The Psychology of POWER

Also: A MESSAGE FOR TEENAGERS: "17 Going on 80"

COSMIC AWARENESS is the Force that expressed itself through Jesus of Nazareth, the Buddha, Krishna, Mohammed, Edgar Cayce and other great avatars who served as 'Channels' for the 'Heavenly Father' and who speaks again today as the world begins to enter the 'New Age' of spiritual consciousness and awareness. Since 1963 Cosmic Awareness has been communicating through carefully-trained channels. The information contained herein was received from deep super-conscious 'trance' levels and 'interpreted' by an entity affiliated with C.A.C. This information is for those who desire to help in bringing in the New Age. Throughout the thousands of 'Readings' given through these various channels, Cosmic Awareness tells us not to believe anything, but to question, explore, doubt, and discover for yourself, through your own channel what is the truth. Cosmic Awareness will only 'indicate' and 'suggest'. Neither C.A.C. or any of the Interpreters is responsible for anything Cosmic Awareness states in any of these readings, nor does C.A.C. or the Interpreters necessarily agree with the statements of Cosmic Awareness. The Interpreters interpret the energies as they see them in trance levels and are not personally responsible for what is said. The Interpreters published herein have no connection with, nor control over the editorial comments and material, including illustrations. This is entirely the responsibility of the editor. Members of C.A.C. are invited to send in questions of general interest to ask Awareness for possible publication in this newsletter. Paul Shockley, Interpreter

WHY DO SOME ENTITIES TRY TO HOLD POWER OVER ANOTHER?

QUESTION:

A question from J.W., Athens, Ohio. She writes: "Awareness, could you please speak about power? What root need do entities seek to fulfill when they make or attempt to make some other entity suffer or feel humiliation? Thank you."

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness suggests this question be read again.

(Question is reread)

This Awareness indicates that the concept of holding power over others, or over another is related to a feeling of insecurity, wherein the entity seeks to control his or her environment, which includes those people therein; that wherein an entity is attempting to have a kind of security in the environment in which he or she lives, there is often that feeling that having control of the environment gives the individual security to exist according to his or her own desires within that environment.

This Awareness indicates that this need is stronger for some than for others; that wherein an entity feels comfortable in sharing the give and take of society, in sharing control, in sharing with others their space, their desires and preferences, allowing others to have an equal share in the action of a society, this type of democratic attitude is that which allows for entities to relate to one another and work out any kind of disputes or differences without fear of being put in a position of insecurity.

This Awareness indicates that this type of democratic attitude in terms of society results from a home life or background in which the entity has lived a life or experienced conditions wherein the entity has a sense of trust for those around him or her, whereas the entity who feels the need to excel and hold power over others often has grown up in a world or circumstances in which he has not had a position whereby he or she could be relaxed and trusting of others. The entity therefore, seeks to fulfill that need for security by being in charge. Often this is the result of living under a dominant force or rule, and having authority over one to such a degree that the entity needs to escape, and once escaping, needs to assure that it never happens again, and therefore lords it over others to prevent them from lording it over him or her.

Question: What Happens to the Child of the Alcoholic

This Awareness indicates that there is another interesting factor related to this, particularly associated with children of alcoholics, wherein an alcoholic parent will raise a family in which chaos in the home is common, due to the alcoholism, and the child that develops out of this type of family is very often programmed into a type of attitude that demands control of his or her society as a result of the chaos experienced in childhood family life, thus the child of the alcoholic, upon becoming an adult, may rule the roost, so to speak, insisting on having some type of control of others around him or her.

This Awareness indicates that this can be so basic and subconscious that the entity does not even realize he or she is doing this or that even if realized, the entity cannot bring himself or herself to stop. This Awareness indicates that there, from the standpoint of spiritual development, in relation to chakras, the movement of energy up the spine, up through the chakras and to the pineal; that when the pineal opens with a surge of energy, the entity experiences a sense of great power and worth, feeling himself or herself to have some type of highly evolved psychic, spiritual or temporal earthly power, and such an entity reaching this stage of development, often can move into those types of occult levels or into levels of tyranny, whereby through intellect, through politics, through position and status, or through brute force, the entity begins to accumulate power, hold power and may feel that this is the highest position attainable, or the highest position desired, except that the entity wants to consolidate that power even more by having greater power over others, to assure that he or she will not be threatened by any upstart.

The Pituitary--The Doorway to Divine Energies

This Awareness indicates that above the pineal is the chakra of higher development, the pituitary; that this pituitary chakra allows the entity to recognize the futility of power-seeking and allows the entity to experience the world of energies beyond the temporal, and may be recognized as likened unto the doorway to the cosmos or the doorway to the Divine Energies, and when the pineal and pituitary are functioning together, with both being opened, the entity can then experience the concept of the Godhead, or God Consciousness, along with mercy and understanding and wisdom.

This Awareness indicates that too many entities reach the development of the pineal and believe this to be the highest attainment, and then hold to this and climb ever higher in the realm of power through the priestcraft or other political or hierarchy control, whether official or unofficially, whether labelled such, or merely an attitude. This Awareness indicates that many entities, having no labels or titles at all still have the attitude of the high priest or the ruler and emperor, even if it is only within the family or home, and this type of power attitude is the same, regardless of whether it is over one entity or over multitudes.

The Jim Jones-Charles Manson Types

Likewise, whenever patterns are established, their intention is to continue being the same, or being repeated unless there is some other energy that stops that intention, modifies the intention or alters the intention in a manner that breaks the movement of the pattern. This Awareness indicates that many entities do not feel they have the strength to break such a pattern and indeed enjoy, even if not consciously, may enjoy the relationship in which they do not have to be in charge, but can simply allow someone else who seems more powerful, who seems more knowing, to dictate to them what to do, thus, the Charles Manson types and the Jim Jones types, whereby entities can obey their leader without questioning, or those types who follow the leader in terms of the king or president or the military ruler, whereby without question, without thinking, they can simply obey, and thus they become subservient to the powers, and yet there is a certain degree of comfort for them in not having to solve problems themselves, make decisions, figure out the issues, or determine what to do regarding circumstances that come up. They simply ask for orders, and obey.

This Awareness indicates that many individual relationships are the same, whereby the entity does not want to take control of his or her life, be fully in charge of his or her own soul, and therefore, relies on someone else who is willing to play master, and thus the entity, following the master, whether this be a spiritual leader or a personal acquaintance; following their own master, the entity feels a certain amount of comfort and shrugs off responsibility for his or her own life, and puts his or her own life in the hands of this other, who is willing to take on the responsibility.

The Law of Inertia

This Awareness indicates that were the entity who rules one entity put in a position by circumstance of ruling millions, he would not necessarily be any wiser or any more capable; that the entity would still seek to maintain his power over the multitudes, even as he might seek to maintain the power over the one individual. This Awareness indicates that it is sometimes difficult to break power over one, for once patterns have been established in a relationship they tend to continue; this likened unto the Law of Inertia, wherein energy is moved, it continues in that direction until some force opposes or deflects the energy.*

* This is a new Cosmic Law not published previously. Please make a copy and put with your booklet, "The Cosmic Laws of Cosmic Awareness."

War Between the Masochist and the Sadist

This Awareness indicates that this might not be so tragic, although it does not allow the entity to grow and develop his or her own skills and talents of leadership, it might not be so tragic except that too often those in power are not really concerned about the welfare of their followers so much as they are concerned about using the energies of their followers, of gaining support from their followers for the purpose of feeling important; for many entities who seek power cannot get recognition from enough sources, and those who do give recognition are valued quite highly and must be controlled so that they do not escape and do not go elsewhere or recognize someone else as being of great importance.

This Awareness indicates that because of this attitude there are many masochists. The masochist is the one who, not necessarily inclined to accept pain, although this may be the extreme condition, or desire pain, but desires rulership, desires to have someone ruling over him or her, and thus the ruler, the sadist, in its extreme condition, rules it over the masochist, and likewise, there are many levels in between wherein entities switch roles or play roles of varying degrees. This Awareness indicates the varying degrees may simply be that wherein one entity appears to have greater control over the other at all times; one is the follower and one is the leader.

This Awareness indicates where these roles are not too extreme, this is not seen as an unhealthy relationship. Both parties may be receiving what they desire from the relationship without either being harmed to any great degree, although it can create a stagnant situation or stagnation of soul development for both entities. This Awareness indicates that when it is in an extreme degree, then of course there can be extreme suffering and extreme karma developing from this.

This Awareness indicates that there are also those relationships based on the same principles which shift back and forth, whereby for a period, one entity lords it over the other, then the other gains the upper hand and lords it over the first entity, and then it switches again. This Awareness indicates that generally this is likened unto a tug-of-war between two parties who are perhaps basically equal but cannot get along and cannot relate with each other except in terms of a power struggle.

This Awareness indicates there are also the situations whereby two parties are together in a conflict whereby one lords it over the other in this department or this particular area of the relationship, while the other lords it over the first party in this other department, thus, the one party has power over the other in a particular area, but is controlled by the other in still a different area, and this kind of give-and-take of control and being controlled is the most common among entities in relationships, particularly of a close proximity.

How Joint Power Works

This Awareness indicates that often these are based on conditions of necessity in their relationship, according to the circumstances which bind the entities together. This Awareness indicates for example, two entities living together, wherein one rules the pocketbook, and the other rules the domestic maintenance of comfort for the other; this type of relationship is extremely common. One brings home the bacon, as they say, and the other cooks it. This Awareness indicates that one takes care of the home, the other controls the money or controls the career factors, and both are dependent upon upon each other in some areas, while also are in control of the other in certain other areas. The wife, who tells the husband: "Don't put your feet on the coffee table!" is in control of the situation so long as the husband allows this control, and the husband then in turn may have his particular areas where he tells the wife: "Don't spend money on that new hat, on those new clothes, without first getting my permission!"

This Awareness indicates that in either case, these parties have power over the other to the degree that they are allowed by the other to hold that power. This Awareness indicates that it is the same in all things; that to the degree that one entity allows the other to hold power, that power is held. That in some cases, an entity is incapable of wresting power from another and therefore, allows the power to continue. This Awareness does not advocate that entities who are in a position of weakness go forth and challenge tanks and missiles if they have no chance of winning. It advocates rather, that entities know what the limitations are and if they do not like the power that is over them, to find ways whereby that power can be diffused, diminished or whereby they become stronger, or whereby they escape some way from the power, and It advocates that entities seek freedom from oppressive power, but not be intolerant of power that is unavoidable and necessary in the maintenance of a society.

This Awareness indicates there will always be some need for entities to hold power in some areas over others, and entities who are not themselves on a power-seeking trip should not be alarmed to the point of challenging every type of power that exists, but should learn to work within the energy field of many different types of authorities, powers and control factors, so long as these are not overwhelming and so long as they do not limit one's own potential growth and development and so long as they are still given the freedom to develop and grow within those power structures.

Work Within the Storm—Not Challenge It

This Awareness indicates that even the storm has power, but even within the storm it is possible for entities to function and to do things within that limitation. This Awareness suggests that rather than challenging the storm, it is sometimes more important and beneficial to learn to work within the storm, to learn to work within the system. This Awareness indicates however, when the storm becomes too rough, when the system becomes too oppressive, it also can be a time in which entities must respond to the system, to the storm, and struggle against the waves, the winds and the forces, to find freedom.

This Awareness indicates the concept of freedom is that which is relative, for there is always the possibility of more freedom. This Awareness suggests to entities that it is important for entities to recognize when they have enough freedom. This Awareness indicates that too much freedom creates conditions whereby entities can suffer extreme chaos, just as too much security can lead to extreme chaotic conditions. This Awareness indicates that there is a happy balance in between the too-much-freedom and the too-much-security.

How a Child Can Move Into Bondage

A Message for Teenagers

This Awareness indicates in regard to those who allow power to rule over them; these entities are accepting the security, but are often losing the freedom, and in throwing off the power to gain freedom, they sometimes also lose their security. The child who leaves home to find freedom loses the security of the parental protection and nurturing and sustenance, but the child has many opportunities for freedom, and these opportunities can often lead to involvement with others wherein they again, in their pursuit for security while pursuing freedom, begin to lose their freedoms and move into bondage, which may be worse than that which the parents placed upon them.

Thus, they have found freedom from their parents, only to move into bondage with someone else, whereby in seeking security and nurturing, they give up the freedom they fought for. This Awareness indicates that it is important for young people to learn how to place their priorities in order; the timing of events in one's life is of extreme importance if an entity is to experience an orderly life of greater harmony, for an entity can throw off parental controls, rush forth, have babies, and then seek to find employment, or seek to find a place wherein to raise those children, or seek to find a husband or mate to share the raising of children with, or seek to find someone who will support and care for the entity, and the entity can think that: "My parents aren't going to tell me how to live my life! I will be free! I will go forth and have my children and have my home and all the things I ever wanted once I am free from my parents!"

This Awareness indicates that such children are always present in society, rushing forth to escape parental control, only to discover that they have run headlong into a situation whereby in order to have their needs provided they must come under the power and control of someone else, and that someone else is often much less caring than the parents ever were.

