

Right out of the box

GENEVA, Wed.—An English amateur magician has invented a flying saucer.

The International Magicians' Conference gave him first prize.

The amateur, F. G. Cleaver, of Warwickshire, took from a black box what appeared to be an ordinary teacup saucer.

He showed it to the audience and replaced it in the box.

Apparently unaided, the saucer rose in the air and rotated, accompanied by a low droning noise.

A judge, the secretary of the London Magic Circle (Mr. Francis White) said: "It was a terrifying experience.

"We all sighed with relief when the trick was over."—
