

Digest identifies new objects NOW 'FLYING SOAPSUDS'

LONDON, August 18 (Special) — "Flying saucer" reports over London last night were corrected later to "Flying Soapsuds." Experts said strange globular objects whisking across the evening sky were huge soap bubbles lifted by the wind from one of the Thames tributaries. The water contained detergents and soap powders washed in from kitchen sinks and factories.