

JOHN HARVARD'S JOURNAL

I can't believe
I just found this,
I thought I had sent it

Paralympic medals in alpine skiing and tandem track-cycling in the 1980s and '90s; she set a world record in the kilometer event at the 1998 IPC World Cycling Championships in Colorado. A lawyer and an eloquent voice for the disabled, she was copresident of the Retinoblastoma Family Foundation and lectured widely in Japan (in Japanese) on the rights of the disabled. In 2001 she was inducted into the International Scholar-Athlete Hall of Fame, in Providence. She leaves her husband, D. Spencer Yates Jr., a daughter, Elise, a son, Carson, her mother and stepfather, Mary and Richard Zabelski, and her father, Michael Dunne.

BENJAMIN EDELSON '00, of Pasadena, died December 5. A recipient of the Hoopes Prize for his senior thesis at Harvard, he was a graduate student in chemistry at the California Institute of Technology. He leaves his parents, Richard and Ann, his brother, Aaron, his grandparents, David and Miriam Edelson and Vivian Bridges, and his fiancée, Tracy Long.

LEA FOHRDER SULLIVAN '01cl was murdered on November 8 in Philadelphia, where she was a third-year medical student at Thomas Jefferson University. A varsity lacrosse player at Harvard, she spent a post-baccalaureate year at Bryn Mawr before enrolling in medical school. Her survivors include her parents, Kenneth and Anna, a sister, Kara, a brother, Luke, and her fiancé, Brendan.

Graduate Schools

GEOFFREY LEONARD STAGG, A.M. '35, died November 10 in Toronto. He was a retired professor and chairman of the department of Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese at the University of Toronto, where he taught from 1956 to 1977, and a leading scholar of Cervantes. Earlier he was the first chairman of the Spanish department at the University of Nottingham, England. In World War II he served in the British Intelligence Corps in England, Gibraltar, North Africa, and Italy, for which efforts he was made a Member of the Order of the British Empire. He leaves a daughter, Pamela, and two sons, Peter and Christopher; his wife, Amy (Southwell), predeceased him.

RUTH SLONITZ DEUTSCH, A.M. '41, died September 20 in Lexington, Mass. She was lecturer emeritus in German language and literature at Wellesley College, where she taught off and on from 1944 to 1977. A specialist on the Enlightenment period and German Expressionism, she also taught at the University of Bridgeport and Southern Connecticut State College. In 1994, the Wellesley German department named its new interdepartmental library in her honor. She was a former program director and longtime board member of the Goethe Society of Boston. She leaves two daughters, Mary Edsall '65 and Margaret Carroll; her husband, Karl, Ph.D. '51, a former professor of government at Harvard, died in 1992.

DAVID SPRING, Ph.D. '48, died November 12 in Baltimore. He was a professor emeritus of history at Johns Hopkins University, where he served on the faculty for more than 50 years. Earlier he taught at the University of Toronto. A social historian specializing in the history of the English landed aristocracy, he also ventured into the realm of literary studies through a love of Jane Austen. His published works include English Landed Estate in the Nineteenth Century and, with his wife, Eileen, Ecology and Religion in History. His wife survives him.

LYLE EDWARD GLAZIER, Ph.D. '50, died October 21 in North Bennington, Vt. He was professor emeritus of English and founding chairman of the department of American studies at the State University of New York, Buffalo, where he taught from 1947 to 1972. A specialist in African-American literature, he traveled widely and lectured in universities in Turkey, India, and Yemen, promoting the study of works by African-American writers. He was the author of Great Day Coming, about African-American literature, and American Decadence and Rebirth, as well as numerous novels and books of poetry, including Summer for Joey and Orchard Park and Istanbul. In retirement he taught courses in African-American literature as an adjunct professor at Southern Vermont College. He leaves three daughters, Laura Reid, Susan Swartz, and Alis Headlam, and a brother, Lawrence.

SAM ROSEN, Ph.D. '52, died October 16 in Durham, N.H. He was professor emeritus of economics at the University of New Hampshire, where he taught for many years. He introduced the university's first course in macroeconomic theory and, in 1962, helped organize the Whittemore School of Business and Economics. As a founding member and two-time president of the UNH chapter of the American Association of University Professors, he led the effort to win collective bargaining at the university. He was passionately interested in foreign cultures and traveled to Italy, Malta, London, Paris, Beijing, and The Hague as a visiting scholar; his last trip was to Cuba. An accomplished pianist, he taught the history of jazz and served as president of the Seacoast Jazz Society. He leaves his wife, Mary, a daughter, Laurie, and two sons, Michael and Jonathan.

