PARANOMAL TIPS - EVP

- Use good digital recorders rather than analogue, to reduce mechanical sounds
- Select a high quality record mode (5000 Hz frequency response or higher)
- Some microphones increase their sensitivity when it is quiet (making background noise intrusive) - set the sensitivity to a fixed level if possible
- Leave the recorder on a stable surface - movements or knocks to the recorder can be easily picked up by microphones
- It is possible to get electromagnetic interference from nearby electrical equipment (particularly mobile phones) - keep away from such equipment

PENNSYLVANIA LEGENDS

Pennsylvania
The Storm Hag

She lurks below the surface of the lake near Presque Isle, her lithe form forever swimming through the weeds and the mire. Pale and green of skin, her yellow eyes shine luminously in the dark, and her thin long arms wrap themselves around the unwary, while foul-green pointed teeth sink into soft flesh and sharp nails at the end of long bony fingers stroke you into the deepest sleep there is. She is called by many names, but to sailors of Lake Erie, she is known as the Storm Hag.

The creature is a Sea Witch. An evil Jenny Greenteeth who summoned the storms and pulled shipwrecked sailors down into her evil embrace to live with her forever at the bottom of the lake. Sometimes she waits until the calm right after the storm to attack. When the sailors relax their guard, lulled into thinking that the danger had passed with the storm, the Storm Hag bursts forth from the dark waters of the lake, spewing forth lightning and wind like venom. And the ship will vanish - never to be seen again.
