

Not a Flying Saucer

Broken Hill nearly had its first flying saucer today.

Men at work in Delprat's shaft section of the South mine were puzzled this afternoon by the appearance of a white object in the sky. It was visible for half an hour and was large and round.

Inquiry elicited the information that what they saw was probably the planet Venus, which is a brilliant object in the western sky during the evenings at present.