

Strange Light Seen Over Suburbs

People in several Sydney suburbs last night reported seeing a strangely coloured light in the sky.

Residents in suburbs on the northern side of the harbour said that they saw the light about 7 o'clock.

Estimates of the height of the light ranged from below a 1,000 feet to more than 3,000 feet.

A number of people who saw the light said that its colour changed from white to red to blue.

Aviation authorities were unable to account for the light and said that there were no planes in the sky which could have caused the light.

The Sydney Weather Bureau said last night that the bureau observed a "bright light" about 7 o'clock but had no explanation for it.