WILLIE ANTHONY HILLS, M.B.A. '72, died September 19 in Portsmouth, N.H. President of Limitless Designs Corp., in Arlington, Mass., a custom-furniture business he founded in 1972, he taught woodworking for more than 30 years at the Cambridge Center for Adult Education, where he was a longtime member of the board. He was a director of the Cambridge Multicultural Arts Center and the Advisory Council of the Society of Arts and Crafts. He served three tours of duty in the navy in Correction: Fred Whipple (January-February, page 88P) did not head the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics. Rather, he was the longtime director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, which moved from Washington, D.C., to Cambridge with his appointment in 1955 and then shared space for many years with the Harvard College Observatory. The two institutions were not combined into the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics until 1973, after Whipple had stepped down. We regret the error.

the Vietnam War. He leaves his wife, Beth Segers, and his parents, Rosalind and James Maddox.

Faculty and Staff

ROBERT DOW BUZZELLI, Kresge professor of business administration emeritus at the Business School, died November 6 in Alexandria, Va. He was a member of the faculty from 1961 to 1993 and chaired the marketing department from 1972 to 1977. An expert in the field of strategic marketing and a pioneer in the application of statistical methods to marketing problems, he was best known for his role in the creation of PIMS (Profit Impact of Marketing Strategies), a large-scale research program to identify and measure the determinants of profits in individual businesses; PIMS eventually evolved into an independent research organization, the Strategic Planning Institute. He was the author or coauthor of many books, including Mathematical Methods and Models in Marketing, Marketing Research and Information Systems, Marketing: A Contemporary Analysis, Strategic Marketing, and Marketing in an Electronic Age. He leaves his wife, Edith (Moser), two daughters, Susan Browning and Barbara Schwartz, two sons, Robert, M.B.A. '84, and William, and a brother, Donald.

JOHN EDWARD MACK, M.D. '55, professor of psychiatry at the Medical School and a prize-winning author, died September 27 after being struck by a car in London, where he was to speak at a conference on T.E. Lawrence. He established the psychiatry unit at Cambridge Hospital in the late 1960s and served as chief of the department from 1969 to 1977. He joined the Medical School faculty in 1964. In 1983 he founded the Center for Psychology and Social Change (now the Mack Institute). His early work focused on the psychology of sleep and dreams; later he became an expert on the psychological effects of the nuclear arms race; in the 1990s he studied people who claimed to have had encounters with aliens. His books include A Prince of Our Disorder: The Life of T.E. Lawrence, which won the 1977 Pulitzer Prize for biography, Nightmares and Human Conflict, and Abduction: Human Encounters with Aliens, a bestseller in 1994. He was also an assistant editor of the Journal of the American Psychoanalytic Association and a member of the editorial board of the American Journal of Psychoanalysis. He leaves three sons, Daniel, Kenneth, and Tony, and a sister, Mary Inghar '46, Ph.D. '53, M.P.H. '56.

DENNIS NICHOLAS SKIOTIS, Ph.D. '71, associate director of the Center for Middle Eastern Studies from 1976 to 1985 and director of undergraduate studies in the history department from 1985 to 1998, died October 19 in Boston. In the mid 1970s, he held a government appointment as head of mission to Cyprus, helping the Senate Subcommittee on Refugees deal with the humanitarian crisis arising from Greek and Turkish conflict on that island. He was a sought-after lecturer and radio commentator on military history, a lifelong interest. He served as president of Athens College from 1999 to 2003 and then as dean of the American College of Greece, where he also directed the Institute of Diplomacy and Global Affairs, doing much to advance U.S.-Greek intellectual exchange. He leaves his wife, Mary (Paouris), two daughters, Litsa and Anna Maria, and a sister, Maria.

Ivy League Championship lacrosse team, he was a second-team All-American. He was active in community affairs in Newton, coaching girls' soccer and serving as copresident of the Hyde School PTO. He leaves two daughters, Eliza and Katherine, and his mother, Margaret Rose.

