This story sounds remarkably similar to the story that I posted about the electrician who claimed to work at area 51 a ways back. he didn't call it area 51 though. This story sounds like BS simply because every craft rumored to be there happens to be there, makes an interesting story huh? I don't know about you guys but don't you find it strange that every time a new post comes on this list, you get a strong feel for it's validity by the second sentence. Unfortunately, this seems to be an attraction for all the Merlyn's from Draconis from across the US. If any of you recall they guy I am referring to let me give you an update. I have decided not to work for his company because they wanted to take grandma's life savings and force her to buy some investments she didn't need. When I got this feeling about his company, I figured he was not to reliable a witness. I did happen to get the answers to Glenn's questions that he posted for the man and I will post them when my schedule lightens up a bit (Gotta find a job ya know)
