This may seem, to some, in the odd-ball category, so be prepared to laugh if you like, but I have spent a number of nights in the motel section of the Inn at Rachel, and based on reports by my two different girlfriends who went along with me, three years (to the day) apart, they feel or indicate that they may have been abducted.

The recent episode also involved a registered nurse and a Nursing Supervisor at a major hospital in L.A., in the second case, and she says she saw a "blob of mist" coming up and out of the bed, and into the wall, that freaked her out before going to breakfast.

I decided to take photos of the room, since I had also experienced being "frozen" or paralyzed during various times of the night when I wanted to sit up and take random flash photos of the room in the dark, but couldn't.

An enlargement of one of the daytime photos shows an alien-head image in the wall, with large almond eyes. You can argue, and some will, that this image was already in the wall-wood pattern before we got there, but we'll never know for sure.

The photo is on display now at the Museum, and has also been sent to Rachel.

Try to see it before you ridicule it.
