@mb103001 @TheUfoJoe @ThomasWinterton That's fine. I appreciate witness accounts, but all they can tell us, best case scenario, is the witnesses interpretation of the events. That's not enough for me to draw conclusions. I understand that that is my personal philosophy, so no judgement or anything.

Everyone is interested in what happened in Holland, Michigan on that cold starry night of March 8, 1994. The last reported sighting from Holland occurred one hour ago, at 10:30 p.m., March 11, 1994.

The sightings were not isolated incidents on the west side of the state. On March 8, 1994, at 9:30 p.m., sightings were occurring all over the State of Michigan. There are 82 counties in the state; sightings were reported in 42 of the counties, from the Upper Peninsula, down to the Ohio and Indiana borders. The more interesting cases occurred from March 10, 1994 to the present. Part two of this article will contain detailed descriptions of some of the cases that occurred in Ottawa, Kent, Van Buren, Kalamazoo and Genesee Counties.

There are ten video tapes that are in the process of, or waiting to be analyzed, and more than a dozen photographs. Two of our MUFON investigators were fortunate in that they had sightings in different counties on different nights.

I have filed Freedom of Information Act requests with the National Weather Service to obtain the "computer part" print-out of what was being seen on the radar screen. I was told that the SR-70 radar that was being used that night did not have computer "hook-up" capability. I suspect that isn't true, however, because the radar operator made the statement to Officer Velthouse that "actually, there are blips showing up on the screen and being recorded on the computer part of it, so we can see that."

Requests have also been filed with the FAA in regard to the radar observations by control tower personnel at Muskegon County Airport, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, O'Hare, and near Kimbell, Minnesota.

We have the written report that Officer Jeff Velthouse filed, admission from the radar operator, and a copy of the Ottawa County 911 tape, which was obtained through an FOIA request by Michael Walsh, a reporter

https://twitter.com/_/status/1582464949044932608

@MiddleOfMayhem It apparently comes from Tilly, one of the original investigators, yet this is the first time it was reported. Strangely sounds like another case from 1994 in Australia. I wonder if there was a mix up.

2022-10-18T19:48:35+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1582458643399991296

@sazek It also corroborates Bushongs maps that were made after the fact. But the fact remains that we still can't conclusively link the visual sightings with the radar sightings

2022-10-18T19:47:09+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1582458281426968576

@sazek Her newsletter on this case did spin a strange yarn about the radar maps Bushong made with Prof. Swords, though she didn't write that part. A lot of crossed wires and miscommunication in this case. That's why the 911 tape is valuable, the testimony hasn't had time to change.

@OliverWood2017 @MHuntington7 @novicus @GarryPNolan @DrFunkySpoon You seem to be starting from a point of presupposing what the phenomena is, at least in that there IS a unified phenomena that would broadly explain this collection of singular mysteries, but I don't see anything that would suggest that outside of an argument from ignorance.

Everyone is interested in what happened in Holland, Michigan on that cold starry night of March 8, 1994. The last reported sighting from Holland occurred one hour ago, at 10:30 p.m., March 11, 1994.

The sightings were not isolated incidents on the west side of the state. On March 8, 1994, at 9:30 p.m., sightings were occurring all over the State of Michigan. There are 82 counties in the state; sightings were reported in 42 of the counties, from the Upper Peninsula, down to the Ohio and Indiana borders. The more interesting cases occurred from March 10, 1994 to the present. Part two of this article will contain detailed descriptions of some of the cases that occurred in Ottawa, Kent, Van Buren, Kalamazoo and Genesee Counties.

There are ten video tapes that are in the process of, or waiting to be analyzed, and more than a dozen photographs. Two of our MUFON investigators were fortunate in that they had sightings in different counties on different nights.

I have filed Freedom of Information Act requests with the National Weather Service to obtain the "computer part" print-out of what was being seen on the radar screen. I was told that the SR-70 radar that was being used that night did not have computer "hook-up" capability. I suspect that isn't true, however, because the radar operator made the statement to Officer Velthouse that "actually, there are blips showing up on the screen and being recorded on the computer part of it, so we can see that."

Requests have also been filed with the FAA in regard to the radar observations by control tower personnel at Muskegon County Airport, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, O'Hare, and near Kimbell, Minnesota.

We have the written report that Officer Jeff Velthouse filed, admission from the radar operator, and a copy of the Ottawa County 911 tape, which was obtained through an FOIA request by Michael Walsh, a reporter

August 2008 – While supporting the AAWSAP effort, I was informed by Dr. Lakatski and other AAWSAP personnel about a specific effort within the portfolio known as the Advanced Aerospace Threat Identification Program (AATIP) and that most of my efforts would be focused on that aspect of the project. I was informed that this effort involved collecting data and evidence from military personnel who came into contact with Unidentified Aerial Phenomena (UAP), a term that was then explained to me as the Government nomenclature for Unidentified Flying Objects (UFO)s. Furthermore, I was asked to develop

One of the primary jobs of the task force was to write a report to Congress summarizing the known evidence about UFOs. The team had already created a classified briefing consisting of the most intriguing military encounters, starting with the 2004 Tic Tac incident. The task force whittled down a huge database into 144 of the very best cases. Dr. Taylor helped write the final report.

"We picked sources that were, we knew had a chain of custody of the data," Taylor said. "And out of those 144 to 143 of them, we still couldn't figure out what they were, where they came from and what their intent was."

@528vibes @moranlerner Haha, I'm pretty fussy about the language in this community though. Some people take advantage of the fact we have loose terminology. "The government admits UFOs are real" is an example. That can clearly be interpreted a number of ways.

@SicCoP1 @UAPorSAP @stevebozz1 @ToddRaymondL @SilvaRecord @LueElizondo Perjury is hard to prove, unlike ignoring a subpoena. Time and money to try him and prove it over an issue the majority of the house is likely barely paying attention to, if at all. But again, let him do it. It will at least be entertaining.

@SicCoP1 Are you under the impression that if Elizondo exaggerates or lies about his former position/ any alleged programs he directed under oath, that he'd be tried for perjury? Because I find that hard to believe.

@528vibes Well, likely not the same bug lol. And since they're all watching the sky for these flybys, I would imagine that any UFOs would have been seen by at least one person in the crowd.

@bradjohansson21 @EssentialBusin7 @mattknudsen The government came up with the term UFO! They've never denied unidentified flying objects. "Ufos are real" is a deliberately equivocal statement and the evidence of this is right here in this thread. Look how easy it is to bait people who want to believe!

Section V

PERSONALITIES, ORGANIZATIONS, AND INSTALLATIONS LIST

TO

Appendix A

COUNTER-HUMAN INTELLIGENCE TECHNIQUES AND PROCEDURES

A-V-1. General. The effectiveness of CI operations depends largely on the planning that precedes the operation. Early in the planning process the CI officer on the G2 staff directs the efforts to obtain information on the adversary's intelligence, sabotage, terrorism, and subversion capabilities. Collected information is processed and analyzed, and from it the CI officer formulates a list of CI targets. Section V identifies the criteria for the personalities, organizations, and installations list. CI targets are personalities, organizations, and installations of intelligence or CI interest which must be seized, exploited, or protected.

A-V-2. Personalities. These are persons who are a threat to security, whose intentions are unknown, or who can assist the intelligence and CI efforts of the command. Personalities are grouped into these three categories. For ease in identification, a color code indicates the category. Colors currently in use are black, gray, and white and pertain to the three categories in the order listed above.

a. Black list. The black list is an official CI listing of actual or potential enemy collaborators, sympathizers, intelligence suspects, and other persons whose presence menaces the security of the friendly forces. (Joint Pub 1-02) Black list includes--

(1) Known or suspected enemy or hostile espionage agents, saboteurs, terrorists, political figures, and subversive individuals.

(2) Known or suspected leaders and members of hostile paramilitary, partisan, or guerrilla groups.

(3) Political leaders known or suspected to be hostile to the military and political objectives of the US or an allied nation.

(4) Known or suspected officials of enemy governments whose presence in the theater of operations poses a security threat to the US Forces.

(5) Known or suspected enemy collaborators and sympathizers whose presence in the theater of operations poses a security threat to the US Forces.

(6) Known enemy military or civilian personnel who have engaged in intelligence, CI, security, police, or political indoctrination activities among troops or civilians.

(7) Other personalities indicated by the G2 as automatic arrestees. Included in this category may be local political personalities, police chiefs, and heads of significant municipal and national departments or agencies, and tribal or clan leaders.

