@Steve_uap2020 @ChrisKMellon Not true. Several Canadian cases were included on the Condon Report, which should have been Required reading for any scientist studying UAP. And being critical is an asset in ufology, rather than gushing praise for anything UAP.

@ChrisKMellon His statement about the lack of good Canadian UFO cases (âI know of no âfamousâ Canadian onesâ) shows how little he really knows about ufology. This is typical of scientists who make pronouncements about the subject, although usually from a debunking position. Too bad.

@Steve_uap2020 Yes, he also explained that there was a difference between Unexplained and Insufficient Information cases, and that those were the majority of the 144. Those are the ones with "too little data." The "handful" are the only ones of significance.

@Steve_uap2020 It was pretty much what I expected. Nice that they clarified the 144 "Unexplained" cases as "Insufficient Information," as I pointed out in my blog months ago.

In other words, it's not that there were 144 "Unexplained" cases, but that they were "Insufficient Information." Like I explained in my blog post:

@Steve_uap2020 @blackvaultcom @RepAndreCarson @timkaine On this issue, Canada is more transparent and has a longer continuous record of interest in the subject than the USA. And we actually have the briefing docs, even though they are only a handful of slides. Where's the equivalent briefing for the US Secretary of Defense?

https://twitter.com/\_/status/1524024466380103684

@Steve_uap2020 @blackvaultcom @RepAndreCarson @timkaine The fact that the Canadian briefing occurred before the American one suggests otherwise, that Canada has been ahead of the USA in this regard. In fact, there is a continuous record of official UFO (not UAP) reporting in Canada, unlike the USA.

In Iceland, books are exchanged on Christmas Eve, and you spend the rest of the night reading. People generally take their books to bed along with some chocolate. How cozy and wonderful does that sound?

(More fun facts: Iceland publishes more books per capita than any other country, and new books are typically published only during the Christmas season—the frenzy is called Jólabókaflóð, or the Christmas Book Flood.)

@ufotruthdigger <http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FPiubgvXoAAsOY4.jpg>

After some very careful research I have come to the conclusion that the San Antonio, UFO artifact from 1945 may in fact be a part from a windmill. (?)

1945 San Antonio UFO Artifact

Windmill tailbone part

The parts are not exact, but keep in mind that there were several windmill manufactures and they all had various models of windmills. There will be some variations in the design of the tailbone piece from model to model and manufacturer to manufacturer. Density testing is a match to A13 casting alloy

Additional testing is being done, just to make sure

 IS SUPPLIED TO YOU BY THE R.C.M.A. POLICE FOR INFORMATION OF YOUR DEPARTMENT ONLY. IT IS NOT TO BE MADE KNOWN TO ANY OTHER AGENCY

Unidentified Flying Object -
 Alexis Creek - 2 Nov 62

1 Reference telecon C/O Christmas - W/O Biden. Attached for your information is a copy of the narrative report, which was forwarded to higher authority, concerning the observation of an unidentified flying object in the Alexis Creek area on 2 Nov 62.

2 The metal container reported to have fallen from the object has been retrieved and photographs and a sample of the contents are forwarded for your perusal. In our opinion, the finding of the container is only coincidental to the sighting of the UFO, the civilian witnesses' statements notwithstanding. The container appears to be the nose cone fairing of a chaff dispenser tent. The "window" is 1.5 cm in length and is considered to be for the purpose of jamming I-band radar.

3 The investigation by the RCMP of the UFO has failed to produce a satisfactory explanation of the observed phenomena. Its identity therefore remains a mystery.

@UAPstudy @ufobelievers But NOT a "Tic Tac." UFOs have been reported having a myriad of shapes for decades. The object seen during the Nimitz event was nothing new, but certainly not unique, and calling all later UFOs with the same general shape isn't accurate at all.

Alright, now that the Olympics are over let me give a quick little rundown on some of the most basic Paralympic facts I think you should know:

-We are Paralympians, not Olympians, and should be referred to as such.

