

ALBURY.

Tuesday, 10 p.m.

The influenza is general throughout the town. The electric telegraph during the day was worked with difficulty, having been disturbed by the Southern Lights, which became visible after dark, but, strange to say, the Melbourne side of the line was not much affected by this phenomenon.

Many diggers are passing through the town on the way to the Snowy River. There are also a few returning, frightened by the severity of the weather.

The first pile of the bridge, it is expected, will be driven next week.