- December 18th, 2019: Burchett ignores his Congressional duty to hold a president who has been proven to commit high crimes and misdemeanors accountable and votes against the impeachment of Donald Trump.
- May 15th, 2020: Burchett votes against the HEROES Act, written further support the healthcare industry and citizens affected by the Covid-19 pandemic.
- December 10th, 2020: Burchett signs his name to an amicus brief to the Supreme Court, begging them to overturn the results of the 2020 election. The same election that he won re-election in.
- January 7th, 2021: Tim Burchett votes for the objection to the electoral college's votes in the 2020 election, a failure to send any sort of message that he wasn't intimidated or sympathetic to those who attacked the Capitol to attempt a violent coup.
- January 13th, 2021: Rep. Burchett votes against the second impeachment of Donald Trump, because the Republican Party no longer feels like they should be accountable for anything, including failed coups that result in the deaths of both their participants and police officers.
- February 4th, 2021: Tim Burchett votes to keep Marjorie Taylor Greene's committee assignments, because he wouldn't want her to be accountable for all the bigoted remarks and conspiracy theories she's spread online (probably because she's a kindred spirit).

- March 3rd, 2021: Rep. Burchett votes against HR 1, a bill created to prevent the corruption of money in politics, and protect voter access to the ballot box.
- March 3rd, 2021: Tim Burchett votes against the George Floyd Justice in Policing Act of 2021.
- March 10th, 2021: Burchett votes against the American Rescue Plan Act of 2021, because he feels people deserve to die in poverty during a pandemic.
- March 17th, 2021: Rep. Burchett votes against the re-authorization of the Violence Against Women Act, likely because they feel the 2nd Amendment remaining absolute is more important than preventing people with a history of domestic abuse from owning a firearm (which statistics show, makes them more likely to use those firearms against women in their lives).
- May 19th, 2021: Tim Burchett votes against HR 3233, the creation of a commission to investigate the Capitol Attack.
- May 20th, 2021: Burchett is one of 63 Republicans who vote against the Covid-19 Hate Crimes Act.

Congressional Probe Of UFO Reports Asked

(News Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — The weird glowing objects seen around Dexter, Mich., may be only marsh gases, according to an investigating Air Force representative, but:

Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Grand Rapids, house minority leader, proposes that Congress investigate "the rash of reported sightings of unidentified flying objects in Southern Michigan and other parts of the country."

Ford said he believes a congressional inquiry would be worth while because the American people are becoming alarmed by the UFO stories.

Air Force investigators have been checking on such reports for years, but have come up with nothing conclusive, he said.

"In the light of these new sightings and incidents," Ford said, "it would be a very wholesome thing for a committee of the Congress to conduct a number of hearings and to call responsible witness from the executive branch of the government and witnesses who say they have sighted these objects."

I think the American people would feel better if there were a full-blown investigation of these incidents, which some persons allege have taken place," Ford said.

@SicCoP1 @BryanDBender @MiddleOfMayhem @thaxter @LuAngeles @DeptofDefense My first concern would be to corroborate those claims with more than anecdotes and sensor anomalies. If there is good data that corroborates claims of highly advanced tech, wouldn't every representative be commenting, rather than a small handful?

THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF PHILIP J. KLASS

To ufologists who publicly criticize me, ... or who even think unkind thoughts about me in private, I do hereby leave and bequeath: THE UFO CURSE:

No matter how long you live, you will never know any more about UFOs than you know today. You will never know any more about what UFOs really are, or where they come from. You will never know any more about what the U.S. Government really knows about UFOs than you know today. As you lie on your own death-bed you will be as mystified about UFOs as you are today. And you will remember this curse.

@528vibes I'll say this, the camera doesn't follow the object, there's no original video or witness, that wing is from a passenger jet allegedly from a flight that never existed. If it DID, why aren't there more reports/ videos of this? Why did they stop filming? Those are red flags to me.

@SicCoP1 @LtTimMcMillan @tinyklaus I meant in a broader sense, but yeah I'd like to see it too. I'm working on a case for a video right now and in the articles i'm reading, they cite the exact documents or books they're sourcing so people can corroborate it. I was hoping for something like that.

@SicCoP1 @MiddleOfMayhem I really think that no one here is doubting the accusations, just the claim that the accusations took place. Only because there is no corroborating evidence that they did.

@Hastychckenball @SicCoP1 @LtTimMcMillan Wrong isn't the right word. I just don't feel comfortable coming to conclusions without some evidence and with Tim's article, there's no real way to corroborate his claims at the moment. I'm reserving my judgement until I get more information.

@528vibes Basic math of adding cases that you admitted that you guessed, the "extrapolating" the amount of failed pregnancies?? Right. Basic math :rolling_on_the_floor_laughing: please keep embarrassing yourself.

What the former officer had seen would be observed many times in the Hudson Valley area over the next few years by hundreds of different witnesses: A "V" shaped set of multicolored lights moving slowly and silently across the sky. On March 26th, 1983, a front-page story in the Westchester-Rockland Daily Item proclaimed:

HUNDREDS CLAIM TO HAVE SEEN UFO

The article, which told of sightings of a triangular UFO on Marth 24th, got the attention of a group of UFO researchers in the Valley associated with Dr. J Allen Hynek, founder of the Center for UFO Studies. The group started an investigation of the phenomena which was later documented as a book, Night Siege: The Hudson Valley UFO Sightings, authored by Dr. Hynek and Philip J. Imbrogno, with the help of Bob Pratt.

The group opened up a UFO hotline and received over 300 calls from people that had seen the UFO on the night of March 24th alone. One witness cited in the book reported that it had moved up the Taconic Parkway in "sort of a Z pattern." He described the object as being triangular in shape with thirty to forty colored lights along the back edge. The object, he stated, was huge, "If there is such a thing as a flying city, this was a flying city."

The object apparently cruised over the community of Yorktown that evening too where the police switchboard became so jammed with reports, officials became concerned that they would be unable to take emergency calls.

On the Taconic parkway people pulled over to watch the object as it moved slowly on its path. One observer estimated it was "as large as an aircraft carrier."

@SomewhereSkies The press certainly ran with that quote, seems like they always have a hand in twisting the narrative. Though, the stylized craft that we associate with his sighting is also inaccurate. Look at how different papers described them all within 48 hours (3rd pic) http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FO3zX06X0As4A4Q.png

According to one newspaper account, printed on June 25, Arnold was quoted as saying, "He said he sighted nine saucer-like aircraft flying..."

From the Hayward, California Daily Review of June 26, we see a quote attributed to Arnold. "They were shaped like saucers and were so thin I could barely see them."

From San Antonio on the same date is "Arnold described the objects as "flat like a pie pan."

Bequette, in the East Oregonian reported, "...flat like a pie pan and somewhat bat-shaped..." which is a hint that there was something scalloped in the rear, like the wings of a bat.

On June 26, Arnold was interviewed on KWRC (radio, if it is necessary to make that distinction given the date... yes, I know there was commercial television but not much and certainly not in that area in 1947), and he said, "They looked something like a pie plate that was cut in half with a sort of a convex triangle in the back."

@TxUFOSightings @wookiepastimes @ToddRaymondL It's certainly an equivocal statement, so I suppose it depends on if the person making it is being deliberately equivocal.

@wookiepastimes @ToddRaymondL We have to remember the difference between unexplained and unexplainable. Unknowns existing is an undeniable fact. But does "the UFO phenomenon is real" just mean that we have records of unknowns? There's not much weight to a statement like that.

@dave_beaty @SicCoP1 @MiddleOfMayhem @SilvaRecord @LueElizondo I think it looks like a sample doc from a think tank. It's not even written well.

@SingularTobias I take it back, I'm reading some strange interpretations in the Journal of Parapsychology from 1939. It's very clearly from an era that predates the "energy" equivocation that happens now. That's a moment I'd like to pin down.

@SingularTobias we talked a while ago about the origins of using EMF meters in paranormal investigation and we speculated it began in the early 80s, but I'm finding clues dating back to 1965! Pretty neat. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FNh4E-IXMAQH5yO.png

Miscellaneous Energies

There are quite a few events and energies that can be detected by instruments which have not been mentioned above because we have no idea from the present literature whether or not they would be worth looking for. This includes such things as radio waves, certain odors, changes in gaseous content of the air, magnetic fields, hard radiation, etc.

A novel type of detecting "instrument" would involve the objective assessment of the behavior of various animals. As mentioned @SingularTobias @PBI_Crypto From some brief searching, it looks like a lot of cultures interpreted their appearance as bad omens. Fearing seeing one makes sense from that perspective. Maybe time has just simplified the concept.

