PARANORMAL

UFO INVESTIGATIONS MAY FACE SAFETY ISSUES

To the general public who already have made up their minds that there is no such thing as a UFO, notwithstanding the overwhelming evidence to the contrary, it should be pointed out, that there is circumstantial evidence that disastrous effects have already been attributed to UFO activity in more than one nation, including the UNITED STATES.

Destructive effects have all ready been exhibited, whether or not intentionally in every instance, which we need to consider when drafting a plan for coping with an emergency situation where UFO's are involved. Some of those documented effects are as follows:

- Powerful electrical fields that they can project in a general or localized areas and the
- Psychological effects they have produced on the general populous or individual contacts.
- The disruption of air and ground travel has often been reported in the presence of UFO's.
- The ignition systems of auto and aircraft engines have apparently been affected by energized force fields to such an extent as to stop their operation, and headlights and auxiliary emergency lighting has ceased to function.
- Low level flying of a UFO has been known to cause motor vehicle accidents.
- Communication, Emergency and Otherwise, have been disrupted at the worst possible times.
- Regional power blackouts.
- Rendering nuclear weapons inoperative.
- Psychological and physical impairments.
- Fatal or near-fatal illnesses.

It should be understood that events surrounding issues of close encounters must be taken seriously. The average person walking the streets does not know to what extent the Federal Government has gone to prepare for the unknown.

The firefighter's training manual, "A FIRE OFFICER'S GUIDE TO DISASTER CONTROL", published in 1992 by Fire Engineering Books and Videos, and was written by firefighting experts, for use at the National Fire Academy Training Facility in Emmitsburg, Md.

Along with important and conventional firefighter training, a chapter titled "DISASTER CONTROL AND UFO's", attempts to explain certain risks associated with UFO's.

In Chapter 13 of the guide, includes UFO background information, what they might be, and the classification system adopted by J. Allen Hynek, shapes and the history of UFOs. It also lists several of the well-known UFO Organizations such as: MUFON, NICAP, CAUS, GSW, CUFOS AND APRO.

In a section subtitled, "ADVERSE POTENTIAL OF UFO's", the training manual takes a turn toward the unknown and conjecture. One might ask, why? The only answer is no one knows what the real dangers could be, but from past experience, we do have some examples of physical problems that have occurred in the past.

During the great sighting outbreak of early 1957, a number of close encounter witnesses experienced burns and related injuries such as unexplained rashes and hives. One witness watched an acorn shaped UFO hovering just behind her garage. She watched it for half an hour. In the days afterward she developed a body rash and vision problems.

Her doctor believed her symptoms suggested radiation poisoning. Reports of strange cancerous lesions abound.

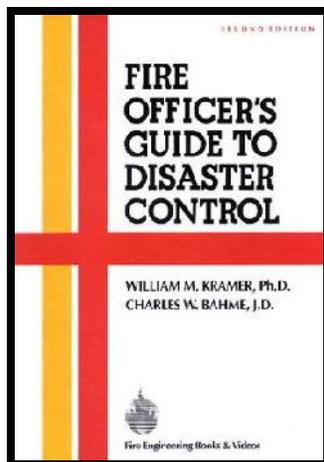

Under CFR-1910.120 CODIFIED FEDERAL RULES. TITLE 14-1211. There is a section titled, "FORBIDDING CONTACT WITH EXTRATERRESTRIALS".

The code states "WHOEVER WILLFULLY VIOLATES, ATEMPTS TO VIOLATE, OR CONSPIRES TO VIOLATE ANY PROVISION OF THIS PART OR ANY REGULATION OR ORDER ISSUED UNDER THIS PART OR WHO ENTERS

OR DEPARTS FROM THE LIMITS OF A QUARANTINE STATION IN DISREGARD OF THE QUARANTINE RULES OR REGULATIONS OR WITHOUT PERMISSION OF THE NASA QUARANTINE OFFICER SHALL BE FINED NOT MORE THAN $5000.00 OR IMPRISONED NOT MORE THAN 1 YEAR OR BOTH."

