never seen anything like that."

Two others, Gary Randall, 20, and Doug Wangen, also 20, members of the U.S. Coast Guard stationed in Two Rivers, witnessed the sightings and summoned police officers. At the same time, from Sturgeon Bay, the Two Rivers Police Department sent an officer to the scene. The Officer verified the sighting.

According to Randall, of Sacramento, California, "It was most definitely a UFO, as far as I know. I don't think it's a government project." He added that he'd had his doubts until he saw it. "Now I'm a believer."

Randall, who photographed the object at precisely 11:30 PM, said he is not authorized to release his photographs, which must be sent to a government agency in Milwaukee for verification and study. He said the photos were dark, with some landmarks near the Coast Guard station showing up, and several brightly lit objects in the upper right corner.

Wangen, who has been in Two Rivers for six months said that before the sighting he was kind of uncertain about UFOs. "You have to see it to believe."

The Pequot Lakes, Minnesota native said it was a weird feeling actually seeing such an object. "You feel like someone's watching all the time. You get a feeling of uncertainty and insecurity. You sort of think someone's out there."

He said that on the night in question, he could see the object coming across and saw lights flashing. "Then it sort of stopped for a while, turned bright white, began moving again, then went straight up and disappeared."

Randall, whose specialty for the Coast Guard is charting, estimated the object's speed at about 800 miles per hour.

According to the three witnesses, Randall, Gordon and Wangen, the object was definitely not a conventional aircraft. Randall said the object, "flew very erratic—side to side, up and down, and across. The lights, he said, "were fantastic." For the distance that it was, it would have had to be bigger than two 747s.

Gordon, who specified that he went to the Coast Guard station to view the object through binoculars, said, "It was fantastic what I saw through the lenses—what a sight—I never saw anything like it before."

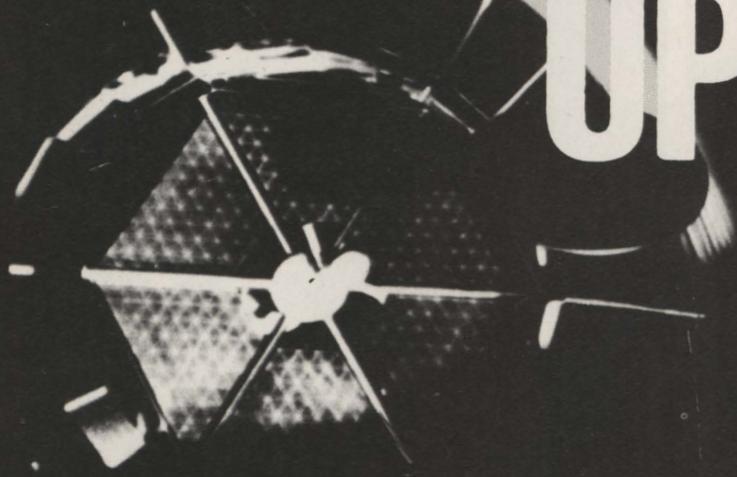

Two days later, on July 30, a Two Rivers woman reported to police that she saw something in the sky on the 28th. The police report specified that the woman claimed it moved slowly and had blinking multi-colored lights.