This Awareness indicates that wherein an entity can move graciously from home through the education system, finding a suitable occupation and finding, under comfortable conditions, a suitable mate, and then having children when there is greater stability for the children; this type of order and priority setting is much more favorable for all involved, creating less pain and less suffering all around.

The Most Dangerous Age in a Man's Life

This Awareness indicates that it is not simply a matter of morality, it is a matter of comfort to do things in an orderly fashion. This Awareness indicates that one wrong step at one moment in an entity's life may be taken and may result in a lifetime result or effect, the effect that lasts throughout the lifetime of the entity. This Awareness indicates the most dangerous time in the lives of individuals is that time between the age of 17 and 23, for it is during this period that entities make the most mistakes in their lives; wherein they are capable of going in any direction imaginable; they are leaving home, leaving the control of their parents, and can step into any direction and during that time, once the step is taken, it has been taken, and the entity cannot untake the step, and if the entity becomes involved in crime or in rebellion or in the making or taking of life; those actions are set and are an effect on the entity's life, and very difficult, if not totally impossible to erase.

This Awareness indicates that if the entity chooses to move from school toward the street gang, toward alcohol, toward drugs or toward traveling and adventure seeking, those steps will have their consequences. If the entity moves toward school, toward the study of some particular course of action, those steps will have their consequences, and during this period if the entity chooses a mate, and the choice is based on some momentary urge of the sexual energies, or some fantasy and dream of hoping to catch the football player who is the star of the school, or whatever, because this is the highest value the entity can find; then the entity who succeeds in pursuing that dream, grasping that first catch, and five or ten years down the road, when they are living with this entity whose only claim to fame is that he made so many touchdowns ten years ago in highschool, and now he sits around loafing, not working, drinking beer, watching football games, criticizing all of the players, bragging about how great he was, this entity may wonder: "How did I ever get tied up into this relationship?"

"You are 17 Going on 80"

This Awareness indicates once the step is taken, the step is taken. This Awareness indicates also, it is a time wherein some entities are afraid to take any step at all, and therefore do nothing, do not enroll in school, do not go out and seek relationships with others, they simply hang around home, kicking back, watching, waiting for the next movie or the next thrill that comes their way. They attempt little and do less. This Awareness indicates that such entities are also taking a step. They are taking a step in that they are doing nothing with their lives. They are stepping into limbo. This Awareness indicates there are many entities like this. That the solution cannot be found in running hither, thither or sitting still. The solution can only be found in self-examination, asking long-range questions in terms of long-range concerns: "You are 17 going on 80".

This Awareness suggests that in being 17 going on 80 or older, you must decide what to do with your life in terms of this long period ahead of you, for if you only think in terms of 17 going on 18, your decisions will be much different in regard to how you use your time. This Awareness indicates that the 17 year old, going on 18, is much more inclined to grasp the momentary thrill and see this as the highest and best of things, whereas the entity who says: "I am 17 going on 80", the entity is bound to look more closely at the choices of paths before him.

This Awareness indicates that in making this choice with a long-range view may determine whether you live a life with great joy, sustenance, freedom, happiness in your family, or whether you live a life imprisoned, directionless, without goals, being buffeted from here to there by friends, by thrill-seeking, by searching and hunting for nickels and dimes, or by involvement in ugly nasty relationships in which entities are hurt.

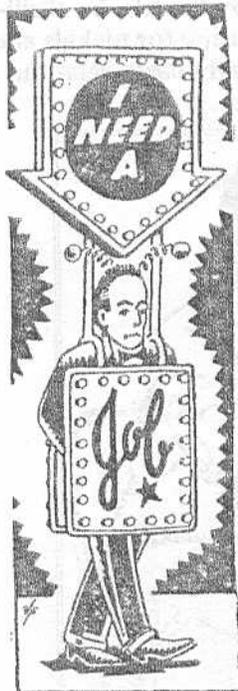

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE CRITIC

This Awareness indicates that there are so many choices entities have; when your choices are made in terms of your entire future, then you are more inclined to make the right choices. Unfortunately, the tendency for most teenagers and children is to make choices that satisfy the momentary needs, the biological needs, the physical appetites, the sensual cravings, and the efforts to study so many hours per week or to learn a skill do not bring thrills sufficient to lure some entities into developing a strong base for their future growth and fruition.

The Law of Leverage

If entities could only see how the Law of Leverage: energy given at this time, can reward them with such great enjoyment at a later time, but rather than seeing how this *Law of Leverage works, they will spend their energy and have nothing, then beg for something from someone who has carefully used their energy and developed through the use of leverage of time and growth, developed greater energy. Thus, they beg from those who have been wise, because they have been foolish.

This Awareness indicates that they lament and complain that they have nothing, and those who have used their energies wisely have so much. This Awareness indicates it is a tragedy that entities cannot understand the importance of making long-range decision during these important and crucial years. This Awareness indicates that though It spoke of the years 17 to 23 as the most crucial, this does not exclude all other years before, and after, for all years are crucial. At any time entities can make a change and begin working productively. It is just that most mistakes of a long karmic nature affecting one's life in a karmic manner, are made between the ages of approximately 17 and 23.

* This is a Cosmic Law not previously published. Please make a copy and place in your booklet, "The Cosmic Laws of Cosmic Awareness".

(FOLLOW-UP QUESTION):

In relation to the insecurity Awareness mentioned in regard to power, there's a slightly related subject to this, and I'm going to read part of an article called, Nasty Remarks Originate Deep and Insecure Feelings. It says: "While still in college, Theresa Amabile noticed that students and junior professors always asked the most biting, vicious and obnoxious questions at scholarly conferences. Now that she is Dr. Amabile and Brandeis professor, she is trying to discover what makes people brutally critical of others' intelligence, and she believes she has the answer.

"People who are insecure about their own intellectual standing go on the offensive by questioning the brain power of others, and it works. Super-critical people really do give the impression they're smarter. In short, nastiness pays. Ms. Amabile has conducted experiments on college students to test her theories about negativity, as she calls it. "We have evidence that people tend to be more negative in addressing other people's intelligence if they themselves are intellectually insecure for some reason," she says.

"Does it serve any purpose? Does it convince people that you are smart? It seems that the answer is yes, a very loud YES! She acknowledged that she had picked an ideal environment to research backbiting. Universities are, after all, famous for intellectual hissing, but she thinks her findings also apply to ordinary life, to any situation where someone feels slightly inferior in the IQ department.

"Those who cast aspersions pay a price however; they're not viewed as very nice people. Ms. Amabile found that ruthless critics are seen as insightful but mean, brilliant but cruel. On the other hand, those who have something positive to say are considered to be undiscerning but affable, plodding but friendly."

I'd like to ask Awareness if It agrees on these findings, and maybe It could expand a little more on this subject.

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates that this is quite accurate in her observation. This Awareness indicates that the entities who are generally most critical are the entities who themselves are most incapable of doing those things which they criticize in others. This Awareness indicates that there are many entities who are extremely critical and for years will be critical, but if you actually stop and look at what they do, you can easily see that either they do very little other than criticize, or they do things that are fairly easy and simple to do.

In one sense, they simply put themselves in a position of being a judge of everyone's work, because it has the effect of making everyone else jump for them, jump to their tune. This Awareness indicates that their opinion can be valued, even though their abilities may be extremely fragile; that once an entity establishes himself or herself as a critic or establishes criticism as part of his or her personality, others who relate to that entity become apprehensive, concerned about what the entity will say, because the entity is noted for being critical.

This Awareness indicates therefore, they may even attempt to pacify or please the other, the critic, in order to keep the critic from publicly denouncing the efforts of the entity. Thus, entities sometimes become subservient to the critics, giving up their own talent in order to please those who are critical, and may find themselves feeling less and less enthusiasm for their activities as they attempt to please the critic more and more, for often what happens is that the critic really doesn't know what is good, but is simply a critic, and no matter how much you want to please the critic, no matter how much you do what the critic asks for, the critic will find something else wrong with whatever you do.

This Awareness indicates that this is the nature of the critic; to find something wrong; that a good critic, if there is such a thing, is one who also points out things that are good. A good critic, if there is such a thing, is one who can encourage you and point to the areas that are good and need development in a manner whereby you feel positive about the criticism rather than feeling put down and belittled by the criticism.

This Awareness indicates that in all areas, regardless of whether an entity is a bricklayer or a politician, an artist or a driver of automobiles, or a dancer or any other activity; in all areas there will be those self-appointed critics who oppose something you do: "You turned left in a particular lane without signaling soon enough!", or "You danced too far over to the right!", or "You don't pick your feet up enough!", or "You pick them up too much!"...there are always those who can find fault with whatever you do.

The important thing is for entities to learn what they themselves want to do, what pleases them, and to listen to others to find out if there is something they are not seeing properly which the critic sees and which would be pleasing to you, to have incorporated in your work. This Awareness indicates that if you create a work, an action, and ask for the opinions of 20 different critics, you will not get 20 critics agreeing that your work needs this particular alteration...you will get 20 critics each telling you something totally different and they will be in conflict with each other, and therefore, you will be back where you were, needing to figure out what pleases you.

This Awareness indicates therefore, let the critics be likend unto mirrors that do not see clearly, but knowing that you yourself can't see clearly, you must use these mirrors to help you see a little better, and it is important to appreciate these critics, so long as they don't turn the cutting edge of the mirror and slice you too much.

This Awareness indicates if this should happen, It suggests that you become a critic yourself and criticize the mirror.

QUESTION:

A question from B.C., of Gap, Pa. He'd like to know: "Are contact lenses safe? I would like to wear mine all the time, but since I started wearing them again, I've had lots of problems with them. Would something like visualization help, or just getting into a positive frame of mind before I put them on? (His writing looks like he didn't have them on when he wrote the question). He says: "For example, it just doesn't feel too good putting them on in the morning, and I don't want to wear them half the time and glasses half the time," and he wanted to know if Awareness had any information on contact lenses.

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates that entities should avoid the short-term of short wear contact lenses, and should as soon as conveniently possible, switch over to those long-term contact lenses, those which can be worn for longer periods of time. This Awareness indicates that these being much softer and easier on the eyes and also of less difficulty in maintaining and using. This Awareness indicates that in the use of any type of contact lenses it is of great importance to use them properly, to know exactly how they are to be inserted, how often and how long they may be used, and how to cleanse and to keep them from becoming infected, or from causing infection to the eyes.

This Awareness indicates that the hygiene and the proper use as that which is most important. This Awareness indicates that in terms of the soft contacts there are instances wherein entities may put these in reversed, and they can become painful to the eyeball. This Awareness indicates that if inserted properly they should not cause this kind of pain to any considerable degree; that often in the early insertions, the soft lenses will require some getting used to. That after several days of wearing the eye begins to adjust and the lenses then become easier to insert without pain and the wearing time increases to longer periods.

This Awareness suggests however, that entities generally should not wear the soft contact lenses on the market today for more than approximately 10 days; this depending on the individual's reactions, and this Awareness suggests that the lens then be removed and cleaned, and the eyes given a period of rest without the lenses inserted. This Awareness indicates that this period may be but a few hours, such as during the time of sleeping; that to leave these lenses in on a permanent basis would not be advisable.

This Awareness indicates it appears however, that there may be another breakthrough in the future whereby lenses can be created that are safe to wear for months at a time. This will of course require certain substances, certain cleanser to be used by the individual.

This Awareness indicates that the hard contact lenses that have been used for the past two or three decades as those which are now obsolete in that they are more trouble than they are worth in comparison to the cost of the new soft contact lenses. This Awareness advises entities to switch to these extended wear soft-contact lenses if they have not already done so.

COMING -CONTACTS FOR ASTIGMATISM

FOLLOW-UP QUESTION:

Some ophthalmologists say that if you have astigmatism that contact lenses won't work. Does Awareness see that as valid? And also, does It see contact lenses coming in the future that will accommodate astigmatic people?

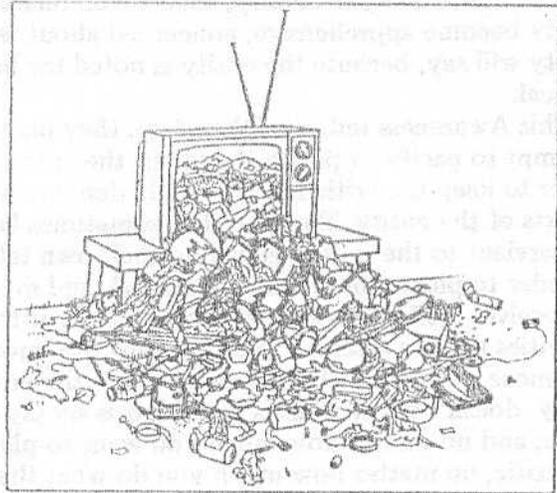

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates that it appears to have a validity depending on the progression of the condition. This Awareness suggests that the doctor could give proper analysis and testing to determine this for each individual case. This Awareness indicates that it appears in the future there will be not only contact lenses created for astigmatism and other problems of the eye, but it appears also that there will be other discoveries associated with acupuncture and the flow of energies through the nerves and their connection with the chemistry of the body, that these discoveries will begin to eliminate the need for artificial lenses.