-It is the Paralympics, not the para-olympics.

-The "para" stands for parallel, meaning along side, not para as in paraplegic.

-You can't just decide to go to the Paralympics, you must qualify and only the best in the world get to go. The qualifying standards are just as high as the Olympics.

-While some athletes may not appear to have a disability, remember that everyone competing does and has been thoroughly evaluated and classified into impairment categories based on type and degree of disability to ensure fairness.

-Last, and most importantly, we Paralympians are human. We have ups and downs like any one else. We will falter, we will fail, we will rise, and we will succeed. We are representing our country on the largest international stage and with that comes added pressure. Success is not always about the number or colour of medals, it is about the process and the accomplishments made to get us to this point.

Hope you all tune in for some of the most incredible shows of athleticism, determination, and sheer grit you'll ever see. The stories will captivate you and the sports will astound you.

We will make Canada Proud. 🇨🇦

"Three objects observed on their airborne avoidance collision system radar. Objects were echelon right, 6 NM off KLM's wing. Objects went line astern then leader object went rapidly off the scope. Toronto controllers reported seeing 2 prime targets stationary for approximately 15 minutes around London. One object then came back. Data reduction was done and proved there were objects there. That reduction was done around 2100Z. This was not reported to us until new Toronto controllers reported 4 objects 7 to 8 NW southwest of London VOR at position 4308N 08110W."

1991 Canadian UFO Survey
UFOs Observed by Pilots in Canadian Airspace

- 9910306 NRC N91/26 Kingston, Ontario 0758Z
Air Charter 866 was 10 nautical miles NW of Kingston at 9000 feet, eastbound. The pilot and co-pilot observed a "blue-green, luminescent, cigar-shaped object". It "stopped in front of ACX 866, then headed off northbound". Its altitude was estimated to be between 8000 and 41000 feet. It was reported that pilots of numerous other aircraft in the area were also witnesses to the UFO. The report was made by Montreal ATC. Skies were clear.
- 9910329 NRC N91/31 Cranbrook, BC 0356Z
Two crew members of Air Canada 149 and two crew members of Canadian 995 reported that they were about 100 nautical miles east of Cranbrook, BC. The AC flight was at 39000 feet. Skies were reported clear. An object with bright lights, thought to be "well above" the observers, "stopped and started" with "erratic movements", then "vanished". It was visible for about 5 to 10 minutes.
- 9910331 NRC N91/32 Moncton, New Brunswick 2359Z
Pilots of 10 (ten) different aircraft, both civilian and military, as well as one ground observer, reported a series of fireballs over a period of about 20 minutes. Locations ranged from Sept-Iles, to Presque Isle and Fredericton. The report was sent by [REDACTED], the ATC (?) supervisor at Moncton.
- 9910407 NRC N91/35 Sterling, Ontario 0602Z
Air Canada DC-9 Flight 472 was east of Sterling when the crew observed a "bright green light flash". Reported to NORAD.
- 9910411 NRC N91/36 La Ronge, Saskatchewan 0242Z
The pilot of an aircraft was 59 miles due east of La Ronge at an altitude of 10500 feet. An object "came from above the aircraft and passed down through the aircraft's altitude off of the left wingtip." The object was described simply as a "bright white light", moving too fast to determine its speed. Looking down on the ground following its departure, a light was seen near where the object was thought to have descended. The pilot noted that the ground light may have been from a "passing vehicle".
- 9910817 Edmonton, Alberta 2300L
An airline pilot contacted UFOROM with an anonymous report of a "brilliant white light" over his aircraft. The light was at his "zenith" and "flashed". It was seen for only "a second or two". About 10 seconds later, it appeared again. Skies were reported clear, with no clouds. Its intensity was reported to be the same as aircraft landing lights.

@LemonKiwiBlue @NightTimePod @CanadianMint @SomewhereSkies @saucerlife @IUFOC @openmindstv @VOCMNEWS @ufoofinterest @RyanSprague51 Very likely, actually. If you flash a light at it, expecting a response, you will interpret a random flash by it as a response to you. I have proposed experiments to test this kind of effect.

