If the information came from the Little A'Le'Inn or Las Vegas cab drivers, then it must be true.

Let's see: the author has a friend who talked to cab drivers who told him some stories that no doubt went through several other secondary sources first.... Sounds like proof positive to me.

Could we hear any of those stories?

Where is Boulder? Closest one I know of is Colorado. Were accident reports ever filed on those trucks forced off the highway? Did the insurance companies pay up?

I'm curious: What does an alien smell like at Beaver Damn?

Were these items later repaired? What did the repairman say was the cause? Did Miles save the burned out parts for later analysis?

Who is the "local guide" in the Mesquite area? As a board member at MUFON Nevada, I'm not aware of anyone with a UFO interest out there, certainly no one claiming to be an expert or guide. (When UFO convention comes to town, it is interesting how many "local experts" come out of the woodwork.)

Are there any traces left of this glass tunnel? Where was it located?

How many is "too many"? If we had the name of just ONE of those "disappeared" people, then maybe we could follow up on it. That's a specific claim that could be investigated.

In all, sounds like Art Bell material!

Sadly, none of this stuff has ever happened to me in the four-plus years I've been lurking in the Nevada desert... but don't listen to me because I'm a GOVERNMENT DISINFORMATION AGENT (confirmed by the Little A'Le'Inn).