@SingularTobias That could definitely be a factor. There are cultural differences in ghosts too. In Japan, Onryo could actually physically harm people. Maybe that extends from the Kanashibari (their version of the old hag) causing sleep paralysis and the feeling of choking. Pretty interesting

THE INDEPENDENT

MONDAY 6 DECEMBER 1993

The Saudi businessman who recruited mujahedin now uses them for large-scale building projects in Sudan. Robert Fisk met him in Almatig

Anti-Soviet warrior puts his army on the road to peace

OSAMA Bin Laden sat in his gold-fringed robe, guarded by the loyal Arab mujahedin who fought alongside him in Afghanistan. Bearded, taciturn figures — unarmed, but never more than a few yards from the man who recruited them, trained them and then dispatched them to destroy the Soviet army — they watched unsmiling as the Sudanese villagers of Almatig lined up to thank the Saudi businessman who is about to complete the highway linking their homes to Khartoum for the first time in history.

With his high cheekbones, narrow eyes and long brown robe, Mr Bin Laden looks every inch the mountain warrior of mujahedin legend. Chadored children danced in front of him, preachers acknowledged his wisdom. "We have been waiting for this road through all the revolutions in Sudan," a sheikh said. "We waited until we had given up on everybody — and then Osama Bin Laden came along."

Outside Sudan, Mr Bin Laden is not regarded with quite such high esteem. The Egyptian press claims he brought hundreds of former Arab fighters back to Sudan from Afghanistan, while the Western embassy circuit in Khartoum has suggested that some of the "Afghans" whom this Saudi entrepreneur flew to Sudan are now busy training for further jihad wars in Algeria, Tunisia and Egypt. Mr Bin Laden is well aware of this. "The rubbish of the media and the embassies," he calls it. "I am a construction engineer and an agriculturalist. If I had training camps here in Sudan, I couldn't possibly do this job."

And "this job" is certainly an ambitious one: a brand-new highway stretching all the way from Khartoum to Port Sudan, a distance of 1,200km (745 miles) on the old road, now shortened to 800km by the new Bin Laden route that will turn the coastal run from the capital into a mere day's journey. Into a country that is despised by Saudi Arabia for its support of Saddam Hussein in the Gulf war almost as much as it is condemned by the United States, Mr Bin Laden has brought the very construction equipment that he used only five years ago to build the guerrilla trails of Afghanistan.

He is a shy man. Maintaining a home in Khartoum and only a small apartment in his home city of Jeddah, he is married — with four wives — but wary of the press. His interview with the Independent was the first he has ever given to a Western journalist, and he initially refused to talk about Afghanistan, sitting silently on a chair at the back of a makeshift tent, brushing his teeth in the Arab fashion with a stick of miswak wood. But talk he eventually did about a war which he helped to win for the Afghan mujahedin: "What I lived in two years there, I could not have lived in a hundred years elsewhere," he said.

> 'What I lived in two years in Afghanistan, I could not have lived in a hundred years elsewhere,' said Osama Bin Laden

When the history of the Afghan resistance movement is written, Mr Bin Laden's own contribution to the mujahedin — and the indirect result of his training and assistance — may turn out to be a turning-point in the recent history of militant fundamentalism; even if, today, he tries to minimise his role. "When the invasion of Afghanistan started, I was enraged and went there at once — I arrived within days, before the end of 1979," he said. "Yes, I fought there, but my fellow Muslims did much more than I. Many of them died and I am still alive."

Within months, however, Mr Bin Laden was sending Arab fighters — Egyptians, Algerians, Lebanese, Kuwaitis, Turks and Yemenis — into Afghanistan; "not hundreds but thousands," he said. He supported them with weapons and his own construction equipment. Along with his Iraqi engineer, Mohamed Said — who is now building the Port Sudan road — Mr Bin Laden blasted massive tunnels into the Zazi mountains of Bak hiter ions for guerrilla hospitals and arms dumps, then cut a mujahedin trail across the country to within 15 miles of Kabul.

"No, I was never afraid of death. As Muslims, we believe that when we die, we go to heaven. Before a battle, God sends us supine, tranquility.

"Once I was only 30 metres from the Russians and they were trying to capture me. I was under bombardment but I was so peaceful in my heart that I fell asleep. This experience has been written about in our earliest books. I saw a 120mm mortar shell land in front of me, but it did not blow up. Four more bombs were dropped from a Russian plane on our headquarters but they did not explode. We beat the Soviet Union. The Russians fled."

But what of the Arab mujahedin whom he took to Afghanistan — members of a guerrilla army who were also encouraged and armed by the United States — and who were forgotten when that war was over? "Personally neither I nor my brothers saw evidence of American help. When my mujahedin were victorious and the Russians were driven out, differences started [between the guerrilla movements] so I returned to road construction in Taif and Abha. I brought back the equipment I had used to build tunnels and roads for the mujahedin in Afghanistan. Yes, I helped some of my comrades to come here to Sudan after the war."

How many? Osama Bin Laden shakes his head. "I don't want to say. But they are here now with me, they are working right here, building this road to Port Sudan." I told him that Bosnian Muslim fighters in the Bosnian town of Travnik had mentioned his name to me. "I feel the same about Bosnia," he said. "But the situation there does not provide the same opportunities as Afghanistan. A small number of mujahedin have gone to fight in Bosnia-Herzegovina but the Croats won't allow the mujahedin in through Croatia as the Pakistanis did with Afghanistan."

Thus did Mr Bin Laden reflect upon jihad while his former fellow combatants looked on. Was it not a little bit anti-climactic for them, I asked, to fight the Russians and end up road-building in Sudan? "They like this work and so do I. This is a great plan which we are achieving for the people here, it helps the Muslims and improves their lives."

His Bin Laden company — not to be confused with the larger construction business run by his cousins — is paid in Sudanese currency which is then used to purchase sesame and other products for export; profits are clearly not Mr Bin Laden's top priority.

How did he feel about Algeria, I asked? But a man in a green suit calling himself Mohamed Moussa — he claimed to be Nigerian although he was a Sudanese security officer — tapped me on the arm. "You have asked more than enough questions," he said. At which Mr Bin Laden went off to inspect his new road.

@DylanPahman When I originally thought Rogan wasn't being censored, I was given a much broader definition. Something along the lines of suppressing someone's speech or opinions. I conceded that could be what censorship means, but at that point censorship couldn't be inherently wrong @OSIRIS_UAP @davebyrum @MiddleOfMayhem @JonesSmythe Maybe I'm too high for this conversation at the moment, but after reading all of this, I'll concede that attempting to deplatform Rogan from Spotify is technically censorship. I also think that censorship isn't objectively bad.

@MiddleOfMayhem @OSIRIS_UAP @davebyrum @JonesSmythe Are we being technical or are we speaking colloquially? I suppose that IS censorship. IMO, society is too nuanced to apply strict definitions like that. This seems like the paradox of tolerance. Is copyright law immoral, since it is censorship? Is there good and bad censorship?

@MiddleOfMayhem That's a concerning level of obsession to try to impersonate and potentially smear you. I hope you reported it. There's some unhinged people around here.

@Kim_Sirius @nuekerk It's tricky. I've always wanted to find that balance between identifying and "debunking". I'm an advocate for abandoning the believer and skeptic labels in paranormal communities. We're all trying to identify these things.

@nuekerk @Kim_Sirius We reached out to them about it and they said they "didn't have time to look up ghost photos on the internet", they were too busy investigating.

@Kim_Sirius @nuekerk It's CLEARLY the Madonna of Bachelorâ□□s Grove, but they claimed they had never heard of that photo. It's one of the most famous ghost photos outside maybe the Brown Lady of Raynham Hall.

2022-01-11T16:06:06+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1480934049971646470

@mydogschewtoy @XanderhalTV I will say that the biggest distinction between our conversation and a debate is that I'm willing to consider your point of view, rather than strictly defending my own. That is primarily what I dislike about debates.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1480933096182669325

@mydogschewtoy @XanderhalTV To me, it's the lack of formality that distinguishes arguments like these from actual debates. I do understand that colloquially the word debate can mean a simple argument. We aren't exchanging rhetoric from two opposing viewpoints.

2022-01-11T15:59:51+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1480932476667236352

@mydogschewtoy @XanderhalTV ...and what's worse is that people with bad takes can still "win" debates if they're more versed in their rhetoric.

2022-01-11T15:59:05+00:00
https://twitter.com/_/status/1480932283397853193
@mydogschewtoy @XanderhalTV I'm not trying to be vague or performative at all. I'll expand on any point you'd like IF you'd like. To clarify a little; I don't think debates change anyone's minds or offer the participants or the audience opportunity to self reflect due to the competitive nature...

@Xpropriation @XanderhalTV That's a pretty childish take. The issue I have with debates is that "winning" a debate does not mean you're correct. Case in point, Ben Shapiro. Terrible ideas, but he knows rhetoric. Though that nuance must be lost on you.

This is Tony Cornell, a parapsychologist who pioneered using a collection of gadgets outside of their intended use to collect "data". That data would be scoured for "anomalies" which would, of course, be interpreted as evidence of the paranormal. People still do this! Wild!

