They may have planned to tow it to South Base, but I'd swear it was still on the ramp at 1700 when I drove by it on my way home. I can't help but be sure I'd notice if it had been moved; I'm very observant and I always look for it and any F-22s that may be out. (I didn't go into work on Friday, 10 Sept, so it could well be gone by now, though.) I'm absolutely positive it was there at 1400. I wish they would tow it away because it looks so pitiful.

Speaking of F-22s, that is a spin chute someone reported seeing. I got a pretty good look at it twice on Thursday and recognized it immediately. The plane wasn't in the hangar, which may be because of the live mortar shell.
