

ALIEN TECHNOLOGY CENTER NELLIS AFB

Just north of the "hot pad" at Nellis AFB, Nevada, blending to inconspicuousness into the surrounding terrain, lies this strange assemblage of buildings, security fencing, and bizarre telephone-booth-like structures.

John Lear claims that the area was suddenly and mysteriously changed "almost overnight" from a U.S. Navy facility to one having no identifying marks. Inquiries to the Nellis AFB Public Information Office (PIO) resulted in a "no comment" response as to both its identity and purpose.

I then telephoned the PIO and asked the sergeant who answered the telephone to take several steps outside his office (having a map of the base helps!) and look to the north west, just past the end of the runway. There he would see a water tower. The water tower is located in the area I was asking about, I said. 🗺️🗺️

He not only refused to honor this simple request, he hung up the telephone while muttering something akin to, "Damned UFO nut." Strangely enough, I had made no mention of my proclivity toward UFO research.

A recent map shows that the area is a federal prison, yet there is no listing for it in the Bureau of Prisons list.

What about this mysterious area? Is there any evidence to support either an adjunct to Nellis, a federal prison, or serves in some other capacity for some other government agency?

Being that I am a curious fellow, I wanted to know what this was. So I contacted some of my more adventurous friends and headed out for an adventure-filled afternoon.

The trip up to the front gate was fruitless, and resulted in a stern-faced, armed guard politely (yet firmly) demanding that we leave. We returned from whence we came (about 300 yards away) and hauled out the binoculars and cameras. Long lenses were in order now! After a brief flurry of tripods, sandbags, and 50-power binoculars, we were ready!