Remember, UFOs "DO NOT EXIST" or at least they are not threat to the United States of America, according to the US Government. If UFO's do not exist, then why is there training for First Responders at the National Fire Academy in Emmitsburg, Md., on how to handle a "UFO Crash Incident" and why are there Federal Statutes designed to make it illegal to have contact with extraterrestrials?

Photos taken in Pennsylvania June 2007 and classified as UFO Vortex's, but in reality they are lens flares caused by the bright lights in the lower portion of the photographs. Images were taken with a Kodak Z1745 Digital Camera.

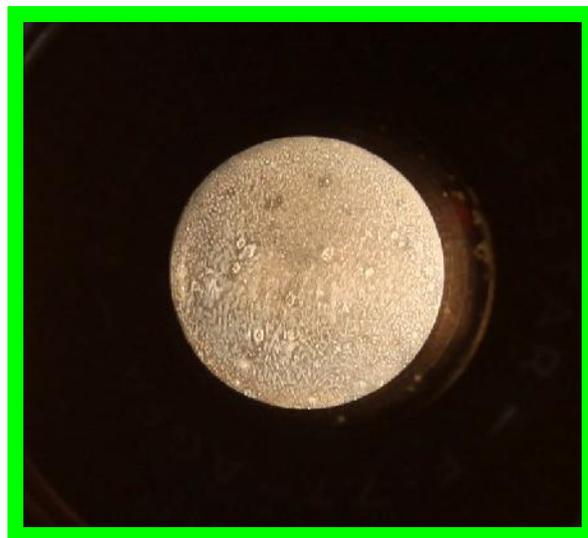

This is a common occurrence when taking a photograph with bright lights in the bottom of the frame.

Another Vortex but this time it is a paranormal classification.

This misidentification is the camera strap. This is extremely common in paranormal photos. Again it is best to remove the strap.

Is the above photograph a great shot of an orb, planet or UFO? No, it's a Lens Fungus.

LENS CARE

- Keep your lens clean.
- Get a lens cleaning kit at a camera shop.
- Do not spit on the lens to clean it.
- You can use eyeglass cleaner in a pinch.
- Do not spray directly on lens. Spray liquid on a clean cloth and wipe gently.
- Use of a lens filter also helps keep your lens free of dust and smudges, and easier to keep clean.

'UFO' on NASA camera

By TIM UPTON

WASHINGTON: The object is certainly unidentified and appears to be flying.

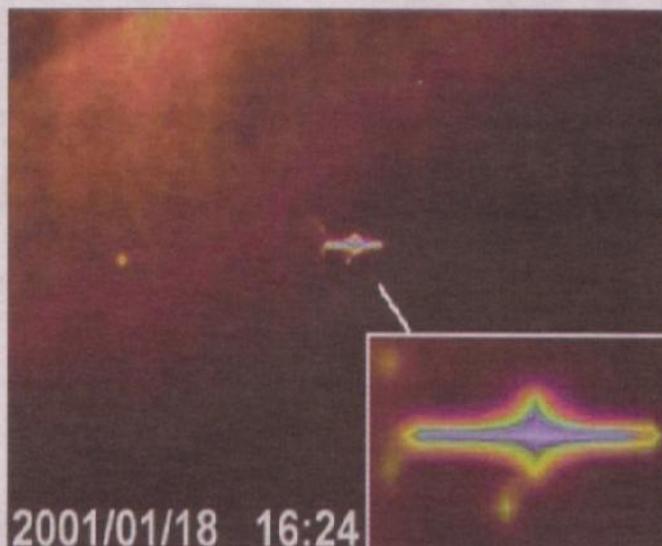

Whether this enlarged image really shows a UFO piloted by aliens remains to be seen. But according to the people who released it this photo and hundreds like it are the best evidence yet of the existence of spacecraft from other worlds.