@LemonKiwiBlue @NightTimePod @CanadianMint @SomewhereSkies @saucerlife @IUFOC @openmindstv @VOCMNEWS @ufoofinterest @RyanSprague51 The trouble is that anytime a UFO case involves watching something for a long time, like hours, and also through binoculars or a telescope, it usually is a star or planet. In the Clarendville case, Jupiter was low in the east at the time, so the NRC explanation has some merit.

À : Gestionnaire de quart ACC, monsieur Simomeau

DE : Carole Hélie, FSS Québec FIC, jeudi le 24 septembre vers 1400Z

SUJET : Rapport CIRVIS donné par une citoyenne de Québec rapportant ce que sa sœur a vu la nuit passée.

Au sujet de l'événement :

Cela s'est produit vers 01h30 local dans la nuit de mercredi à jeudi. Il s'agissait d'une grosse boule de lumière avec deux plus petites de chaque côté et des faisceaux lumineux qui semblaient en émaner de chaque côté. La dame en question a regardé avec les jumelles pour constater que ce n'était ni une étoile ni un avion selon elle. Elle a observé le phénomène pendant environ 20 minutes et ensuite est allée se coucher car elle avait peur.

La dame était située sur la rive sud à Lévis et a une vue sur le fleuve. L'objet a été observé au-dessus du château Frontenac un peu vers le pont de Québec et c'était assez haut dans le ciel et ça ne bougeait pas.

C'est sa sœur, madame . qui a rapporté l'événement au FIC de Québec en demandant si ça pouvait être un satellite ou si je savais ce que cela pourrait être.

And in honor of World UFO Day, here are a dozen reasons for science to study UFO reports.

#worldufoday <http://worldufoday.com> <http://pbs.twimg.com/media/DhGcTYjUYAEKXB-.jpg>

9. Further studies are needed to establish how common UFO sightings really are within the subject pool of experienced sky observers: pilots, amateur astronomers, and ornithologists, among others. The Peter Sturrock and Gert Herb surveys provided us with some useful insights, but a more comprehensive survey should be performed.
10. UFO-report data are proving useful to individuals who seek to prove that the Aurora stealth plane is actually flying. UFO reports have been used to suggest that the plane is being tested over populated areas and can be tracked by interpreting UFO sightings and tracking patterns of sonic booms. If UFO data can be used constructively by aviation specialists in this manner, then the data are inherently useful.
11. UFO reports are also being used to study the phenomenon of earthquake lights which precede seismic events. The gathering of NL reports is one way in which geophysicists are trying to understand this natural phenomenon. What other natural mysteries do NLs signify?
12. Fireball-reporting networks often rely on UFO-like reports that describe short-duration, green teardrop-shaped objects to provide information on bolide frequency. Again, the collecting of UFO data can provide significant clues to scientists, in this case astronomers.

These are just 12 suggestions on how research on UFOs can be scientifically acceptable and useful, even if we remove the ETH from consideration. The UFO phenomenon doesn't seem to want to go away. This alone should suggest it deserves some serious attention from the scientific community. Some of these ideas are already being acted upon at institutions around the world.

HISTORY

Project Magnet - Ottawa

With a view toward discovering new technologies in, unusual magnetic phenomena, Wilbert B. Smith of the Broadcast and Measurements Section, Telecommunications Division of the Ministry of Transport, sent a memorandum to Commander C.P. Edwards, Deputy Minister of Transport for Air Services.

The memorandum suggested that a study of the "geo-magnetics" could explain the extraordinary flight patterns observers claimed for flying saucers. Smith had learned on a visit to Washington, D.C., from a Defense Research Board liaison officer at the Canadian Embassy, that the Americans knew flying saucers exist' and were studying them under the strictest secrecy. Smith's memorandum to Commander Edwards was dated 21 November 1950. Smith received Commander Edwards' "go ahead" on December 2.