@SkinwalkerTruth @MickWest I really don't believe any serious skeptic would say, "all UFOs are swamp gas" or anything. Skeptics are trying to identify UFOs too. Any person who DOES outright dismiss all claims isn't much of a skeptic.

@SkinwalkerTruth @MickWest Ti be completely fair, all of the explanations you mentioned were offered to specific cases, not blanket explanations.
Weather balloons -Roswell (a couple others)

Swamp gas - Dexter/Hillsdale 1966

Chinese drones- USS Omaha

Kooks- typically unsubstantiated claims.

@PostDisclosure You're omitting nuance here. Incitation (intentional or not) is not the same thing as media influencing people. Lue is speaking about what some consider a real government cover up. His audience believes that and believes that they are literally working with him to stop it.

@PostDisclosure No because there is no evidence of a causal link between them and actual violence. Of course, there is contextual history of several people harrassing/ doxxing people over questioning Elizondo or disclosure. You're making a false equivalence here.

@PostDisclosure @MHuntington7 @devgru1980mi Just so I'm clear, intent and consequence are different things. I don't presume intent behind Elizondo's tweet. I worry about the consequence of the interpretation of it based on actions i've seen.

@MiddleOfMayhem @schoolfaian It likely is "X" if there are truly anomalous incidents. Everyone has been approaching it with a preconceived idea (Y, Z ,A ,B, C), but there's really no evidence that's conclusive of any of the suggestions. I kind of doubt anyone knows exactly what X is.

@bradjohansson21 Occam's razor is OFTEN misused. People like to leave out the beginning "all things being equal" part. It also implies that the universe is simple and tends to ignore nuance. I personally think it's a useless model.

@Maple_Hyperion @nuekerk I'll also say, it's important to remember that science is a tool, not an arbiter of reality. On a fundamental level, we have to presume that we can trust our unfalsifiable senses to even do science. There may not be an objective truth or reality. I recommend reserving judgement.

2021-10-20T20:33:38+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1450923184270811144

@Maple_Hyperion @nuekerk "Can't be" and "haven't been" is a big distinction. Science (the noun) isn't a constant, so it will always be changing. Also, the things you've listed are just names for things that could have interesting, not yet explained phenomena behind them. We're limited by our language.

@a01744 @JeremyUnidenti1 ...but there are none here. They're looking for authority figures to confirm their biases, so cliques form around personalities, they become para-social relationships, and take personal offence when their "authority" is questioned... IDK man, people are wild.

@MHuntington7 @WitnessCitizen This topic has so many loose terms. UFO is a big one. Energy, psychic, telepathy... Some people use them because they describe an experience well enough, but people seem to have subjective definitions of them. Maybe we need unique terms :man_shrugging:

2021-10-12T21:20:58+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1448035993215541249

When I say UFO, I mean an unidentified object. UFOs exist. You can identify any particular UFO, but UFOs will still exist. People who claim that UFOs don't exist are mistaken. No single person has investigated every UFO sighting. Taking a hardline stance on this is ridiculous.

@gammaraybeam @de_varse @MickWest And some stories are about what the "adults" are doing at the circus? You don't like those stories, right?

2021-10-12T19:02:03+00:00
https://twitter.com/_/status/1448001035025489923
@gammaraybeam @de_varse @MickWest So, there are "adults" who don't come up with stories and "kids" who do. You like hearing the "kid's" stories, but ask for proof, and you're tired of them because they don't satisfy your standards of evidence. Is that correct?

@gammaraybeam @de_varse @MickWest I don't make any claims as to them being a threat.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1447983917106180101

@gammaraybeam @de_varse @MickWest Well, no one HAS to hear these stories. Also, I don't want to presume anything about these phenomena, since we don't know anything conclusive about them, like if they are ET, or have fingers, or are physical things.

2021-10-12T17:51:54+00:00

@gammaraybeam @de_varse @MickWest What is this practical world that you live in? Can you verify the validity of your senses? Can you ever know if there is an objective reality?

https://twitter.com/_/status/1447981657596833800

@gammaraybeam @de_varse @MickWest Well, I think the philosophy of skepticism is that the objective truth is unknowable. Occam's razor is typically a useless model, especially when dealing with this subject as 'all things' are never 'being equal'.

@de_varse @MickWest Maybe, but we live in a capitalist society where our survival depends on making money. Can you give me an example of who you're referring to and the rational evidence that disputes their claim?

2021-10-12T17:23:31+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1447976237834674185

@de_varse @MickWest I could admit that claims like that sound wild, but I'd also have to admit that I'm coming to that conclusion based on my own personal incredulity. I prefer to reserve judgement.

@de_varse @MickWest The point is, I'm not making flippant comments about skeptics or implying that they shouldn't be taken seriously because of that tendency.

2021-10-12T16:28:53+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1447959018560004100

@de_varse @MickWest Who doesn't? That's not an exclusive trait of ufo enthusiasts. Most skeptics are just parroting rhetoric too. "extraordinary claims", "Occam's razor", hell, even their self proclaimed title of "skeptic" is BS. Skeptics are supposed to reserve judgement.

2021-10-12T15:58:28+00:00

@benjaminvossler @OFFICIAL_NY_UAP What I mean is, without context or any other corroborating information (pics, video, even eyewitness testimony), it's pretty hard to draw any kind of conclusion. What looks anomalous in a video might not be from another perspective. You know what I mean?

@MHuntington7 @UfoStudy It feels like ghost hunting. Success if you find an anomaly, then case closed. Let's say no one can identify the object in the video. Now what? It just means we can't tell what it is by watching a video. That has no bearing on what it actually is.

@hoveringobject @MIMUFON My real hope is that no one treats experiencers that way. I can say though that in the days following, several witnesses refused to cooperate after being initially interviewed claiming unprofessionalism. That's is according to Michael Swords of CUFOS in his article in IUR.

@Openmindedskep8 It was a number of things. The real catalyst was reading Joe Nickell's take on the Exeter sighting, that gave me pause long enough to reflect in being an active "debunker". I took a step back from UFOs for a while until pretty recently when a friend started talking to me about...

@GrantLavac @inf3rence Reports of this case that were published in the US didn't provide all of the details. There were around 40 adults present for this event and thousands of sightings in the days surrounding it. There were also physical traces found.

2021-10-03T01:24:47+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1444473472281976837

@MrC1549 @itsredactedjake @MiddleOfMayhem @valliant It seems to be a constant pattern. Jack (the radar operator) also mentioned to me that he had the impression that the objects were aware of HOW he was seeing them, because they would form into a triangle, then jump up and down vertically. He said it seemed like communication.

@LonelyOperator @Superpana3 @MiddleOfMayhem He didn't actually say that, did he? The aurora borealis was technically "visible" in Michigan that night, but in cities like Holland, Grand Rapids, and others that far south, you need to go into the country to even faintly see it. The radar comment doesn't even make sense.

@GamerDad55 @MiddleOfMayhem It's compelling for sure. I've talked to Jack quite a bit and he's certain that the radar returns weren't anomalous propagation (ground clutter) because he raised the angle of the beam pretty high when the objects were jumping vertically and they remained in the beam.

@zcichy You'd have to first determine what "ripple effects" are, I suppose. We'd also need a way to observe any other dimensions to tell if they're affected, though I don't think any of the dimensions we CAN observe were effected. Though we don't experience anything directly anyway :man_shrugging:

@JosephAPWilson1 @JasonColavito @ralphblu @Debriefmedia Regardless, Jason's message isn't my gripe, it's the presentation. I also enjoy the discourse.

@JosephAPWilson1 @JasonColavito @ralphblu @Debriefmedia I think what's colloquially known as skepticism at least tries to play that part, but isn't the foundation of philosophical skepticism the understanding that objective truth is unknowable? Seems strange to apply such rigor in that case. I guess language changes.

@TheGirlfromRio1 I think it's because there is no instant gratification. Most problems or mysteries can be answered by "authorities" or a Google search. People who maintain an interest beyond that hurdle still have that desire, so the group up in the hard line stance camps of believers/skeptics.

@likeitmatters3 Maybe Ufology hasn't really gone anywhere because most people are approaching the topic with a preconceived notion of what the phenomenon is. Discounting observations because the don't fit an anthropocentric bias doesn't really make sense, even if they ARE ET.

@thtonetime I don't subscribe to any "origin hypothesis" for the UFO phenomenon, just because I haven't seen anything conclusive enough. As for MUFON, they have a tendency to bury or sit on cases and hoard data. They are actively withholding pics/ vids from the case i'm investigating.