UFO investigators say the image was captured by the Solar and Heliospheric Observatory (SOHO), a NASA satellite that was launched in 1996 to observe the sun. Since then, it is said, SOHO has captured hundreds of images of UFOs moving along a kind of alien superhighway.

SOHO is more than 1.5 million kilometres from Earth, with its camera trained towards the sun. Experts say the photographed objects are likely to be only hundreds of kilometres from its lenses.

Graham Birdsall, editor of UFO magazine, said: "The images are irrefutable in that they are from official satellites owned by NASA. They resemble the kind of spacecraft we used to see in sci-fi films like Star Trek."

UTTERLY ALIEN: The image investigators say shows a UFO.

UFOs at defense sites told in CIA documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Strange flying visitors to several defense installations in recent years are reported in nearly 1,000 pages of documents recently released by the Central Intelligence Agency.

The documents were obtained under a Freedom of Information suit by the Ground Saucer Watch, an organization based in Phoenix, Ariz., which monitors reports of unidentified flying objects. Further documents and film have been requested.

William Spaulding of GSW said the documents indicate that UFO's were reported over nuclear installations of the Strategic Air Command in November 1975, with one visitor described as "a 100-foot-diameter sphere (which) appeared to have craters around the outside."

Another base reported it was buzzed by a bright object the size of an automobile at an altitude of 1,000 to 2,000 feet.

Spaulding accused the government on Wednesday of a cover-up, alleging, "We have information to categorically prove the government is lying and that significant findings have been suppressed. We have five ex-intelligence officers who will testify to this coverup."

The Washington Post reported Friday that two F-4 Phantom jets scrambled in a 1976 incident over Iran, according to an Air Force report.

One Iranian pilot reported his plane's electronic equipment stopped working when the object was approached but resumed working when the planes veered away. The unidentified object was said to have been as large as a jetliner.

Spaulding said one of the newly-released documents states that a MIG jet fighter was destroyed over Cuba while chasing a UFO.

The documents disclose sightings of unexplained objects over Malmstrom Air Force Base in Montana, Loring Air Force Base in Maine and Wurtsmith Air Force Base in Michigan.

In reports from those bases and missile launching sites in other states, the UFO's are said to have hovered over nuclear weapons storage areas, sometimes as low a 10 feet off the ground.

Some of the reports describe the objects as unidentified helicopters, and the Air Force recorded the incidents as unauthorized helicopter overflights. Spaulding, however, expressed doubts that a helicopter could outrun jet planes.

FAMOUS OR INFAMOUS PENNSYLVANIA UFO CASE PHOTOS

Carbondale, PA Crash November 9, 1974

Eyewitnesses Describe Actual Crash Of A UFO

Midnight
Vol. 21 — No. 30 January 27, 1975 30 6

Carbondale is a small town of 15,000 people, snuggled among the coal mines of northeastern Pennsylvania. Its inhabitants are a conservative and sober lot, not given to exaggeration, impulsiveness or a tendency to shoot from the hip. Many are convinced they've had recent visitors from outer space. Their conviction is based upon the curious events of Saturday night, Nov. 9, and Sunday morning, Nov. 10, 1974, during which time a glowing, pulsating object lay in the water of a nearby pond.

Where did it come from? How did it get there? Nobody knows for sure. But many people in Carbondale are convinced that whatever it was, it was not the railroad lantern that a scuba diver dredged up from the depths of the pond on Nov. 11. That's the official version, sworn and subscribed to by authorities such as Carbondale Police Chief Paul Kelly.

"From the reports I've looked over, I have to buy the railroad lantern theory," Kelly told MIDNIGHT. "There were rumors to the effect that a UFO was removed, but there's no truth to that whatever — unless my men are lying or deceiving me."

Many citizens see things a bit differently than Kelly, who was out of town on vacation at the time. Here's how Robert D. Barry, director of the 20th Century UFO Bureau of Collingwood, N.J., reconstructs the situation. The UFO Bureau investigates reports of flying saucers. Three teen-age boys said they saw an object fall into the pond about 7:30 p.m. on Nov. 9. They saw a yellow-white glow in the center of the pond. The glow shifted shortly afterward to a point about 25 feet offshore.

