

More U.S. "Saucer" Stories

NEW YORK, Thursday.

Despite efforts by the Air Force to knock down "flying saucer" reports, civilians seem determined to keep them flying.

A whole new batch of saucer stories have turned up in the wake of the Air Force's explanation that heat waves and optical and radar illusions were apparently causing it all.

Some reports seem more fantastic than ever.

The Cleveland press told of a veteran Air Force pilot who claimed that his fighter plane was attacked repeatedly by a flying saucer.

A former Air Force pilot in California claimed that he saw a saucer that split in two and kept on going.