ANYONE who's seen one believes, that's a heck of a lot of us, but you're made to feel silly if you speak of it. If you've seen a craft at speed making right-angle turns then you'll believe.

YEP — it's a UFO. If anyone can identify it, then it's not one.

WHY is it that no one can ever produce a good in-focus photo of UFOs or any other such strange happenings.

YOU are kidding? I used to fly these regularly on scout weekends. A jiffy, some wire and a garbage bag. Up, up and away.

IF THERE are aliens from other worlds, why don't they ever land and come and say G'day?

GREW up in Five Dock and saw a UFO glide over one night when I was in the backyard with my dad a little over 20 years ago. Came over very slowly but was gone in seconds. Just because it's a UFO doesn't mean that it's from outer space. I can say that it was like nothing we'd seen before. Which I guess is quite obvious when it's described as a UFO.

I WAS taking fake UFO photos when I was 10 with a Kodak Instamatic and a saucer hung on a string. Why are all supposed UFO photos out of focus and blurry especially in these days of digital images?

I GUESS if you have a sighting, you start to question your own existence and what part these UFOs play in our game of life.

IT IS dirt spots on the camera lens — if it was a UFO they would have stopped for a cup of tea, a chat and to refill their petrol tanks, I'm sure.

Alien invasion

LOOKS about as convincing as the UFO photograph I took outside my window of a bottle top suspended on a piece of string.