Instead of building a "pilot power plant" for extracting energy from the Earth's magnetic field as he expected to do, Smith spent a great deal of time collecting reports of flying saucer sightings and gathering surplus equipment for a flying saucer observatory at Shirleys Bay. Smith was instrumental in gathering reports from Department of Transport officials across Canada.

He summarized the most interesting twenty-five sightings for the Project Magnet Report. The conclusion that Smith came to was that "the vehicles are probably extra-terrestrial." Such a conclusion from a private individual merited no particular attention, but coming in a government report, required some explanation. As if that was not enough, there was the publicity that followed his announcement that a flying saucer had been detected over Shirleys Bay on 8 August 1954. Neither the conclusion of his report nor the announced sighting pleased the Ministry of Transport.

Project Magnet, which was largely a part-time activity of Smith's, was officially ended in 1954 after running for four years. Although Smith was permitted to continue his work on flying saucers, he would henceforth do it in an unofficial capacity and on his own time. The work continued until his death in 1962.

Scientific Studies of Unidentified Flying Objects

By Chris Rutkowski

One criticism sometimes leveled at ufology is that it isn't a "real" science. After all, you can't study UFOs, only UFO reports. The elusive chunks of interstellar spacecraft are still unavailable for analysis; thus any scientific study within ufology is impossible.

Or is it? Certainly, if the extraterrestrial hypothesis is the only acceptable theory of UFO origin, the nuts-and-bolts approach can't provide the hard data. (But even this point is debatable.)

Are there any scientific studies within ufology that can be conducted and yield useful results? The answer is yes.

The following are 12 suggested research projects in ufology:

1. Even if we assume that UFOs aren't physical craft, the fact that there continue to be reports is quite interesting. What are the psychological and/or sociological factors that are involved? This question has not been adequately addressed in nearly 50 years of study.
2. Are some UFOs really caused by natural electro-magnetic radiated energy? Michael Persinger and Paul Devereux have both published articles contending that witnesses have seen EM energy as luminous nocturnal lights (NLs); they also claim that such energy affects our brains so that we hallucinate UFO experiences. Both the Persinger and Devereux versions have been largely ignored by scientists; yet they do raise possible explanations of some cases. I do not agree with their interpretations; still, in theory it is scientifically possible that some form of EM effect can create UFO-like experiences.
3. After Herbert Strentz's original but now dated study of how media create UFO flaps, there has been no examination of how tabloid journalism influences UFO-reporting.
4. David M. Jacobs' excellent history The UFO Controversy in America (1975) is now nearly 20 years old. It's time for a sequel.
5. Abduction stories are interesting, and the subject of a great deal of controversy. What is needed is a survey of both sides of the issue. We also need to take into consideration the role, present and potential, of the vociferous False Memory Syndrome Foundation. Exactly how can we deal with persons who report UFO abductions given the evidence for the existence of false memory?
6. Statistical studies of UFO reports can give us an idea of where UFO sightings occur, their frequency, who reports them, and general characteristics of the objects seen. While there are a number of databases in existence, the results of real number-crunching of these data are not widely known. Enough has been done in this regard that we now can actually test hypotheses. The postulating and testing of hypotheses is standard scientific methodology. Some testable hypotheses: "The number of witnesses per UFO report is an average of 2.33." "Nocturnal lights comprise 60% of all UFO reports." "The proportion of NLs to close-encounter cases is a constant" and so on.
7. Though it is largely assumed that people's perceptions of UFOs are greatly in error, there have been comparatively few studies devoted to outdoor tests of observational capabilities in the context of UFOs. There have been studies of both autokinesis and autostasis, but a dedicated study of observations of distant (500m+) light sources and perceived distances and other characteristics would be useful in understanding misidentifications.
8. Gallup polls are interesting. They seem to show that more persons believe UFOs are real than not. Pollsters have conducted breakdowns according to education, gender, and so on, but could a more rigorous survey give us additional information on how UFO beliefs manifest in our society? Can varying the phrasing of the questions affect the results, or is this belief firmly rooted in the populace, irrespective of how the questions are posed?