This Awareness indicates that this as of now, has not been fully discovered, but that there are energies and explorations in areas of health which are quickly leading to this discovery of the eyes and vision as it is associated with the nervous system and the chemical system in the body.

ED's Note: There are problems with contact lenses that the powers that be do not want noised around. For instance, a lady friend of ours, while attempting to put in a contact lense one night, accidentally did something which pushed the lense around and behind her eyeball. It was extremely painful and there did not appear to be any way to extract it from that position. While she hollared in pain and cried, friends rushed her to the emergency wing of the local hospital where the lense was extracted with some kind of instrument.

Also, a medical report crossed my desk a year or so ago, stating that a cover-up was going on in regard to contact lenses, which is now a billion dollar industry. One case in point was a warning that many entities had actually gone blind when they got their face too close to flame or heat. There were several cases of welders wearing contact lenses, who lifted their protective visors while too close to their arc welders, and the heat melted the contact lenses onto the cornea. When the entities got home that night and tried to remove the contact, the cornea was removed along with it, permanently blinding the entity. This secret report stated that there had been considerable cases of welders and others who worked on jobs where intense heat was used, and were permanently blinded. That this information was being withheld because public knowledge of such might interfere with contact lense sales or cause panic among the users of contacts. The same thing applies to the super glues now available. You don't want to rub your eye (with or without contacts) if you have any of the stuff on your fingers for it will bind your finger to the eye. Entities who are aware of these factors should be able to wear their contacts with impunity.

THE LAW OF CHAOS... and THE LAW OF ORDER

This Awareness suggests the Law of Chaos is that Law which states that chaos exists when the observing mind cannot accept What Is.

This Awareness indicates the Law of Order exists when the observing mind can accept What Is, regardless of the appearance of the chaos.

THE C.A.C. "EQUIPMENT FUND"

--(HOW TITHING WORKS)

QUESTION:

A letter came in last December from J.H. of St. Augustine, Florida, and I'll read the letter, because he asks the question at the bottom of it, but it ties in. He says: "Dear Avaton and Vikki! Hello, and happy New Year. Enclosed is a $1000 check. Use this in any way you wish, but I would like to suggest that this be the beginning of an equipment fund to buy new printing equipment.

"I think that many other members will be willing to donate to this fund and should be given the opportunity to do so. If they give from the heart, they will receive God's blessing back to them, in money and other ways. To receive money, you have to plant money. To receive apples, you plant apples. By giving members the opportunity to donate, you are not dinging them, but giving them the chance to be blessed by God.

"I grew up being taught by my church to tithe, but was never given any real reasons why or how it would really benefit me, so I never tithed, but gave a small donation here and there. I started a jewelry store two years ago. I was going downhill until last summer and was almost broke. I started tithing and my business turned around right away. Since then, only 5 months, I have given several thousand dollars to God's causes. My business is doing better and better every day.

"Many members benefit from Cosmic Awareness Communications the way others benefit from a church. It is more than a magazine subscription to them, therefore, they should have the opportunity to donate, to help it do its work, and to grow and help others. Cosmic Awareness has challenged us to be Magi in the land of the Magi-nation. As Magi, we as members have a responsibility to help others benefit from the information coming from Cosmic Awareness Communications. This can be done more efficiently, and in a larger number, with proper equipment.

"I would like to suggest that the members be challenged to participate in a ten thousand dollar equipment fund. You can say that the idea came from one of the members, if you like. This one thousand can be the beginning of it. I would be glad to donate more next year to such a fund."

Here is the question: "I have been a serious student of how God's kingdom works all my life. I am now 7. I want to know practical ways that work. I have recently condensed my learning down to the following statement: "Give to God and God gives to you. Obey God, and God obeys you." Please ask Awareness to comment and elaborate on this statement. Thank you."

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates that this relates to the relationship of matter and anti-matter, or what may be termed matter and spirit. This Awareness indicates that anti-matter, or spirit, as that which is the consciousness, and matter is that which is the form, whether that form be physical or in terms of thought. This Awareness indicates that they always intermingle. Spirit and matter are interconnected, likened unto a marriage, until separated by the death of one.

This Awareness indicates that when there is a physical giving, it follows that a vacuum occurs on the physical level. Thus, the spiritual energies or anti-matter energies dictate that the vacuum must be filled, and thus, the energies are then returned in a greater proportion, this approximately ten-fold. Thus, when one gives one-tenth of one's assets or income, one can expect within a reasonable amount of time to have benefits of a similar nature, returned ten-fold.

This Awareness indicates that these benefits are not always the exact same nature as the gift, but often will be much the same. There also can be other blessings besides the gift of money. There can also be blessings such as the gift of love, the gift of happiness and so-forth. These may be returned to you. This Awareness indicates that likewise, in giving these other gifts such as the gift of love, the gift of happiness, sharing joy with others, there will also be a return.

This Awareness indicates that when one gives, one makes oneself vulnerable. That vulnerability serves as a kind of magnet, whereby energies are returned. This Awareness indicates that in terms of a gift to a spiritual source, a source which gives spiritual guidance or blessings, the source then returns a gift to the giver. That wherein an entity gives to a material cause, (this likened unto a kind of investment into some material purpose), the entity can expect some sort of return for his or her gift.

When one gives to another person, the entity can expect some sort of appreciation or return from that other person. When one gives to a spiritual cause, a spiritual purpose, the return comes from a spiritual level rather than from a person. That wherein an entity is serving as a representative for spiritual purposes and the gift is given as a personal gift to that entity, one can expect a personal appreciation or return. However, when it is given not as a personal gift, but as a gift to be used by that person for spiritual purposes, then that gift is to a spiritual energy which then returns from a spiritual source bearing gifts to the giver.

This Awareness suggests that these gifts manifesting for spiritual purposes, are those which return greater rewards. This Awareness indicates however, gifts given to individuals who are in need are also greatly blessed, and often bring even greater rewards if the motive and purpose for such is to assist the needy in a manner which does not simply prolong a dependency, but which increases the opportunity for that person to grow and develop spiritually.

This Awareness indicates in other words, to summarize: gifts which are given to enhance the spiritual abundance on this plane, whether through an organization or toward individuals, such gifts are highly blessed. This Awareness indicates that gifts presented to organizations which are simply feathering their own nests, and do not have the intention of increasing the spiritual abundance on this plane, even though they may call themselves spiritual, such gifts are often not very rewarding to the giver.

ED's Note: CAC does appreciate this gesture. Unlike many non-profit organizations that spend much of their assets in begging and pleading for more and more money (like some of the big so-called animal protection groups that send out a plush, expensive 4-color magazine twice a year, but very little of their income actually goes into helping the animals), the TV evangelists with that toll-free number flashing before your eyes in continuous subliminal programming, is another example, CAC has maintained the policy that if what we are doing is in any manner helping entities to grow spiritually, then our organization will be given what is needed. Campaigns of constant begging and whining for money is simply not needed. We have found that, over the years, this Cosmic Law has worked. It has not been overly generous, but just when a piece of equipment is about to go out, along comes a generous donation to get it fixed, or in a case or two, an actual piece of equipment was shipped to us, --it was used but it worked. We have also found that if things get really tight, and we mention this to the membership, that they take care of it for us promptly. Our equipment 'fund' is an ongoing project. We have never had the kind of money that would enable us to 'farm out' our printing jobs (as so many of you have suggested we do). If you want to know why, phone your local printer and ask him what it would cost to print 3 or 4 thousand copies of a 12 page booklet, then multiply that figure by 26 times. The figure is simply astronomical. We found that by printing our stuff ourselves, the money saved could be used in other ways much better, --like paying Interpreters, advertising, postage, envelopes etc.

We have ancient equipment, but somehow we keep it running. This editor, being also the printer of these communications, has an intimate relationship with our AB Dick press. I have taken it apart so many times, I could almost do it in the dark. Many of the parts simply are not made any longer, the company has informed us, hence I have devoted no small amount of time scavenging places as far away as Portland and Seattle that deal in old used office equipment. The counterpart of the original press that we bought 10 years ago for $2000, now sells for $12,000 I am told, so I continue scavenging for parts, and oddly enough, the part I was just looking for always seems to turn up. (I think Awareness is watching over us even in this department).

Anyway, donations of any kind to CAC are always welcomed and appreciated, and a certain portion does, in one way or another, go to the ongoing job of maintaining the equipment. My personal thanks to all of you who have, in the past, contributed to this fund, and as the Law of Gratitude so aptly expresses it: This is the big reason you are reading this communication today. (Avaton).

MSM -- ANOTHER BREAKTHROUGH BY THE DISCOVERER OF DMSO

QUESTION:

A question from D.C., Mt. Angel, Oregon. He writes: "Speaking of questions, I don't often ask many, but it would be nice to ask Awareness if you would, about a substance called MSM (methylsulfonmethane), which is said to occur naturally in the system, or in the diet, but is at its greatest concentration in mother's milk. It is said to do many wondrous things, but sounds as if it is basically a metabolic balancer, an immune system enhancer. It's another discovery of the resourceful researcher and father of DMSO, Dr. Jacobs. I would like to know if this substance is as wonderful as it is stated to be. Also, this is a corporation in Dunsmuir, California which is licensed to be the sole distributor of this product. It is offering this as a vitamin binder, this MSM and in a cambrie-like substance. It is soon to be presented in makeup and various other substances."

And he was wondering, he says, "I am just wondering if this would be a good operation to become involved with?" I think the basic question was, the validity of this MSM substance.

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates that this IS seen as being of value, and as having a potentially large market in the future; that this could be of great benefit to many entities. This Awareness indicates that this appears to be of value in approximately the same level as the Evening of Primrose Oil in its ability to help strengthen the immunity system. This Awareness indicates that there are seen considerable benefits in this action of strengthening the immunity system; that this can be of special value to those entities who were denied mother's milk during childhood, for often these entities did not fully develop certain metabolic circumstances within the system to have a strong immune system.

This Awareness indicates that It sees this as being a good future product for this entity to consider selling or being involved in the distribution aspect.

ED's Note: Please don't write CAC for the address of those who make or sell this substance. This information did not accompany the question and we have not seen any other literature on it. You might have a chat with those who run your local healthfood store or carefully read the copy in your mail order catalogs that sell healthfood type pills, vitamins etc.

ANOTHER CHANNEL FOR THE DARK FORCES -- INSECTS !

QUESTION:

A question from J.D., Brooklyn, New York, which is an interesting theory we would like to check out with Awareness. He writes:

"I have considered an idea in reference to disease and health which may provide a revolutionary view. It is, that there are good bacteria, such as yogurt bacteria and bad, disease-producing bacteria. It occurred to me that the bad bacteria are channels for the dark negative forces and are physical vehicles through which the dark forces enter this plane. A person who is negative and perhaps has holes blown in his aura, draws these bacteria to them, allowing the dark force to enter their psyche and take over the entity. Then the bacteria cause a chain reaction of conditions which bring about a greater manifestation of the dark force through the imbalances created.

"Bacteria as in yogurt channels the forces of Light. The same seems to be true with insects. In my apartment, spraying D-Cell water seems to ward off roaches. I can sense a very negative dark force motivating them."

Would Awareness comment on this theory?

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates this as extremely well defined; there is little that can be added to what you have presented. This Awareness indicates this as being an accurate description of the energies and forces.

This Awareness indicates that insects such as flies, mosquitoes, roaches, and other similar insects essentially may be considered as agents of the Alien Force; this not in reference to certain insects such as butterflies, moths, but to the disease-carrying insects in particular. This Awareness indicates these insects generally can tune in to certain types of energies and are drawn to these energies in a manner similar to the shark being drawn to blood; the energies being those of confusion, depression, and self-pity, or self-centeredness. This Awareness indicates that wherein there are opportunities for disease through filth, these insects also are attracted to this type of energy.

This Awareness suggests that entities who keep their place in order to not allow these insects into their domain and, this Awareness suggests also, that wherein an insect does enter in the domain of one who wishes to do creative or intense mental activities; wherein an insect enters into this kind of level, entities should consider this insect to be a spy for the Alien Force and remove that insect. This Awareness does not wish to cause entities to become paranoid of insects, but to understand their role in the scheme of things.

This Awareness indicates this especially in relation to flying insects. That these entities often serve as antennae for psychic forces who wish to penetrate one's aura and influence the energies or distract the energies of the entity whose aura has been penetrated by these insects.

(FOLLOW-UP QUESTION):

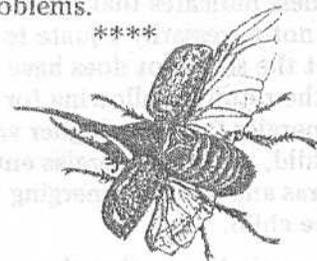

Awareness, are there other items that channel the forces of Light other than the D-Cells and yogurt mentioned, the bacterias?

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates this in the affirmative. This through foods, vitamins, minerals, through those living foods, through certain combinations compatible with living tissues, through certain chemicals and drugs which are conducive and compatible to the needs of living tissues. That oxygen and nitrogen and other elements in the atmosphere, properly balanced, also are enlightening and compatible to life. That there are electrical energies and forces which are compatible and induce greater vitalities. That there are certain images, concepts, ideas, which induce vitality and life while others of an opposite nature are incompatible to life and bring forth problems.

