

This sequence of images shows the heat shield from NASA's Mars Science Laboratory hitting the ground on Mars and raising a cloud of dust.

A dark spot, the shadow of the heat shield, enters the scene from lower left. The bright heat shield itself is also apparent just before the shadow and hardware meet in the impact on the surface. The images were taken by the Mars Descent Imager on the spacecraft while the spacecraft was on its parachute.