@bottwater @UAPmike Yes. There are allegedly about a dozen pics/videos from the 94 Lake Michigan Radar/Visual case. I contacted MiMUFON's chair and he said they don't share their data, they like to present it themselves. If you read their UFO journal article on the case (part 1, there was no part 2)

@Weird_Dana These "ghost hunters" should be called out. We should all collectively set a standard that this type of thing is unacceptable and be vocal about it. These groups are just mimicking what they see without much thought behind it. If they're going to do that, lets remove bad examples @MHuntington7 @JeremyUnidenti1 @_VanDango I agree. There's a lot of scientism spreading around here.

@JeremyUnidenti1 @MHuntington7 @_VanDango That consensus, no matter how many times it's been reviewed, is still arrived at by intuition then. We don't know that the model of reality that we create in our mind (our perception) is accurate. Evolutionarily speaking, it's worked pretty well for us, but that's not objective.

@MickWest I'm curious about how they identify false targets, especially since that pilot says they're common. Interestingly, if they are common, then the operators would be familiar them too, so if they saw something truly anomalous, I imagine they'd be able to rule out usual suspects.

What is the likelihood there? :man_shrugging: It's all arbitrary anyway, I don't think anyone should be personally mad at him @zcichy That might explain why people saw saucers after Arnold's sighting. Maybe they're products of our own minds? Maybe it's a cooperative experience? Do UFOs appear when there is no one around to witness them? Who the hell knows?

@zcichy You can look at it in a few different ways. A lot of experiencers say that their experience was personal. Many say that they felt like there was an understood awareness that the object has of the experiencer. Maybe they present themselves in a way that the experiencer expects...

@gammaraybeam @zcichy Maybe a phenomenological approach is what we need. Lots of experiencers give the impression that their sighting felt personal, not unlike a spiritual experience. If that's the case, science might not be the right tool.

2021-09-04T19:58:56+00:00

@inf3rence @IWANTTOKNOWUK Since none of us know the objective truth about the phenomenon, I certainly don't feel comfortable silencing any particular voice on the subject. If you think particular narratives are more palatable PR wise, I suppose I understand, but I feel like that perpetuates the stigma.

@galaxopithecus @Avirup1981 @WitnessCitizen @AnjaliOnGaia ...That would only get us so far. Do we investigate people's interpretations of their experiences? That's subjective. Maybe we just try to identify patterns in the phenomenon? I'm rambling...

@AVAZESA @TheUFOTrail @weirdweedwitch Sure. A specific example for me would be the case i'm working on. I have talked to witnesses and a radar operator about their experience and I believe them. If they (and I) are mistaken, so be it. I see no danger in that.

@stonesurfing @MiddleOfMayhem @zcichy I don't feel the Greenstreet hate that others do. While I don't personally feel I need to be quite as demanding of claims, he is a journalist, so I see it as apropos. I just want to understand how people see his tweets and are upset by them.

@YerUFOGuy And Hynek didn't have much time. I've also heard 2 versions, 1 where profs from U of M suggested marsh gas, but the other version it was VanHorn who suggested it (weird since he was adamant that it was a UFO). Regardless, if it WAS Hyneks plan, he still got played in the end.

@YerUFOGuy It would be kinda sad if this was true, given the end result. On the other hand, he only had a day or two to interview the witnesses and he was recovering from a broken jaw at the time, not to mention (I'm pretty sure) Quintanilla scheduled that press conference behind his back..

@TrevyLimited @Robin081564 A photo of a book... I suppose that it proves that ALL individual claims of EVERY crash retrieval is a hoax? If so, does that imply there are NO ETs? I'm beginning to think there is a conversational barrier going on here. Perhaps I'm not understanding what you're trying to say.

2021-08-26T18:09:43+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1430955635185790983

2021-08-26T18:07:08+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1430954985207050244

@TrevyLimited @bradjohansson21 What goalposts? You made a claim, I asked you for evidence. You have not provided any. You have only tried to shift the burden of proof and insinuate my personal beliefs (which I have not shared here). Absence of evidence is not evidence of absence. This isn't an abstract concept @TrevyLimited @Robin081564 Well, since you're making a claim (a lens crashing and being captured by USG is a hoax), can you prove that? There are many claims of crash retrievals, mind you. Also, who's perpetrating this hoax? I expect evidence to back up that claim as well, being that you're certain.

@TrevyLimited @bradjohansson21 Now youre claiming you've objectivity proven negative? Neat.

@UAPmike @MiddleOfMayhem Can someone find me a tweet of Greenstreet's that makes them so upset? I think I'm not looking far enough into any of these threads.

@TrevyLimited @bradjohansson21 I don't subscribe to the ETH and you're deflecting.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1430637345833947138

@TrevyLimited @bradjohansson21 That doesn't add up to objective truth. As for the "Fermi paradox", another bit of misappropriated rhetoric, it's flawed with anthropocentric bias. We colonize, therefore aliens colonize? Regardless, absence of evidence blah blah blah. This is not objective truth.

2021-08-25T20:59:21+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1430635935746727942

@zcichy Yeah, and I think it's pretty understandable. All I see evidence of now, just like before, is that they have an interest in controlling the narrative.

2021-08-25T20:28:57+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1430628285625602053

@zcichy Are you sure? What do you think of the job they've been doing since 47?

2021-08-25T20:21:13+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1430626337501351938

@TrevyLimited @bradjohansson21 "The objective truth is that there are no aliens that have visited Earth" is the claim I'm referring to.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1430625871262584836

@MickWest @zcichy Same read, but "we SHOULD look into it some more" is how I took it. I don't see much substance in this quote.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1430623804250853379

@TrevyLimited @bradjohansson21 That's a tall claim. If that's an objective truth, can you prove it?

@MGjorwell @MickWest Sure, on an evolutionary level, our senses have served us pretty well. We can aim a bow and arrow and hit a target, but I'm not going to ignore that we have to just accept some presumptions about the way we perceive reality. Do you believe objective truth is knowable?

@MGjorwell @MickWest I don't know, I think we still need to rely on our senses to interpret data and to build the sensors, computers, and AI in the first place, so we wouldn't objectively know if they function correctly.

@zcichy @LuAngeles So, for instance in a situation like we witnessed this week, I took a neutral stance. I'm not personally qualified or informed enough to make ANY judgement about what was happening, so I didn't.

What I wonder about is, what compelled the people that DID engage with it?

2021-08-19T06:18:12+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1428239857999036416

@zcichy @LuAngeles Well, tread lightly. Remember that enablement typically eases the consequence of a harmful behavior, rather than simply engaging in similar behaviors. If I smoke near an ex smoker, am I enabling them? I would say no. If I hand them a cigarette, that implies to them that it's ok.

Ultimately, the results of AATIP will not only benefit the U.S. Government but I believe will directly benefit DoD in ways not yet imagined. The technological insight and capability gained will provide the U.S. with a distinct advantage over any foreign threats and allow the U.S. to maintain its preeminence as a world leader.