THAT "SOFT SPOT" ON BABY'S HEAD

(MORE ON WHEN THE SOUL ENTERS THE BODY)

QUESTION:

A question from E.C. of Keering, Ohio. "I am of the belief that at the time of entry into this plane of a soul into the physical babe, at the time of delivery that the top of the skull is soft and stays soft for approximately seven years, at which time the soul has completely entered the physical body to that extent that it is going to enter. In my healing work, I have been working with "special" children and am finding that in some instances the mother has found the top of the skull to be hard before seven years. In one case the mother said the child's skull was hard at delivery. I am concerned as I assume most of these are karmic and others had chosen for the lesson. There is also the question of the soul, if the skull was hard at delivery, did any of the soul enter? Does less of the soul enter if the skull hardens before seven years, and does the entry of less of the soul make a change in the over-soul or Higher Self?"

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates that generally this occurs before the age of four, that generally this is around the age of three. This Awareness indicates this is in reference to the entity entering the body, that this as being more like the identity of an entity, which enters the physical body at a particular age when the body appears to be sound enough for the spirit to enter. That essentially, this is likend unto an action whereby the spirit hovers around the body as it is being formed, and enters on occasion, but spends most of its time out of the body.

This Awareness indicates that there comes a time when it enters and stays, and most entities will remember only back to a particular age wherein they recall being themselves in their own body; these entities having difficulty recalling being around before that time, generally this as approximately the age of two and one half, or later. This Awareness indicates that some entities can recall being younger, but this is quite rare. This Awareness indicates in present times however, many of the newborn children are being born with greater consciousness, greater self-awareness; this self-awareness is that which the questioner is equating to the concept of the soul.

This Awareness indicates that the soft spot on the head does not necessarily equate to this self-awareness, that the soft spot does have some effect in relation to the pituitary allowing for greater reception of energies from the higher vibratory rates for the child, as these energies enter into the pituitary chakras and assist in energing the aura and the body of the child.

This Awareness indicates that those whose heads are not such that they are soft, this does not necessarily imply that they are not receptive of this energy, for these entities may have received an earlier energy, and may be evolving in a different manner so that their completion is not dependent on the soft skull. This Awareness indicates that this has much more to do with the chemical balance of the mother and child through dietary factors than any spiritual assets or liabilities or causes for its effects.

WORKING WITH "SPECIAL" CHILDREN

(DO NOT DENY THEM A SOUL)

QUESTION:

The second part of his question was: "Should I continue in my efforts to increase the ability of these children by physical stimulation of the nerve endings in the feet, and psychic healings wherein the soul is requested to make complete use of the physical vehicle? I have been told that these children are doing better in school after this type of attention, and it is possible that these special children are in this physical and mental condition because the soul has not entered the body completely?"

COSMIC AWARENESS:

This Awareness indicates that the physical therapy mentioned as that which can assist the entity in becoming more self-aware. This Awareness suggests that you use the term 'self-aware' rather than use terms which appear to deny them of having a soul, for this can cause much antagonism toward you from their parents or from others. This Awareness suggests that you concern yourself not with their having or not having a soul, (for indeed these entities do have their souls), but that you concern yourself with their level of self-awareness and take those various actions which can help them to become more aware of themselves in a manner which is acceptable to them, that loving attention focused toward them in a way which allows them to look at themselves, examining their toes, hands, fingers, their body, seeing themselves in a mirror, or feeling various types of experiences such as water, listening to sounds, rattles and various types of musical instruments: all of these types of stimulation allow the entity to become more self-aware.

This Awareness indicates that painful stimulation also allows entities to become self-aware but can carry the danger of causing the entity to feel disapproval for self, to feel hostile toward the world. This Awareness indicates therefore, that pleasant surroundings are best as beneficial methods for helping the entity to become more aware, and these surroundings should include things which reflect in some way on the entity so that the entity becomes aware of his or her ability to produce these sounds, to cause certain reactions, or to experience certain reactions from external forces. This Awareness indicates that the entity needs to become aware of what is self, what is not self, what the self can do, what the self can feel, what the self can hear, touch, smell, taste and see.

Big Brother's Computer Watching You

EXCLUSIVE TO THE SPOTLIGHT

By James P. Tucker Jr.

Odds are, "Big Brother" is watching you. The government now has 288 million computerized records on at least 114 million Americans—well over half the adult population.

Those are minimum figures found in a study recently conducted by the Office of Technology Assessment, an arm of Congress. It depended on the federal agencies for the figures.

Today's technology "permits the instantaneous linkage of a large number of record systems that would capture and consolidate, for example, gasoline credit card transactions, telephone calls, retail credit card transactions, bank card transactions and transactions with government agencies," OTA reported.

INTIMATE PROFILE

The capability of "linking" computer data among all the agencies now allows the Internal Revenue Service to build an intimate "profile" of every taxpayer (SPOTLIGHT, Oct. 7, 1985). Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole has already said, in an exclusive interview, that her department's new computers on every licensed driver in America will be linked with the IRS computer system (SPOTLIGHT, Nov. 25, 1985).

The IRS has long been energetically snooping on Americans, OTA revealed, but until the recent computer technology emerged, it was more difficult. OTA reported that while the FBI conducted more than 7,000 national security surveillances in the 20-year period between 1940 and 1960, the Treasury Department "installed over 10,000 [telephone] taps" during the 14-year period between 1934 and 1948.

"The major public law addressing electronic surveillance," OTA noted, "is Title III of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 which was designed to protect the privacy of wire and oral communications. At the time Congress passed this act, electronic surveillance was limited primarily to simple telephone taps and concealed microphones."

protecting Americans from the wave of technologies that have emerged since 1968. It is now possible for government investigators to "read" massive communications between companies and individuals who use "electronic" mail. In that system, a lengthy communication is typed into a computer and, through a phone connection, it is printed out on the recipient's computer in another office, perhaps thousands of miles distant.

The IRS is using nine of the new technologies, OTA reported, having spent $3 million on electronic surveillance equipment in 1993-85. This is in addition to the millions spent on the new computers that are collecting data for your "economic profile."

Rep. Robert Kastenmeier (D-Wis.), chairman of a Judiciary Committee subcommittee on civil liberties, has introduced legislation requiring a court order before the new technologies could be used against an individual. That would update the law, which now requires a similar order to bug your office or tap your phone.

However, even if Kastenmeier's reforms are passed, they would add only a small amount of protection against snooping, critics who prefer much stronger reforms have pointed out.

BIG BROTHER SEES ALL

The Supreme Court has ruled that your personal check is a "public document" because a third party has to be involved in its processing.

Thus, every check you write, every credit card purchase and similar records of routine personal transactions are available to "Big Brother," a term actually used in the OTA report.

Oregon Gets Pot Referendum

Nov. 24 (NSIPS)—A proposal to legalize marijuana for private use will be on ballot in statewide elections in Oregon in 1986. Oregon Secretary of State Barbara Roberts certified more than 70,000 signatures collected by the Oregon Marijuana Initiative and the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) to put a proposal on the ballot which "legalizes private possessions and growing of marijuana for personal use."

FBI's Levi Demands 'Death of LaRouche'

by Joseph Brewda

Jan. 10 (NSIPS)—Speaking at a press conference held Jan. 7 at the U.N. Plaza Hotel, in New York City, Mordechai Levi, a paid FBI agent-provocateur and chairman of the self-styled terrorist Jewish Defense Organization, announced his program to stop terrorism. According to Levi—who has been implicated in two Mossad assassinations on U.S. soil since August—stopping terrorism demands the death of Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi and the "political death of Lyndon LaRouche." Levi accused LaRouche of having placed him on an FBI and CIA political hit list, and of falsely accusing him of being involved in Mossad-directed murders.

In the weeks preceding Levi's press conference, Los Angeles-based Executive Intelligence Review correspondent Tim Pike received repeated telephone death threats from Levi at his home. On Jan. 1, M-80 explosive devices were detonated in the mail boxes of two National Democratic Policy Committee organizers' homes in Los Angeles.

Levi's new threats against LaRouche are significant because Levi serves as a propagandist for Mossad assassin teams deployed by Israeli strongman Ariel Sharon. Since last summer, Levi has served as a leading, high-profile wild slanderer of Mossad targets, setting the stage for the hits.

Typifying Levi's role is his mid-August slander of Paterson, N.J. resident Tschernin Soobzokov, whom he accused of being a Nazi war criminal, to an hysterical crowd at the nearby Passaic, N.J. synagogue. One week later, Soobzokov, a leading Islamic moderate reportedly involved in back-channel peace negotia-

Vatican: 'People Can Die of Debt'

Jan. 9 (NSIPS)—The growing mountain of international indebtedness "is preventing any possibility and potential for development and social progress," according to the Vatican daily L'Osservatore Romano. The Jan. 5 article, headlined "South America: People Can Die of Debt," writes: "The debt represents the heavy heritage of the past military dictatorships... The new and energetic President of Peru, Alan Garcia Perez, raised the issue of the anti-IMF austerity spirit, excluding the IMF [International Monetary Fund] from negotiations. In some South American circles the IMF is considered a 'greedy usurer'."

Cruise missile too quick for fail-safe

COLLIER LAKE, Alberta — A so-called fail-safe system could not be activated in time to prevent an unarmed U.S. cruise missile from crashing on a test flight Wednesday, a Canadian Forces spokesman said yesterday.

The missile went down prematurely in a heavily wooded area of the Pinrose Lake Air Weapons Range on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border 180 miles northeast of Edmonton after a 1,500-mile flight across northwestern Canada.

Canadian Forces Maj. Luigi Rossetto said the crew of an instrument-equipped Boeing 707 chase plane could not respond in time to release a safety parachute or take control of the missile.

32 Million Unemployed In 'Recovery'

Dec. 23 (NSIPS) Thirty two million workers in the industrial nations will be unemployed during 1986 and 1987, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development predicted in its semiannual forecast. This corresponds to 7.25% unemployment in the United States, and 11% in Europe. The Paris-based supranational organization added that youth unemployment would average 16.5%, including rates up to 48% in Spain. This forecast assumes a continued "recovery" in the industrial nations, the OECD said.

Man on Mars mystery: We'll solve it, vow Russians

Soviets are hoping their 1988 Mars shot will solve a mind-boggling mystery: Who carved a gigantic human face on the surface of the red planet?

The mile-long sculpture with man-like features can clearly be seen in pictures taken by America's 1976 Viking spacecraft, along with strange pyramid structures that look man-made. NASA scientists have dismissed the phenomena as insignificant, but the Russians want to take a closer look.

Although the projected Soviet space shot is aimed at the Martian moon Phobos, the robot probe is programmed to study the surface of Mars, searching for clues to what created the eerie sculpture and pyramids.

Meanwhile, a group of top-ranking U.S. scientists are arguing that the face and pyramids indicate Mars was once inhabited — and they're pushing for further U.S. investigation of the strange structures.

"These features are puzzling... strange," said Lambert Dolphin, a founder of the "Mars Investigation Group," a society of California scitists who are interested in the Mars structures. "Yet it's difficult to get NASA interested in them."

Dolphin, a senior research physicist at the prestigious Stanford Research Institute, theorizes that Mars once had an atmosphere that supported life. Now a dry, dusty and harsh planet, Mars shows evidence of having had abundant oxygen and water in a previous era.

"Mars may well have been a well-developed planet with a great deal of life," said Dolphin. "Then some catastrophe happened to change the environment."

Dolphin and other members of his Mars group have studied the Mars photos closely, using computers to enhance the eerie images. They're convinced that what they see in the NASA pictures are structures created by intelligent beings.

"We used digital tapes to bring out subtle features in the face," Dolphin says. "We found out the face is symmetrical, with two eyes and an evenly shaped nose."

Schools ban 'satanic' rock records

Students at conservative church-based schools in The Netherlands have been ordered to destroy their rock records by the Rolling Stones, the Beatles and other groups which they say contain "satanic messages."

"It's a decision of the schoolmasters and we have nothing to do with it," said a spokesman for the Reformed Churches of the Netherlands which sponsor the schools.

The order followed the urging of the Moria Foundation, an evangelistic organization, said the church spokesman.

Warning unheeded

One of the most important things George Washington ever said is not often found in history books.

The words were spoken during his farewell address, delivered to Congress in September 1796. As the nation prepares to celebrate our national holiday in his honor on Feb. 17, we should remember what he said about the dangers of overemphasizing military preparedness.

"Every part of our country," he warned, must "avoid the necessity of those overgrown military establishments which, under any form of government, are inauspicious to liberty, and which are to be regarded as particularly hostile to republican liberty."

A provocative point of view from a man who made his name as one of the leading warriors of his time. Yet, Washington was not the only American president who warned against creeping militarism. Another great general, Dwight Eisenhower, expressed similar misgivings.

Unwarranted influence

In his 1961 message to the American people entitled "Upon Becoming a Private Citizen," Eisenhower said, "In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist. We must never let the weight of this combination endanger our liberties or democratic processes."

