Calculated ET invasion

A COUNCIL has calculated the chances of an alien invasion hitting Scotland's biggest city.

A UFO spotter wrote to the city of Glasgow to ask what provisions had been made for the inevitable close encounter.

Dr Kenneth Meechan, head of information governance, responded: "The council covers 0.00003 per cent of the surface of the earth. On a purely statistical basis, we consider it unlikely."

But he added: "We're sure any (non-hostile) alien visitors would want to include Glasgow in their list of places to visit, and we can assure them of a warm and peaceful welcome."