The boys were ordered to remain in a police car for more than three hours. During that time, neighbors report, floodlights, vans and a crane were brought to the lake — in the dark of night, of course. Neighbors told Barry an object definitely was removed from the lake, and taken away by a van on a back road. Official recovery operations began on Monday, Nov. 11. With a crowd of 1,000 looking on, Mark Stanney, a scuba diver from Auburn, N.Y., braved the cold, dark water. He came out 10 minutes later, shivering and holding a railroad lantern with two bulbs and a six-volt battery.

Carbondale police immediately termed the incident just another UFO hoax. Barry is not unshakable in his UFO theory. He has an earthy explanation as well — but it has nothing to do with railroad lanterns.

"If it wasn't a UFO, then it just had to be part of a Russian spacecraft, Barry insists. He bases this supposition on a report the bureau received from an Air Force colleague. At the time, the Russians were conducting a moon shot. Their project went awry, however, and part of it just might have ended up in that pond near Carbondale, Pa.

"Air Force Intelligence had word of a possibly downed Russian missile," Barry said. "My speculation is that NORAD (the radar tracking system headquartered in Colorado) might have been the source. My speculation is one of the two. Either it was a small UFO reconnaissance craft or a Russian missile went down."

Pictures in the possession of the Carbondale Police Department would seem to back him up.

A Carbondale man, Jerome Gilotti, took them with a 35 mm camera. They reveal a circular glowing object, sometimes larger, sometimes smaller. Barry attributes the difference in size to refraction.

Barry contends that the glowing characteristic is a trait of all alien spacecraft. It couldn't have been a meteorite, because such an object would have been buried in the silty bottom of the pond by its force of impact.

What really did happen there? Unfortunately, as with the case of most UFO controversies, we'll probably never know the full story.

Declassified docs show Air Force Flying Saucer. "Project 1794"

Recently declassified documents from the U.S. Air Force reveal a Cold War-era plan to build a round, vertical take-off and landing aircraft that can only be described as a flying saucer. The truth isn't out there ... it's been stored in a warehouse for 56 years. The National Declassification Center in College Park, Md., opened one of more than 100 cardboard boxes from the Air Force recently and came across a 114-page document from 1956 sure to interest the tin-foil-hat crowd: a document describing a secret program by the Air Force to build a flying saucer.

"These records have been classified probably since their creation during the '50s," Neil Carmichael, director of the declassification review division at NDC, told Popular Mechanics, which first posted news of the complete document. "It's like somebody went into somebody's office, emptied out a filing cabinet, stuck it in a box, sealed it, and sent it off to the federal records center. It was deemed permanently valuable at some point in its life and that's why we have it today."

Last week, the group posted a few images and a brief blog entry on the program, which was estimated to cost just $3.2 million, the report said. But an NDC representative told FoxNews.com that the group is "in the process of digitizing" the entire document and has not yet released it onto its website. Carmichael told FoxNews.com this document is just a drop in the agency's bucket. 'It never ceases to amaze me what we find in the records.' - Neil Carmichael, director of the declassification review division at NDC.

"We have about 400 million pages to get through the executive order President Obama signed in 2009," he said. "I tell my techs, 'If you find anything interesting, let us know.'" And every once in a while, they find something good. "Some of these reports are kind of interesting," he told FoxNews.com. Talk about an understatement! The newly released documents, not yet posted on the website of the National Declassification Center, offer details on a Cold War-era plan to build a round, vertical takeoff and landing aircraft that can only be described as a flying saucer.

The disk-shaped craft -- which comes complete with an ejector seat and was powered by a "ram jet" -- was designed to reach a top speed of Mach 4 and reach a ceiling of more than 100,000 feet, according to the lengthy document, which is titled "Project 1794, Final Development Summary Report" and dated 1956.

