

Met Flying Saucer's Pilot

OSLO, August 24.—The police in Northern Central Norway are setting off tomorrow in search of any trace of a flying saucer, from which two young women reported seeing a dark, long-haired man emerge while they were picking berries in the nearby hills.

They described him as appearing friendly and anxious to talk, but said he was unable to understand English, French or German.

After the man vainly tried to explain himself with words, gestures and drawings, he climbed into the saucer which rose straight into the air and disappeared.

The saucer was about 16 ft. in diameter and looked like two saucers put together. It started with a slight humming sound like a bumblebee and rose at great speed.

The women, who live in Mosjoen, at first suppressed the story for fear of being disbelieved.