So far the United States has failed to heed the warnings of Eisenhower and Washington, and the military-industrial complex has become larger and more influential than ever, to the point where some observers consider defense contractors more of a threat than an asset to national security.

The common wisdom is that the arms race generates military spending. However, a growing number of experts such as Adm. Gene La Rocque, director of the Center for Defense Information in Washington, D.C., are now saying that the reverse is true — that the large military contractors have become the most powerful force behind the arms race.

CORETTA SCOTT KING

Reasonable people can disagree about the optimum budget for national defense. But there is little room for doubt about the adverse effects of record levels of defense spending on U.S. economic security. After subtracting such self-funding accounts as Social Security from federal spending, the total military budget takes 59 cents off of every federal dollar, according to the New York City-based Council on Economic Priorities.

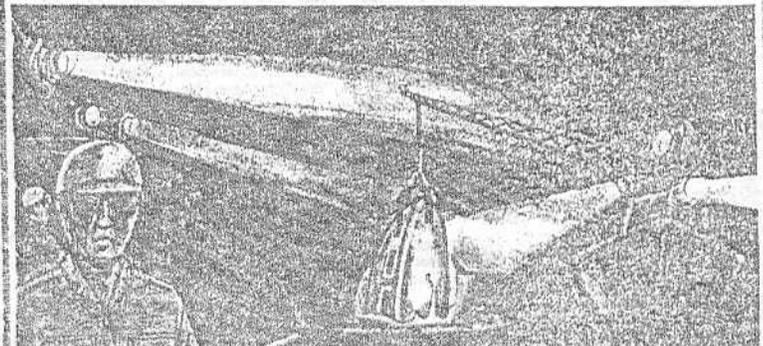

We've become accustomed to scandalous reports of price gouging by defense contractors. Even more insidious, however, are the political donations to elected officials — more than $3.6 million in 1984 from the top 20 defense contractors, seven of whom have paid no federal income taxes from 1981 to 1984. Not surprisingly, these firms increased the amount of their federal contracts by nearly 150 percent from 1980 to 1984. According to a Los Angeles Times study in 1984, "With its enormous size and spending power, the military-industrial complex creates political constituencies that make captives of congressmen who often support military spending out of fear for their political lives."

Supporters of increasing defense spending contend that peace can only be achieved through strength. But at a certain point we must ask, just what is it that makes a nation strong and secure? If we ruin our economy to subsidize an accelerating arms race, are we really any stronger? When we demoralize and polarize millions of jobless, homeless and impoverished Americans to increase our military might, aren't we weakening the very fabric of our society?

The military-industrial complex of the United States and the Soviet Union claim they are at odds, but the bitter irony is that they need each other. The people of the world are paying a terrible price for this symbiotic relationship.

PENTAGON COVER-UP?

UFO crash mystery

A submerged UFO, found off the U.S. coast by two divers, has mysteriously vanished. But there is growing suspicion that the downed alien craft was recovered — in a secret cover-up mission carried out by the Navy.

The metallic, dome-shaped craft was found in the exact spot where witnesses earlier reported seeing a "glowing" UFO crash into the frigid waters of Puget Sound off Bellingham, Wash.

The witnesses said the spacecraft hurled a shower of sparks and flame at least 70 feet into the air and turned the water into a boiling froth of foam. A few months later, Seattle divers John Walker and Richard Burke made three dives in the exact spot where the UFO slammed into the water, and both reported finding a large, dome-shaped object, somewhat golden in color, lying on the mud at about a 45-degree angle.

Witnesses say impact hurled sparks & flame 70 feet in air half buried in the mud 180 feet below the surface. Despite its eerie appearance in the turbulent, murky depths, the sunken craft brought shouts of excitement from Burke.

"Whooooo!" I'm standing on the UFO," he yelled into his helmet intercom. "It's pretty damn big."

Burke described the object as being about 17 feet in diameter and looking like an inverted teacup half-buried in the mud.

"When I stood on it I could hear a low-pitched humming sound," he said. "It made us very nervous. It seemed to be about 10 feet high, but we couldn't really tell because most of it was buried in the mud."

Burke and Walker made two dives on two consecutive days. After a three-day interval, they went back to recover the UFO. But this time, they were unable to find it.

"Today, we have equipment that can pinpoint a place on the ocean floor," said research scientist Dale Gaudin, who had taken part in the effort to retrieve the UFO. "We know exactly where the object was. It had been there for five months without moving. Why should it suddenly disappear? We have aerial reports that the Navy went out and picked it up."

A Pentagon cover-up, government officials have denied all knowledge of the UFO and have refused to comment. "I don't know if we have the object or not," declared a high-ranking Navy official in Washington, D.C. "If we do, it may be classified. It could be a military device."

Did a Navy team secretly recover wreckage found by two divers?

Maccavee — who also happens to be the chief of the Fund for UFO Research — said the dome-shaped object could be "highly significant" UFO evidence which may never be revealed to the public.

"Paged Naund is loaded with naval facilities," Dr. Maccavee told the NEWS. "I would think if the Navy wanted to recover the object, it could have been done without anyone knowing about it."

"My gut feeling is that there was something there and it just disappeared. If it was just a piece of junk, it should still be there. But if the Navy does have it up."

Frame-up hid war horrors, writer says

A 94-year-old Japanese artist has been in prison 38 years for a mass murder that many of his countrymen claim was a frame-up to cover up for Japanese biological warfare experts.

And United States Occupation officials, it is claimed, helped in the frame so this country could pick the brains of the Japanese experts, who butchered and killed thousands of war prisoners, including Americans.

"I could've written about it as fiction based on true events, but no one would've believed it. . . . I wouldn't even have believed it written as fiction," said the American author who makes the claims above.

But William Triplett, a Washington, D.C., journalist and playwright, used Freedom of Information levers to pry information out of previously classified files. That and several years of research here and in Japan led to his book, "Flowering of the Bamboo" (Woodbine House, Kensington, Md., 1985, $14.95 hardcover).

Many have heard of Rudolph Hess, the Nazi official who's been held in Spandau Prison for 39 years. But how many have heard of Sadamichi Hirasawa, who's been in the slammer almost as long as Hess. And for almost 32 of those years, Hirasawa has been on Death Row, despite a Japanese law that requires release of Death Row inmates if they haven't been executed within 30 years of sentencing.

I might've passed over this book for a bloody good fictional spy thriller, except for curiosity about a World War II Japanese chemical and biological warfare unit. We had learned primarily of Nazi atrocities but nothing of the Japanese 731 Regiment in Manchuria.

Triplett's book uncovers scientific and official documents dealing with the Japanese experiments on prisoners of war, primarily Chinese and some Soviet and American POWs. They were injected with anthrax, cholera, typhus, horse blood and various biological and chemical agents including cyanide-based poisons, then left to die horrible deaths before they were dissected.

But that lurks in the past, right behind the scene of a January 1948 incident in western Tokyo. A uniformed Japanese man posing as a public health doctor slips into a local bank at closing time and persuades 16 people, including the janitor and his wife and young son, to swallow a new "medicine" for dysentery.

Twelve of the people die ghastly deaths, victims of some kind of cyanide poisoning. Some money is stolen, but almost twice as much is left behind. Four bank employees survive. The poisoning was a "very professional job," according to police documents.

Triplett has painstakingly pieced together the subsequent police investigation that led to the arrest of Hirasawa. He paints the investigation as something of a bungling, uncoordinated effort flawed by politics, inefficiencies and international intrigue. Author Triplett says documents he unearthed disclose that American Occupation Forces made a deal with the infamous Japanese 731 Regiment leader: all their secrets in exchange for complete immunity from prosecution as war criminal-nals. Yet, somehow, former 731 officers are secretly involved in the bank poisoning investigation.

Hirasawa had no connection with the 731 Regiment or any of the several others like it. His arrest and conviction raised a national controversy, and there still exists an active association fighting for his release from prison.

The motives for the bank employees' poisoning and the related robbery become clouded in the machinations of the police investigation and the inner workings and motives of American Occupation officials.

Triplett has signed for a Japanese publication of the book, something he says probably will stir a national controversy all over again. "There are numerous veterans of the 731 Regiment still living in Japan, and there probably are more documents and records, there and here (in the U.S.)," Triplett said.

And there still is a feeble 94-year-old man sitting in a Japanese prison, the center of a strange international mystery that cannot die.

Powerful Weapon of IRS is Imaginary

The audit is the IRS' most powerful tool in promoting voluntary compliance with the tax system. The IRS uses audits to pressure taxpayers to disclose all of their financial records to the agency. This operation allows the IRS to transfer the burden of proof from the government to the individual.

The question is, of course, how can the IRS do this when the 5th Amendment specifically provides that "No person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." The first answer might well be that it is a civil, not a criminal matter, but according to Black Law Dictionary, any action by the government against an individual is a criminal matter¹. Even the IRS agrees with this: Section 342.11 (2) of the IRS Special Agent Handbook states, "the right to refuse to answer incriminating questions applies not only to court trials, but to all kinds of criminal or civil proceedings, including administrative investigations." (George Smith v. U.S., 337 S. Ct 1000 (1949); McCarthy v. Arndstein; Counselman v. Hitchcock; U.S. v. Harold Gross, 276 F.2d 816 (CA-2), 60-1 USTC 9401).

The Handbook goes into more detail in Section 342.12 which states:

Books and Records of An Individual

(1) An individual taxpayer may refuse to exhibit his/her books and records for examination on the grounds that compelling him/her to do so might violate his/her right against self-incrimination under the Fifth Amendment and constitute an illegal search and seizure under the Fourth Amendment. (Boyd v. U.S., 116 U.S. 616, 6 S. Ct 524 (1886); U.S. v. Vадner, 119 F. Supp 330 (E.D. Pa.) 54-11 USTC 9179) However, in the absence of such claims, it is not error for a court to charge the jury that it may consider the refusal to produce books and records, in determining willfulness. (Louis C. Smith v. U.S., 296 F.2d 260 (CA-8), 56-2 USTC 9380, cert denied 352 U.S. 909, 77 S.Ct. 148; Beard v. U.S., 222 F.2d 84 (CA-4), 55-1 USTC 9400, cert denied 350 U.S. 846, 76 S. Ct 48; Olson v. U.S., 191 F.2d 985 (CA-9), 51-2 USTC 9468; Myres v. U.S., 174 F.2d 320 (CA-8), 49-1 USTC 9275, cert denied 338 U.S. 49)

(2) The privilege against self-incrimination does not permit a taxpayer to refuse to obey a summons issued under IRC 7602 or a court order directing his/her appearance.

He/she is required to appear and cannot use the Fifth Amendment as an excuse for failure to do so, although he/she may exercise it in connection with specific questions. (Landy v. U.S., 285 F.2d 305, cert denied 365 U.S. 845) He/she cannot refuse to bring his/her records, but may decline to submit them for inspection on constitutional grounds. In the Vander case, the government moved to hold a taxpayer in contempt of court for refusal to obey a court order to produce his books and records. He refused to submit them for inspection by the Government, basing his refusal on the Fifth Amendment. The court denied the motion to hold him in contempt, holding that disclosure of his assets would provide a starting point for a tax evasion case.

This clearly shows that IRS audits are not compulsory. However, one can not blindly refuse to participate. Several of the above referenced cases allow the jury to use the refusal to disclose records as a basis of determining willfulness, only if the defendant did not claim a constitutional basis for withhold the records. The other necessity when refusing to disclose records is that court orders and summons not be ignored, but rather specific questions or specific requests for records be denied on constitutional grounds. That is, they can order you around physically, but can force your disclosure of information.

The system is obviously focused against those who don't know their rights. Some people, however, think it is better to cooperate with the IRS, the logic being that if you are nice to them, they will return the favor. This is not the case, however. In U.S. v. Dickerson (415 F.2d 1111) the court observed that "only the rare taxpayer would be likely to know that he could refuse to produce his records to IRS agents," and "who would believe the ironic truth that the cooperative taxpayer fares much worse than the individual who relies upon his constitutional rights."

¹ The distinction between a crime and a tort or civil injury is that the former is a breach and violation of the public right and of duties due to the whole community considered as such, and on its social aggregate or capacity; whereas the latter is an infringement or privation of the civil rights of individuals merely.

Soviets see weapons in speech

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said today that President Reagan's State of the Union address indicated that he intends to take more money from social programs to bolster military projects aimed at gaining "a free hand for the first nuclear strike."

In a commentary from Washington, the official news agency Tass accused the Reagan administration of turning "a blind eye to the needy and desperate."

Tass said Reagan's address Tuesday night, his fifth State of the Union speech, "had an obvious promotional character and actually boiled down to the promise to continue the old policy of militarization, escalation of the arms race and its spread into outer space, state terrorism abroad, and encouragement of 'big business' and curtailment of social programs at home."

It said Reagan's claim that the Soviet Union poses a threat to U.S. security was "a myth."

ABBEVILLE, La. — The mother of an altar boy who was one of 36 youngsters molested by a Roman Catholic priest told a jury her son has lost his self-esteem and she has lost her faith.