GERRY F. MOLINA '64 died October 22 in Newburyport, Mass. He was a longtime newspaperman; after graduating he took a job as city-hall reporter for the Newburyport Daily News. In 1973 he joined the Eagle-Tribune, serving the communities of the Merrimack Valley, and went on to hold several posts there, including metro editor, Sunday editor, and managing editor. He became editor of the Haverhill Gazette in 1998, after it was acquired by Eagle-Tribune Publishing. He leaves his wife, Margaret (Hay), and a son, Christopher.

CONRAD CHRISTIAN MAY ARENSBERG '65 died September 8 in Harrisburg, Pa. A government lawyer, he worked for 20 years for Pennsylvania's Joint State Government Commission—a bipartisan, bicameral economic and legal research agency at the service of the General Assembly—first as legal counsel and later as executive director. He also served for several years as deputy attorney general of the commonwealth. He was a life member of the American Law Institute. He leaves his wife, Christa (Vanderhoef), a stepdaughter, Jennifer Wagner, a sister, Susan Diacou, and two brothers, Charles and Jonathan.

LANGDON GODDARD WRIGHT '65cl died September 10 in an automobile accident in Milford, N.Y. He was an associate professor of history at the State University College of Oneonta, where he was chairman of the college graduate committee and director of admissions in the Coopers-town Graduate Program (CGP). He created and sustained a number of CGP traditions, including an annual fall field trip to Boston for a tour of the Freedom Trail and Harvard Yard. He was a voracious reader with an encyclopedic knowledge of American history. A lover of fine food, he made a legendary piccadillo and was renowned for his connoisseurship of hot sauce. He was an army veteran of the Vietnam War. He leaves his wife, Emily (Leake), and a sister, Nancy.

JOHN LESTER BARR III '66cl died February 17, 2004, in Bethesda, Md. An internist with Kaiser Permanente for 25 years, he was the coauthor, with his sister, Peggy Eastman, of a book, Your Child Is Smarter Than You Think. Besides his sister, he leaves his wife, Jill (Hersey) '68, a daughter, Alice, a son, Christopher, and his mother, Isabelle.

VIRGINIA LIESON BRERETON '66cl died September 3 in a fire in her home in Brookline, Mass. She was a lecturer in English at Tufts University, where she taught freshman English for many years. A historian of women in religion and of conservative Protestant evangelicism, she was the author of From Sin to Salvation: Stories of Women's Conversions, 1800 to the Present and Training God's Army: The American Bible School, 1880-1940 and the coeditor, with Margaret Bendroth, of Women and Twentieth-Century Protestantism. She was an ardent rock climber and nature lover who taught a course of her own design, "Imagining the Mountains," at Tufts' European Center, in Talloires, France. She leaves her husband, John, two sons, John and Richard, her father, William Lieson, a sister, Janet Lieson, and a brother, Charles Lieson.

ROBERT FARWEL CHATFIELD-TAYLOR '66 died October 14 in New Bedford, Mass. He was a psychiatrist who maintained a private practice in Brookline and later New Bedford, and served for a decade on the staff of Taunton State Hospital. An opera and history buff, he also enjoyed sailing, skiing, golfing, photography, and classical guitar. He leaves his wife, Esperanca Moniz, three daughters, Rebecca, Zoë, and Raquel, two sons, Nicholas Chatfield-Taylor and Julian Kopald, a sister, Joan, a half-sister, Lita von Lieres und Wickau, a brother, Wayne, and two half-brothers, Michael and Jeffrey Thomas.

BRUCE FOWLER '66, M.B.A.'72, died September 6 in Santa Fe. He served in the Peace Corps in Brazil and then embarked on a business career. Early on, he worked for Cambridge Consulting Group and for Abt Associates, where he was deputy director of a federal project to provide housing subsidies directly to the poor, rather than to developers. Later he became a project manager in the engineering and scientific division at Lotus Development Corp. Most recently he worked as an international consultant to pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies. Former captain of the Harvard swimming team, he continued to swim competitively as a member of the New England Masters Swim Club, setting several longstanding records for his age group in breaststroke events at the 1984 U.S. Master's Swimming National Long Course Championships. He was also an avid mountain hiker and a lifelong car aficionado. He had lived in Santa Fe since 2001. He leaves his wife, Diane Kell, Ed.M. '96, a daughter, Lindsey, a son, Michael, and a sister, Cleo.