It reveals that the Air Force had contracted the construction of the craft to a Canadian company, Avro Aircraft Limited in Ontario.

“Six Armstrong Siddeley Viper turbo-jets -- 1,900 lb. thrust, 22.0” overall diameter, 525 lb weight each -- are mounted radially in the wing, exhausting inwards; and used as gas generators to drive a pair of contra-rotating centrifugal impellers by means of a radial inflow turbine,” the document says.

Much of the 114-page document is devoted to detailed descriptions and schematics of the propulsion system, as tested in a scale model seen in a series of photographs. But the report appears to conclude that the flying saucer was better in concept than actual execution.

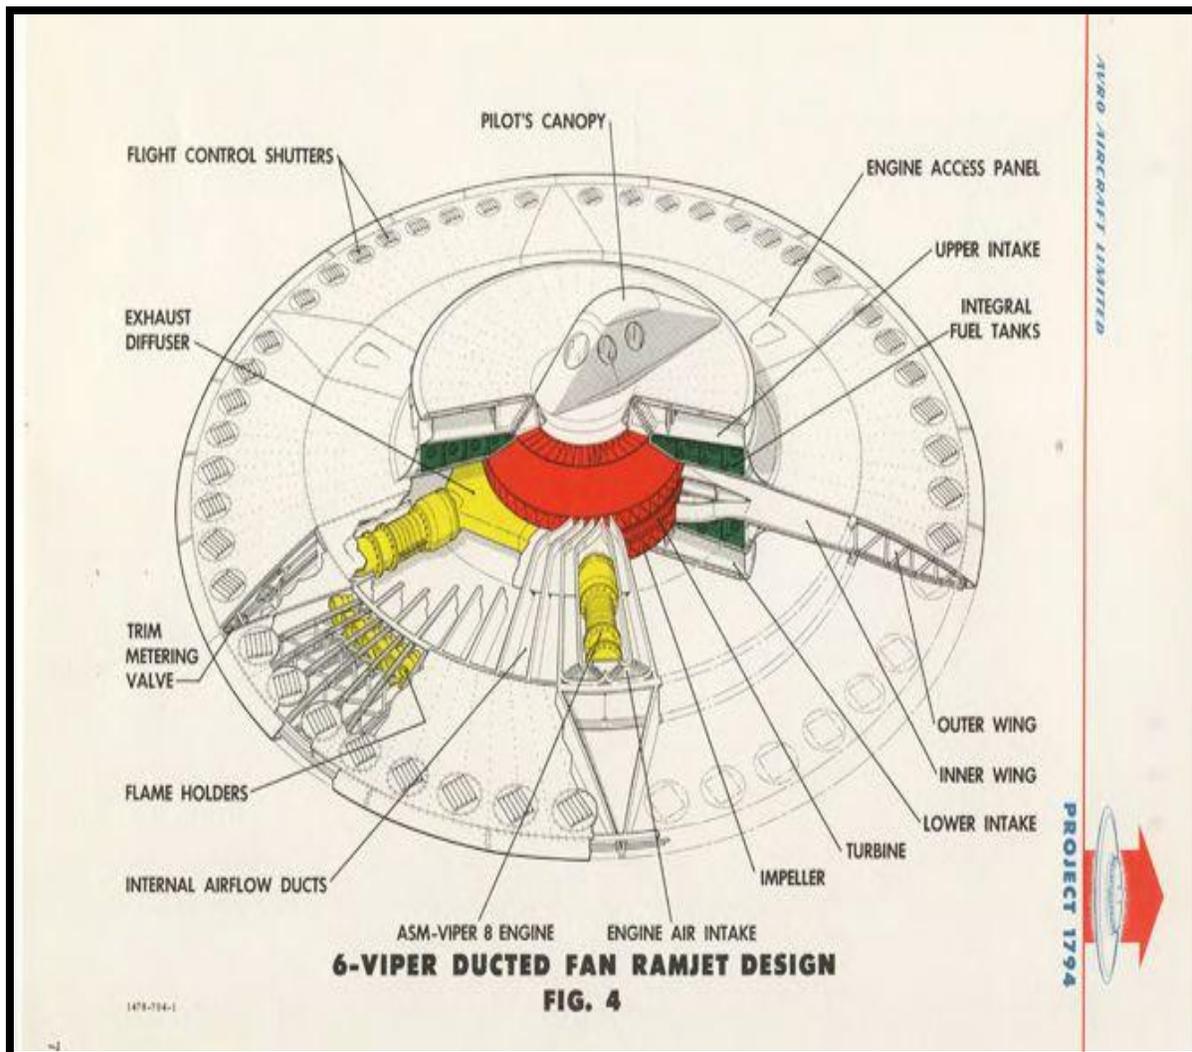

“The efficiency of the airframe at supersonic speed appears good and that of the engine reasonable, so that a long supersonic cruise range is also forecast,” it said. But in testing, the craft -- essentially a glorified hovercraft -- simply didn’t work as hoped.

