

EOS Satellite

With the "Cold War" over, and very few actual admitted threats to our national security, the government is taking a different tack on monitoring both us and our interplanetary visitors. Its a 15-year program called "Mission to Planet Earth", and involves a plethora of sensors designed around very specific parameters.

The first to be launched is called "AM-1" and is, by far, the largest and most ambitious of all the scheduled spacecraft. Is the first in a series of Earth-monitoring satellites called AM-1 because of its close alliteration to the Hebrew "I AM"-the ancient "name" for the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob?

AM-1, to be launched into polar orbit June 30, has five primary sensors to provide coverage of both the land mass and ocean surface, the extent of cloud cover, atmospheric composition, and reflected and emitted radiation.

The remaining "Mission to Planet Earth" satellites are called EOS. Some believe this is an abbreviation of Earth-Orbiting Satellites, but could the real reason for the name be that Eos was the Greek goddess of dawn-and that their purpose is to monitor the dawning of a new age or New World Order?

This mixture of sensors would certainly provide a detailed overview of our planet every 24 hours. Perfect both for its stated purpose and for control and monitoring of people and their activities.

State governments are now using satellite data to spy on their citizens. The Arizona Water Board used data from one of our satellites recently, determining that a farmer in a remote area of the state was using more than his allocated share of water. He was cited, prosecuted, and found guilty based on these data.

Many cities are currently using satellite images to monitor compliance with zoning regulations. That little room addition of yours you snuck in last summer can't escape the relentless eye of a ne'er sleeping and tax-hungry Big Brother.

Rest assured that the EOS sensors are orders of magnitude more sensitive and flexible that those currently being used.