MIRIAM STONE LEAVITT '66cl died November 29 in Fredericton, New Brunswick. An early childhood educator, after moving to Canada she was hired by the New Brunswick Department of Education to develop the curriculum for its new kindergarten program; the innovative, play-based system she devised, described in a book, Young Children Learning, became a model for early childhood education in the province. Later she worked on programs for children with disabilities and support programs for the home-schooled. She leaves her husband, Robert '66, M.A.T. '71, two daughters, Sarah Leavitt and Hannah Davidson, and two sisters, Deborah Stone '62 and Susannah Eldridge.

EMILE SYLVESTER GODFREY JR. '72 died suddenly on November 6 in Indianapolis. He was director of corporate communications for Clarian Health Partners, in Indianapolis. Before moving to Indiana, in 1994, he was a vice president of Federated Department Stores Inc. in Cincinnati and a senior vice president of First National Bank of Chicago. He was a varsity fencer while at Harvard and chief marshal of his Class senior year. He leaves his wife, Pamela (O'Leary), two daughters, Jennifer Rusco and Ashley, and a sister, Nancy.

ROBERT JAY SEIDMAN '72mcl died of leukemia on November 4, 2003, in Duarte, Cal. He was a songwriter whose songs were recorded by a number of well-known artists over the years, including Belinda Carlisle ("Fool for Love," "Summer Rain"), Bonnie Tyler ("Streets of Little Italy," "Notes from America," "Shy with You"), Roger McGuinn and Chris Hillman of The Byrds ("Love Me Tonight"), Maria Vidal ("Life on the Train," "Angel"), and Asian star Agnes Chan ("Courage and Grace"). He was also a tennis pro and an avid and eclectic reader. He leaves his parents, Eleanor and Irving, and two brothers, Larry '68 and Leon.

JOHN EDWARD (JACK) SHEA '72 died October 5 in Edinburgh from injuries suffered in a fall. A gifted artist in many media, he worked mainly in documentary films. He founded the film school at Napier University, in Edinburgh, where he was a senior lecturer in the film and television department for the last decade. He was also involved in 3-D computer animation, website design, photography, and painting; wrote stories, songs, screenplays, and poetry; and was a performing musician. His films include Shepherds of Berneray, Terry Gets Married, and Who Owns Jack Kerouac? He leaves his wife, Yvonne Baginsky, three daughters, Kiva, Corinna, and Natasha, his mother, Theresa, a sister, Pat, and three brothers, Rick, Mike, and Tim.

LESLIE CAROL FURTH '79cl died of breast cancer on June 4, 2004, in Long Beach, Cal. An art historian, she was associate curator of American art at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and former Muriel G.S. Lewis Fellow in American Paintings at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. During the late 1980s she worked in Paris and London as part of a team researching all the paintings in the Phillips Collection, in Washington, D.C., for a permanent museum catalog. In 1992 she was curator of an exhibition at the Phillips of the works of August Vincent Tack, an abstract painter from western Massachusetts. She was also coauthor of a book on the photography of Edward Weston. She leaves her husband, Bernard Wolfson, two children, Oliver and Caroline, her father, Richard, M.B.A. '57, and stepmother, Eileen, and three sisters, Joanna, Rebecca, and Alexandra.

ARVIND JEWETT SUDARSHAN '83mcl, of Taos, N.M., died June 13, 2004. He was an attorney with an abiding love for the law, the beauty of nature, and the State of Texas. He leaves his parents, Lalita and George, two brothers, Alex and Ashok, and his former wife, Beth Rohde Frothingham '83.

ROSEMARY BETH QUIGLEY '92mcl died of complications of cystic fibrosis on September 6 in Boston. She was an assistant professor of medical ethics and health policy at Baylor University. While in graduate school at the University of Michigan, she served on the staff of the Governor's Commission on Genetic Privacy. Under a Trustman Traveling Fellowship, she spent time in Great Britain, Ireland, and the Netherlands investigating ethical decision-making related to genetic illnesses, and last year was one of three winners nationwide of a three-year Greenwall Foundation Award for medical ethics research. She leaves her husband, Jeffrey Harris, her parents, Mary Beth and Larry, and a sister, Ann Corkery.

CARA DUNNE YATES '92mcl died of cancer on October 20 in Sutton, Mass. A natural athlete who lost her sight to retinal cancer while still a toddler, she went on to win 20 World Championship and