

STRANGE LIGHT IN THE SKY.

A Milbong correspondent writes :-
A strange sight, in the form of a light flashing from right to left and vice versa, was seen in the north-west part of the sky, on Friday night, the 21st January, and on Tuesday night, the 8th instant, due west. It started near the sunset, flashing violently southward and then rising steadily overhead, where it remained for about five minutes, just glimmering. It then disappeared and re-appeared about a dozen times. Then it disappeared and re-appeared steadily again five times, after which it disappeared completely, having always been visible in the darkest part of a cloud. It was at both times visible between 7.30 and 8 p.m. o'clock, and resembled the flicker of a looking-glass in the sun. If anyone can enlighten me as to what it was, I will be very pleased, if he will do so through your columns.²