@ScolesSarah Actually, meteors can appear to move upward. We get UFO reports where the culprit was a "rising" meteor from the witness's perspective, dependent on its angle of incidence and the location of the witness in relation to its path.

Dear sir:

I am Research Coordinator of the Manitoba Centre for UFO Studies in Winnipeg, and am conducting an investigation of a reported UFO-related incident involving the deaths of some cattle near the town of Teulon, Manitoba, in August of 1976.

During a visit to "D" Division Headquarters on Friday, January 19, 1979, I was told I might receive some information and copies of some documents concerning the incident, upon submission of a written request to your office.

The information I seek is in regards to the death and destruction of two cattle belonging to [redacted] of Teulon, Manitoba. The incident apparently occurred in late July of 1976, but was actually reported to the RCMP Teulon Detachment in August of the same year. I would like to obtain copies of the RCMP report and the photographs taken of the bodies of the animals. Any other information, not necessarily in the form of actual copies of documents, would also be greatly appreciated.

In addition, I would like to obtain more detailed information on the analyses done on the remains, including a copy of the gas-liquid chromatographic chart, along with the data of the procedure used (column packing temperature, etc.). I would appreciate knowing if any other volatiles, in the absence of petrochemicals, might be indicated, as well as whether tests were done for chemical or microbial contamination.

The case exists in the Teulon Detachment files as: 76 - 059 - 52, and 76 - 059D - .

Thanking you for your assistance, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Chris Rutkowski

Story and Photos
By STEVE HADLEY
For The Sun

It's a chilly October evening in River Heights.

The dry leaves rattle outside the old house on Fleet Avenue. But in a small group of pews have gathered. The mood is a solemn one as if someone dear to them has died.

Two men sit at a kitchen table in quiet conversation.

In the living room, another man is leaning awkwardly over a coffee table with a tape recorder.

The only concerned-looking member of the group is one of the residents of the house. He sits nervously on the edge of a couch, waiting.

An elderly couple arrives at the door. In the brief greetings, the woman had in a tilt tone of the house with one of the men from the kitchen.

"We've talked to the residents, and gone through the house and made our notes. In no need for any evidence," the man tells her matter-of-factly.

The elderly woman is a psychic. She's been called to his house as part of the investigation.

This could be the opening scene from a cop show or an Agatha Christie novel, but it isn't.

This is an investigation into the paranormal, a hunt for ghosts.

The man with the recorder is Chris Rutkowski, and the man with the tape recorder is Roy Bauer.

They are Winnipeg's "Ghostbusters." Unlike the image of parapsychology as portrayed in the comedy Ghostbusters, Bauer and Rutkowski do not have hi-tech electronic equipment like "proton ray guns" and "plasma ray guns" to rid homes of ghosts. Other, but it's what people expect of them.

Bauer turns on his tape recorder, and Rutkowski leads the psychic through the house, room by room. She has not been told any of the details of the haunting beforehand, a condition called "white noise," and her job is to walk through the house and attempt to detect, and channel, the spirits of the deceased.

In the first few rooms there is nothing. Then, in the dining room, she stops abruptly.

"There's a child, crying... vibrations... a lot of pain," she murmurs.

For almost a decade, Rutkowski, 32, an author by training, and Bauer, 31, an electronics technician with a passion for mediumistic work, have investigated reports of ghosts, haunted objects and other things that go bump in the night in and around Winnipeg.

Over the years, they have investigated and catalogued hundreds of unusual reports, ranging from Lake Winnipeg suicides and highway

HAUNTING

Winnipeg's ghostbusters find chilling evidence

sightings to reports of EPG abductions. Among those, there have been dozens of reports of ghosts and hauntings from all over the UK.

Best of the 200 or so hauntings reported in Manitoba since 1900 have been "prey roomers" by Falkowski's standards, but he says some, like the Place Avenue haunting, have been truly memorable.

chir who was not told beforehand what was going on in the house.