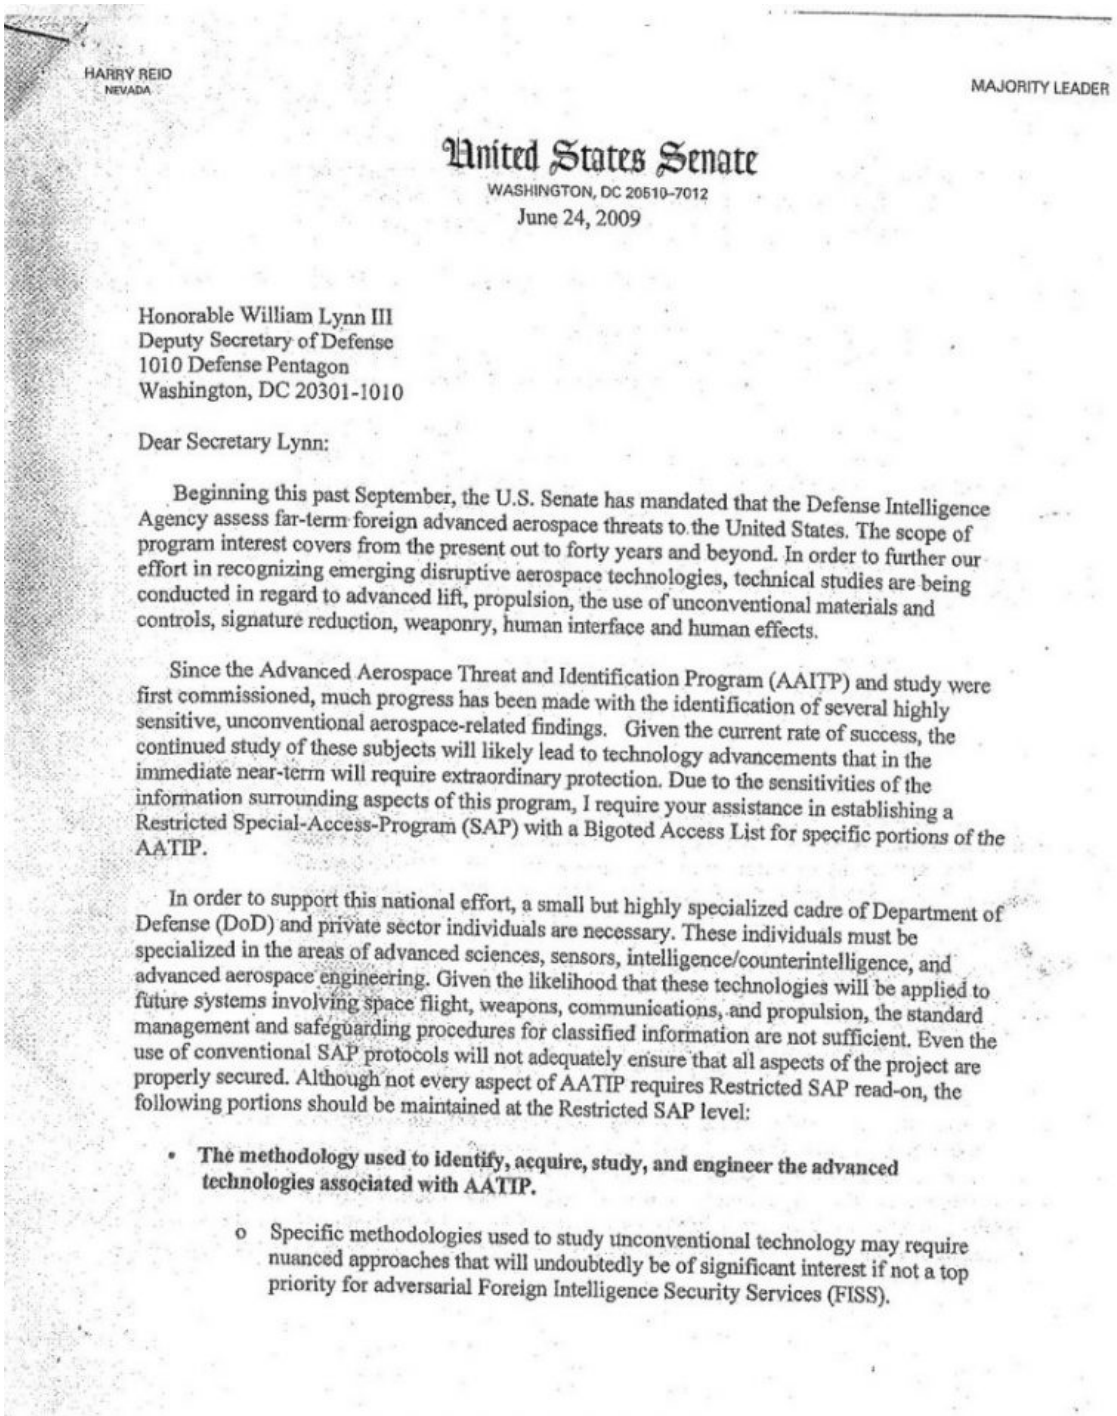

Thank you in advance from your time and consideration of this request. If you or your staff have any questions, please contact Bob Herbert of my staff at (202) 437-3162.

HARRY REID
NEVADA

MAJORITY LEADER

United States Senate
WASHINGTON, DC 20510-7012
June 24, 2009

Honorable William Lynn III
Deputy Secretary of Defense
1010 Defense Pentagon
Washington, DC 20301-1010

Dear Secretary Lynn:

Beginning this past September, the U.S. Senate has mandated that the Defense Intelligence Agency assess far-term foreign advanced aerospace threats to the United States. The scope of program interest covers from the present out to forty years and beyond. In order to further our effort in recognizing emerging disruptive aerospace technologies, technical studies are being conducted in regard to advanced lift, propulsion, the use of unconventional materials and controls, signature reduction, weaponry, human interface and human effects.

Since the Advanced Aerospace Threat and Identification Program (AAITP) and study were first commissioned, much progress has been made with the identification of several highly sensitive, unconventional aerospace-related findings. Given the current rate of success, the continued study of these subjects will likely lead to technology advancements that in the immediate near-term will require extraordinary protection. Due to the sensitivities of the information surrounding aspects of this program, I require your assistance in establishing a Restricted Special-Access-Program (SAP) with a Bigoted Access List for specific portions of the AATIP.

In order to support this national effort, a small but highly specialized cadre of Department of Defense (DoD) and private sector individuals are necessary. These individuals must be specialized in the areas of advanced sciences, sensors, intelligence/counterintelligence, and advanced aerospace engineering. Given the likelihood that these technologies will be applied to future systems involving space flight, weapons, communications, and propulsion, the standard management and safeguarding procedures for classified information are not sufficient. Even the use of conventional SAP protocols will not adequately ensure that all aspects of the project are properly secured. Although not every aspect of AATIP requires Restricted SAP read-on, the following portions should be maintained at the Restricted SAP level:

- The methodology used to identify, acquire, study, and engineer the advanced technologies associated with AATIP.
    - Specific methodologies used to study unconventional technology may require nuanced approaches that will undoubtedly be of significant interest if not a top priority for adversarial Foreign Intelligence Security Services (FISS).

@King_Milkfart @philip_mantle @woodcuttergypsy @cosmicdiarrhea Haha, they all said that because of another Ried letter, though. When he tried to get SAP status for AAWSAP and called it AATIP (which was rejected). Most people hadn't heard of any of that until that request letter was passed around, so naturally, they called it AATIP what I was saying. Also, tracking them and keeping them in focus are different things. Especially if an object isn't only moving perpendicular to the observer.

@SincerelyCosmic @SayantaniDas2 Yeah, and we're kinda stuck using the language that we know to describe what people experience. When I was a debunker, it used to bother me when people used the energy outside of the way science uses that term. I was a stubborn person lol.

2021-08-17T20:03:59+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1427722897582436356

https://twitter.com/_/status/1427722144008581130

@SincerelyCosmic @SayantaniDas2 Well, I think that would depend on how you are using the word consciousness. There are a lot of words used in paranormal/UFO fields that are semanticly ambiguous. Energy, consciousness, even UFO! They could mean different things depending on who is saying them and the context. :man_shrugging:

@SayantaniDas2 I'm an atheist and a skeptic. I reserve judgement on all claims, but I'm open to them. As for higher consciousness/ telepathy stuff, I think people are using the available terms to describe experiences they may have had that no one has a good grasp on. Possibly...

2021-08-17T16:03:00+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1427662252031848450

@MadScientistPod @jfcharlebois @zcichy @bradjohansson21 Ive recently been covering a UFO case that involves multiple eyewitnesses and radar returns and I've become friends with the radar operator. That specific case has led me to believe that some kind of phenomenon exists. Idk if that's strong reasoning, but I'm comfortable with it.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1427384367412924417

@MadScientistPod @bradjohansson21 Well, one explanation is that whatever this phenomenon is, it could present itself differently to different people, I guess. I personally believe there is something to the phenomenon, but I'm not confident in speculating what it is based on what I've looked into. :man_shrugging:

You can reduce all life to chemistry, but you won't ever understand life as a whole. Debunking individual UFO cases seems just as limited. Why do we define the phenomenon by exclusion? Isn't the whole more than the sum of its parts?

@BryceBarnes @sSamscwantch @AnjaliOnGaia @MickWest In the case of "extraordinary claims require extraordinary evidence", I'll use Hume's definition in that a claim that contradicts what we know to be true. For instance, letting go of an object and it falls up.

@inf3rence @TheUfoJoe @vandelay2020 The blog post certainly frames this situation as creepy /unethical and there is obviously a lot of context we don't have, but what we're missing most is the the experiencer's account of these events.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1423747960316256261

@MadScientistPod @itsredactedjake @caleb_scharf What's the standard of truth for anything? Science? That relies on our sensory experience being valid, yet we can't actually confirm it. Individual people believe all sorts of things, but when you're talking about groups, you can't really say that. It's just a stereotype.

2021-08-06T20:42:13+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1423746255000322050

@MadScientistPod @itsredactedjake @caleb_scharf Isn't Lazars story pretty polarizing in the community? That's hardly a mythology that people don't want questioned. I don't think the UFO community is the monolith that you portray it as. Not even the Twitter community.

2021-08-06T20:38:41+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1423745362989359111

@MadScientistPod @itsredactedjake @caleb_scharf Maybe the subject is just approached in the wrong way. People tend to define UFOs by exclusion, and don't look at the claims of the phenomena as a whole. I certainly don't think anyone should approach it with preconceived notions of extraterrestrials in vehicles.

