

Saw one

I SAW a flying saucer at Sandringham about a week ago. I did not think of it as a flying saucer because I regarded all that as stupid propaganda. Now I am convinced it is reality.

I was watching the sun go down on the cliff top and caught sight of an incandescent light overhead about as large as a tennis ball. It just floated along, looking bigger as it came nearer the earth.

Suddenly it was gone, just as a soap bubble breaks.

It had none of the characteristics of a meteor or a falling star.
