

SOMETHING FISHY ABOUT THIS FLYING SAUCER

A man who thought he saw a "flying saucer" at Leichhardt early this morning found himself gazing at a salmon tin with a cat's head in it.

The man, Mr. S. Thompson, Carlisle Street, Leichhardt, called at Leichhardt police station and told Constable Freeman: "I have just received a real shock.

"As I was going through my front gate I saw a shiny, gleaming object moving through the air.

"I said to myself, 'This is a real flying saucer at last.'

"I stood there for a few seconds and noticed that the 'saucer' turned back in its tracks.

"I walked across the garden to examine the saucer and found that it was a salmon tin with a cat's head in it."

Constable Talbot, accompanied Mr. Thompson to his home, shone his torch on his fence, and found a grey cat with its head tightly wedged in an open salmon tin.

He took the cat to Leichhardt station and with a tin opener released

tion and, with a tin opener, released it from the tin.
