

'Strange Light' In Sky Intrigues City

Scores of people last night rang the Weather Bureau to report a "strange light" in the sky west of Sydney.

Most of the people said the light was visible for about half an hour after 9 p.m.

A Weather Bureau spokesman said the light was probably the planet Venus setting.

"The planet is often clouded by a red dust-haze which makes it glow more brightly," he said.