

FOREVER

1

00:00:00,120 --> 00:00:02,560

HOST: Hi, I'm Mike Ciannilli of the Kennedy Space Center.

2

00:00:02,560 --> 00:00:03,629

Let's go Inside KSC.

3

00:00:06,680 --> 00:00:10,160

The contributions of the fourteen astronauts lost in two space shuttle accidents

4

00:00:10,170 --> 00:00:14,530

are being recognized anew at Kennedy Space Center's Visitor Complex in a new,

5

00:00:14,530 --> 00:00:17,820

permanent exhibit called "Forever Remembered."

6

00:00:17,820 --> 00:00:25,440

JUNE SCOBEE RODGERS: It's not just about their death or the loss of an orbiter,

7

00:00:25,440 --> 00:00:29,550

but it's about people and they're American space pioneers.

8

00:00:29,550 --> 00:00:36,350

EVELYN HUSBAND THOMPSON: As you walk in, you know that you are in a special place.

9

00:00:36,350 --> 00:00:39,010

The low-key display also marks the legacies of space shuttles

10

00:00:39,010 --> 00:00:44,420

Challenger and Columbia with parts of each shuttle placed in public view for the first time

11

00:00:44,420 --> 00:00:50,460

HOST: Challenger broke up during ascent Jan.
28, 1986.

12

00:00:50,460 --> 00:00:55,649

Columbia was lost as it re-entered Earth's atmosphere on Feb. 1, 2003.

13

00:00:55,649 --> 00:01:00,879

In both cases, NASA studied the damage intently and returned to spaceflight with determination

14

00:01:00,879 --> 00:01:02,479

and purpose.