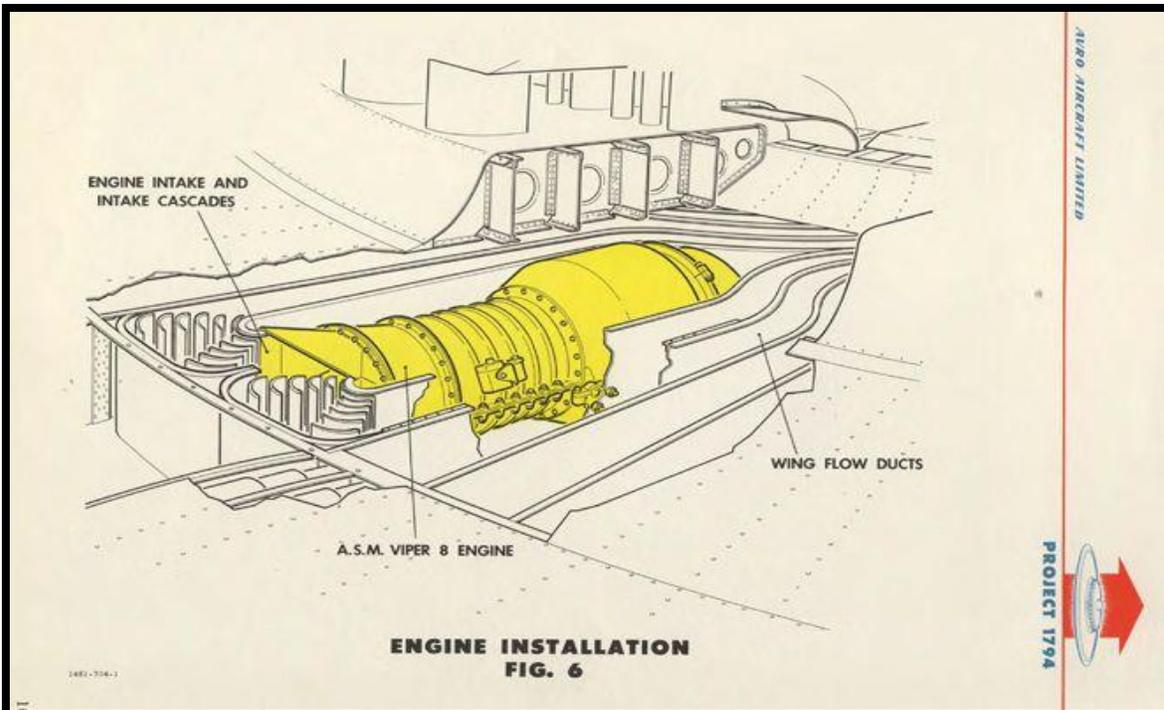

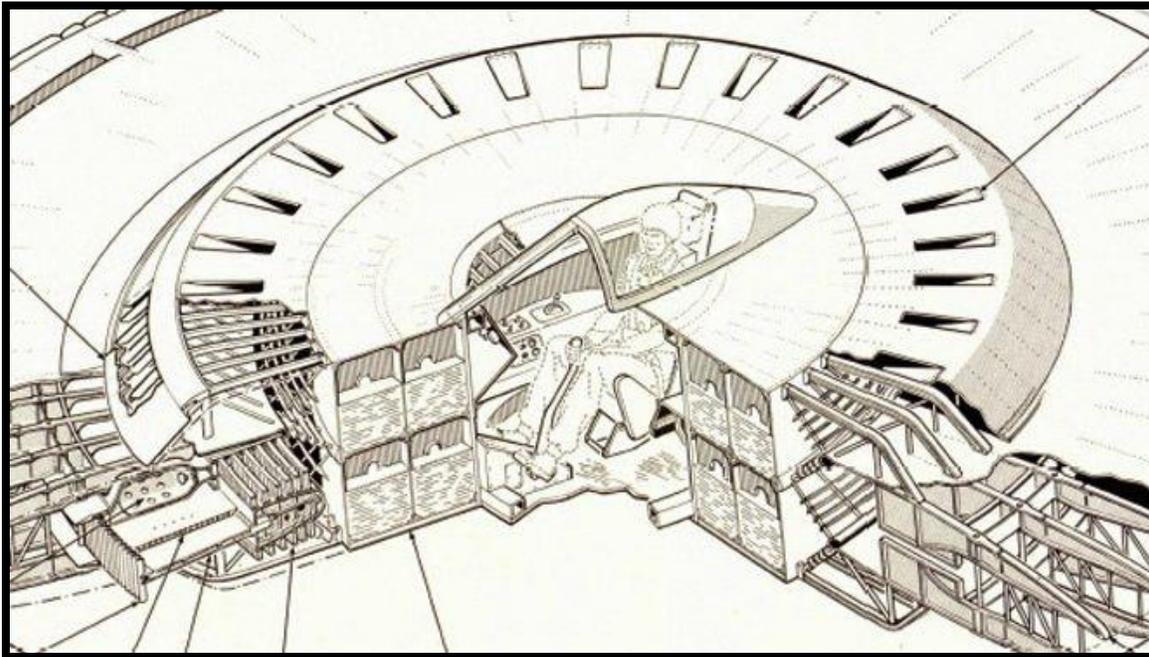

“Apparently, as it gained in altitude, it would start to wobble uncontrollably,” Carmichael explained. The report notes a followup plan to develop weapons suitable for the saucer, to allow it to be used as for reconnaissance, as an interceptor, or as a tactical bomber.

Still, the concept of the U.S. Air Force attempting to build a flying saucer at the height of the Cold War is captivating, leading some to posit a connection between the rumors of a crashed saucer at Roswell, N.M., and the public fascination with Area 51.

After all, the Air Force dubbed it Project 1794 -- rearrange those numbers and you'll get 1947, the year of the Roswell incident.

"I've been doing this for 20 years and it never ceases to amaze me what we find in the records," Carmichael told FoxNews.com.

NOTABLE UFO QUOTES

"The evidence is overwhelming that Planet Earth is being visited by intelligently controlled extraterrestrial spacecraft. In other words, some UFOs are alien spacecraft. Most are not. It's clear from the opinion polls and my own experience, that indeed most people accept the notion that some UFOs are alien spacecraft. The greater the education, the more likely to accept this proposition"

-- Stanton Friedman Defense Contractor Nuclear Physicist

"The UFO phenomenon being reported is something real and not visionary or fictitious"

--General Nathan Twining Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff, 1955-1958

"When the long awaited solution to the UFO problem comes, I believe that it will prove to be not merely the next small step in the march of science, but a mighty and totally unexpected quantum leap." "We had a job to do, whether right or wrong, to keep the public from getting excited"

--Dr. J. Allen Hynek, Director US Air Force Project Blue Book as a Scientific Consultant, Astronomer, Investigator.
