

plant's performance.

GLOBE STAFF PHOTO BY WENDI BARRA

signed into law yesterday by Gov. John Sununu. The license law, effective immediately, lets the director of motor vehicles use points as a basis for revoking or suspending bad drivers' licenses. The law also allows state police to chase suspected drunken drivers into other states and lets families of fatal-accident victims testify at the driver's license revocation hearing. (AP)

n. The police t Jones delivered a mutually agreed t, he said, punc ek. He was not ad tial.

tive of a School Committee member will be affected by the proposed staff reduction." But the commission said members whose immediate family would be affected by salary issues "must abstain" from participating in upcoming teacher contract negotiations.

dence the youth was fleeing when shot. Justice John Dennis Healy of Peabody District Court will preside over the inquest, which is expected to last three to five days.

ion sets ting rules

Shooting inquest reset for June 11

An inquest into the May 15 fatal shooting of a South Boston teen-ager by a police officer has been rescheduled for June 11. Originally set to begin today, the closed-door proceeding in South Boston District Court was postponed to allow documents to be made available to attorneys in the case, said Paul K. Leary, first assistant to Suffolk County District Attorney Newman Flanagan. Officer Joseph R. Quinn, who shot Vincent M. Mancuso, 18, said he fired in self-defense as he lay on the ground and Mancuso threatened him with a knife. Mancuso's family has disputed Quinn's version of events, saying the wound to the back of the head was evi-

Family is arrested at Nevada test site

A Brookline family of five was among 149 persons arrested Monday at a civil disobedience action at the Nevada Test Site, near Beatty, Nev. Dr. John E. Mack, a faculty member of the Harvard Medical School, his wife, Sally, a social worker at Children's Hospital, and their three sons, Daniel, 26, Kenneth, 24 and David Anthony, 22, were arrested after crossing hand in hand onto the test site, Mack said. They and more than 600 others were taking part in a rally and civil disobedience action organized by the American Peace Test, a national antinuclear group, he said. "Some desperate effort has to be made to call it to the attention of the people that we continue to test and the Russians don't," Mack said in a telephone interview.

Waste disposal focus of Maine-Navy suit

AUGUSTA, Maine - The Maine attorney general's office filed suit yesterday against the US Navy, alleging numerous violations of Maine's hazardous-waste laws at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Kittery. The lawsuit filed in York County Superior Court accuses the ship overhaul, repair and conversion facility of dumping industrial hazardous wastes in its treatment plant that cannot adequately handle them, giving wastes to unlicensed handlers, illegally accepting hazardous wastes from Pease Air Force Base in New Hampshire and expanding its waste-storage yard without the state's prior approval. (AP)

Albano says Piro underestimated worth

PIRO Continued from Page 21

cratic primary despite being under indictment on federal extortion charges.

After the primary, a mistrial was declared but Albano won the general election on stickers after a vitriolic campaign during which he ran on a pledge to fight for rules reform in the Senate. Five months later, Piro was acquitted. "My past is my past and people know about it. I was cleared of everything," Piro said yesterday.

He said the expense of his trials forced him to sell off property and take a part-time job as a sales director for Roofblok Ltd., a roofing company. Although his income was listed as between $10,001 to $25,000 on the disclosure report, Albano's campaign manager, Donald Hoffman, said Piro had told the Medford Mercury he made more than $100,000 from the job.

"I never said that. I said that was what the job was worth," Piro retorted. His 1985 income was listed as between $45,000 to $100,000, including $10,000 to $25,000 from his longtime job as coordinator of corporate relations with the J.F. White Construction Co. and between $25,000 to $50,000 from a realty trust.

Albano gave his salary income as $42,000, including $30,000 as a legislator and $10,200 as a Somerville alderman. Although he campaigned for rules reform in 1984, calling for limiting the powers of Senate president William M. Bulger, Albano was recently named by Bulger to be cochairman of the Public Safety Committee, a job that brings a $7,500 bonus.

Piro said Albano's acceptance of the job undermined his credibility but Albano replied, "Mr. Piro thinks everyone who is part of leadership is in the tank the way he was." Piro was a former member of the House leadership.

5*

Hawaiian
in front

20+

ed chance y one of otels—the
t. Stay in an
and savor
paradise!
Roundtrip
lget Rent A sh 9/30/86.

What?

You Haven't Done

Boston Globe, Wednesday, June 4, 1986

P. 24

Family is arrested at Nevada test site

A Brookline family of five was among 149 persons arrested Monday at a civil disobedience action at the Nevada Test Site, near Beatty, Nev. Dr. John E. Mack, a faculty member of the Harvard Medical School, his wife, Sally, a social worker at Children's Hospital, and their three sons, Daniel, 26, Kenneth, 24 and David Anthony, 22, were arrested after crossing hand in hand onto the test site, Mack said. They and more than 600 others were taking part in a rally and civil disobedience action organized by the American Peace Test, a national antinuclear group, he said. "Some desperate effort has to be made to call it to the attention of the people that we continue to test and the Russians don't," Mack said in a telephone interview.