In the article, Freeman said the "city of the dead" belonged to Los Alamos National Laboratories Limited. I thought the old device assembly facility in Area 27 belonged to Lawrence Livermore and the Los Alamos device assembly facility was further north east on Tweezer road. Both should be in the process of being decommissioned because of the new facility that was built before the test ban.

Freeman was definitely passing through Area 27 because this was the best way to get to Cane Springs, his first water source.

I have no detailed maps of Area 27. (I assume they exist and you can FOIA for them.

A small map in the NTS draft EIS labels Area 27 as "Lawrence Livermore/Los Alamos Critical Assembly Area."

For general Test Site info see <http://www.nv.doe.gov/nts/nts.htm>
