Black Eyed Children

Black-Eyed Children (or Black-Eyed Kids) is an urban legend of supposed paranormal creatures that resemble children between the ages of 6 and 16, with pale white skin and black eyes, who are reportedly seen hitchhiking or panhandling, or are encountered on doorsteps of residential homes. Tales of black-eyed children have appeared in pop culture since the late 1990s.

PENNSYLVANIA LEGENDS

DEAD MAN'S CREEK (Girard, Erie County) This creek is located on the Battles estate, and is often called Battles Creek. The legend goes that there was a community celebration being held in the summer of 1861 on the Battles grounds and as two men were walking by the creek, they stumbled across the body of a dead man floating in the shallows. He looked to be about 21 and his throat was slit from ear to ear. The dead man was dressed in a new, perfectly tailored military uniform – from the War of 1812! Nobody knew who he was. His discovery was the talk of the town that summer. Did his murderer come up with a bizarre plan to frustrate local lawmen? Some darker theories suggested he was transported from the past or another spiritual plane to the creek (Spiritualism was the rage at that time.) No matter how he got there, his ghost is alleged to walk along the creek looking for his assassin. That's the legend on why tiny Battles Creek became known locally as Dead Man's Creek.

DEVIL'S RUN (Penfield, Elk County) The tale involves three 18th century trappers camping near Penfield. They're sitting around the campfire late at night, making plans for the next day's hunt. Suddenly, on the other side of the fire, the Devil appeared. The hunters, quite naturally, took off into the woods, running toward the nearest settlement some 15 miles away, and the Devil was hot on their heels. Two of them made it, but the third was never heard from again. The ground they covered making their escape was left totally barren, and nothing to this day grows over it. In truth, the stretch referred to as Devil's Run follows the length of a glacial deposit and small vegetation grows there, but nothing thick or tall. Not too surprisingly, this part of the state was known to the Lenni-Lenape the "Land of the Devil."
