

"Concerning the museum ne motel beside NSA in Fort Meade, MD. It was once the Colony 7 Motel and my wife worked there as a chambermaid for a summer or two in the 60's. She remembers very distinctly a man who stayed there ALL the time, had a table covered with radio equipment and always asked that the maids fold his pajamas and put them on his pillow. The other interesting story is that when NSA opened the Cryptologic Museum, they didn't tell anyone, had no signs, no opening ceremony. Apparently the NSA PR department (there's an oxymoron for you!) didn't know how to handle announcing something -- they only knew how to deny things!"

-- SH, 5/21/95