Honeymoon pair on UFO trail

By JIM SMITH

NEWLYWEDS Tony and Pamela Williams are spending every spare minute of their brief honeymoon star gazing in West Wales.

Unlike other happy couples, they have different reasons for holding hands under the moonlight.

They were brought together by a common interest in UFOs and decided to spend their first days of married life together on a "pilgrimage" to the St Bride's Bay area of the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park where many unexplained sightings were reported five years ago.

"It may seem a bit late but we are still hoping to catch a glimpse of one," said 44-year-old garage owner Mr Williams, who lives at Beckenham, Kent.

He and Mrs Williams, aged 44, have been married before but say that they were drawn together after reading the same book which dealt with reports on silver-suited space men and strange objects being seen over the sky in the Broad Haven area.

"We are tracing the steps of the sightings and hoping to speak to as many people as possible about the reports," said Mr Williams.

Mrs Williams said, "I read this book about all the sightings in Pembrokeshire and I later loaned it to Tony."
