

“Saucer” Found In U.S.A.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.
A.A.P.—Authorities at West Orange (New Jersey) are investigating a “flying saucer” type of disc that was discovered yesterday on top of a rocky cliff, belonging to a quarry company.

The silver object, conical of surface and six feet in diameter, was found by an employee of the company that operates the quarry.

The disc was constructed of a heavy cardboard material, and contained gangling circular wiring and a number of broken bulbs.

It was without source of electrical or propelling power. A large II was painted in black on its surface.

Authorities in West Orange discounted theories that the disc was a hoax because of the inaccessibility to the cliff on which it was found. They said its location indicated that it could have been dropped from an aircraft.

A stamp inside the disc said the cardboard was manufactured in New York.