In a study Room during room, the psychic reported seeing the presence of a young girl sitting and in physical pain, as if she had been beaten. In the rest of the study, leading to the second floor, she reported a similar impression.

A second psychic was brought to the house, and the same "single-minded" procedure was repeated. In both cases, both psychics reported impressions of violence and child abuse having occurred in the house, says Bauer.

One of the psychics also sensed an incident had been done. However, because no actual names were determined, the incident could not be verified through police or court records.

She, having a background in police work, did a little detective work on his own.

"There was some indication that someone in the 60s, the father of a family living in the house got drunk one night and strangled his daughter, who then fell down the stairs from the second floor and died."

"This type of thing does tend to feel in some people as proof that something's going on, but in us it's not proof enough," says Falkowski.

The technique involves recording, at a very high volume, a session of "white noise" or static on a tape recorder and then playing the tape back and carefully listening for voices.

Using this technique, Bauer has recorded voices and other sounds on numerous occasions, and using the first session data, which a "haunting sound" was heard by five different listeners.

"The voices that are recorded are usually quite faint, in a certain peculiar rhythm, and they're usually two to three times quieter than normal speech," says Bauer.

For Bauer, whose "just the facts, ma'am" attitude suits this sort of investigation, EPG has given him more than just a body of data. It has also provided him with experiences that profoundly changed his still able to verify ghost hunting.

"There's very little that has frightened me as yet, and I've been in a lot of situations that most people would find frightening, but there was one that affected me."

"I was doing some routine recording and at the time I never heard anything, but voice on the tape that said 'help me.'"

He pauses and says, as if remembering a strong emotion.

"That voice really got to me... up until that point, I had considered it a dry experiment. It suddenly made me think that I was dealing with real life. I was really, it was no longer just an experiment, I was dealing with individuals who I have to... respect."

In Bauer's view, one of the scariest cases he and Falkowski investigated occurred three years ago, when they were contacted by a 34-year-old man who claimed he was being repeatedly attacked by an apparition in his Osborne Street apartment.

"He described the apparition as an old woman, nude, with outstretched arms, double their length," recounts Bauer.

During the attack, the victim would be overcome with a paralysis and find a hand on his chest, pushing him down onto the bed, saying that it was deliberately trying to suffocate him.

This type of experience is called a "hugging." "Paralysis is one of the major effects of a hugging," says Bauer, holder of the C.E.P. Bauer spent six months investigating the case, often sleeping in the dwelling overnight, with his tape recorder, hoping to capture some evidence. All though he did record some unusual sounds, he became skeptical that anything was there. He was about to end the investigation when a woman, who had spent the night in the apartment, reported being attacked.

"Something was in, and it felt like, trying to paralyze him, and his condition to say, never mind, huh?" says Bauer.

The intriguing part of the case, for both types of haunting called a "hugging." Unless the victim is a parapsychologist himself, he'd be unlikely to describe the details of the experience with the same accuracy as Bauer and Falkowski say.

But what, if anything, can Bauer and Falkowski do to help frightened victims of such hauntings?

"Technically, very little," says Falkowski, who points out that for victims of hauntings "the act of seeking us out and talking with us is usually enough for them to understand how to deal with it themselves."

"People will often come to us very distraught," says Falkowski. "It's a person who has been pragmatic all their life, and something very bizarre happens, they're whole belief system and totally fall apart, and often we're a last resort. Some of them have already gone to psychologists and researchers before coming to us."

Falkowski recommends the first thing a person do if they see a ghost is to "not get too involved or upset about it. There has never been any real danger to 99.99 per cent of the cases."

Bauer adds the real danger results from panic reactions, where a person might fall down a set of stairs trying to escape the house.

Falkowski says a person should not immediately go running to others for advice.

"Try to come to an understanding with what's concerning yourself," says Falkowski. "If something happens and you run to someone for an explanation right away, you're avoiding the most powerful research tool you have, and that's your own mind."
