

Queer Tale About Flying Saucer

A cable from Los Angeles a few days ago told an amazing story of a flying saucer—piloted by a midget 25 inches tall — landing near Mexico City recently. The tale was unfolded by a business executive, Kay Dimmick.

The midget had a big head and a tiny body, and was killed in the landing, according to Dimmick.

He said the flying saucer was 45 feet in diameter, and was now under heavy guard at a secret military establishment near the Mexican capital.

Dimmick, just back from Mexico City, said that the Mexican Government officials believe the flying saucer was from Mars or some other planet.

"QUIET!"

The entire matter was being kept quiet for military reasons, he said.

He said.

Domnick claimed to have located "the establishment where the saucer is being kept."

He said that it was powered by two motors, but that the bottom of it was wrecked when it landed.

Domnick added that he had been unable to learn what had happened to the body of the pilot.

In Washington, Air Force officials said they knew nothing of the report.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation in Los Angeles also disclaimed any knowledge of it.
