

"Flying saucer" wasn't in it!

SYDNEY, Wed.—This is what happened when a car ran off the great Western Highway, near Katoomba, to-day.

It struck a bank, travelled through the air upside down, struck a telegraph pole, spun completely around, landed upside down, and slid backwards down a slope.

The driver, Peter Lumsden, of Newtown, was conscious and sitting upside down when he was freed.

Lumsden was admitted to hospital with a cut head and an injured chest.
