

NORTHAM HAS FLYING SAUCER

Northam has for a long time escaped the flying saucer scare, but apparently the Men from Mars, have been giving us the once over, though this was not found out until last Thursday when one of their explorers dallied a little, no doubt fascinated by the verdant green of the Avon Valley, or perhaps photographing the craters in Charles and Wellington streets to take back and fluster their scientists.

Whatever the cause, they were seen by Mrs. Antonio, of Southern Brook telephone exchange who, at 2.15 p.m. last Thursday, was driving towards Northam accompanied by daughter Helen and daughter-in-law Mrs. Pat Antonio, when all three noticed low in the horizon to the westward a dull grey oblong object.

They were on Centenary Hill at the time and the object seemed to be suspended over Northam. It hovered for a minute or more and then suddenly disappeared.

Mrs. Antonia reported the matter to Northam police.

Did anyone else see this phenomena?