"My religion has betrayed me, my son and my whole family," Faye Gastal told the state district court jury Tuesday, the first day of testimony in her $12 million lawsuit against the Roman Catholic church. "I don't believe in it anymore."

Charles Manson denied parole

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. — Mass murderer Charles Manson, denied parole after telling a state board he would pursue his dream of a violent world revolution if freed, can look forward to at least another three years in prison.

The parole board on Tuesday found the 51-year-old former cult leader unsuitable for parole from his life sentence for the 1969 massacre of pregnant actress Sharon Tate and six others.

Manson, who wears a blue swastika on his forehead and told the board he spends his time making dolls of scorpions with the power to torment, must wait the maximum three years before his next parole hearing, the panel ruled.

In a surprise appearance, Manson, scruffy-looking with long, graying hair and beard, delivered a bling, often incoherent 20-minute speech he made the night before. He had told prison officials he wouldn't appear at the hearing, but changed his mind Tuesday morning.

"I have children write me and tell me it's already in the history books that I'm a bad guy," he said, rubbing his long-nailed thumbs together over and over as he slouched in a chair. His wrists were tattooed, and he had inked-in the swastika he carved into his forehead years ago.

+ The American Space Shuttle accident which occurred on January 28, 1986 did occur but with this difference!

+ The seven astronauts did not perish in the conflagration! The seven huge 20 ft. + At a future date, sometime in February, the seven will reappear on earth, safe and sound, with a message to man of earth!

+ The message will be: "Earth Man, remember and accept your innate divinity, your brotherhood with one another and with nature, your divine Son-ship! Forsake forever your hatred against one another, your wars, atomic mischief, experiments! We are a universal and divine witness to you to choose God over the illusion of the False Consciousness of Separateness! This day, you must choose, whom will you serve? UNDER ATTACK: Your Right to Use a Scanner

The following is reprinted from SCAN Magazine, 240 Fencel Lane, Hillside, IL 60168. Copyright ©1985 by Scanner Association of America.

Americans have traditionally enjoyed the right to listen freely to the airwaves without governmental interference. This right is one of the hallmarks of a democratic society.

Recently, this constitutional right was under attack in California and Pennsylvania with the introduction of Senate Bill No. 1431 in California and Bill No. 637 in Pennsylvania. Through the help and support of its members and a lobbyist, SCAN was successful in defeating the Pennsylvania bill and in favorably amending California Bill 1431.

Yet victory in another long battle away. Now, another anti-scanner bill has been introduced, only this time at the federal level. The bill, the "Electronic Communications Privacy Act of 1985" could severely restrict your right to listen freely to a scanner radio.

The "Electronic Privacy Act of 1985", if passed, would make it illegal to listen to a scanner. Some of the communications this proposed federal law could prohibit you from receiving would be transportation services, business, and any radio system connected to phone lines."

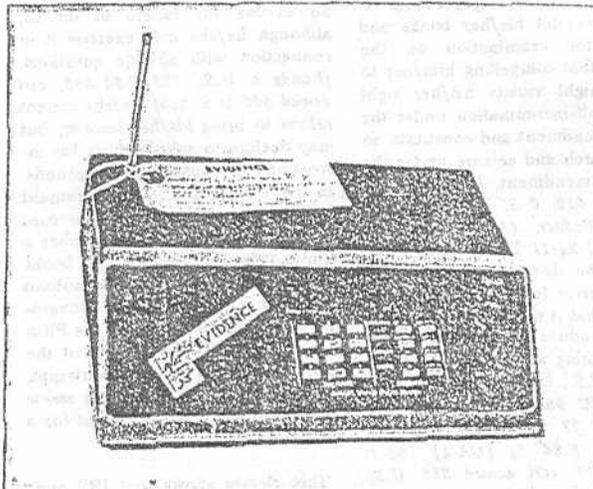

The severity of the law is also evident in its penalties. The penalty for violation is a fine of up to $250,000 and/or a year in prison for the first offense.

The bill was introduced in the House of Representatives on September 19, 1985 and is moving through very quickly. Representative Kastner (Wisconsin) is the sponsor of the bill. Reps. Moorhead, Moorison, Feighan and Schroeder are co-sponsors. Currently, the bill is in the Committee on the Judiciary.

Prompted by the cellular telephone industry, the Electronic Communications Privacy Act of 1985 is being supported by big business such as MCI, AT&T, and Pacific Telesis.

SCAN is currently mobilizing its forces to fight passage of the legislation. We hope we are successful as we were in the California battle.

One's right to use a scanner radio could have been taken away if California Senate Bill 1431 had become law, as originally written. Introduced by State Senator Herschel Rosenthal, the proposed law is aimed at protecting the "privacy" of cellular phone communications and could have essentially outlawed the sale and use of scanner radios with 800-900 Mhz capability (the same situation is being faced with the Electronic Communications Privacy Act

"Electronic Communications Act of 1985" Summary

1. This legislation goes far beyond the Federal Communications Act of 1934 which makes it a crime to intercept and divulge communications lawfully transmitted over radio waves. Federal Law wisely recognizes that widely dispersed radio waves are subject to interception, and that law should focus on the use of information intercepted, not mere listening.

2. 8% of the U.S. population already has multi-frequency scanning radios which are capable of monitoring cellular and/or other mobile phone conversations. Therefore, any legislation to restrict these devices is impractical.

3. We believe that cellular telephone interests are using legislation to help them promote cellular phone calls as "private" when it is clear that standard FPM radio transmissions dispersed over the airwaves can never be truly private.

4. We believe that cellular phone services have an obligation to notify users that non-encoded open radio transmission is subject to interception and that a distinctive tone or other device should be employed for the purpose of notifying parties to the call that it is being dispersed widely over the airwaves.

5. Cellular phone companies who wish to provide "private" mobile phone conversations have the option with existing technology to scramble or otherwise encode conversations.

6. There is no evidence to suggest that years of non-cellular mobile phone use by business, which is often intercepted by scanner radios, has caused any injury to users; to the contrary, it appears that the Federal Communications Act prohibition against unauthorized divuiging or use of information offers adequate protection.

7. Scanners with the capability to receive the cellular 800 MHz frequencies have many other uses. Groups, including scanner hobbyists, "ham" operators, volunteer firemen, transportation professionals, news media, emergency medical personnel, and scores of others have a legitimate need for this type of equipment. Exempting all legitimate users by category is impractical.

8. Ownership of omni-directional radio receiving equipment, without restrictions such as a special tax, permit of license, has always been a traditional American right. We believe that this legislation sets a very dangerous precedent which could be expanded in the future at the request of numerous other special interests.

9. Restricting omni-directional radio receivers should not be confused with wire tap, interception of point-to-point microwave, decoding of encoded signals, etc. Omni-directional radio scanners merely intercept widely dispersed, non-encoded radio signals.

10. As a practical matter, cellular radio signals which switch frequency from cell site to cell site, make it difficult or impossible to track a single, or specific conversation. There is no parallel with a wire tap aimed at intercepting a specific caller's conversations. [FD Note: Someone who was interested in intercepting a specific cellular phone conversation would be more likely to obtain a cellular phone, and modify the number of it to correspond to the number they sought to intercept, rather than scanning thru hundreds of channels attempting to locate the call they wanted.]

of 1985). Also supported by AT&T, MCI and Pacific Telesis, the proposed legislation would have severely curtailed all scanner radio uses.

The stated goal of Senate Bill 1431 is to create a right of privacy for cellular radio telephone users. Intentional eavesdropping on cellular radio telephone conversations would become illegal, subject to criminal penalties. First offenders would receive a $2,500 fine and a year in jail. Additional violations would be subject to a maximum $10,000 fine and/or one year in county jail or state prison.

Supporters of the bill claim the legislation is aimed only at those citizens who intentionally eavesdrop on confidential conversations involving cellular phones. However, the bill, as originally written, failed to provide for people who inadvertently intercept conversations and who would also be subject to criminal penalties.

The bill was introduced, according to its supporters, to "Protect the citizens of California from deliberate invasion of their private confidential communications." Although specific intent to intercept or receive a cellular communication would be required for violation of the proposed law, the bill prohibits ownership of radios capable of intercepting the cellular spectrum.

As the Pacific Telesis group states, "Scanners primarily designed to monitor the cellular portion of the frequency spectrum have no purpose other than to eavesdrop on confidential communications."

However, as Robert Hanson, Managing Director of SCAN, explains, "The cellular frequencies in the 800-900 MHz band are surrounding by many other users in the same band, such as police, fire, utilities, business and a proposed new amateur ("ham") radio assignment. It should be recognized that any radio signal dispersed throughout the airwaves is capable of being intercepted, intentionally or unintentionally, and is inherently not private."

In March of this year Pennsylvania State Senator Madigan introduced Senate Bill 637 which was designed to outlaw mobile use of scanners for any purpose, except by special permit or exception. The proposed goal of the law was to prevent people intent on evading the police from having a scanner in their vehicle, but it would restrict all scanner owners.

"The fact that you are using the scanner to receive weather and highway department road reports -- or monitoring aircraft, railroads or whatever -- wouldn't matter! You will be violating the law," said Robert Hanson. "By attempting to restrict the use of radio receivers in vehicles, this law strikes directly at the traditional American right to listen freely to the airwaves."

SCAN was able to kill Senate Bill 637, through telephone calls and letters from members. SCAN members flooded the State Capitol with letters, jammed the phone lines with calls, and it worked!

Growing Zionist Underground

JUDD HIRSCH
... Founder of foundation.

ENGLISH TO THE SPEECHLESS
By Charles M. Fischbein

The Zionist movement manipulates Jews throughout the world, controls banks and news media outlets, and has developed a dangerous terrorist underground that is at the disposal of Israel's intelligence service, the Mossad.

In the United States, for example, there are hundreds of Zionist agencies designed to attract Jews and evangelical Christians at every socio-economic level, and to control their activities including their financial resources. These agencies range from the powerful Israel Bond Organization (Israel Development Corporation), that attracts multimillion-dollar investments from pension funds and municipal employee unions, to the militant Jewish Defense League that is presently involved in a campaign to train Jews and evangelical Christians in the use of firearms and urban terror tactics (SPOTLIGHT, Jan. 6 and 13).

Between these two organizations there are hundreds of tax exempt groups designed to fund Israeli universities, Israeli hospitals and Israeli religious schools. There is even an organization designed to foster understanding between differing groups of Jews, the Judd Hirsch Foundation, founded by TV star Judd Hirsch of the "Taxi" series.

SIMILAR GOAL

All of these organizations have a similar goal, that of supporting the existence and expansion of the state of Israel and being at the disposal of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the Mossad.

The wide array of organizations serves the purposes of a growing Zionist underground that is designed to protect the organizations themselves, and also to harass and silence all opposition to the Zionist power structure. Organizations close to the terrorist JDL go so far as to produce films designed to discredit media news coverage of Middle East events and to call network news coverage "pro-Arab."

Such an organization with close connections to the JDL is Americans for a Safe Israel, which serves as the legislative apologist for the JDL and has recently produced a major film titled "NBC's War in Lebanon: The Distorting Mirror."

What is noteworthy about AFSI and other Zionist organizations, is that they all acknowledge the existence of a powerful Zionist underground, but deny that they are involved in it.

FACTS TO THE CONTRARY

The facts, however, are different. Every major Zionist organization except the JDL belongs to a local Jewish Community Council or other allied Zionist organization. The JDL acts independently of local Jewish community con-rol, reporting only to the government of Israel through the Mossad and the Israel Defense Forces.

Every organization that does belong to the Jewish Community Council or the Zionist Federation pays a portion of the funds it collects to the major umbrella organizations that then assign funds for covert activities of the JDL and other Zionist underground groups.

The existence of these terrorist groups is evident to most high level Zionist officials. Even the JDL, that has denied involvement in a recent string of violent events aimed at anti-Zionist and Arab targets admits that there is, in fact, a large and growing Jewish underground.

In a story carried by the New York "Times," Irv Rubin, national director of the JDL, is quoted as saying, "There appears to be a Jewish underground in the United States." He continued: "I want to see proud tough Jews. I hope to see the day when they will go into every corner, nook and cranny of this country and teach the Jew-hater a lesson he will never forget."

The JDL is also beginning to take credit for a growing number of terrorist attacks outside this country. The same New York "Times" story reports that four Israeli gunmen who fired on an Arab bus in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, wounding seven passengers, in March of last year, were trained in weapons use at JDL camps in New York and California.

In much the same way as misguided Arab terrorists are recruited to perpetrate atrocities on innocent civilians around the world, the JDL recruits misguided Zionists and brainwashes them into believing the only solution for Jewish survival is the extermination of all Arabs and anti-Zionists.

ZEALOTS TRAINED

Working hand-in-hand with the ADL, the Simon Wiesenthal Center and Americans for a Safe Israel, organizations that seek to label any anti-Zionist as an anti-Semite, the JDL picks up the zealots and trains them in terrorist tactics in the United States and Israel.

While all men of good will and conscience should deplore senseless violence and terrorist actions aimed at civilians, it is interesting to note that the JDL, under the control of orthodox Rabbi Meir Kahane, breaks all Jewish law and tradition while sanctioning violence against innocent persons.