@the_grabbing @Adam15869891 Your making that judgement based on your own personal incredulity. That's fallacious logic. As for being gullible? Who cares? I'm not giving anyone my credit card number. 2021-08-05T20:10:45+00:00

@m3kromanc3r @michael_ronning @Adam15869891 ... and since we're dealing with unknowns, maybe we shouldn't be too quick to catagorize different aspects of the experience.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1423375709591019520

@m3kromanc3r @michael_ronning @Adam15869891 This touches on why I was asking in the first place. When listening to experiences, should we exclude claims that fall outside of the "typical" UFO narrative? I don't believe we should. Adam's experience sounds like what has been called High Strangeness @straub_tj @inf3rence I get that, though since this phenomenon is an unknown, I feel like omitting certain aspects could be a mistake. Science is an excellent tool, but not our only tool. Depending on who you're asking, psychology would not be considered science, though it's also a valid tool.

@CosmicUap @CosmicLibrarian I don't know about "need". We need to think critically, not to have people explain things to us, especially if it's simply arguments from personal incredulity.

That's not skepticism. Skeptics reserve judgement.

@RaynerUap To the crowd that says "we need skeptics in the community to keep us in check", WHY?

We need to think critically, not people telling us what to think. I question the need for debunkers, but more so I question the debunker's motivation. Performative intellectualism has no value.

@Markyroastbeast @g_knapp The objects seen that night on radar (plus many more) eventually congregated over the only unfrozen part of the lake that night. Lake Michigan doesn't typically freeze over that much either. Pretty interesting.

@LuisCay99862776 @TheUFOTrail Well, I make no claims as to what the phenomenon is, but because you haven't seen any sufficient evidence shouldn't imply anything or that any evidence provided in the future will turn out to be prosaic. Multiple independent witnesses describing the same phenomenon is good for me @WitnessCitizen @MiddleOfMayhem @ThanosAlpha @Go_Kick_Rocks88 I'll throw in the case I'm working on. I can pin the timing down close enough to feel confident that the phenomenon was both being seen visually and on radar at the same time. Between that and speaking to the witnesses I believe in the phenomenon, but can't say what it is.

2021-07-28T23:36:53+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1420528721086369794

@MiddleOfMayhem Right, our perception of reality is not 1:1 with reality itself. Objective truth may be unknowable, if it exists in the first place.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1420526457881829376

@MiddleOfMayhem @WitnessCitizen @ThanosAlpha @Go_Kick_Rocks88 The problem is still filling in blanks. Even if someone records something that is without a doubt anomalous, there is no explicit way of determining what that anomaly is without jumping to a conclusion.

#UFOTwitter , I need your impressions. What do you think the text below is referring to? No wrong answers. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/E63IjCLWQAUv1zd.png

This was further complicated when it became apparent that all of the video tapes, still photos, negatives, and possibly even reports were "disappearing" - into the infamous blackhole that so many UFO researchers have referred to. In the more than 20 years @MickWest @htyson12 @MiddleOfMayhem "extraordinary claims" is such a vague term, what are the criteria for being extraordinary? Hume meant it as something in direct contradiction to what we know to be true, but that wouldn't fit for this case.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1417929197704581126

@MickWest @htyson12 @MiddleOfMayhem To be clear, I mean in regard to this case. You come to conclusions based on intuition anyway. Disregarding other people's emotions so you can "know more" would be selfish.

If you're looking for the simplest answers, you're already presuming the facts are simple. When you apply Occam's razor, it's really just confirmation bias. Reality is complex. Don't be gaslighted by this archaic rhetoric. #ufotwitter @IvanHeadless @MiddleOfMayhem @MickWest @Spacecowboy781 I don't think many people know it predates the scientific method by a couple centuries. It's literally medieval.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1417860217954525187
@IvanHeadless @MiddleOfMayhem @MickWest @Spacecowboy781 Yeah, it is usually applied that way, but it's a useless, archaic model and Id argue it's unscientific in the way people colloquially use it. It's presumes the world is simple rather than complex. Meteors are terrestrial rocks and God created the universe using it this way.

@IvanHeadless @MiddleOfMayhem @MickWest @Spacecowboy781 These is not equal evidence for each hypothesis. What people seem to mean typically when they evoke OR in arguments these days is "common is common and rare is rare", but it's really just weighing things against personal incredulity.

Friend of u/Skyth21k1 here.He had to delete the post and the youtube video because according to what he told me, he was receiving phone calls from what it seems to be Government intelligence agencies, including the Malaysian defence and Armed Forces.

He definitely knows this wasn't prank calls because he didn't gave out his phone number to anyone. So he took it really serious. They asked him to delete the post and specially the Youtube video of the incident.

@MickWest I agree with you about the object that moves across the screen appears to be a bird, but the cluster looks a little weird to me. The problem with videos like these are, even IF it's captured something out of the ordinary, where do you go from there? It's still just speculation.

@thelibbiegrant @realityseaker My favorite is a Descartes's evil genius type intelligence that presents itself as folklore or memes of the collective unconscious. Like it's outside of how we perceive reality and communicates by stimulating what we CAN perceive.

@realityseaker Similar things have happened in the past, though. The Hillsdale college sightings in 66 were witnessed by nearly 70 people. Hynek called it marsh gas (lumping it in with the Dexter sightings).

@realityseaker @thelibbiegrant I agree that people who think ETs couldn't come here couldn't possibly know that. Sounds like an anthropocentric bias. However, since all of these suggestions about the phenomenon's origin are unknowns, I don't know that it's possible to determine the likelihood of any of them.

@realityseaker I don't know if I agree with your premise. The more experiencers that I talk to, the more I hear that the "phenomenon" seems aware that they're being seen. I'm beginning to believe that the sightings themselves are communication.

@zcichy He doesn't go into it, but the "list" he's mentioning in this clip is his "Occamic list" which is based on a kind of misunderstanding of Occam's Razor, which again is more of an argument from personal incredulity. People tend to leave out the "all things being equal" line in OR.

@MickWest What if UFOs actually ARE a phenomenon of consciousness and these people have learned a way to "trigger" it? How would anyone propose testing that?

@theferrit32 @randomlydelibe1 @MickWest Because they already believe. Also, who needs skeptics to test everything? Who needs skeptics to even be satisfied? I say "skeptics" lol, they've already made their judgements, cynics is the correct word.

@BobMcGwier_N4HY @MickWest @blackvaultcom @MiddleOfMayhem I think he is making the claim that the bird is far closer to the camera than the A10, so it wouldn't be flying as fast, since it's a shorter distance.

@Alex_Simy_Mend @MiddleOfMayhem @SicCoP1 I won't deny that he's provided some good alternate suggestions for things, but I agree about his skepticism not aligning with philosophical skepticism. It's much closer to cynicism. On the other hand, the meaning of words change and colloquially "skeptic" seems to imply denial.

While balloons can look like virtually anything, drones can also look very strange due to the huge amount of configurations that exist. When most people think of drones they picture a small fixed-wing airplane or quadcopter type setup. That may be true for the heart of the burgeoning civilian market, but there are far more configurations @TOEwithCurt Atheist here. I asked my Greek Orthodox friend a similar question recently and how he described god is not as a tangible being, but more similar to our understanding of a law of nature. My take is that God as an entity is just a product of our anthropocentric bias.

@AboveUav @RichDolan The fact that Low seemed to be interested is what's making me wonder about Swords's take on it just being a sales pitch. On the other hand, it seems like it jives with the whole agenda. The Air Force got what it wanted out of the report, in part, ending Blue Book.

@BSquidding @de_varse I wonder if the whole phenomenon is conscious related. Think about the way we perceive reality, it's all a model created by our consciousness based on stimuli from our sensory organs. Maybe some NHI is communicating with us by stimulating that model. :man_shrugging:

@damtf3 @MiddleOfMayhem I just hope that these hearings aren't the road to the Condon Report part 2. Remember then house minority leader Gerald Ford was pushing for hearings too and we know how that turned out.

2021-07-08T15:48:27+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1413163075889516550

@Liberty4Life23 That makes me think so even more! Consider that they've been experiencing this the whole time, but have no idea what it is. They couldn't admit it without creating disillusionment of their authority, right? So sell a narrative in which they have control of the situation.

2021-07-08T15:46:25+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1413162567292309510

@MiddleOfMayhem Which is also completely believable! It is beyond clear to me that they have an interest in controlling the narrative. The motive is the real question.

2021-07-08T15:43:13+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1413161759989506060

@MiddleOfMayhem And more to your point, if they're trying their damnest to hide this, they're doing a bad job. The government hiding UFOs is pop culture!

2021-07-08T15:42:08+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1413161486499958789

@MiddleOfMayhem I just feel like some of it seems like theatre. The Roswell press release gaff, the self sabotaging of Blue Book that led to the the Condon report... It's all so public. I feel like they're selling the idea that they're covering up aliens.

