

Plenty of space for the tots

“Hi there, I’m Sophie Holloway and I have just landed in my flying saucer.”

This cute picture (right) from Navy News photographer Anntoinette Aldworth shows the little tot at the Endeavour Child Care Centre at South Coogee.

The centre is sponsored by the Royal Australian Navy and offers most of its 36 places to the children of Navy personnel.

As well as operating under the rules and regulations set down by the Department of Defence and government, the centre is managed by KU Children’s Services.

KU CHILDREN'S SERVICES.

KU is an organisation with more than 100 years' experience and management of children's services and prides itself services and prides itself on providing the highest quality education and care available for young children and their families.

Director Julie Chesworth said the centre currently had vacancies.

“We open at 6.30am and close at 5.30pm on week days,” she said.

“We are licensed to take 10 children aged from six weeks to two years, 10 from two to three years and 16 from three to five years.

“We offer breakfast, morning tea, lunch, afternoon tea and a late snack.

“Of course there is rest time for everyone. We have stretcher beds.”

Any Navy parents interested in placing their interested in placing their small child at the centre can call Ms Chesworth on 9314 1221.

• Picasso at work – one of the youngsters at the Endeavour Child Care Centre.

• Sophie Holloway in her flying saucer.

• Sandpit time.