That's corny

CORN circles became the dry land equivalent of the Loch Ness Monster — a major industry or an elaborate con.

It's difficult to fake an underwater monster in a cold Scottish lake — that's why the mystery there lingers.

Now, in England's corn fields, artists Doug Bower and Dave Chorley have revealed that they, not aliens, are behind the great corn controversy. Reputations were on the 'line' when they revealed how they had started and then continued their elaborate hoax. Whether they're double bluffers or not it gives us a good laugh.