@Rett94291220 @zcichy It's at least very clear that the USG is and has been interested in controlling the UFO narrative. Whatever the motive might be, it's undoubtedly interesting.

2021-07-08T14:38:38+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1413145505924739072

@ufobelievers The vocal ones are mostly pseudo intellectuals who perceive UFOs as a threat to their current paradigm and a challenge to their intellect, so they become defensive. Denial isn't skepticism.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1411494614897508355

@aka__V @_Desmoden @steven_nikolic @MickWest @kentbye I'm shifting the argument? You cannot determine the likelihood of an unknown without committing a logical fallacy. It's an unknown variable. Can you solve 2+X ? If so, please enlighten me. I can't say 2 is less, more or equal to X because it's UNKNOWN.

2021-07-04T01:09:41+00:00

2021-07-04T01:04:57+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1411491185538048004

@aka__V @_Desmoden @steven_nikolic @MickWest @kentbye I can't determine if it's equal either. To say 2 things are equal, you need to know the value of both. I don't know how to put this another way to make it clearer. It's an unknown variable.

2021-07-04T00:56:26+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1411489043377016835

@aka__V @_Desmoden @steven_nikolic @MickWest @kentbye I don't know how likely a bigfoot is. It's like solving 2 + X. You can't because you don't know the value of X.

@realityseaker Occam's razor isn't on the side of anything. It's when evidence is at parity. It's also a functionally useless model, as nothing really ever is at parity. People should stop using it.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1411351937774243842
@MickWest @_Desmoden @kentbye The "occamic ranking" is just window dressings for an argument from ignorance. Occam's razor doesn't apply, as all evidence isn't equal.

@realityseaker It's interesting. On one hand, skeptics will say it's unreliable data due to misidentification, or memories being changed or conflated, but on the other hand, skeptics are pretty quick to nit-pick details or even attempt to "debunk" testimony based on details from testimony.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1410938914492358666

@captainphotog @MickWest @rdisipio Sure, but what makes you confident that it applies here?

Isn't mass delusion aided by things like group acceptance or consequence of ostracization? That doesn't really fit here.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1410929741083914240

@captainphotog @MickWest @rdisipio I don't think that being "very stupid" is a blanket condition. Being gullible and falling for misinformation is different than misidentifying something or being tricked by an illusion. Smart or stupid isn't a binary.

It's almost like there's no real point in "debunking" videos, since it only leads to making an argument from ignorance. Seems more like it's an exercise in performative intellectualism. :man_shrugging:

@likeitmatters3 @_manwhere @MickWest there's much more limits to science than that. Science is based on faith too, you know. Faith that we can assume our sense- experience is valid, faith that our laws of nature are a constant. People can overlook that, because it's a tool that works very well, but it's only A tool

it. I spent the last 10 years being staunchly skeptical. I changed my paradigm. Then, when I went back, I could look at old cases with fresh eyes and see when a case was truly compelling. Always question your beliefs, don't take anything for granted, and trust no one.

@MickWest @LtTimMcMillan @uncertainvector I don't know how anyone can make a claim either way on if they're the same object. Being that it's unidentified, we can't assign characteristics to it. Close/far, hot/cold, these descriptions can't explicitly determine that.

@realityseaker What's your take on Roswell? I've always wondered if the whole thing was a performance. The press release then the retraction... Seems very Hollywood.

@CDVilsack @conorowens94 @MickWest And how do "investigators" work through these limitations exactly? Sounds like intuition.

@CDVilsack @conorowens94 @MickWest Mick's a cop? Lol
So, you know going in that memory and perception are unreliable. You poke around and see a discrepancy. You reach the conclusion you've started with.These accounts are then unreliable, right? Are you then suggesting drawing a conclusion from that?

@theferrit32 @MickWest How so? If memory and perception are inherently unreliable, that means ALL testimony is subject to that. How can you draw any conclusion from that? If all 3 accounts are inaccurate to the actual event, but they all match, how do you determine anything?

@theferrit32 @MickWest No, that wouldn't explain why. Either memory and perception is unreliable data or it's not. If it's unreliable, nitpicking serves no purpose.

@clgood @TrevyLimited @Creox @MickWest Who knows? I'm still not making any claim that anything does exist in higher dimensions, but I'm open to the possibility. The issue here is , how are you dismissing it? You spoke with certainty. Please explain how you can come to that conclusion.

@clgood @TrevyLimited @Creox @MickWest Is that even a good example? The sphere visits Flatland and only appears as a circle as it crosses the 2D plane. Before it crossed that plane, it was not perceivable in Flatland.

@clgood @MickWest That is what I'm saying. YOU claimed that "If it's a being of any kind it exists in the same dimensions that we do" How can you claim that? And before you say "there's no evidence to suggest that..." understand that "the only way we can discover evidence is through our senses."

""Who cares? Another dead cop, probably against gun control. They didn't give an [expletive] when kids were dying in that school shooting they stood outside," the firefighter wrote, according to WSVN. "Cops exist for the government to exercise its monopoly on violence. They want the whole world to stop when one of theirs goes down," the now-ousted firefighter wrote, according to WSVN.

@528vibes @Funkadelick2 @MiddleOfMayhem I'm sure.
You know, you could argue that the Dexter case is largely responsible for the creation of the Condon Report. Then senator Gerald Ford didn't take kindly to the "swamp gas"press and demanded congressional hearings.
What's your take on the Condon report?

@528vibes @Funkadelick2 @MiddleOfMayhem I went to Dexter last year and visited the location of Mannor's sighting. Very swampy area.

@528vibes @Funkadelick2 @MiddleOfMayhem There may have been, but I don't believe that's what the Mannors saw or the 80+ witnesses in Hillsdale.
What's really interesting is the point that flew over your head. Hope you caught it on video at least :fly:

https://twitter.com/_/status/1560968604803268608

@Funkadelick2 @528vibes @MiddleOfMayhem In 1966, J Allen Hynek suggested that some of the sightings in Dexter Mi could have been marsh gas. The Newspapers then all ran stories claiming he said all of the sightings were swamp gas. I think of that every time I see your posts.

@King_Milkfart @TUPACABRA2 @528vibes @LuAngeles @TheProjectUnity Iâ□□m open to it, but reserving judgement. Thatâ□□s my stance on any individual case.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1560286081509216256

@King_Milkfart @TUPACABRA2 @528vibes @LuAngeles @TheProjectUnity Yes, there is no conclusive evidence that itâ□□s a hoax, which is why I donâ□□t say that I believe it is. On the other hand, I havenâ□□t seen evidence that itâ□□s anything unambiguously weird to my satisfaction either. Iâ□□m at a point where Iâ□□m saying I donâ□□t know conclusively either way.

2022-08-18T14:04:33+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1560266403487584257

@King_Milkfart @LuAngeles @528vibes @TheProjectUnity Was anything else classified besides their names? I think the MOD taking the account seriously could have just been them covering their asses in the case it was a black project, whether or not they specifically determined that it was. Maybe. Any more detail would be good tho

@King_Milkfart @LuAngeles @528vibes @TheProjectUnity Hearing from them could be important one way or another. Was one a professional photographer? Could they provide a more precise location? The pic is cool, but Iâ□□d like to conclusively rule out the possibility of a hoax before entertaining the idea that itâ□□s something strange.

@528vibes @likeitmatters3 @UAPGodz @MickWest @Beckie_ness @MiddleOfMayhem @liztiques It isn't testing that either, it's about claimed experiences. It presupposes they are true.

@528vibes @likeitmatters3 @UAPGodz @MickWest @Beckie_ness @MiddleOfMayhem @liztiques That's not a scientific hypothesis. Are you using the colloquial meaning? Like a guess?

@528vibes @likeitmatters3 @UAPGodz @MickWest @Beckie_ness @MiddleOfMayhem @liztiques How do you falsify it? That's how you test hypotheses. "Testable based on the number of claims and markings" doesn't make sense.

@EireScientist @GarryPNolan @MickWest Well, a scholarly work requires an established field, doesn't it? It's likely intended to be an article from an expert in such a field too. Is that what West is? his intent? What field? Tweets are not scholarly articles, neither are YouTube videos.

@SicCoP1 @Berlinghoff_R @MrHustleMCR Then I fail to see the point of any of your input in this thread. Parish said we hear of things defying physics but see no evidence, so you comment saying that's because we're hearing of things defying physics...

@Berlinghoff_R @SicCoP1 @MrHustleMCR It doesn't have to be negative. "How could it be anything else?"
You have to make the leap from "appears to be" to reality. Concluding it must be as it appears because you can't think of another scenario is an argument from incredulity.