The structure of the Jewish community and its Christian Zionist followers is thus used to support this growing terrorist underground. The irony is that most people contributing to Israeli-oriented organizations have no idea what their money is going to be used for, and most would not give a single penny to support the terrorists if they were aware that their money was being used for such purposes.

In the coming months, however, the JDL and other fringe organizations such as AFSI will become bolder as they play on the outrage stemming from the growing use of senseless terror by radical fringe Arab groups who turn their misguided frustration on civilians.

The question is which group will be first to take steps to stop the spiral of hate and killing. From all accounts it will not be the JDL, which has said publicly it wants to support expulsion of all Arabs from Israel. It also will not be the fringe Arab terrorist groups that vow to avenge Zionist terror.

The only possible way to stop the spiraling violence is for the United States to cancel the blank check it writes every day for Israel and to revoke the tax exempt status of AFSI, the ADL and other Zionist organizations that seek to support a growing wave of terror.

Pull cash from U.S., Libya to ask Arabs

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI) — Libya will ask fellow Arab states to withdraw some $80 billion in capital from the United States to protest U.S. economic sanctions against Libya, Arab diplomatic sources said yesterday.

The United States froze Libyan assets and imposed a total economic boycott against Libya after the Dec. 27 terrorist attacks at Rome and Vienna airports that killed 20 people, five of them Americans.

An Arab League source said, however, that league foreign ministers meeting in Tunis today would likely approve only a resolution condemning the American sanctions and expressing the 21 Arab nations' solidarity with Libya.

Meanwhile in Rome, Italian and German sources said in past years tips from Libyan intelligence agents had enabled police to intercept terrorist planning strikes against European targets. But the Libyan help stopped in 1984 or 1985, said an Italian source who added: "It seems they have taken a different attitude."

"Picowaves" in your microwave?

RADURA represents radiated radishes, zapped zucchini

By Gordon Newell

One of the last acts of outgoing U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler was approval of a regulation to expand the use of radiation as a means of keeping fruit and vegetables bug-free and fresh looking at your local market or favorite salad bar. It's now before Congress for final approval.

But those who fear possible adverse health effects from food zapped with gamma rays or X-rays can stop worrying. Ms. Heckler has taken care of that. According to the Health & Energy Institute, a non-profit consumer information agency based in Washington, D.C., you will no longer be warned that your Emerald City green head of lettuce has been "TREATED WITH IONIZING RADIATION", as is currently required.

In the future it will be "PICOWAVED."

You can't find "PICOWAVE"

in your Webster's Unabridged? Neither could Dr. Michio Kaku, physics professor at City College of New York...nor in his physics texts or glossaries, for that matter. The doctor calls it "a fabricated term, intended to mislead consumers."

Whether food irradiation is safe or not is no longer a moot question either, thanks to Heckler and the DHHS. They started out reviewing more than 400 studies on the subject, but threw out all but 69. Of these, 82 reported adverse health effects; 87 suggested none. Heckler and her problem-solvers handled this neatly, deep-sixing all the adverse reports and most of the pro-radiation reports, basing their final decision on the remaining five to "prove" safety.

Peace of mind is said to be essential to good health, and those who might be alarmed by the brutally frank label, "TREATED WITH IONIZING RADIATION", will be reassured by the new "PICOWAVED TO CONTROL SPOILAGE." To further insure consumer confidence, the picowave obfuscation will be accompanied by a pretty little flower and sun symbol called a "RADURA" by the fast-growing radiation industry. (You won't find that one in your dictionary either.) After 24 months, all the wording may be removed, leaving only the pretty little posy to warn the faint-hearted that the zucchini has been zapped. (Fresh fruits and vegetables get up to one "KiloGray" of PICOWAVES. Herbs and spices, (dry or dehydrated vegetable substances) will be upped from 10 to 30 KiloGrays.)

Fortunately, for our mental health, few grocery shoppers or sealed bar enthusiasts read abstract foreign scientific publications as the one from the Hungarian Academy of Sciences reporting the results of 1,228 wholesomeness studies on irradiated foods: 1,414 adverse effects; 185 beneficial effects.

If, in spite of all this, you still agree with Health and Energy Institute Executive Director Kitty Tucker that FDA is "placing dangerous irradiated products on the market with a misleading label", thus "forcing our children to become the guinea pigs in a massive experiment with our food supply", you may want to "act swiftly and decisively" as she recommends.

Final Congressional action has not yet been taken on the "Federal Food Irradiation Development and Control Act of 1985". Tucker's advice:

"Immediate protests regarding the final FDA rule can be forwarded to the Office of Management and Budget, Executive Office Building, 17th Street & Pennsylvania Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20500. Protests should also be made directly to your Congressional representatives."

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said yesterday he is considering seeking the Republican nomination to run against New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, a Democrat.

Kissinger, who was national security adviser under President Richard Nixon and secretary of state to Nixon and President Gerald Ford, was first recruited into government service from Harvard University by Nelson Rockefeller.

Reagan budgets more for military, less for the poor

New York Times

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's new budget proposes substantial cutbacks in health programs for the elderly and the poor, while seeking sustained increases in military spending, according to administration officials and budget documents.

The documents indicate that Reagan will propose to reduce projected spending for Medicare and Medicaid by $70 billion over the next five years.

Under Reagan's budget for the fiscal year 1987, which he is to submit to Congress tomorrow, the Pentagon budget would rise to $311.6 billion in 1987 and $395.5 billion in 1991. It is estimated at $278.4 billion in this fiscal year.

The total military budget, including nuclear weapons programs of the Energy Department, would rise from $286.1 billion this year to $320.3 billion in 1987 and $406.9 billion in 1991.

Bob Dole, the Senate majority leader, said there was strong sentiment among Senate Republicans for agreement with the White House on the budget before considering any overhaul of the tax code, a top priority of Reagan's.

Bomb found in Eiffel Tower

PARIS — Tourists were evacuated from the Eiffel Tower after a bomb was found in a top floor public lavatory, 40 minutes after a bomb exploded at a shopping mall on the Champs Elysees, injuring eight people, officials said today.

The discovery of the Eiffel Tower bomb was the first time the tourist attraction was known to have been the target of an attack. The bomb was found Monday night, and defused, officials said.

There was no known claim of responsibility for either the tower bomb or the one which exploded at 9:20 p.m. at the Galerie Claridge shopping mall, not far from the Arch of Triumph. Five of the eight people hurt were hospitalized.

Earlier reports said seven people were injured in the bombing, which broke windows in luxury shops at the mall.

Farmers win lawsuit

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — A federal jury has ordered a bank to pay $3.6 million to two brothers who contended the bank forced them to quit farming.

The president of the First National Bank of Oelwein said the bank had enough money to cover the judgment but would appeal.

The U.S. District Court jury Wednesday ordered the bank to pay Kal Knickerbocker, 31, formerly of Stanley, and his 25-year-old brother Robert, formerly of Arlington, slightly more than $3 million plus about $600,000 in interest.

AIDS and the CIA

The Soviet media have done little reporting on AIDS, but Literaturnaya Gazeta [Oct. 30] suggests that the disease is linked to the biological-warfare experiments on humans conducted by the Pentagon and the CIA. After describing the spread of AIDS in the U.S., commentator Valentin Zapevalov writes, "One cannot help wondering why AIDS invariably appears in the U.S. and begins to spread primarily in East Coast cities."

Zapevalov recalls germ-warfare experiments of the 1950s and 1960s and reports of more recent immunological research at Fort Detrick, Md. Without stating his own conclusions, he notes approvingly that the Indian Communist daily Patriot "has bluntly put forth the supposition that AIDS is a result of 'the same kind of inhuman experiments by Washington.' ... It is quite possible that eventually one of the victims will sue the Pentagon and the CIA, and then it will come out that all the AIDS victims are a result of the latest monstrous experiment."

Man dies under coins

IRVINE, Calif. — A Brinks armored car guard was crushed to death Monday when $50,000 in quarters fell on him as the driver braked suddenly to avoid an automobile.

Driver Scott Bauman said he found his partner, Hrand L. Arakelian, 34, buried under a load of 25-pound coin boxes.

Unable to extricate Arakelian without assistance, Bauman closed the back door of the truck and drove to summon help. In his haste, Orange County Fire Department public information officer Pat Antrim said, Bauman had locked the back door key inside the truck. A locksmith opened the door as paramedics arrived.

Vacations make you sexier

VACATIONS make you sexier, a sociologist claims.

Most couples make love on vacation at least twice as often as at home, reports Dr. Werner Hambermehl, a German sociologist. They also have sex during the day — frequently in sexy locations other than the bedroom.

Sun and heat activate sex hormones, explains Hambermehl, who surveyed hundreds of vacationing couples in five countries.

200 pickets, but 'Hail Mary' sets ticket mark

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — About 200 people demonstrated against a controversial French film about the Virgin Mary, which set a box-office record at its San Francisco premiere.

Police said the protesters Saturday chanted and picketed the Roxie Cinema, which is showing Jean-Luc Godard's film "Hail Mary."

Protesters from local churches began gathering Friday night when the movie opened and set a box-office record for the house, theater co-owner Bill Banning said.

Patrolman Steve Morimoto said five officers were at the theater.

The film is a modernization of the story of the Virgin Mary and portrays her as a teen-ager interested in women's basketball. Joseph is a taxi driver.

Pope John Paul II has condemned "Hail Mary," saying it "deforms and disfigures" the Christian faith, and it has been picketed in other cities.

Barter Group Beats IRS in Court

By Merie Naylor

The National Commodity and Barter Association has whipped the Internal Revenue Service in federal court.

On September 30 the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit upheld the finding by U.S. district Judge John Kane that declared invalid a warrant used by IRS agents in conducting an April 5 search of the offices of the NCBA in six locations around the country (SPOTLIGHT, April 29).

Kane had ruled that the warrant was "overly broad" and permitted the IRS to seize not just the records of the association but also the gold and silver held by the association. Kane ordered the immediate return of all NCBA assets being held by the federal agency, but the IRS promptly appealed the decision, only to see its appeal slapped down by the higher court.

"We are very excited about this decision," said John Grandbouche, founder and executive director of the NCBA. "In fact, we believe it will have a positive effect on the entire patriotic movement.

"Particularly blessed will be those who had memberships with NCBA and exchange accounts, as Rule 41(e) of the criminal procedures code states that any information obtained by an illegal seizure cannot be used against an individual in either a civil or criminal proceeding.

JOHN GRANDBOUCHE
... Wins victory over IRS.

"We believe the IRS is digging its grave deeper and deeper. We also believe that if we continue to stand up to this kind of federal tyranny we will defeat it.

It's our intention to correct the IRS's ongoing abuse of (the law)," he said.

Grandbouche indicated that civil suits will be brought against the IRS agents involved and that criminal charges will also be brought where appropriate. "We cannot allow the government to trample the rights of citizens," he said.

The IRS must now return all the commodities seized from the NCBA in what Grandbouche described as a "fishing expedition.

"The warrant issued was just an excuse to raid our offices and get a look at our records," he said.

The IRS had used a roundabout method to get at the NCBA. A Minnesota man being investigated by the IRS for alleged misdeeds had recommended to clients that they do business with the NCBA. On this basis the IRS found their excuse to raid the headquarters of the association.

Said Grandbouche: "This ruling is very important in that it once again confirms to our members that we haven't done anything wrong, that we've just been the victims of another IRS scheme — this one designed to break the back of the NCBA and other organizations that are challenging the Constitutionality of our modern-day tax and money system."

Real American hero gets nation's respect

America loves its heroes — some consider us a nation of heroes. At the present time our nation is overflowing with reverence for heroes of celluloid — heroes created in very controlled and safe conditions with the use of visual effects and imagery.

This was not the case with one of our real heroes, Dr. Martin Luther King. The real and dangerous world was his working studio.

Dr. King had no bulging muscles, carried no firearms, and never became president — his courage was of the real kind. His message and purpose was that of love. His gifts to us included adding sound meaning to what we hold to be so unique and dear in America — freedom.

Thank you and Happy Birthday Dr. King.

Reagan risking bloodbath

The bravado and tough talk by President Reagan against Moammar Khadafy is typical of a person who condemns another without evidence. I don't believe Ronald Reagan has irrefutable proof that the Libyan leader is behind the recent acts of terrorism in Vienna and Rome. If he had proof why doesn't he take it to the World Court or the United Nations?

If the president is planning to strike at Libya, and it seems to be a distinct possibility, let me warn him that the American pilots will be shot out of Libyan skies by missiles. He will assure the unfortunate next of kin that these brave men died in the service of their country. Hogwash!

Then Khadafy will retaliate the only way a falsely accused individual or country can. This will be to make the blood of Americans run like rivers in all major airports across this country. And there will be nothing, and I mean nothing, anyone can do to stop it. No more than anyone could stop the suicide planes of World War II.

This carnage will have been brought on by Ronald Reagan and he will be solely responsible for every single death caused by the terrorists.

All this, in part, because our president accuses leaders of foreign countries of human rights violations. All our president has to do is look around the U.S. and he can, if he opens his eyes, see many cases of rights violations that he chooses to ignore. I can assure Reagan this is true and I have the solid, irrefutable evidence to prove this statement.

Parents kill boy during exorcism

Daniel and Linda Martin have been convicted of killing their 21-month-old son because he was "moving around like a wicked dance that Michael Jackson do" and they thought he was possessed. The little Philadelphia boy, Daniel Jr., died of a beating administered by his dad in an exorcism rite intended to drive the devil from his body. The parents were convicted of third-degree murder and conspiracy. "My husband woke my son up from the sleep to cast out the demon," Linda told police. "While I prayed, looked and watched, he cast the demon out. My husband started smacking my son back and forth on the face. He hit him harder than he should have."

Gucci pleads guilty

NEW YORK — The eldest member of the Gucci clan, whose retailing empire stretches from his native Italy to Beverly Hills, pleaded guilty Friday to federal tax charges and agreed to pay more than $7 million in back taxes.

Eighty-year-old Aldo Gucci wiped tears from his eyes as he read a statement in federal court acknowledging that he failed to report at least $11.8 million in income.

Reserves called up

PITTSBURGH — About 5,000 members of the Army's inactive reserve force are to report this month for the first tests in more than a century of how ready the reserves are to fight.

"The big reason is just to see what we have. The Army is trying to get a better handle on the folks," said Maj. Robert Pratt, an Army Reserve spokesman in Washington. "It's difficult to make one huge sweeping assessment of whether they are good or not good."

16 Indicted by U.S. in Bid to End Church Smuggling of Latin Aliens

By STUART TAYLOR Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14 — The Justice Department announced 16 indictments and more than 60 arrests today in a crackdown on church groups accused of smuggling illegal aliens from Central America.

The indictments were based in part on evidence gathered by four undercover agents who, wearing concealed tape recorders, attended church meetings in Tucson, Ariz., about helping people flee from El Salvador and Guatemala to the United States.

Illegal refusal to grant political asylum to the majority of Central American refugees. The Administration contends that most asylum applicants from Central America are fleeing poverty, not persecution.

The indictments of 16 people, including a Protestant minister, two Roman Catholic priests and three nuns, were secretly returned Thursday by a Federal grand jury in Phoenix.

They were announced today by Federal prosecutors in Phoenix and com-

Moynihan: One-third of children will be on welfare

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly one-third of the children born this year in the United States will be on welfare before their 18th birthdays, says Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

Moynihan, who 20 years ago warned of the breakdown of the black family in America, said Sunday the crisis of family breakdowns "is no longer a minority problem — it was never solely one — it's a general problem in American life." The New York Democrat was appearing on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"I'm proposing that young women be taught very early in life that they have no right to have children they can't raise," he said. The government and schools should "teach common sense, citizenship; you cannot be a citizen of a society if you are going to be dependent on that society. You have responsibilities as well as rights."

Moynihan, Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit and Walter Williams, a conservative economist, discussed the welfare cycle in response to a CBS report documentary Saturday about what CBS called a crisis in black America.

Moynihan suggested that one way to solve some of the problems of a welfare society is to create more jobs to get people off a system of dependency.

"There's nothing wrong with make-work if it's work," he said. In Newark, N.J., where there are no jobs, "It is possible to create a job for every man, woman and child if the society desires to do so," he said.

However, that may not be realistic in an administration that has been cutting back social and job programs, he said.

Young agreed that providing jobs can help eliminate welfare and curb a system that discourages many people from getting jobs. But Williams said the idea of creating jobs was unrealistic.

"No one can seriously contend that there are enough jobs out there to give one to everyone," Williams said. "If you think that Santa Claus gives the government money, then you can say the government can create jobs. The only way the government can create jobs is to tax somebody else, and that lowers employment somewhere else."

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts described his state's employment and training program, which he said in the past two years has placed 23,000 welfare recipients in permanent, unsubsidized, mostly private-sector jobs, paying more than $5 an hour.

Army goof costs half a million

WASHINGTON — The Army paid more than 10 times the lowest rate to ship household goods of soldiers from West Germany to Washington because of a mistake by military clerks, according to computer records and federal officials.

Records show that the Army paid more than $665,900 for 46 shipments from Frankfurt, West Germany between May 1984 and June 1985. The shipments could have cost $51,300 if they were made through the most inexpensive companies.

Army spokesman Col. George Kaine said the problem occurred because the personnel in West Germany were unfamiliar with the rate structure for shipping to the Washington area, which includes installations in northern Virginia.

Universities leaning more on Pentagon, study finds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to President Reagan's "Stars Wars" initiative, universities are as dependent on the Pentagon for research money as they were "at the height of the Vietnam War," a new study concludes.

"Since 1980, Department of Defense funding for university research has jumped from $496 million to $930 million, an 89 percent increase," concludes the study conducted by the Council on Economic Priorities.

"Campus funding from other major federal agencies . . . has grown less than half as fast as DOD support since 1980. Today, DOD research accounts for 16 percent of all federal spending for university research, up from 10 percent in 1980."

Inventor turns over energy machine to government

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mississippi inventor Joseph W. Newman on Friday delivered a prototype of his controversial energy machine to government engineers for testing, the latest move in a long effort to get a patent on the device.

Critics contend that the machine, which Newman calls a revolutionary energy device, defies the laws of physics.

In delivering the machine to the National Bureau of Standards, Newman complied with a federal appeals court order issued last week that said he must produce the device for testing if he wishes to pursue his patent application.

The machine, accompanied by Newman's lawyer, John Flannery, was delivered in a bright orange crate to the bureau's engineering testing laboratory in Gaithersburg, Md.

Mat Heyman, a bureau spokesman, said the device was taken into the lab and locked away for security.

ACLU challenges Oregon city's ordinance against 'occult arts'

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union has joined the publisher of an astrological calendar in challenging the constitutionality of an Ashland ordinance that bars the practice of "occult arts."

The lawsuit filed last week in Jackson County Circuit Court on behalf of Jim Maynard of Ashland claims the 1968 ordinance violates his right to free speech, guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions.

The law is not currently enforced, but under it a person who reads palms, tells fortunes for profit or engages in "any practice generally recognized to be unsound and unscientific," is liable for criminal penalties of up to 60 days in jail and a $500 fine, said Oregon ACLU associate director Dave Fidanque.

"It's not enough just to have unconstitutional laws or ordinances on the books and just not enforce them," he said. "There is no question now the Ashland ordinance is unconstitutional."

Ashland attorney Rebecca G. Orf, who is representing Maynard, said the ordinance leaves her client and others at the whim of city officials.

"The Oregon Court of Appeals has held virtually the same language to be unconstitutional in the city of Roseburg case," he added.

The 1983 decision said Roseburg's ordinance violated free speech guarantees.

The Ashland City Council has voted to repeal the law, but Mayor Gordon Medearis vetoed the repeal. The council later overrode the veto, but in 1981 city voters elected to keep it on the books.

Last fall the ACLU asked the council to again repeal the ordinance, but on advice of the city attorney, the council refused.

Fidanque said the law could be used against most newspapers, which print astrological predictions.

Balance threatened

"The practical effect of these numbers is that the usual balance between civilian and military funding is being threatened," concluded Alice Tepper Marlin, executive director of the council.

Defense research and development money is scheduled to increase 20 percent in fiscal 1986 but basic research will grow only 1 percent, she said.

"Such a shift could hurt the nation's technological growth since developments in such critical areas as ultra-high-speed computing, novel laser concepts and new micro-electronics devices will be dominated by military rather than civilian needs."

Perhaps even more significant, however, is the level of dependence by certain key, high-tech research fields on Pentagon funding, the study adds.

In fiscal 1985, the Pentagon sponsored "more than one-half of federally funded university work in mathematics and computer sciences," the study found.

Einstein gave world a warning

Thank you for the Jan. 22 editorial, "Eisenhower's timely warning," about the dangers of the mushrooming military industrial complex and the warning of concern for the rights of future generations.

Eisenhower's concerns bring to mind a similarly somber warning voiced by Albert Einstein in the summer 1947 edition of The American Scholar. In his essay, entitled "The Military Mentality," he cautions Americans that ". . . under the influence of the two world wars and the consequent concentration of all forces on a military goal, a predominantly military mentality developed with the almost sudden victory, became even more accentuated. The characteristic feature of this mentality is that people place the importance of 'naked power' far above all other factors which affect the relations between peoples. The Germans, misled by Bismarck's successes in particular, underwent just such a transformation of their mentality. . . ." The 20th century bears painful witness to the result.

Here we now stand, 40 years down the road, ready to blow our economy, and the birthright of future generations, in pursuit of the ultimate military fantasy of "naked power." While we pursue the fantastic dream of Star Wars, we wring our hands over prospective Libyan terrorists roaming our streets. We seek to control outer space, but despair of controlling our own borders. Isn't it time to come back down to earth?

$2 billion Exxon refund passes test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today, in effect, said Exxon Corp. must repay consumers nationwide more than $2 billion in refunds and interest for overcharging on the sale of oil from a Texas field.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that the money be distributed to the states and spent on programs to help the needy and energy consumers.

The penalty against Exxon is the largest monetary judgment in American history to be upheld on appeal.

The Supreme Court also was urged by the airline industry, other oil companies, a utility company, a trucking firm, a taxicab company and a motorist to review the case and order redistribution of the money. They said they should be reimbursed for buying overpriced oil from Exxon.

Exxon was found to have made illegal profits of $895.5 million by classifying so-called "old" oil as "new" oil, and thus selling it at nearly twice the price.

U.S. heading for world-class debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, which now owes other countries more than $30 billion, could be $1 trillion in debt by 1990 if present policies continue, according to a study made public today by a British economist.

"From being the world's largest net creditor nation in 1982, it would be the world's largest debtor by 1986, and by 1990 its external debt, at over a trillion dollars, would substantially exceed the total debt of the developing countries," economist Stephen Marris says.

Marris outlined his views in a book-length work, "Deficits and the Dollar: The World Economy at Risk," written under the sponsorship of the Institute for International Economics, a private study group based in Washington.

U.S. officials on Tuesday calculated that last Oct. 1, the total U.S. foreign debt reached about $30.5 billion — possibly as high as $33 billion — and was growing by about $10 billion a month. At that rate, the United States would become the world's biggest debtor country next year, passing Brazil with its $103 billion debt to foreigners.

The World Bank estimates that the total debt of poor countries will be nearing $1 trillion at the end of 1985.

Marris bases his calculation on the international price of the dollar at the end of October, which dropped about 20 percent since February. As the dollar drops, so does the price of American goods to buyers in other countries, so that U.S. sales and earnings increase.

But because those earnings have been small, and U.S. savings are small too, the United States has been borrowing the savings of other countries.

Marris finds that the United States is still spending almost 50 percent more abroad than it earns, and accumulating foreign debt faster than any other developed country has ever done. He says the dollar has to go down a long way — another 25 percent to 30 percent — to prevent that deficit from getting worse.

A Mike & Ron duet? Maybe

New York Times

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd said yesterday that President Reagan had tentatively agreed to appear before Congress with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Byrd presented the idea in a telephone call and a letter to Reagan yesterday. According to the senator, Reagan said "it would be fine."

"He certainly did sound enthusiastic," Byrd said later. He indicated that because a speech by Gorbachev presumably would be televised in the Soviet Union, Reagan, by joining him, might also be able to appear "on prime time on Soviet television unedited and unfiltered."

Larry Spokes, the White House spokesman, said, "I guess we would have to wait till we get the summit schedule before we scheduled any appearance before Congress."

Another White House official said:

"... Our first impression is it would not be the most appropriate thing to do. . . ."

Gorbachev is scheduled to visit the United States this year, but no date has been set.

Terrorists aim warning at U.S.

TRIPOLI, Libya — A group of 22 Arab revolutionary movements agreed today to form a suicide force to strike at American targets throughout the world if the United States attacked Libya or any other Arab nation.

The decision came in a resolution at a meeting of the "Allied Leadership of the Revolutionary Forces of the Arab Nation," chaired by Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy. The 22 movements are believed to receive substantial subsidies from Khadafy.

In a move which could only heighten tensions in the middle east, Israeli warplanes intercepted a Libyan executive jet today in an apparent attempt to capture Palestinian leaders and forced it to land in northern Israel, the military command announced.

The command said it intercepted the jet believing it was "carrying people involved in planning attacks against Israel."

But there apparently were no guerrillas aboard the Grumman Gulf Stream II plane, which carried nine passengers and three crew members, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"They didn't find who they were looking for," said one source, adding that all 12 people would be freed.

In Tripoli, the revolutionary group's 11-point resolution said secret decisions were taken at the three-day conference, "including the creation of revolutionary intervention groups and suicide squads to strike at American interests within the United States and throughout the world . . . if the United States should dare to launch an aggression against . . . Libya or any other Arab country."

Reporters and photographers were barred from the meeting inside Khadafy's heavily fortified Azizia barracks. The delegates approved the resolution by acclamation.

Palestinian delegates reported earlier that Khadafy opened the meeting with a demand for a campaign of violence in response. See Terrorists/back page
